SUNNYSIDE.

Everything is quiet in this part of our county, but very little stirring about by our people owing to the fear of exposure to smallpox.

It has been falsely reported that there is a case of smallpox here. So far there is but one case in this part of the country, the patient being John L. Sims, and he lives two miles from Sunnyside.

Mrs. Brenninger's family of near here, are recovering from severe sickness caused by measles.

George Sanders, who has for several yearsbeen making his home at Washington, Ia., returned to his father's one day last week with a span of Shetland ponies and a buggy which he brought from his western home. His driving outfit is attractive in appearance, the ponies safe and active and as George possesses no bad habits, and the team must have exercise, it is reasonable to suppose that the young ladies around here will have happy times on pleasure drives with George.

Miss Stella Hutson, who spent the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hutson, returned last Saturday to Fairmont, where she will re-enter, as a student, the State Normal School of that place.

Car Load of Playing Cards Burnt Up.

A rear end collision occurred at Rowlesburg on the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Sunday. Two freights were eastbound and one jammed into another, derailing the caboose and three cars. The caboose caught fire from its stove which was upset and was consumed, as was a car loaded with playing cards. The latter was broken in the crash and the cards spilled out and were scattered almost ankle deep by the wind over the snow-crust. The sight was a novel one Yesterday President Jones of the Maryland Senate, named Senator Palmer as a member of the Committee on Elections. But one other committee has been named by the presiding officer it being that on rules.

COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

The Full Board Present and Sessions Were Held Monday and Tuesday When Appointments Were Made.

The Board of County Commissioners with the full membership of that body and Clerk Ross present, was in session here Monday and Tuesday of this week, the meeting being the regular January session when appointments of road supervisors for the ensuing year (which will be published in these columns next week) were made, as were also the following appointments:

Clerk to the Board, Mr. A. G. Ross, who has given unquestioned satisfaction to the public for the past several years.

Attorney to the board, Mr. Julius C. Renninger, which is a recognition of merit to the ability of the appointee.

Constables were appointed in a number of the districts as follows: No. 2, Chas. Liston; No. 3, G. F. Stahl; No. 5, Smith Friend; No. 6, Thomas P. Savage; No. 7, ex-Sheriff W. A. Maffett; No. 8, W. H. Ridder; No. 12, Amos Recknor.

Janitor to the court house, William Walker.

Scavenger, James Dunmark.

The printing and publishing was awarded to THE REPUBLICAN and to the Garrett Journal at the prices obtained last year, vis: THE REPUBLICAN, $500; the Journal, $300.

The Board having completed its labors adjourned Tuesday afternoon, the members returning to their homes the same evening.

DIED.

SWEET—At her home in Swanton, on Monday, January 4, 1904, after an illness of four months of consumption, Mrs. Maria Rice, wife of Mr. Chas. T. Sweet, aged 56 years. The deceased was married to Mr. Sweet more than two years ago, her former home being in the vicinity of Pittsburg, Pa., where she was well known as a trained nurse of the highest standing. The deceased lady was a member of the Reformed Lutheran church. Her funeral took place yesterday afternoon from her late home with interment in the Swanton cemetary. MR. RASIN IS AT THE HELM.

Democratic Leaders "Personally Conduct" Opening of the Legislature.

State House, Annapolis, Jan. 6. The Maryland Legislature, personally conducted by Mr. I Freeman Rasin, met at noon today for what promises to be one of the most important sessions in the history of the State. The proceedings of today, however, were of a routine character entirely, and were very tame. Mr. Raisin has seldom appeared at Annapolis at the beginning of a session heretofore, usually waiting until there is "something doing." but with the Senatorial election looming up as the first important event, the leaders feel that nothing should be overlooked in the beginning. Mr. Rasin has engaged rooms for the winter at Carvel Hall, and he is making his headquarters in the luxuriously furnished office of Treasure Vandiver, whose genius for arranging details caused the organization of the Assembly and the work of the preliminary Democratic caucuses to go off with machine-like precision.

The Senatorial question is the all-absorbing one at the State House and the one around which everything is at present turning. All appointments, except those absolutely necessary to the transaction of routine business, including the patronage to be given to the various Senators and delegations in the House and the naming of all except the most requisite committees, are to be deferred until after the Senatorial. This does not, of course, refer to the appointments of Governor-elect Warfield, whose position is known only to himself, and is presumed to be neutral toward all the Senatorial candidates. It is, thereof understood that other appointments, except those mentioned below, will not be made until after January 19, when the balloting for a Senator will begin. No date for a Senatorial caucus has been set, but the general opinion seems to be that natural time would be on the night of January 18, the day before the date set by law for the first ballot

Mr. Rayner is not here, but is represented by Messrs. Harry Welles Rusk, Harry Goldman, William J. Ogden, William S. Forwood, Jr., Dr. George Well and others. The organization seems to be almost solidly in favor of Governor Smith, and Mr. Joshua W. Miles, who is here looking after his interests, seems disheartened.

The joint committee appointed by the Legislature to notify Mr. Edwin Warfield of his election as Governor will meet at the Eutaw House tomorrow at noon. This committee will have nominal charge of all inauguration arrangements but will, in reality, simply adopt the programme being arranged by Chairman Vandiver, the principal features of which have heretofore been published.

Messrs. Perkins, Greenwell and Dixon were appointed a committee to notify Mr. Warfield of his election as Governor.

Senators Moore and Roe, who were appointed for that purpose, in conjection with a similar committee from the House, waited upon Governor Smith to notify him that the Legislature was organized and awaited any communication he might wish to make. The Governor's message was received and read shortly before 2 P. M. The Senate at 2.20 P. M. repaired to the hall of the House of Delegates, where both bodies met in joint session to canvass the returns of the recent election for Governor. This is a mere formality, but is required by law. The Senators were escorted with great formality by a committee of Delegates.

Promptly at 2,30 o'clock the Senate and House met in joint session to canvass the election returns. The meeting was held in the hall of the House of Delegates. Speaker Everhart read the returns and declared Mr. Warfield elected Governor of Maryland for a term of four years from the time of his inauguration.

In accordance with a joint resolution, both branches of the General Assembly will meet again on next Tuesday evening at 7,30 o'clock. Nearly all the members and visitors left Annopolis at 3,10 this afternoon.

Dr. Benjamin L. Smith, Chief Clerk of the House of Delegates at the last session, called that body to order promptly at noon with the announcement that the time prescribed by the Constitution of the State for taking such action had arrived. After the roll call Delegate Goslin was made temporary speaker.

After taking the chair he called for nominations for Speaker. Dr. George Y. Everhart of Baltimore county, was nominated by the Democrats, and Mr. James E. Godwin of Baltimore city, was named for the honor by the Republicans. The roll call showed 99 members present and 2 absent. The result of the ballot was as follows:

Everhart, 70 votes; Godwin, 27 votes.

The Senate was called to order at 12.02 p. m. by Mr. Alfred Ritter, secretary of the last session. All the members present. Mr. Robinson of Harford, was made president pro tem.

Mr. Robinson made a short address, calling attention to the great importance of the work to be done at this session, which, he said, would interest all the people of the state and some beyond, but he trusted that the results would meet with the approval of the great mass of people. The moment Mr. Robinson had finished, Senator Applegarth, who had received a desk in the back row, registered a "kick," evidently feeling that as a holdover he should have been given more consideration. He said he presumed the arrangement was only temporary, and proposed to make a new allotment at ance, but at Mr. Robinson's suggestion he agreed to wait until the permanent organization should be effected.

Mr. Robinson then administered the oath of office to the Senators, three at a time.

Mr. Spencer C. Jones was put in nomination for President of the Senate by Mr. Lewis, who said the people were entitled to demand the best talent which the Senate could afford. Mr. Jones, he said, had served the State in many capacities and always with distinction to himself.

Senator Roe of Caroline nominated Senator H. M. McCullough of Cecil as the Republican candidate for President. Senator Brewington seconded the nomination of Mr. Jones, and Senator Dixon that of Senator McCullough. Mr. Jones was elected by a straight party vote of 18 to 7, neither Mr. Jones nor Mr. McCullough voting. Senators Lewis and Roe escorted President Jones to the chair. Mr. Jones then formally called the Senate to order, and prayer was offered by Rev. John J. Henan of St. Mary's Catholic Church, Annapolis.

Mr. Jones in his address referred to the new State annex in which the Assembly was in session. He spoke of its unfinished condition and said it rested with the General Assembly to say in what manner it should be completed. He advocated a liberal policy, which should be consistent with the fame and dignity of Maryland, so that the future legislatures, surrounded by all the improvements of the age, should emulate their predecessors. He spoke of the transition from the early condition of the State to the present, and quoted "What God hath wrought." The healty condition of the State finances, he said, should render parsimony unnecesaary.

The usual resolution of thanks to President pro tem. Robinson was offered by Senator Applegarth and adopted unanimously. The Desk officers selected by the Democrotic caucus were then elected as follows.

Secretary of the Senate—Robt. Moss of Anne Arundel county.
Reading Clerk—Albert J. Almony of Montgomery.
Journal Clerk—Alfred Ritter of Frederick.
Chief Engrossing Clerk—Llwellyn Kerr of Wicomico.
Sergeant-at-Arms—George A. Shower of Carroll.

The Republican honorary caucus selections for the above positions were formally put in nomination as follows:

Secretary of the Senate—Samuel H. Tattersall of Baltimore city.
Journal Clerk—Charles E. Stevens of Caroline.
Reading Clerk—George W. Engle of Garrett.
Chief Engrossing Clerk—Robert W. Walker of Talbot.
Sergeant-at-Arms—Capt. P. T. Evans of Calvert.

A ripple of amusement was caused by Senator Greenwell, who forgot the change in the slate and nominated Mr. Ritter for secretary. Mr. Ritter promptly called out "That's a mistake, sir," and Senator Gad nominated Mr. Moss amid laughter.

President Jones announced the appointment of the Committees on Elections and Rules as follows:

Elections—Messrs. Wilson, Brewington, Gorman, Perkins, Kirwan, McCullough and Palmer.
Rules—Messrs. President, Gill and Dixon.

Mr. Brewington, with the side remark "We want some graft now," offered the usual order to give each Senator and desk officer $25 worth of stamps and $5 worth for each other elective officer of the Senate. The order was referred to the committee on Finance, to be hereafter appointed.

Miss Katharine McDonnell and Mrs. Virginia Bond Maupin, both of Baltimore, were appointed as stenographers.

Democratic Senators on Postal Frauds.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—When the Senate met today Mr. Morgan's resolution declaring that the President has no power to declare war was read, but at the request of Mr. Morgan it went over.

The resolution of Mr. Carmack directing the Postmaster General to send to the Senate the papers connected with the Postoffice Department Irregularities and providing for a Senatorial investigation was taken up, and Mr. Lodge moved its reference to the Committee on Postoffices.

Mr. Carmack resisted this motion, declaring that if department irregularities were to be investigated only by the departments themselves it would not be long until they would be "a stench in the nostrils of the people." The only safeguard was in Congressional investigation, he said. He mentioned a number of such inquiries which had brought out important facts.

Mr. Teller expressed the opinion that the Postoffice Department would make a thorough investigation, but contended that the legislative branch should retain the right to make an inquiry.

Mr. Lodge did not believe that an investigation should be entered into until the matter had been inquired into by a committee.

Mr. Clay expressed surprise that there should be opposition to the resolution, and he called attention to the declaration by Mr. Bristow and Messrs Bonaparte and Conrad that the investigation should be carried further.

He declared that the Bristow report "demonstrates the absolute guilt of the late First Assistant Postmaster General, Mr. Heath. He (Bristow) says himself that this leading high official was guilty, and the proof is overwhelming. If this is true, Mr. Heath should have been indicted. I will do Mr. Bristow the credit to say that his report shows that the frauds of the Postoffice Department originated in Heath's office. If so, he must have had cognizance of them. Then why should the subordinates in that office be indicted and the principal be allowed to escape?"

CUPID IN THE ELEVATOR

By Carroll Watson Rankin

THE inhabitants were chary of intrusting themselves to the elevator in Bailey Mansions, for it was of so unstable a character that the initiated had lost all confidence in it as a means of transportation.

Katherine, however, was not an inhabitant. In her own home elevators pursued the even tenor of their way without vagaries of any sort; so, when her call on the top floor was completed, with every reason to expect a swift and uneventful journey she stepped confidently into the elevator.

At the fourth floor it stopped to admit a second passenger, a man named Westcott. Westcott differed from Katherine in that he entered the cage-like apartment with a full knowledge of its treacherous tendencies, but Westcott was that morning in a frame of mind to court disaster. He assured himself as he stepped in that it was a matter of complete indifference to him whether the elevator shot suddenly upward and crashed through the skylight, or dropped without warning into the basement.

The elevator, however, did neither of these things. Under the guidance of a chubby, blue-eyed youth, it pursued its downward career until it reached the space between the first and second floors; there it stopped.

At the sight of her fellow passenger Katherine turned pink with embarrassment. The man had muttered something under his breath and bowed frigidly, for, before courting disaster, he had courted Katherine—apparently it had amounted to the same thing. They had parted forever only the evening before, and the ring she had worn for three months was at that moment in Westcott's vest pocket, where he had thrust it savagely at the end of their quarrel.

"Why are we stopping here?" asked Katherine, turning to the elevator boy of cherubic countenance.

"'Cause we can't go on," returned the boy, producing a bag of nuts and a comic paper and proceeding to make himself comfortable. "The power's off again."

"Has it ever—does it often go off like this?"

"Oh, yes," replied the boy, cheerfully. "There's nothing to be scared of. Sometimes she runs all right for as much as a week; then, again, she won't budge for six or seven hours at a stretch."

"Six or seven hours!" gasped Katherine.

"Yes," replied the boy, settling himself more comfortably on his stool. "Once it was longer, but gin'rally they get her going in an hour or two. There's no danger at all miss."

The boy gently discouraged further conversation by burying himself in his paper. Katherine moved to the end of the long, leather-covered seat. Westcott, at the extreme other end, stared gloomily at the wall.

Katherine looked at her watch; it was already past luncheon time, and she had been too miserable to eat much breakfast. Still—she brightened at the thought—she should not starve, for she had with her a box of chocolates she was taking home to her sister's children.

She looked at her watch again. Only four more minutes had passed, but the pangs of hunger were becoming unendurable. The chubby boy munched nuts with apparently no thought of his fellow sufferers. Katherine untied the pink string that bound the chocolate box, unfolded the paper, lifted the lid, and ate a chocolate.

When she had eaten three she glanced at Westcott. He was still gazing at the wall. The walls in elevator shafts are seldom interesting; this one was tinted a bilious green—a color that Westcott abhorred.

"How he must hate me," thought Katherine, eating another chocolate, "when he'd rather look at a wall than at me. I wonder what I ought to do? If we were utter strangers, cast away on a desert isle, and he had one biscuit and three drops of water, I should think him horrid if he didn't offer me half. I suppose I ought to offer him some of these chocolates, even if we're not on speaking terms."

Katherine, sitting very erect, and gazing straight ahead, pushed the box along the seat. Westcott paid no attention.

"Will you have a chocolate?" asked Katherine, somewhat unsteadily.

Westcott was so sure that he was dreaming that he did not make any answer.

"The lady spoke to you," prompted the elevator boy.

Westcott looked inquiringly at Katherine.

"Will you—will you have a chocolate?"

"No, thank you," replied Westcott, returning to the contemplation of the green wall.

There was another long pause. The neglected box remained half-way between the suspended passengers.

"I think you're very ungentlemanly," said Katherine at length.

"So you said last night," responded Westcott, coldly.

"You're more so to-day."

"How?"

"You—you know I'm too polite to eat these chocolates and let you go hungry, and I'm fairly starving."

Westcott, with an air of exaggerated politeness, took a chocolate and ate it, with his eyes fixed unsociably upon the green wall. He dared not trust himself to look at Katherine. Katherine nibbled a bonbon, waited in silence for ten minutes, and again offered the box to Westcott, who gravely helped himself. This operation was repeated until only one remained in the box. The remaining one was heart-shaped.

"It's a heart!" exlaimed the elevator boy, who had read too many "dime shockers" not to recognize an interesting situation when face to face with one, and who was unable to contain himself longer. "You'll have to toss for it. It is a heart, isn't it?"

"Why, so it is!" replied Katherine. "Will you have it, Bob—pardon me—Mr. Westcott?"

Westcott shot a quick glance at Katherine, who had gradually moved two feet away from the end of the leather-covered bench, and was consequently that much closer to the man she had jilted the previous evening.

"Do I understand that you are offering me a heart?" asked Westcott.

"It's your turn," said Katherine, flushing a beautiful crimson.

Westcott took from his pocket something that glittered, laid it in the box beside the chocolate heart, and pushed the box toward Katherine.

"Do we play fair?" he asked, with his eyes on Katherine's.

The elevator boy, agog with excitement, retired discreetly, but with reluctance, to the pages of his paper, but not before he had recognized in the glittering object a ring.

And when he looked again the box contained two hands, although only one was visible; the man was no longer gazing at the wall.

The hand of the indicator above the boy's head was leaping from number to number in curious fashion, sounds of ringing bells and impatient voices drifted from the elevator shaft; but the man and the maid paid no heed.

Then the boy moved the lever slowly, even reluctantly, and the elevator dropped quietly to the ground floor.

"Oh!" exclaimed Katherine, drawing her hand gently from Westcott's and giving a long sigh. "We're actually down."

"Yes," beamed the boy, "and you might have been down 15 minutes ago just as well as not; but I seen how things was going, and I thought I'd help them along some."

"You shall come to the wedding, Cupid," said Westcott, slipping a heavy coin into the cherubic boy's hand. And he added, as they stepped out of the elevator on to the solid ground: "If I ever own an elevator you shall run it."

NEW CAVALRY TRAINING.

Novel System of Instruction to Be Introduced for Benefit of the British Horse Soldier.

Apparently as the result of the admirable experiments in cavalry training made by Lieut. Col. de Lisle at Hounslow, the new system of instruction is to be introduced into the First British army corps, writes an Aldershot correspondent.

The innovation will do away with much of the useless routine work which in the past has occupied so much of the cavalryman's time. From the beginning of the training the aim will be to develop the cavalryman's power of initiative and resource and general intelligence in the field. One of his first lessons will be to catch his horse when turned loose, to train it, and ride it across country instead of around the riding school.

The care of horses is also to be taught. Men are to be instructed in the treatment of minor horse maladies, how to judge and treat lameness, and to tell good forage from bad.

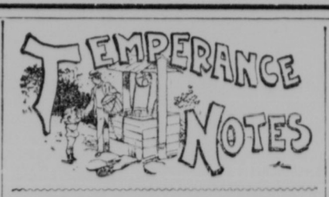
Outpost and advance guard duties, reconnoissance duties and map reading are to be taught thoroughly. Parties of men are to be sent out to find their way to fixed points entirely by the map. The art of scouting will be instilled by the "flag stealing" game and practical trials of scouting, in which special stress is to be laid on intercepting moves of the enemy, learning his strength without being seen, dispatch riding and making intelligible verbal and written reports.

More attention is to be paid to firing, the proper appreciation of cover, rapid shooting, natural rests, and the effects of wind.

Skill at arms is not to be forgotten, and mounted combats and competitions are to be instituted.

To render charging a little more scientific, an interesting game, somewhat after the idea indulged in by the German infantry, will be practiced. A squadron of dummies in line will form the objective, and the squadron bowling over the greatest number of the enemy will be declared the winner.

During the Paris exposition, the Bank of France estimates that its increase in business was $166,000,000.



DUXHURST FARM COLONY.

What Is Being Done in England to Reclaim Women Who Are Drunkards.

The Duxhurst Colony is a work that lies very close to Lady Henry Somerset's heart and to which she has devoted a great wealth of care and labor.

As is well known, England has the unenviable distinction of possessing a large number of women addicted to drink, and it was with the hope of finding some efficient way of reclaiming habitual women inebriates that this Duxhurst Farm Colony was experimentally started. The colony plan had proved successful in other cases, why not in this? So eight years ago the new scheme was inaugurated.

A farm of 150 acres in beautiful Surrey, one of the garden spots of England, was selected as the site of the model village, which consists of six cottages clustered around a larger house. It is a most charming and homelike spot. Here the victims of alcoholism who are candidates for reform are brought. They are separated into small groups, usually from seven to ten, and each group assigned to a cottage. Each cottage has its separate establishment, presided over by a nurse matron from the Church Army. The poor women take great delight in their comfortable "little homes," as they proudly call them, and vie with each other in a laudable rivalry as to which dwelling shall display the most spotless cleanliness and in every way be the best cared for.

The large building contains the refectory, kitchen, recitation hall, labor matron's room, and a private room belonging to Lady Henry Somerset. Immediately behind this building are the laundries, workshops and workrooms. Alcoholism is regarded as a disease, and a hospital has been provided for the treatment of the patients. There is no institutional character in the arrangement of the colony. Everything is pretty, homelike and cheerful, and its attractiveness is enhanced by the lovely natural scenery.

Each patient is kept one year, that ample time may be afforded for permanency in the work of reform. Mothers with babies under 15 months old are permitted to bring them to the colony. A very efficacious method in the plan of reform is that of constant occupation for the women, chiefly in gardening. The inmates take great delight in this employment, as the beautifully managed forcing houses and well grown vegetables and flowers testify.

A small charge is made for the maintenance of the patients—the minimum being five shillings, or about $1.25 per week. Labor accounts are accurately kept, and where it is ascertained that anyone has earned her full keep, the extra money is placed to her credit and given her when she leaves the colony.

One bright feature of the colony, though not an integral part of it, is the children's home at the Nest. The children brought here are from the slums of London, and are of the very poorest and most disconsolate. Girls and boys are entertained separately. The "Bird's Nest," as it is called, is cared for by Sister Kathleen, who has made children's work a special study.

It is now eight years since this unique scheme for reclaiming inebriate women was inaugurated, and its continued and growing success justifies its existence. Magistrates have in many instances consigned women to the colony who had been in prison scores of times, including one who had been sentenced over 200 times. However, the majority of the women who come to the colony are the wives of artisans who earn small wages—women who perhaps have not been before the magistrate, but who are wasting their husbands' earnings and making their homes desolate through drink; servants who have lost both character and situation; and young women who have taken to drink through excess of hard work and unhappy surroundings. All these seek the place voluntarily, and generally leave cured.

It speaks well for the success of the colony that 65 per cent. of the women received since the begininng seem to have been permanently reclaimed. So anxious have people been to seek its benefits that 3,000 applicants were refused in one year, and since the opening of the village over 10,000 women have been denied admittance for lack of room.

Lady Henry Somerset hoped, in founding the Duxhurst Colony, that it would be the pioneer in a new, practical and successful work for reforming hosts of habitual drunkards. The encouraging results attending the experiment justify the hope that many similar ones will be founded. Fines and imprisonment have proved futile. No punishment hitherto tried has been in any sense reformatory. The poor, besotted creatures, after serving their sentence, are returned to the same old vicious and criminal environments, and the same degrading companionship, and are haled again and again to prison, sinking lower every time.

It was this disheartening aspect of the case that set Lady Henry thinking. The personal effort and the complete change of environment which were suggested to her have proved wonderfully effective, and have secured the attention of legislators interested in the punishment and reform of confirmed inebriates. The subject has appealed to parliament to such an extent that a new inebriate act was passed, which provided that "any habitual drunkard found guilty of crime may be detained in a state or certified inebriate reformatory for not exceeding three years."

The drunkard is now no longer free to ruin his own life and that of others. But the question is what to do with him. The farm colony at Duxhurst having so effectively shown what the influence of healthful work in the heart of nature can do for women thus affected, it is hoped that the government will be impressed to model their reformatories upon this plan.—Union Signal.

DEALING WITH INEBRIATES.

How Present Efforts to Check the Evil Develop a Dangerous Class of Individuals.

The present efforts to check inebriety by fine and imprisonment are so continuously disastrous as to reflect on the intelligence not only of the lower courts but of public opinion which continues to support it. The number of persons subject to this farcical treatment are practically trained into a dangerous class, not only in the crimes they are liable to commit but in increasing the sources of pauperism, insanity and idiocy. Such persons become so degenerate that they are ready to sell their influence and votes at the polls, and are really doing more to corrupt society and defeat the intelligent will of the people than the ignorant foreigner who has little or no knowledge of the institutions of the country. Every large city and town has a proportion of these purchasable inebriates, who are controlled by saloon keepers. In one of the large New England cities a list of 1,000 of these inebriates who were purchasable was recently offered for sale, with a guarantee that they would vote according to the will of the purchaser. Another list of inebriates contained 789 persons who were known to be for sale. Ward contractors, saloon men and brewers always have lists of such persons. This peril is growing rapidly. If the police courts had the power to impose a sentence depriving the inebriate of his voting privilege, it would do far more for the public good than the petty fines and imprisonment. This journal has repeatedly urged that all inebriates should be considered irresponsible and deprived of their power of voting and placed under confinement in special hospitals. Later they may be given their liberty on parole, and restored to their citizenship when they can prove a reasonable degree of curability. No man has a right to destroy himself by continuous toxic use of spirits, bewildering his brain, making him unfit to act rationally and exercise the responsibilities and duties of a freeman. The immorality of the man who will sell his opinions and judgment to the highest bidder deserves the severest condemnation, of which forfeiting his right and privileges of having a voice in the government is a minimum punishment. The educatonal qualification necessary for voting should be universal, and, in addition to this, a degree of sanity should be insisted upon that is not found in the average inebriate.—Journal of Inebriety.

TEMPERANCE ITEMS.

Wanderings bring to weakness.

When life is all sport to us the devil is the hunter.—Ram's Horn.

All the railroads that center in Chicago have prohibited the use of liquor or tobacco by employes when on duty. Practically all the important railroads now concur in this prohibition.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, the great English preacher, was once reproved for making too many temperance speeches, and when told he ought to be taking care of his flock, he answered: "The sheep are all right just now; I am looking after the wolf."

During the last 50 years insanity in England and Wales has increased enormously. In 1859 there were 36,762 cases, while at last January there were 113,964. This does not mean that the cases have only increased with the increase of population. While the proportion to population in 1859 was 1 to 536, now it is 1 to 239—truly a sad state of matters. The increase is accounted for by drink, heredity and business worries, but the greatest of these is drink.

Curse of Grocers' Licenses.

A doctor with a large practice in the suburbs of London, England, told a newspaper representative that grocers' licenses are among the greatest curses of the age. "I have traced," he said, "many cases of alcoholism among women to this source. The evil begins with the grocers' license and in a short time the public house is patronized. Another evil is the medicated wine, the trade in which has vastly increased during the past few years. Scores of people who would not touch ordinary wine or spirits ask if they may take a little of somebody's medicated wine. It is nothing but ordinary wine to which a drug has been added. It is my firm conviction that the use of such wines cultivates, and in some cases awakens, a craving for alcohol in stronger form."

ON THE "DUDE" TRAIN.

Johnny Drummer, Who Is Side-Tracked to let the Limited go by, expresses his sentiments regarding that Superb Train.

'It has been my dream of joy supreme
To ride in plush and velvet splendor
Parlor car for a swell tailender
Platform fenced with a swell brass fender
On the Regular Limited Train

Electric bell right under your nose
Porter to come and brush your clothes
Grub in the diner the best that grows
A downy bunk for a night's repose
On the Regular Limited Train

Chorus

Biff! Bang! a mile a minute
No other method of travel is in it
I want to go ripping, skipping and zipping
Away on the Limited Train.'

These lines are not original with me. They are taken from a tuneful little ditty sung in George Ade's comedy "Peggy from Paris." The jingle danced through my brain the other day as we lay on the siding at Prairie Junction, or some such place, to let the Santa Fe's west bound California Limited go by. It was a gorgeous train of palace cars, and behind the plate glass observation windows beauty and fashion and youth and old age were lolling among the luxuriant cushions, some visiting, some reading, some pleasantly dozing, some making wreaths of cigar smoke, some gazing dreamily through the windows at the passing cities, and fields, and forests and rivers.

I stood on the rear platform of the last car of our train and watched the California Limited as she faded away toward the golden west. And I thought of the difference between travel now and travel in the days of '49, when it took the gold-seeker half a long, weary year, filled with all kinds of hardships, to travel the distance that is now covered in three days. I thought of the slowly moving wagons, the dust, the stones, the jolting, the thirst, the hunger, the homesickness, the snail-like crossing of plains, the laborious climbing of mountains, the weary dragging weeks, the never ending trail.

In these palaces that had just glided by were people going to the same place to spend the winter months where the climate is perpetual summer. And they were not to endure a single hardship on the journey.

When night came they were to lie in beds whose soft embrace makes sleep a luxury—and in the day time the velvet cushions of their seats were to be made deeper still by pillows—and thy were to spend a delightful part of their time in the gilded and glittering dining car, where every dainty that ever tickled the palate is enticingly served—in short, they were to have on the trip all the comforts of home—and of the best kind of home.

I stood there and watched them pass out of sight while my soul was consumed with envy. But I derived some consolation out of resolving that sometime I, too, would see California, and I promised myself that if I ever did go there it would be over the Santa Fe. "JOHNNY DRUMMER."

Real Mission of Women's Clubs Missed

By REV. F. S. ROCKWELL,
Prominent Evanston, Ill., Pastor.

CHINESE luncheons, Browning readings, and art culture classes have blinded the eyes of club women to their real mission in the slums and levee districts of the large cities. There is largely a mock pretense of uplifting women which gets no farther than discussion of conditions and suggestion of impossible and impracticable remedial measures. Take the levee district on the West side of Chicago for an example. Here the women's clubs might direct their time and attention and efforts with far greater reason and profit than generally accompanies their present activities in club life.

In the levee districts of any large city are hundreds of fallen members of the sex whose sisters are neglecting them and putting forth no hand to stay their mad plunge into the reeking vortex of hell. What benefit do these poor lost sisters of the club woman receive from the literary study, the social luncheons and the other many diverting occupations of women's clubs?

While this club and that club is debating whether it shall include in its programme lectures on Wagner or Browning, or some new fad or ism, the rude, hard, unsympathetic hand of the law is striving to drive these fallen women into more and more debased conditions.

The women's clubs are unquestionably remiss in their duty. The eyes of their members are blinded to their true mission by yearning for culture and the intellectual redemption of the sexes. Instead of going each day to the clubrooms the members should go to the needy parts of the city and seek out their less fortunate sisters, and raise them up, not by giving them a volume of Browning to read, but by taking them back to their homes and caring for them.

An English View of the American Girl

By HENRY LABOUCHERE,
Editor London Truth.

ENGLAND is being afflicted with the golden American girl. I am surprised that the home producers of girls have not already approached Chamberlain and begged him to include in his scheme of tariff protection some arrangement to exclude from our shores the dumping of American Girls.

The latter compete with the home markets under most unfair conditions. Their parents by means of trusts and such like pernicious associations are able to give their daughters vast sums of money, and in this way they are able to compete unfairly for the best home customers in the matrimonial market.

It may be said that our nation profits, as these wealthy girls spend the money with which they are freighted in England. The benefit, however, is questionable.

Already there is a vast amount of vulgar ostentation in what is called the smart London set, owing to the import of colonial millionaires, which raises the standard of fashionable existence and lowers and degrades the tone of that society into which so many aspire to enter to the despicable level of competing with plutocrats of Newport and New York. This can only increase if we are to have American golden girls, who have become peeresses, also making London the field of their barbaric lawlessness.

The Blessing of Poverty

By ANDREW CARNEGIE.

Even poverty has its happy and fortunate side, for the child of poor parents has many advantages over those of the children of wealthy parents. The child of the millionaire cannot know what the words of father and mother mean. He is consigned to the care of the nurse before he has learned to know the voice or touch of the mother, and then comes the governess to hold her sway over the little one until he is old enough to be sent off to school, and during all these years of infancy, childhood and youth the relations between parent and child have been of a superficial character.

But with the child of poor parents it is different. Take it in Scotland, for instance. Few Scotchmen have been cursed by being born in wealth. They've been born in poverty. The son of the poor Scot has as his guide instructor, and model his father. As his nurse, seamstress, cook, servant, teacher, heroine, and saint, he has his mother. No tutors and no servants come between him and his parents. It is from these they obtain the knowledge of their country's glories, its traditions, its history, and heroes.

If all the eulogy that has been spoken upon Scotland was printed you couldn't found a free library big enough to hold the volumes. Little can any or all of us do to enhance the fame of our native or adopted land, but there rests upon all of us the sacred duty of so living and acting during life that we shall discredit neither.

Quit Eating Gravy

By HON. EDMUND W. PETTUS,
United States Senator from Alabama.

THE reason people get fat is because they eat too much gravy with their meat. In this day gravy is called sauce, I know. It's a French word that means gravy, and if it had not been given a French name by the English-speaking races I dare say not so much of it would be eaten. It is shortening the life of the race, just like so many other French abominations are, and the sooner we banish it from our diet the better will be the health of the generation of young men and women coming on to take our places.

It does not aid digestion at all; on the contrary, it harms it—first, by interfering with the functions of the salivary glands, then by preventing the gastric juices from doing their perfect work, and finally by neutralizing the action of the alimentary juices. So I tell you to quit eating gravy on your meats. If you prefer to call it sauce, all right; but, by whatever name you designate it, by all means stop soaking your meats in it before eating them.

HON. JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS.

Mr. Williams, the Mississippi congressman who has been chosen democratic leader in the national house of representatives, is said to be a born leader, although he does not pretend to be a good parliamentarian. His home is at Yazoo, Miss., where he is engaged in the practice of law and in the planting of cotton. He is now about 50 years of age, and has been a member of congress since 1893. He is a man of learning, and is a graduate of several American colleges as well as of the German university of Heidelberg. He speaks French and German fluently. His pastime is farming on a large and modern scale.

OLD TRAIL TO BE MARKED.

Route Over Which Pioneers Reached the Southwest Will Be Saved from Obliteration.

One of the most famous routes traversed by the early settlers of the southwest was known as the Santa Fe trail. This has been almost wholly obliterated of late years, but the Kansas Daughters of the Revolution propose that it shall be marked for the benefit of future generations. They are now seeking to mark it through the state by stone monuments. It will not matter how simple the monuments may be, they are to be representative of the entire state of Kansas. In their work they propose to interest the school children of the various counties through which the trail runs. These children will erect the monuments and will be aided in their work by the children of other counties.

Mrs. W. E. Stanley, wife of ex-Gov. Stanley, explained the work in a short talk before the meeting of the Elizabeth Benton chapter, held at the home of Mrs. Daniel Boone. "It has always been the plan of the Kansas Daughters to carry on as much local work as possible," said Mrs. Stanley. "We have marked the spot where the first man to enter Kansas stood, and now we intend to mark the old Santa Fe trail. We are trying to interest the school children throughout the state in this, and especially the children of the counties through which the trail passes. We will make this our work for the coming year, and at the end of that time we hope to have marked the entire length of the historic old road in our state."

Rejected 2,865 Women.

In this era of new records it may not be amiss to call attention to "Squire" Samuel W. Hammers, a merchant of Highland township, Gettysburg, Pa., whose claim to fame as a record maker is based on the fact that he has rejected 2,865 proposals of marriage. Hammers is 50 years old. Some time ago he advertised for a wife, who should be "small of size, neat and good looking, and possessing some means." In response came the flood of offers, but not one of the 2,865 lovelorn widows and girls who proposed to him proved satisfactory.

Father of Lexicographers.

Dr. Johnson, even excepting his predecessor, Bailey, was not the father of lexicographers. In the latest volume issued by the Historical Manuscripts commission on the manuscripts in the Welsh language it is stated that the idea of illustrating the meaning and correct use of words by actual quotations from the literature of a living language seems to have been first put in practice by Griffith Hiraethog, the herald bard of Wales, who died in 1564.

DREAM OF THE MINER.

Always Expecting to Stumble on a Colossal Fortune—But His Best Finds Are Small.

The first men in the mines were a sort of madmen, writes Joaquin Miller, in the Sunset Magazine. Like Cortez and his men, they expected every day, every hour, to come upon untold wealth. Men really expected to find houses of gold, or at least nuggets as big as barns. I remember that I always, day after day, year after year, expected, some time and in some strange and sudden way, to stumble on a colossal fortune. Yet if I should receive 25 cents a day for what work I did in the mines there would to-day be quite a balance to my credit, and a hundred thousand miners could say as much.

No, the mines never paid the men who worked them greatly, whether in this rich camp or elsewhere. But the gold that was dug out contributed to the wealth of the world and carried it on and up, so that no one should now complain. The great big lumps of gold, however, were never found. You can search the gold history of all Australia through and through, as well as California, and be surprised to learn that there was never yet a single lump or nugget of gold found too heavy to be handled by even a woman. Many nuggets were found, it is true, that were very promising in weight and size, but that was all. Yet they were like alluring beacon lights, and every new nugget, or new and rich deposit of dust, only excited men the more. So, like the gold-hunting Spaniards, they pierced every mountain pass, every canyon and burrowed in the bed of every accessible river on the western slope before they had been here a year. It is a notable fact that all the placer mines in California were found during the first three months.

Mystery In India.

Things sometimes happen in India which puzzle even those who have made a lifelong study of Indian matters. Tree-daubing and well-poisoning are well known, and a very remarkable movement, which has recently been taking place at Behar, must be added to the list. A strange order was circulated some weeks back in the district that for the space of 2½ days sons should not look on their fathers, nor fathers on their sons, and that if the order was disobeyed the time would be extended to 2½ months. Only Hindus were affected, and even queer "waves of underground excitement" indicate that there are millions in India still who can be swayed by mysterious agencies over which the civil government has no control, and to which it can sometimes find no sort of clew.

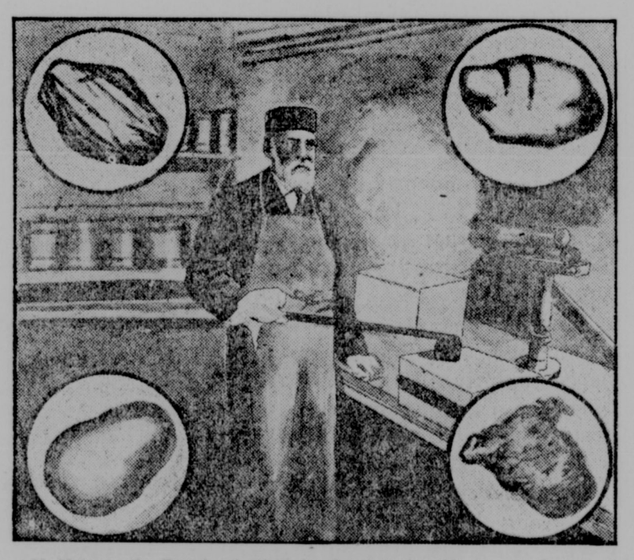
MAKING ARTIFICIAL DIAMONDS.



M. Moissan, the French scientist who claims to be able to manufacture diamonds in an electric furnace of his own invention, has been taken to task by M. Charles Combes, the mining engineer. M. Moissan is seen in the picture at work at his diamond-making furnace. The process takes six or eight weeks. Tremendous electrical pressure is applied to the raw material, which is withdrawn at white heat from the crucible. The mass, which gradually assumes a grayish color, contains a particle said to be a true diamond. The small circles shown in the picture contain figures of the crystals obtained by him.

HE SCENTED DANGER.

Bishop Bowman Warned Lincoln Against Wilkes Booth.

Had a Premonition of Disaster, But the President Was Not Impressed by It—Interesting Historical Reminiscences.

Rt. Rev. Dr. Thomas Bowman, of No. 66 Walnut street, East Orange, N. J., is the senior bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, and, although 86 years of age, enjoys good health and is active. He lives with his son-in-law, Burns D. Caldwell, one of the vice presidents of the Lackawanna railroad.

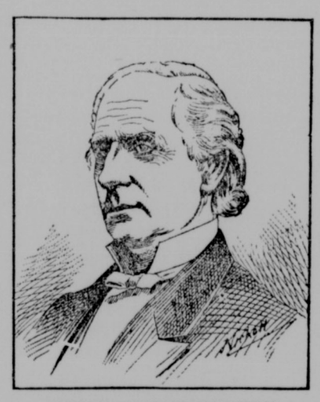
Bishop Bowman was born near Berwick, Pa. He has been a clergyman for 65 years. He served as chaplain of the United States senate during 1864 and 1865, and while at the national capital warned President Lincoln of John Wilkes Booth, whom he had seen prowling about the capitol, and also about the white house. Mr. Lincoln was not disturbed, and took no extra precautions, and five nights later, April 14, 1865, he was assassinated in Ford's theater by Booth.

"The first time I recollect having seen Booth," said the bishop to a New York World man, "was one morning just as I was about to open the senate with prayer. The members were in their seats and stillness had come upon the gathering. I stepped forward and was about to speak when a man entered. He was so striking and handsome as to attract attention anywhere, but that was not what caused me to pause.

"The man made a peculiar impression upon me that I could not account for. He startled me, and I was so disconcerted that I could not go on. I turned to one of the members and called his attention to the visitor. He made some slight remark, after which I collected myself and continued my prayer, but it was a long time before I recovered from the shock of that man's appearance.

"I have never recovered from the impression I then gained, that he was there for no good and that his presence boded evil for some one.

"Some days passed and again I saw this man. I met him on the street in the vicinity of the government buildings and I saw him in the senate chamber. He made me uneasy and I inquired who he was. I was not reassured when I was told that he was one of the Booths and a prominent actor, for I could not shake off the impression.



BISHOP THOMAS BOWMAN.
(Methodist Churchman Who Warned Lincoln Against Booth.)

"The persistence with which Booth hung about me gave me great anxiety. Soon after I saw him prowling around the executive mansion and in the vicinity of the president's office. He apparently was taking notes of the entrances and exits. Now thoroughly alarmed, I sought out President Lincoln and told him of the man, and that I believed Booth would take his life if he got the chance.

"Although I do not remember exactly what Mr. Lincoln said at the time, I do remember that same old smile of ineffable kindness that came over his countenance as he replied that he did not believe that anyone would murder him. His great and good mind could not picture such a crime. I had delivered my warning, but I felt more uneasy than ever. A day or two later I left for my home, in St. Louis, my task as senate chaplain having been performed. I had barely reached there, when there was flashed over the wires the news of the assassination.

"I shall never forget the feeling that took possession of me as I read, coupled with this, that the deed had been done by John Wilkes Booth, the very man I had warned the president against."

Bishop Bowman's duties did not bring him in close contact with Mr. Lincoln and, as he himself says, he was very careful about calling upon the president. He first saw Lincoln when he preached at a little town in Illinois, where the latter worshiped before the war.

Mr. Lincoln was at the service, and at its conclusion came forward and shook hands with Mr. Bowman, then a circuit preacher. The two chatted together for awhile, and then Mr. Lincoln invited the minister to his home, where he was entertained at dinner. Bishop Bowman did not see Lincoln again until he met him at Washington, the head of the nation.

The oldest twin sisters in the United States are Mrs. Emeline Perrin and Mrs. Eveline Tilton, both residents of New Hampton, Ia. They were born in 1811, and this year celebrated the ninety-second anniversary of their birth.

ARE SOCIAL DICTATORS.

Three Army Officers Who Manage All the Society Events at the National Capitol.

The social season for the coming winter at the white house will shortly be inaugurated, and much interest already centers about the men upon whom falls the task of serving as social aids. Upon the shoulders of Col. Thomas W. Symonds rests the chief burden, as master of ceremonies, but scarcely less important will be the duties of Maj. Charles McCawley and Capt. Henry M. Leonard.

Both officers are Washington men. The former has been conspicuous in the society of the capital for more than a dozen years and during the Santiago campaign in Cuba proved himself a brave and capable soldier. He is handsome and accomplished, popular and an athlete. If it be added that he is one of the best dressed men in Washington, his description will be fairly complete.

COL. THOMAS W. SYMONDS.
(Master of Ceremonies at the Executive Mansion at Washington.)

Capt. Leonard has likewise beheld the front of war, and in its sternest aspect. He took active part before he saw 25 years of age in three wars—in Cuba, in the Philippines and in China. During the Tientsin campaign he risked his life by going to the rescue of a wounded comrade, carrying him to safety on his back across a fire-swept fiend and lost his left arm as a penalty for his achievement. If he had been an Englishman the Victoria cross, prized beyond all other decorations of the soldier, would have been bestowed upon him.

OUT FOR GOVERNORSHIP.

Congressman Warner the Latest Aspirant for Gubernatorial Honors in the State of Illinois.

The roll of republican aspirants for the gubernatorial nomination in Illinois has been increased by the addition of the name of Congressman Vespasian Warner, of Clinton. The list of pronounced candidates now includes the names of Gov. Yates, State's Attorney Deneen, of Chicago; Col. Lowden, also of Chicago; Attorney General Hamlin, ex-Speaker Sherman and several others. Congressman Warner, whose ambition has now made him a formidable opponent of the gentlemen named, was born on a Dewitt county farm April 21, 1842. He enlisted in the army June 13, 1861, and served continuously until July, 1866. In 1868 he entered Harvard university law school, from which he later was graduated.

HON. VESPASIAN WARNER.
(Illinois Congressman Who Wants to Be Governor of His State.)

He began practice at Clinton, his present home. He was judge advocate of the state militia during the administrations of Govs. Oglesby, Hamilton and Fifer. In 1888 he was a presidential elector. He was elected to the Fifty-fourth congress and reelected to the Fifty-fifth, Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh. He has a wife and five children.

Most Famous Lighthouse.

No lighthouse the world over has as wide fame among mariners as that which stands 14 miles off the coast of Land's End. It is perhaps the most celebrated in the world. It has often been used as an illustration by poets and preachers, for no other lighthouse is in such a lonesome or dangerous place and none costs so much money and trouble. There are three keepers who live there with their families, and two of them are always on duty, while the third is on the main coast enjoying a vacation. They relieve each other each month, so that none of the keepers remains on duty more than two months at a time. This change and rest is said to be absolutely necessary to preserve the nerves of the keepers. The lighthouse is 135 feet high, was erected in 1882 at a cost of $400,000, and rises from a submerged rock.

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 7, 1904.

A KANSAS legislator is about to be arrested charged with having accepted a bribe of $100 to put through a private bill. Legislators evidently don't come high in the Sunflower State. It requires considerably more than $100 to gain the consent of the average Maryland Assemblyman to introduce a private measure.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The distribution of the state school fund as determined by a recent decision of the court of appeals in proceedings instituted by Mr. Rober Shriver and others of Alleghany county, the court affirming the opinion that the fund to the white schools should be distributed according to the white population is arousing a storm in Anne Arundel and other counties in Southern Maryland, where dwell a large colored population, and in response to this protest, a bill is to be introduced in the legislature which convenes today, looking to correction of the alleged inequalities of distribution.

While Allegany and Garrett counties have profited largely by the courts decision, the law as at present administered works disadvantageously to the counties having large colored populations so disadvantageously in fact that the colored schools could only be kept open for a period of two months in the year, in Anne Arundel county. A further example of the working of this law may be cited in the case of Garrett county which receives $619.66 each quarter to be expended in a colored population of 38; Allegany, $1,809.77 for some three hundred colored children; while Anne Arundel, with 7,000 colored children to be educated is allowed but $1,197.39 each quarter for this educational work. Cumberland News.

THE SCHOOL TEACHER AT ANNAPOLIS.

The political party which won at the last election in this State of Maryland, did not promise anything very definite about raising the pay of the public school teachers, but a hundred and one teachers in this county will scan the proceedings from the State house for the next 90 days hoping that some measure will be enacted whereby they shall receive a material benefit. It is reported that one of the members of the House of Delegates who has made pedagogics a business, will make it his special occupation at Annapolis to put through a bill giving the teachers more pay. For the sake of the teachers we hope the pedagogue-delegates may be successful, but he is apt to meet queer obstacles in the in the hurly-burly of Legislation. He will not be able to "keep in" the unruly members, nor stand the bad ones in corner, or do anything to them so they can not vote. There are those who think the teachers are receiving all they are worth. This is likely true in some cases, and such an objection might prove embarassing to the pedagogue-delegate.

Why should not the school teachers of Garrett county send a committee to influence legislation in the interests of the public schools, and particularly for more pay for the school taacher? With one of their own professions on the floor, of the House of Delegates, having the entree, perchance, of the executive office the county school teachers have the opportunity of their lives. State Superintendent Stephens promised them more pay and they should go down to Annapolis and kick at the State House doors until the right bill is passed.

GORMAN AND THE PANAMA CANAL.

Regarding the Democratic opposition to the Panama canal treaty, which continues to be the main topic of conversation in Washington, Senator Simmons, a Democrat from North Carlina, says "If the Democratic party be instrumental in bringing about the defeat of the treaty, the American people will hold the party responsible therefor and might soon forget the conduct of the President." This is but one of many expressions of opinion by Democratic Senators, which makes the Republicans certain that the treaty will be ratified. In renouncing their opposition to the treaty, the minority Senators have been described as deserting a sinking ship, and politicians are now asking what will be the effect of Senator Gorman's blunder in starting his party on a course from which they were turned by the instruction of their state legislatures or by demands of the Democratic governors and the party press. The Maryland Senator has led his party into a mistake and has injured if not destroyed, his chances of the Democratic nomination; at least that is the general opinion. It is significant that Leader Murphy of Tammany Hall, whose motto is success, and who judges men merely by their vote getting ability, has given out a partial endorsement of William Randolph Hearst as the next candidate, although until recently the Tammany leader was very friendly with Senator Gorman. Representative Cooper, of Texas, who declared that Gorman in a "slick politician." but that this reputation is not popular with the people, says that Hearst will get the nomination and that Gorman will manage the campaign. It is thought by many that Gorman's mistake on the canal question will rob him even of his title of "slick politicion." The next Democratic caucus where the canal question will be discussed will be a stormy one may result in Leader Gorman's practical downfall. Senator Morgan will speak against the canal and it is believed that he will occupy much of Senate's time but little of its attention. If the Democrats insist upon delivering campaign speeches in the Senate the Republican majority will have the treaty considered in executive session.

THE GOVERNOR.

Former Gov. Lloyd Lowndes, when in Baltimore recently, said: "The Governor of Maryland imagines he is a very big man, and in some respects he is, except at Annapolis when the General Assembly is in session. Then he is brought to a realizing sense of his own littleness and impotence. He can do nothing he may wish except with the assistance of others. He is obliged to consult all sorts of people as to what should be done. He cannot make an appointment unless he has the consent of a majority of the Senators. If he wants an appropriation to carry on what may be vital to the interests of the state, he is obliged to have the assistance of a majority of both houses. In fact, he can be certain of nothing unless he is assured beforehand that he will have the approval of the two houses. No matter if he has examined the question on all sides and in all its bearings and is sure of his ground, he is powerless without the aid of the Geueral Assembly. If he thinks a certain sum of money is absolutely necessary in order to complete a public work, he must ask for at least twice the amount needed, in order to get it, for the Legislature almost invariably cuts all recommendations in half, and grants just half of what is asked.

"The Governor has great power and great influence, but when the General Assembly is in session he is only second fiddle in the orchestra. If he is out of harmony with the others he has trouble, and it is trouble in the real sense of the word, and there is no mistaking it."—Baltimore Herald.

SMALLPOX DIMINISHING.

Many Who Have Been Ill Recovering. But Two New Cases Last Week.

While the smallpox situation in Oakland and vicinity has been of a nature tending to frighten timid people and give rise to many unfounded reports which gained credence by these reports being published in one of our local contemporaries, the facts remain that the disease has not gained the upper hand by any means and that it is well under control of the physicians and local board of health.

During the past week but two new cases have developed, one in a family, that of Michael Rice, which was already infected, and the other patient being Gus Delawder, son of John A. Delawder, Esq., who contracted the disease by coming in contact with the family of A. J. Harne, Esq., where two cases developed before being reported to the physicians.

No deaths have resulted within the past ten days and the outlook is now brighter for a final stamping out of the disease than it has been at any time since its introduction into the town and community. Those affected are all recovering rapidly.

At Loch Lynn heights no new cases have been reported for two weeks or more. Out from that point about two miles two more members of the family of Richard Reams have been taken ill, but the cases are light.

West of Oakland along the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad the situation is becoming quite alarming, especially in Preston county, W. Va., where the disease has gained such headway as to almost baffle the physicians in checking it.

A report from Terra Alta states that one case has developed in that town, but how true this is cannot be learned. At Rowlesburg there are several cases and at Tunnelton ten cases have been reported. From Newburg comes the report that eleven cases are now being treated by the health officers and at Austen, a mining town a few miles east of Newburg four cases are reported.

The health board of Preston county held a meeting Tuesday when steps were taken to check the disease by appointing physicians to look after the cases and to establish quarantine regulations wherever necessary.

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

ONE MAN'S EXPERIENCE.

James W. Harvey Relates to a Correspondent an Exciting Bear Hunt.

Garrett is a new county. Not so many years ago it was a howling wilderness. Many of her citizens remember when wild turkeys, wolves, deer and bear roamed her mountains and plateaus unmolested as yet by intruding man. And a most interesting thing to the younger generation is a recital by some pioneer of his adventures and struggles in the forest. Any native of the county can recall how, when a child, he would sit by the old fireplace and listen, open-mouthed, to some old relative tell how he had dodged the leap of a panther or robbed a wolf's den of its whelps.

These pioneer citizens stand as living monuments connecting the present with the past. There seems to linger about them yet an atmosphere of the forest and they still retain a love for excitement and adventure.

This is called to mind by a man old in years but young in vigor and endurance, Jas. W. Harvey of near Blaine, with whom the writer recently had the pleasure of a fox chase. Bear and deer are gone, so about the only true sport left the old man is the chase and he indulges in it with all the enthusiasm of the younger man.

On the morning of the chase Mr. Harvey got up at four, ate his breakfast, fed nineteen head of cattle and walked three miles leading his hounds to the place of meeting before his companions were out of bed.

It was raining and snowing; so, after about five miles run, the only fox raised made for shelter. After dinner Mr. Harvey proposed to defy the weather and have another chase, but his tender-footed companions desisted, so he had to content himself with recalling youthful and more exciting days.

When he used to live in West Virginia bear were plentiful. He killed quite a number, but had his most exciting experience one morning when he went out to make sugar troughs. He had worked but a short time when his dog began to bay something in the wood below. Shouldering his axe he went down to find a large bear and the dog in combat. Upon seeing him the bear shook off the dog and climbed a tree. This Mr. Harvey chopped, but the bear out did the dog and climbed another very large tree. This one being too large to chop he began to fall others against it hoping to brush Bruin out; but, failing in this, he stoned the bear, and at last struck and cut off one of his toes. Enraged, Bruin started down the tree only to be met at the root by his foe who struck at him with the axe which missed and went whirling twenty steps down the hill. Then happened what Mr. Harvey dislikes to tell—he ran. In the scrimmage which followed between dog and bear he recovered the axe and struck for a large leaning red-oak tree toward which the bear was fighting. Both arrived at the same time. The bear started around the tree one way, Mr. Harvey the other and they bumped heads. He dealt the bear one blow with the axe and Bruin scrambled up the tree only to escape a second blow which stuck the axe fast in the bark high out of reach. Tired out by the repeated conflicts the bear settled himself in a crotch about thirty feet high. Then Mr. Harvey was in a predicament. He didn't like to be outdone; his axe was sticking in the tree so high he could'nt get it; he was in his shirt-sleeves and it was early spring. The bear had prepared for the night. Determined to have his game he cleared a place where he could jump to keep warm and began to hollo.

Bill Biggs, who lived in Maryland, heard his calls and said to his wife:

"That is Jim Harvey. We were old soldiers together and I know his voice. He has cut himself or broken his leg and I am going to him."

So Biggs waded the Potomac river floating slush ice up to his arm-pits to save his comrade, and shot the bear. It weighed four hundred pounds and was reward enough to assuage the anger of Mrs. Harvey who had been uneasy about her husband.

Mr. Harvey is a type of Garrett's many veteran citizens.

Long will their lives be held up by succeeding generations as symbols of hardihood and their struggles as examples of bravery.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON Jan, 4, 1904.

Regarding the Democratic opposition to the Panama canal treaty, which continues to be the main topic of conversation here, Senator Simmons, a Democrat from North Carlina, says; "If the Democratic party be instrumental in bringing about the defeat of the treaty, the American people will hold the party responsible therefor and might soon forget the conduct of the President." This is but one of many expressions of opinion by Democratic Senators, which makes the Republicans certain that the treaty will be ratified.

In renouncing their opposition to the treaty, the minority Senators have been described as deserting a sinking ship, and politicans are now asking what will be the effect of Senator Gorman's blunder in starting his party on a course from which they were turned by the instruction of their State Legislature or by the Democratic Governors and their party press. The Maryland Senator has led his party into a mistake and has injnred, if not destroyed his chances of the Democratic nomination; at least such is the general opinion here. It is significant that Leader Murphy, of Tammany Hall, whose motto is success, and who judges men merely by their vote-getting ability, has given out a partial endorsement of William Randolph Hearst as the next candidate, although until recently the Tammany leader was very friendly with Senator Gorman. Representative Cooper, of Texas, who declared that Gorman is a "slick politican" but that this reputation is not popular with the people, say that Hearst will get the nomination and that Gorman will manage the campaign. It is thought by many that Senator Gorman's mistake on the canal question will rob him even of his title of "slick politician." The next Democratic caucus where the canal question will be discussed promises to be a stormy one, and may result in Leader Gorman's practical down fall.

Senator Morgan will speak against the canal and it is believed that he will occupy much of the Senate's time, but little of its attention. If the Democrats insist upon delivering campaign speeches in the Senate the Republican majority will have the treaty considered in executive session.

Events in the far East are receiving much attention from the Administration. The Chinese commercial treaty has still to be ratified at Pekin by receiving the Imperial Seal, and officers of the State Department believe that Russia is secretly opposing such ratification, in order to prevent the opening of the Manchurian ports of Antung and Mukden to American trade. The Russian fear that if America acquires such an interest in Manchuria, it will oppose its permanent occupation by Russia, or perhaps get involved in the Russian-Japanese dispute. American Minister Conger has received instructions to urge a prompt ratification of the treaty, and our Government is, of course, determined to prevent Russia from successfully opposing it. War between Russia and Japan is regarded as certain and Rear Admiral Evans has been ordered to procede at once from Honolulu to Chinese waters with the Asiatic fleet, which is under his command. While it is thought that hostilities may be postponed for some time, the Administration intends to have a fleet on the scene in order to protect American interests.

Chances of war with Columbia are much discussed here, and it is thought quite possible that Columbia's determination at attack Panama will involve her in a conflict with the United States. Gen. Reyes, who is still in Washington, recognizes the danger of this and continues to cable his countrymen to be patient, and not to forget that war with Panama means war with the only world power of the Western Hempshire. He has handed Secretary Hay a note of protest against the United States' recognition of Panama, and is awaiting a reply before returning to Columbia to take command of the army and charge of the government. No doubt the General will try to fight if his countrymen insist, but seeing the uselessness of such a struggle, he intends to do his utmost to prevent it.

To answer the criticism of the Democrats that the ratification of the canal treaty by the Panama Junta was not equivalent to its acceptauce by representative men on the Isthmus, Minister Bunau-Varilla brought to the State Department official notice that the act of the Junta has been formally approved by the municipal councils of the twelve principal provinces of the Republic.

Admiral John G. Walker has returned from the Isthmus and handed a satisfactory report to the President. He says that the health of the marines on the Isthmus is good, and there are now plenty of them to protect Panama, that their presence is desired by the inhabitants and that it is not advisable to send regular troops, as this action might cause uneasiness. Minister W. I. Buchanan is at Panama, and was accorded a magnificent reception at the government palace. All the ministers, members of the junta and prominent foreigners were present. The new American Minister was escorted by a body of troops and given a guard of honor. He has presented his credentials and complete diplomatic relations with the new Republic are thus established. Great Britain and Cuba have recognized Panama.

The administration is prepared for any emergency on the Isthmus. More marines are being sent and several transport ships are ready to hurry troops to the scene in case of trouble. If there must be war it is thought that the most humane way would be to end it at once and in such a manner that it would not occur again. Columbia would be defeated quickly and would perhaps become American territory.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad And the Worlds Fair.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will issue an elaborate World's Fair Folder on the first of the year, giving full information, with illustrations, of the great Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis. Ticket offices on the entire system will be furnished with all details concerning the route to St. Louis, together with advance information concerning hotels and boarding houses.

The Baltimore and Ohio is the original line from the east to St. Louis. Early in 1827 the founders wished to connect Baltimore and the seaboard, by the most direct line westward, with St. Louis on the Mississippi. From Baltimore to Cumberland the line followed the old national pike; then a direct line was built to Parkersburg on the Ohio River: other companies built lines from Parkersburg direct to St. Louis, and all of these lines have merged into the Baltimore and Ohio System, which forms the West.

Solid vestibule trains run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburg and Columbus to Cincinnati and St. Louis.

Mid-Winter Excursion to Washington. Very Low Rates, Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

In accordance with its usual custom the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. will, on January, 21 and February 18, 1904, run two popular midwinter excursions to Washington at very low rates for the round trip, good returning ten days, including date of sale.

Excellent train service, standard coaches, Pullman parlor and sleeping cars.

These delightful excursions afford splendid opportunities to visit the National Capital during the session of Congress. For tickets, time of trains and full information call on or address V. V. Washburne, Agent B. & O. R. R. for full information.

A most complete and fully illustrated Guide to Washington may be purchased from Agents B. & O. R. R. at ten (10) cents per copy.

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby —Personal Mention, Etc.

Hon. R. T. Browning, of Lake Brown, was in the city yesterday on business.

Assemblyman R. A. C. Howard, of Bloomington, was a visitor to Oakland last Friday and made this office a brief visit.

State Senator Palmer and Assemblymen Howard and Harvey went to Annapolis Monday night where they were sworn in as members of the Legislature yesterday morning.

Register of Willis Friend and Clerk to the Commissioners Ross were housed up the greater portion of last week with illness superinduced by being vaccinated.

Baltimore and Ohio Track Foreman Friend, of Oakland, was taken seriously ill on Wednesday while engaged in his duties and suffered intensely. He was attenden by Dr. J. E. Legge.

One of Mr. George Geissman's bay horses died yesterday morning. The animal was one of the best ones in the stable of its owner.

Lee Hayden, reported last week as being ill with typhoid fever, is rapidly improving, and will soon be out.

Mr. John Ault, who came home from Fairmont on Christmas day suffering with an attack of sickness is able to be out again and will return to Fairmont this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. King Delawder, who spent some days with the parents of the latter in Piedmont, returned to Oakland Monday morning.

Mr. E. J. Fringer returned to Oakland Tuesday evening from a business visit of two weeks to points along the line of the West Virginia Central.

Mrs. E. S. Kerler left Oakland on last Thursday morning for Baltimore where she remained until Sunday when she left that city for Florida where she will spend the winter.

A large number of counterfeit $1 bills are in circulation in Uniontown and other towns to the north of here. People should be careful of the money they get in change and examine it to see that there is no bad stuff among it.

Miss Gertrude Shirer, who has been at Oakland for a couple of weeks past, the guest of her parents, returned last evening and this morning resumed her duties in the Sentinel office.—Monday's Grafton Sentinel.

Eggs are thirty five cents a dozen with nothing doing in the way of the country product. As high as sixty cents has been paid for a dozen eggs when wanted for some special purposes. The scarcity of eggs has made them popular and every one wants to eat eggs.

Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Heindell and little daughter left Oakland yesterday morning for Baltimore where the latter will remain several weeks as guests of relatives and friends. Mr. Heindell will go to Florida this morning where he will spend a few weeks with his mother Mrs. Kerler, who preceded him thence Sunday.

Mrs. Ellen B. Harvey, wife of Rev. John S. Harvey, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hayden, of Mountain Lake Park, reported in our last issue as being dangerously ill, is much improved. Rev. Harvey reached her bedside Saturday morning and is still with her.

Two tramps who were beating their way on a freight train Monday morning were picked up by B. & O. Officer Crim who took them before Justice Gonder for trial. They were sentenced to serve two months in the House of Correction by that official. Officer Crim left for the Cut this morning with the prisoners.

An exchange tells of how a knowing young wife cured her husband of staying out late at night in an original way. Before going to bed she would place two easy chairs together before the sitting room grate and then hold a lighted match to a cigar until the room had a faint odor of tobacco smoke. Although her husband never said a word to her about noticing anything, three "applications" effected a complete cure.

PRACTICED UNDER 4 CONSTITUTIONS.

Noteworthy Career of Jacob Brown, Nestor of Allegany County Bar.

Our circuit court will meet on Monday next, when the two new judges, R. R. Henderson and M. L. Keedy, will take their seats for the first time at a regular session of this court. Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd's term will not end till 1908.

It might be of some interest to the readers of your paper to know or be reminded who and how many judges have sat on the bench of our court since the date of the Constitution of 1850. Under the old Constitution, and the laws at that date, the county court, as it was then legally called, was filled by R. N. Martin, of Baltimore, R. H. Marshall, of Frederick, and Daniel Weisel, of Hagerstown.

The new Constitution of 1850 went into effect in 1851, when Thomas Perry, of Cumberland, was elected for the term of ten years for the circuit, composed of Allegany and Washington counties. He served out his full term. It was by the Constitution of 1850 that the single judge plan was established, and when the Court of Appeals was made an independent tribunal. The War Constitution of 1864 continued the single judge system and made a circuit out of Allegany county alone, and the same for Washington county. James Smith was elected judge for our county at the November election, 1864, but his death came suddenly and unexpectedly in September, 1865. George A. Pearre succeeded him, but he was displaced by the Constitution of 1867, which restored the three judge system. Judge Pearre died in 1883 and his place was temporarily filled by executive appointment of Josiah H. Gordon. Henry W. Hoffman was elected at November election, 1883, for 15 years. He died in July, 1895, and was followed by David W. Sloan, who died in july 1902. His vacancy was filled by Ferdinand Williams by executive appointment. He served until his successor, R. R. Henderson, was chosen at the late election. A. Hunter Boyd was elected as the successor of R. H. Alvey in 1893 for 15 years. It will thus be seen Allegany county has had nine law judges during its existence.

Daniel Weisel was first appointed judge for Washington county by Gov. Pratt. He was elected by the people in 1861 and elected to the Court of Appeals in 1864. George French was elected judge in 1864 for the circuit court of Washington county and was displaced by the Constitution of 1867.

At the election of 1867, Richard H. Alvey and William Motter were elected for 15 years. Judge Alvey served his term out and was re-elected in 1882 and served till 1893, when he was appointed chief judge of the Supreme bench of the District of Columbia, where he still serves. Andrew K. Syester was elected in 1882 and served to his death in 1893. He was succeeded by H. K. Douglas, appointed by the governor, till the election of that year, when Edward Stake was elected by the people for a full term. William J. Witzenbacher was made his successor by executive appointment and served till his successor, Martin L. Keedy, took his place in the late election.

It will be seen that Washington county has had nine judges since 1850, the same number as Allegany. This does not take into account the two Bachannans, who died prior to 1850. It might be irrelevant to remark here that our county in early times had a number of lay judges (not lawyers), such as Andrew Bruce, John Simpkins and others. But the acts of 1804 abolished the lay system and required all judges to be of sound legal knowledge." Now the Constitutional requirement is "learned in the law." Upon the whole, it can be justly said that the people of our county have been fortunate in the personnel and the fitness of the judges who have sat on its bench.

And will the indulgent reader stop to cast eyes upon a paragraph in relation to self. I was admitted to the Allegany bar at the April court, 1849, when Martin, Marshall and Weisel were the court and the bar full and able. Not one member left since 1895 except myself. There is not another remnant of the olden time court and bar. I have repeated the old English form of address, "May it please the court," to at least twenty judges of our court in Allegany and have lived and practiced under four different Constitutions of our state—1776, 1850, 1864 and 1867. Cumberland, Md. Jan. 1, 1904.

Owing to the inability of the Baltimore and Ohio officials to obtain coke with which to fire the heating plant at the station in Oakland large stoves have been installed in the waiting rooms. While the new fixtures are not as handsome as some that have come under the observation of the general public, they answer the purpose for which they are intended very well.

The Republicans have nominated Jeff Lipscomb for Mayor of Parsons. Won't Jeff cut a dash holding Police Court with one gallon and smoking a corn-cob pipe with a red handkerchief tied around his neck, and his cow hide boots on the table. When Jeff presides over the common council he will use a hickory club for a gravel and the Revised Statues of Hoyle for a guide as to when he has a "full house" or quorum and adopt Hunter's Digest for his Rules of Order.—Kingwood Argns.

New Advertisers.

Recognizing the fact that this paper circulates among the buying and consuming classes and that it is preeminently a newspaper that brings trade to its advertisers, Messrs. D. E. Offutt & Sons, merchants, and Gene Baumgardner, the toy, fruit and groceryman, have bought space in its columns for the ensuing year, their first installment appearing to-day. Watch their advertisements, as each week they will have something of interest to announce to their patrons, which will save money to the consumer and incidentally increase the patronage of these two business houses.

Quarantine Raised.

The quarantine on Loch Lynn Heights which became effective some weeks ago owing to the several cases of smallpox existing in that town, was raised on Monday as promised by the health board and in consequence of which the citizens of the Heights are happy and the folks in the community generally felt greatly relieved. May such action never again be necessary.

"If women would pay more attention to their health we would have more happy wives, mothers and daughters, and if they would observe results they would find that the doctors' prescriptions do not perform the many cures they are given credit for.

"In consulting with my druggist he advised McElree's Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught, and so I took it and have every reason to thank him for a new life opened up to me with restored health, and it only took three months to cure me."

Wine of Cardui is a regulator of the menstrual functions and is a most astonishing tonic for women. It cures scanty, suppressed, too frequent, irregular and painful menstruation, falling of the womb, whites and flooding. It is helpful when approaching womanhood, during pregnancy, after childbirth and in change of life. It frequently brings a dear baby to homes that have been barren for years. All druggists have $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

A Good Beginning for the Year

"I BELIEVE in beginnning the New Year well," observed young Mr. Talkington, as he carved the turkey; "I am not superstitious, but—"

"Yes," said his wife, demurely, "I remember how well we began it last year."

"You were to start on a trip that day, weren't you?" queried a guest.

"Yes, and the train, a new one just put on, left at 9:25. Ned said we should arise at five, thus beginning the New Year well and catching the train comfortably. He ordered a cab for 6:30, so it would reach the house at night;

HAD TIME TO BURN.

he did this over night and also wound up the cook's alarm clock. Ned duly waked me the next morning."

"With difficulty, dear."

"You waked me, anyhow, and your voice sounded like the dentist's saying, 'Step this way, please.' We hadn't heard the cook go down, and going to investigate I found her asleep. She said the alarm had gone off at 2:15, and she'd been up every half hour since to see if it was five. The volcano was awake then!"

"Oh!"

"When I returned, Ned pointed to the clock on the mantel and said it was 5:17, and we were late."

"Well?"

"Nothing—only that clock was a wedding present and so handsome that nobody ever expected it to keep time. Investigation proved it was just four, and we went back to bed for an hour. I was dreaming that the cook's New Year's resolve was that she would never leave me, when an awful noise waked me. The cook called that it was eight, and as breakfast had been ready three hours she thought she'd better call us!"

"But did you reach the station in time?"

"Yes. In my haste I did my hair with three pins and Ned put on his dress coat and odd shoes—we are both forgetful, you know. We scalded our throats with hot coffee and choked ourselves with overdone steak. The cabman, who had arrived at 6:30 sharp, demanded full pay for the time he had waited, else he'd deduct from the number of Ned's useful eyes!"

"Dreadful!" chorused the guests.

"While he did this the cook gave warning and told me that the catch on the back cellar window was loose.

"We were in time. To Ned's feverish inquiries the ticket agent calmly responded, 'Oh, yes, we had plenty of time—24 hours and 29 minutes!'"

"Why, how on earth could that happen?"

"The train, as I said, was a new one, put on for the first time on New Year's day, and—and the calendar to which the agent pointed told us that to-day was December thirty-first!"

ELISA ARMSTRONG.

Their New Year's Dinner

"SO you went to Isabel's New Year's dinner?" said the brunette. "Lucky you! Tom and I dine with his mother on the first day of each year, listening to a discourse on economy which lasts from oysters to coffee."

"Knowing that all your bills will be in the next morning's mail, too," cried the blonde. "Yes, we accepted Isabel's invitation, and—"

"How do you like Isabel's new dress? Is it as cold as—"

"Her reception of a tardy guest? Not quite. I was ready at only ten minutes after the last moment at which we could safely start—and if that is not being punctual, I'd like to know what is! 'Eleven sharp!' Jack called to the driver, and then I looked up to see—Isabel's old house!"

"When the dinner was given to display the new one?"

"Exactly. After running a block through the snow in his thin shoes and nearly being arrested as an escaping thief, Jack got the driver to return. Once inside, he declared I hadn't told him Isabel had moved."

"Because he had kept on reading his paper while you told him about it?"

"Yes. I had even told him how the bathroom was tiled. But, dear, I had forgotten whether the new number was 250 or 2550."

"What on earth—"

"Jack threatened to go home and get dinner on the chafing dish—the cook had holiday. Then I remembered thoughtfully writing out the address while Mae and I discussed that new dressmaker, and putting it in Jack's waistcoat pocket, because I am so forgetful."

"How thoughtful."

"Jack gave the slip to the driver and promised him something awful to drive fast."

"Then your troubles were ended?"

"N—no. I had written down the address of the new dressmaker, instead of Isabel's."

JACK WAS WAITING.

"And you were no better off than before?"

"Worse. Jack's language was awful. I said we could just drive along the avenue until we came to the house, which I would recognize immediately."

"So—"

"He said we were invited to dinner, not to breakfast. Then he asked the driver if he happened to know where Mrs. De Style lived."

"Nonsense. He—"

"He knew. It was about six blocks from our house. Stupid of Jack not to have asked sooner. And he seemed to think the whole affair my fault!"

"Well, you reached Isabel's after all."

"Ye-es, in time for the salad. And—and I really should not like to repeat the things our hostess said when she had a chance to speak to me alone."

A New Year Conquest

By CHARLES MOREAU HARGER

A Story of the Great Southwest

GREAT clouds of yellow dust, a dazzling blue sky, sweeping winds, long reaches of level lands—the midwinter southwest, and on the siding the palatial train of the cattle king who was now off among the ranches looking after sleek and well-bred herds.

The cattle king's daughter, whose prospective wealth entitled her to the rank of princess, sat under the striped awning on the rear platform of the train, gazing wearily at the monotonous landscape.

"How long are we to stay here?" she demanded of the porter who was industriously trying to keep the leather-covered chairs clean. He did not answer—he did not know. She went back to the parlor of the other private car and accosted the quiet woman who sat by the window sewing. "Auntie, how long is this to last?"

"Until your father gets back or there are orders."

"I'm tired of it—I'm going out of doors."

She seized a jacket and cap, slipped down the side steps and disappeared behind the squalid depot. A dilapidated livery stable stood in the sunshine. "I want a riding horse—quick!"

The man fairly trembled in his anxiety to serve the city girl, and in a moment she was cantering over the sand and sage brush, headed straight for the green hills in the distance.

Away and away she sped, delighting in the free rush of the wind, the swish of her pony's hoofs through the grass and the exhilaration of the open lands.

At last she turned the horse's head—where was the station? Nothing but a rolling plain, not shining with sunlight, but dampened by shadow. With a little cry of terror she sent her mount racing ahead and strained her eyes for the engine smoke on the horizon.

"Ah, there it is—but so far away!"

She surmised what had happened—her father had reached a station farther down the line and wired for the train to join him, and they had not discovered her absence before starting.

As she looked she saw off to the left another rider—a wide-hatted ranch-

"I WANT A RIDING HORSE."

man—toward him she rode. As she drew nearer her cheeks grew red and her eyes brightened. Once she stopped and turned as if to leave him. Then he came close to her.

"Oh, Mr. Mason, what shall I do?"

Frank Mason, the handsome ranch superintendent, scarcely recognized her, bowing so slightly that it seemed to be merely the motion of his horse.

"What is the matter, madam?"

"Don't be mean"—the girl's eyes were beseeching.

"But you told me never to speak to you again—only this morning."

"Yes, I know, but you see how it is—the train has gone—it is almost evening and here I am."

"It does look serious, doesn't it? Where do they think you are?"

"They don't think. Aunty's probably gone to sleep and won't wake up until midnight—the others think I'm in my room, in papa's car."

"It is serious—and nobody's at the ranch to take care of you. I suppose they will come back to-morrow anyhow."

"To-morrow!" The girl fairly screeched the word. "We must get them now—to-night, don't you understand—now!"

"But it is 50 miles to the next telegraph station—how can the engineer get orders?"

He looked toward the train, which was disappearing in a cut between some creek bluffs a mile or two below the station.

"You see, it's New Year's day and everybody but the stable boys and station agent has gone to the county seat to a celebration. There's a dance to-night, so they won't be home—yes, it is serious."

Their horses were moving slowly toward the station, yet a long distance away. They were talking earnestly and did not notice the curious movements of a herd of cattle that had strayed from the grasslands toward the station and now, hundreds and hundreds of them, were pushing close to the two figures. The girl's bright jacket and the flashing red of the cap that topped her brown curls may have caused their exceeding interest. When a huge fellow trotted in front of her weary horse, the girl stared about her in alarm.

"Oh, Frank—Mr. Mason—look!"

The young ranchman seemed much excited. "Hurry!" he exclaimed, and urged his horse into a run. She cantered by his side, alarmed by the strange apparition of the herd, which it seemed had risen out of the sod.

The ranchman saw something else that the girl did not—a cluster of earth mounds thrown up in the level of the plain, the work of prairie dogs or some other burrowers of the plains. Before he could caution the girl, her horse stumbled, fell, staggered, went tumbling in a heap with a broken leg.

Now it was serious. The cattle, more curious than ever, scampered faster toward the object of their interest; the fallen horse plunged and snorted; the skirts of its rider held her prisoner.

In an instant Mason was by her side, tugging at the fair burden. When she was free he found her helpless from a strained ankle, and with tenderness he lifted her in his arms and to his own saddle. Then jumping beside her he turned the nervous animal, drew his revolver and shot unerringly the struggling beast on the ground—then away toward the station resting on the broad and dusty plain.

Arrived there, he lifted her gently to one of the benches which stood in the tiny waiting-room; he transformed it into a settee with blankets from the livery stable; he heard with pleasure her words of satisfaction.

"That pin you wear—where did you get it?" she asked, irrelevantly. "It looks like Harvard."

"It is Harvard—I graduated there."

"And you are herding cattle?"

"I am superintending a ranch—my father owns it—10,000 head."

"And you live?"

"In Chicago—my special train is at St. Louis now with my sister and mother aboard, bound here."

So this was the "cowboy" she had patronized and made fun of as he came to the train day after day to see her father. She had been amused by his assurance and had quarreled with him that very morning. Now she was at his mercy—and she found it rather pleasant.

"This is a strange beginning for the New Year," she broke out. "I wonder when the train will be back."

"I think it is a good beginning—I'm sure I don't know about that train—there is no connection with it yet."

"I'm sorry I was so rude this morning, Fr—Mr. Mason."

"Don't worry, Anna—Miss Seamans." He smiled, cautiously, at her.

"It is fine of you to care for me and protect me this way," she went on, "and I don't know how to thank you."

"Don't try. This is not the first time I have seen you—I danced with you two years ago at your cousin's ball."

"I do not remember, but you have been very good now. I shall not forget it."

"I know—but don't you think it would be a fine thing to have me take care of you all the time?"

She gave a pressure of her hand—but no more. Almost at the door was a rumble, a high note "T-o-o-t!" and the striped awning of the rear car came into view a few feet away.

"Quick—love, will you?" His words were eager, and as he lifted her in his arms once more for a journey to the train she whispered: "Yes."

Almost as soon from the opposite direction came Mr. Seamans and his foremen. He greeted the pair with smiles and laughed at the daughter's injuries when he found they were not serious.

"Stay on with us," he invited Mason. "We'll bring you back before we leave for Chicago."

"How did the train come back so soon?" asked Miss Seamans, rising from her couch. "I thought it was 50 miles to the next station!"

"Wireless telegraphy," suggested Mason.

"Shucks," said the aunt, contemptuously. "The engineer pulled it down to the creek to fill the boilers. We weren't gone half an hour."

The girl looked quickly into the laughing eyes of the young ranchman.

"I believe you knew it all the time," she exclaimed.

"I did not tell you differently," he pleaded. "You remember I was under orders."

She was not satisfied. That evening as they sat out under the striped awning on the rear paltform and watched the landscape, glistening under the winter moon, as the train sped southward, she continued: "Really, Frank, didn't you bribe the engineer to run behind the hill so it would scare me?"

But he did not answer—nor has he answered yet, though his wife propounds the question every New Year's day.

New Year's Resolves

Better to Make and Break Them Than Not to Make Them at All

SOME facetious individual has defined New Year's day as "a time when men make good resolutions in the confidence of breaking them as soon as possible." But he has much to learn to his own profit who sneers at good resolutions because some men break them. To resolve to do right does not mean necessarily that one will keep the promise, but such purpose, whether outwardly expressed or inwardly understood, is proof that the individual is conscious of abiding sin of some sort.

It is the self-righteous individual who is in danger. Good resolutions are born of repentance; and repentance when genuine is a cardinal virtue. The self-righteous fellow does not resolve to do better because his vanity tells him there is nothing wrong in his makeup. He may go along committing blunders every day and doing no end of mischief. Such a fellow is beyond redemption. Like Ephraim of old, he is joined to his idols and should be left alone.

Doubtless there are many thoughtless and some insincere good resolves made on New Year's day. Nevertheless it is a good thing that many men do begin the new year with resolves to strive after what is higher and better. It is a marked and glorified improvement upon the custom once so general but now, thank God, obsolete, of men going from house to house paying calls and guzzling wine or stronger drink until before the round was completed they were hopelessly drunken.

It is a great deal better for a man to resolve a hundred times and fail in each resolve than to go along contented with his lot of sin and shame. There is hope for a man just as long as there abides in him desire for what is better. It is well to enter into argument with one's self only after due deliberation, but a broken pledge to do right is far better than no pledge at all.

There is nothing strange in association of good resolves with the dawn of a new year. On the contrary, the occasion is one that suggests just such a general practice. The old year has ended. Its memories suggest "sins committed while conscience slept," practices that degraded the moral man, follies that brought shame and vices that weakened body and brain. But memory is not all. Body and mind tell the sensible man that such practices end in physical wreck and moral decay.

The year is new and clean. The sun, just risen, looks upon it for the first time. Men of business close up their pages for the year ended and begin new and fresh ones for the new year that has dawned. They figure out accurately their losses and their gains in the old year, subtracting one from the other.

As the merchant begins his year anew, why may not the moral nature of a man be renewed if the memories of the past year and the physical shortcomings of the present suggest the need of a striving after what is higher and better?

That the practice has been abused is no argument against its use. That some men have made good resolutions only to break them is not evidence that reform is impossible. Striving after what is right is Godlike. One may raise his standard so high as not to be able to attain it, but there is virtue in every attempt to make better one's life. Indeed one may find at the closing of a long life that he has tried but to fail, and yet his very efforts to do right will be counted to him for righteousness.

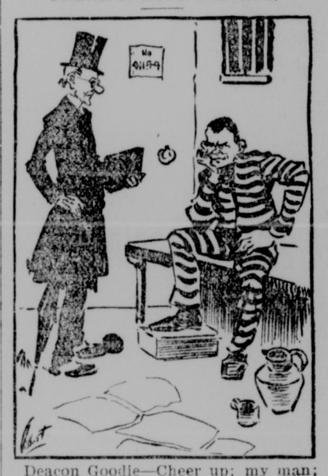
The objection is, if it can be called an objection, that men are too much influenced by special occasions for special efforts. There is no more virtue in New Year's Day than there is in All Fool's Day. It would seem foolishness to wait for any such time or season for a starting period in right living. The present is the time for action, and one day is as good as another in the sight of God, as well as of men.

But the man who has put off the day of resolves to be good until the dawn of the new year will strengthen himself and work righteousness by starting out clean with the year. He will only hurt himself by devoting too much time to resolving. What he most needs is to avoid the pitfalls and snares which formerly overcame him. He has need to change resolves into action. It is his duty to retrospect in order to know himself. Each conquest of self is added strength for future victories.

Happy indeed is that New Year's for the man who, having resolved in its dawn to do right, finds at its gloaming that he has been true to his promises.

WILLIAM ROSSER COBBE.

THERE IS HOPE FOR HIM.



Deacon Goodie—Cheer up; my man; you'll be out on the first of the year.

Jail Bird—Yes, but what can I do after being a thief and holdup man?

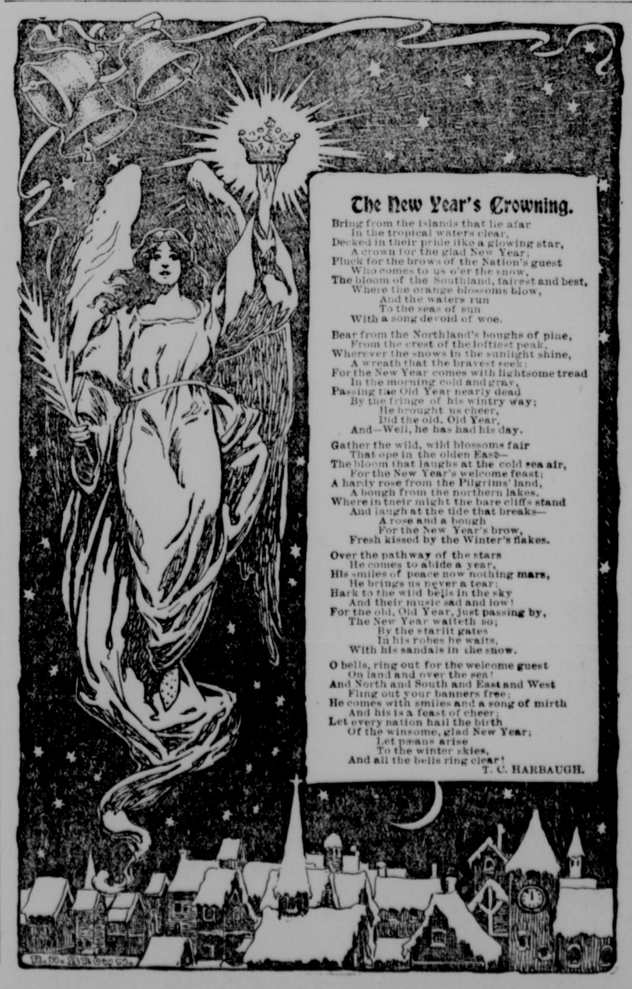
Deacon Goodie—Oh, you can go into the coal business, or start a plumbing shop.

AT 11:59 P. M.

"One kiss," he begged, "before I go."

"Well, take it; but you cannot have another one this year."

And then the clock struck the New Year.



The New Year's Crowning.

Bring from the islands that lie afar
In the tropical waters clear,
Decked in their pride like a glowing star,
A crown for the glad New Year;
Pluck for the brows of the Nation's guest
Who comes to us o'er the snow,
The bloom of the Southland, fairest and best,
Where the orange blossoms blow,
And the waters run
To the seas of sun
With a song devoid of woe.

Bear from the Northland's boughs of pine,
From the crest of the loftiest peak,
Wherever the snows in the sunlight shine,
A wreath that the bravest seek;
For the New Year comes with lightsome tread
In the morning cold and gray,
Passing the Old Year nearly dead
By the fringe of his wintry way;
He brought us cheer,
Did the old, Old Year,
And—Well, he has had his day.

Gather the wild, wild blossoms fair
That ope in the olden days—
The bloom that laughs at the cold sea air,
For the New Year's welcome feast;
A hardy rose from the Pilgrims' land,
A bough from the northern lakes,
Where in their might the bare cliffs stand
And laugh at the tide that breaks—
A rose and a bough
For the New Year's brow,
Fresh kissed by the Winter's flakes.

Over the pathway of the stars
He comes to abide a year,
His smiles of peace now nothing mars,
He brings us never a tear;
Hark to the wild bells in the sky
And their music sad and low!
For the old, Old Year, just passing by,
The New Year watteth so;
By the starlit gates
In his robes he waits,
With his sandals in the snow.

O bells, ring out for the welcome guest
On land and over the sea!
And North and South and East and West
Fling out your banners free;
He comes with smiles and a song of mirth
And his is a feast of cheer;
Let every nation hail the birth
Of the winsome, glad New Year;
Let peans arise
To the winter skies,
And all the bells ring clear!

TWINS 92 YEARS OLD.

Mrs. Eveline Tilton and Miss Emeline Perrine, of New Hampton, Probably Oldest Pair in Country.

Undoubtedly the oldest twins in the United States, if not in the world, are Mrs. Eveline Tilton and Miss Emeline Perrin, of New Hampton, Iowa.

These twins were born in Vernon, Conn., May 22, 1811, and were of a family of five children, two others of whom were twins. At the age of 15 they were taken by their mother to Geneseo, N. Y., their father having died a short time previous at the age of 40. Miss Eveline Perrin was married to Valentine Tilton, May 27, 1857, at Angelica, N. Y. A short time later they moved to Tiskilwa, Ill., and from that place to Jacksonville, Iowa, in 1857. Mr. Tilton died in 1861, and Mrs. Tilton, his widow, went to New Hampton in 1883. Emeline Perrin remained with her mother, Hanna Wright Perrin, until the latter's death in 1854, at the age of 77. In 1873 she moved to Wauconda, Ill., where she resided until 1883. Then she came to live with her sister. Miss Perrin has been blind eight years, and is a devoted Methodist. Mrs. Tilton has been blind a year and is a Presbyterian.

High Salaried Jockies.

The star jockeys of the period all command incomes on a level with bank and railroad presidents and the most eminent men of the professions. Arthur Redfern is paid $10,000 a year by W. C. Whitney and earns as much more from others. Capt. S. S. Brown, of Pittsburg, pays $15,000 a year to George Odom, who is believed to receive as much more for his services to others. "Pittsburg Phil" paid Willie Shaw a $15,000 fee for the season.

Well Remembered.

Valley City, N. Dak., Dec. 14.—Two years ago Mrs. Matilda M. Boucher of this place suffered a great deal with a dizziness in her head. She was cured of this by a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and has not been troubled since.

Shortly afterwards she had a bad bilious attack and for this she used Diamond Dinner Pills and was completely cured in a short time.

In January, 1903, she had an attack of Sciatica of which she says:

"I was almost helpless with the Sciatica, but remembering what Dodd's Kidney Pills and Diamond Dinner Pills had done for me before, I commenced a treatment of these medicines and in three weeks I was completely restored to health. I have great faith in these medicines for they have been of so much benefit to me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are very popular in Barnes County, having made a great many splendid cures of Sciatica, Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles. Many families use no other medicine.

Mrs. Weisslitz, Buffalo, N. Y., cured of kidney trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Of all the diseases known with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless prompt and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave careful study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made sure that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was certain to control that dreaded disease, woman's kidney trouble.

Read What Mrs. Weisslitz Says.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years my life was simply a burden, I suffered so with female troubles, and pains across my back and loins. The doctor told me that I had kidney troubles and prescribed for me. For three months I took his medicine, but grew steadily worse. My husband then advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought home a bottle. It is the greatest blessing ever brought to our home. Within three months I was a changed woman. My pain had disappeared, my complexion became clear, my eyes bright, and my entire system in good shape."—MRS. EFFECTIVE PILE DRIVER.

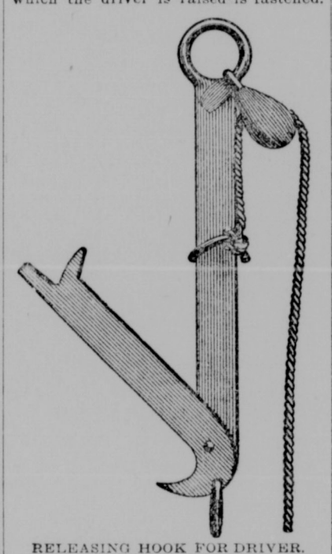
For Small Farm Uses, Such as Sinking Sticks in the Clay, It Is of Practical Use.

A quite effective pile driver may be made for small uses in this way: A frame of four posts spiked at the bottom so as to take a firm hold on a timber frame spreading eight feet or so, and, if the height makes it necessary, held by guy ropes to steady it, and of a sufficient height to get the right fall, will make the frame. The tops of the posts are held by an iron bar passing through them, and bent sufficiently to give the required spread at the bottom. Two posts in the center are used and fitted in the top and secured by the bar passing through them for the driver to fall in, this being guided by slides in which it works. To the top of the frame a pulley is fixed for this lifting rope. At the end of this lifting rope a catch by which the driver is raised is fastened.



RELEASING HOOK FOR DRIVER.

This catch is formed as shown in the illustration. The catch consists of a double spur, the upper one being held by the ring fastened to the end of the rope as shown. It is released by a pull on the guide rope, this rope serving also to draw down the catch for the next lift.

The driver may be a log of heavy wood bound with iron rings to add to its weight, and if the weight needs increasing the driver is bored in the center and the hole filled with lead. The weight of it is further increased by heavy iron rings around it. It should not be of a less weight than 150 pounds for common work, but may be easily increased in weight by adding more of the binding rings. The two center posts are the guides, and each has two scantlings bolted or spiked to it to secure the driver safely. The driver is so made that it slides in these grooves easily, the motion being aided by the use of any lubricant, such as common axle grease. It will be an additional security to pass two iron bands around them, which are bolted to the outside, and so bent as to afford easy passage through them of the driver. The driver has a suitable catch by which it is held in the hook, and the weight of the driver is firmly supported by the form of these clips, which slope inward a little so that some force is required to spread them by the guides at the top, which engage with the curved catch. A pulley is fitted to the bottom of the frame, and the hoisting rope passes through this pulley and hooks to the double-tree attached to the harness.

The draft rope is drawn down after the driver falls by the light cord, as the horses are backed to the original place, and another blow is given. This kind of machine is used for driving or boring wells, but when rows of posts or piles are driven the supports are fitted into a frame at the bottom so that it may be moved on rollers, put under the sills and a plank roadway made for the machine to move on. It is a common practice to have these rollers made with holes at the ends so that they may be turned and moved by means of bars or hand spikes. Of course when work is being done the bottom frame is solidly secured so that it cannot be misplaced by the draft rope as it raises the driver.—Country Gentleman.

The Aroma in Butter.

Not long ago a report was sent out from St. Louis to the effect that aroma was to be recognized there next year in the scoring of butter. Later, the superintendent of the dairy exhibit informed us that this was not to apply to the competitive exhibit of butter, but only to the butter made from the various herds in competition. Mr. Sudendorf is personally very much opposed to the allowing of any points for aroma. He says that butter that scores high in aroma "goes off" quickly, and is of little use on the general market. This is especially true of butter intended for export. Some of the butter that is very high in aroma when first made, "goes off" even before it gets to market.

Guessing that this or that calf will make a good cow is pretty costly business. It cost too much to decide whether or not your guess is a good one. Better be reasonably sure before you start out by knowing the calf's ancestry.—Farm and Home.

The surest way to improve your cows is through the use of a good bull and then raise the heifer calves.

DAIRY COW PROFITS.

They Can Be Materially Increased by Simply Doing the Right Thing at the Right Time.

Very few farmers realize the income to be had from a good cow. The farmer who keeps a cow a year to raise a $15 or $20 calf usually thinks he has done as well as any one, but his profits do not compare with those of the dairyman. Except with high-priced, registered cattle, as a rule, the milk, not the calf, is the most valuable product of the cow.

The milk produced by the average Missouri cow will sell for about $30 at the creamery or when made into first class butter. A good cow of the dairy breeds will make at least $50 cash income every year.

I have a list of about 50 Missouri farmers who report from $50 to $100 per cow every year, and these figures do not include the income from the calves and pigs fed on the skim milk. But, says one, milking is a tremendous task. As a matter of fact, it takes only 60 hours' time, worth about $6, to milk a cow ten months.

Now, a few facts and figures from our experience on the state farm. Last year the cash income from the herd was $82.50 per cow for butter sold and $12.50 per cow for milk, skim milk and calves, making a total income from each cow of $95. This year the average income from the same source will be over $100 for the entire herd of 28.

These incomes do not come from feeding expensive feeds or excessive feeding. They are not due to fine barns or unusual treatment of any kind. But they are the result of doing the right thing at the right time in the proper way. We will try to teach these methods in our short winter course of which we are now mailing announcements.—C. H. Eckles, professor of Dairy Husbandry at Missouri State University, Columbia, Mo.

COWS THAT ARE THIEVES.

They Must Be Weeded Out or the Dairy Will Ever Remain a Money-Losing Proposition.

If the "man behind the cow" in Kansas would do his part, no unprofitable animal would masquerade under the fictitious appellation of "milch cow," and she would either go to the butcher's block or be made to return a profit by more intelligent care and management, says Secretary Coburn in the last quarterly report of the Kansas board of agriculture. It passeth understanding why theft by a cow should be tolerated more than theft by a human. In effect, the result to the loser in either case is the same. Our government has found it wisdom to study and establish far-reaching methods for the detection and repression of the latter; and by the same token why should our farmers and dairymen be less vigilant in their cows—beasts described as dumb, yet outwitting their owners? So long as cows of this class are permitted in the dairy herd, so long will there be dissatisfaction and failure. Improvement is the route to success, whether by breeding, better management, or other way, and intelligence in our cowmen is the power that will force advancement in the right direction. Dairying has come to be one of the most important factors in Kansas agriculture, and, rightly conducted, is one of the surest money makers of our varied industries. It is incomparably more rational than any one-crop system, or even farming, as its practice tends to rotation of crops, maintains or increases the fertility of land, and affords steady employment with returns remunerative according to the brains mixed with the business.

WELL-BRACED CORN CRIB.

Its Designer Claims That It Will Stand Even Against the Strongest Prairie Winds.

It is very hard to get a corn crib well braced to stand against such strong winds as we sometimes have. The wind has a very strong pressure on so large a roof. If we would brace a crib properly on the inside the braces would always be in our way more or less. Therefore, I suggest that the siding be put on slanting, as indicated in the accompanying illustration. This will brace the crib both sides and endways.

In building a corn crib, get it high enough off the ground—about 18 inches at the lowest point. Have the foundation on each side of the driveway laid on a solid wall. Then afterward fill the driveway with ground up to the sill of the crib. For the sill I should use 4x6-inch stuff, sides 2x4, about 8 feet high. The gable ends are closed with ship lap. Put on a good shingle roof, which is the main part. Provide good roller doors for the ends. An eight-foot driveway is convenient to hitch a team. A crib 8x24 feet holds about 600 bushels.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Kerosene in Orchard Work.

An eastern orchardist has been experimenting with the use of clear kerosene for the insect pests that infest his trees and has had remarkably good success. The kerosene was applied with a very fine spray pump in such a way that the bark and leaves were completely wet. No injury whatever was done to the trees in this way; but practically all the insect pests were killed, especially the bark lice and aphides.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY ENDORSES PE-RU-NA.

Pe-ru-na Drug Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen: "I can cheerfully say that Mrs. Schley has taken Pe-ru-na and I believe with good effect."
W. S. SCHLEY.—Washington, D. C.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY, one of the foremost notable heroes of the Nineteenth Century. A name that starts terror in the heart of every Spaniard. A man of steady nerve, clear head, undaunted courage and prompt decision.

Approached by a friend recently, his opinion was asked as to the efficacy of Peruna, the national catarrh remedy. Without the slightest hesitation he gave this remedy his endorsement. It appeared on later conversation that Peruna has been used in his family, where it is a favorite remedy.

Such endorsements serve to indicate the wonderful hold that Peruna has upon the minds of the American people. It is out of the question that so great and famous a man as Admiral Schley could have any other reason for giving his endorsement to Peruna than his positive conviction that the remedy is all that he says it is.

The fact is that Peruna has overcome all opposition and has won its way to the hearts of the people. The natural timidity which so many people have felt about giving endorsements to any remedy is giving way. Gratitude and a desire to help others has inspired thousands of people to give public testimonials for Peruna who heretofore would not have consented to such publicity.

Never before in the annals of medicine has it happened that so many men of national and international reputation have been willing to give unqualified and public endorsements to a proprietary remedy. No amount of advertising could have accomplished such a result. Peruna has won on its own merits. Peruna cures catarrh of whatever phase or location in the human body. That is why it receives so many notable and unique endorsements.

Address The Peruna Drug M'f'g Co., Columbus, Ohio, for free literature on catarrh.

AN EXPERT.

He Wanted a Confidential Clerkship Because He Could Be Very Confidential.

Secretary Shaw says that shortly after he assumed his duties as head of the treasury department he was called upon by an old gentleman from his own state of Iowa, who wanted an appointment as confidential clerk to one of the assistant secretaries of that department.

"In spite of the fact that I was very busy at the time," says Mr. Shaw, "I gave the Iowan the better part of an hour, for he was as pleasant and entertaining an old chap as one could meet—bright, chipper and witty."

On account of his age, the secretary felt that he could not comply with the request. So, gently but firmly, he informed him that he did not see his way clear to give him the appointment. This did not dampen the old gentleman's spirit in the least.

"Now, sir," said he, "as I feel myself peculiarly well qualified to fill one of these confidential clerkships, I hope that you will consider my application further."

Then, wagging his head most impressively, he added earnestly:

"Oh, sir, I could be so confidential!"

Tess—"He was pleased to say I sing like a bird." Jess—"I heard him say that to you, and just after that he began to talk to me about owls and their habits."—Philadelphia Press.

TWO PRAYERS.

Queer Requests Made in the Supplications of Imaginative Preachers.

"Speaking of 'queer breaks' occasionally made by pastors in addressing their faithful flocks, here is one that I think takes the cake," observed a New Yorker to some friends as they were chatting at the club, according to the Times.

"The case in question was that of a young clergyman whose imagination sometimes exceeded his common sense. At any rate, on one occasion he began his prayer as follows:

"'Oh Lord, we thank Thee that there is one small spark of grace remaining in our hearts. Water it, we beseech Thee, Oh Lord, water it.'

"That reminds me of the favorite climax of the minister of the one church in a little country place where I was staying one summer," remarked one of the others when the laugh had subsided. "He was of extremely pacific tendencies and rarely ended his prayer by any other phrase than the following:

"'Oh Lord, we pray Thee that the dove of peace and the eagle of freedom may soar heavenward together, bearing between them a banner with the motto, "E pluribus unum," A-a-men.'"

Mr. Trucker—"I think I shall give up my business, my dear. I might as well have some good out of my money." Mrs. Trucker—"Oh, not yet, Samuel! But when one of us dies, I shall give up housekeeping and see a little of the world."—Town and Country.

Champion Liar Found.

The Manila American has discovered "the champion circulation liar." He is acting as editor of the Thundering Dawn, a Buddhist organ just started in Tokyo. Here is his greeting to the public:

"This paper has come from eternity. It starts its circulation with millions and millions of numbers. The rays of the sun, the beams of the stars, the leaves of the trees, the blades of grass, the grains of sand, the hearts of tigers, elephants, lions, ants, men and women are its subscribers. This journal will henceforth flow in the universe as the rivers flow and the oceans surge."

It Sometimes Happens.

"Of course," says the shoe dealer, "there are times when it is necessary to stretch the truth a trifle."

"Yes, sir," answered the head salesman, "and often a fellow has to stretch a lie."

"I don't see how?"

"Well, when a woman with a No. 6 foot declares that a No. 3 shoe is just her size and asks you to put it on the shoe stretcher over night 'just to make the instep a little higher,' that's one of the times."—N. Y. Times.

Jealous, Probably.

"Yes; he proposed," Miss Passay continued, blushing, "and when papa came into the room he found me in Mr. Huggins' arms."

"Ah, now I see," exclaimed Miss Speitz. "I wondered what your father meant to-day when I heard him telling my father that Mr. Huggins had an old head on young shoulders."—Stray Stories.

"What's in here?" asked the tourist. 'Remains to be seen," responded the guide, as he led the way into the morgue.—Columbia Jester.

Preaching of John Baptist

"Twice in her season of decay,
The fallen church hath felt Elijah's eye
Dart from the wild its piercing ray:
Not keener burns in the chill morning sky
The herald star
Whose torch afar
Shadows and boding night birds fly."
—Keble, in Christian year.

The person and mission of John Baptist seemed a last effort of Providence to awaken the Hebrew nation. Had he never uttered a word, his very self would have been a sermon. His plain fare and course rainment were a protest against purple and fine linen and farming sumptuously every day. He took some jutting rock for a pulpit, had the whole heavens for a sounding-board, and a river for a baptismal laver. Add to these scenic incidents the most fearless and searching speech that ever fell from human lips, and is it to be wondered that a whole nation went out to hear him, and went down into his font confessing their sins? He was no reed, bowing obsequiously under the breath imperialism. The burden of his preaching was the imminence of the kingdom of God. The application was a call to repentance and thorough-going reformation; the sign was baptism.

All Israel experienced a great awakening. The Sabbatical year gave leisure for hearing and meditating. Even those who did not honestly accept his preaching were pleased with the novel sensation of its electrifying rays. It was well worth one's while to see and hear him. The measure of his success is evident in the common belief that he himself was the Messiah—a mistake that he instantly rectified with the most complete self-effacement. Yet the inference was still drawn, "What must the king be like whose herald is decked in such moral grandeur?"

The Teacher's Lantern.

John was the reviver of prophetism after a lapse of four hundred years. The genuineness of his prophetical character was universally admitted. He was fearlessly faithful to his calling. He left no stone unturned to prepare for the general acceptance of the kingdom of God. Jesus himself writes his epitaph in gold, "Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist."

* * * * *

The resemblance between Elijah and John is remarkable. Both have been aptly called prophets of action. Neither of them contributed a single page to the Bible. Both of them were Bibles in boots. They set before degenerate Israel, "the living image of holiness."

* * * * *

The repudiation of Jesus by the Hebrew nation after the faithful explanation of his character and mission by John the Baptist, seems inexcusable. Yet it is not without parallel. Every nation can present analagous cases. Not one, but many of them.

* * * * *

In this paragraph the curtain of the New Testament rises, and the greatest epoch since words were made begins.

* * * * *

It was the aptest moment in the annals of the world for the introduction of the kingdom of God. Philosophy, art, government, were seemingly allowed to come to perfection in order that their futility might be the more manifest. They were all at one end of the beam; and as they rose, humanity at the other end, sank in gloom, misery, and despair. The power of the "other world" was manifested where it was most likely to be accepted, and when, in the facile Greek language and under the aegis of Roman law, it could be most successfully disseminated.

* * * * *

Though John was rigorous, he was not morbid. He did not command his converts to take to his hermit life. He did not exhort them to don leather girdles or eat locusts. He showed them how to live in the world, and yet be unworldly: that a good life must not needs be a monastic life.

* * * * *

The preaching of John Baptist is not effete. Discard, if you will, the old orthodox hell and a literal day of judgment, all must concede that there is a continuity of judgment, in which sin is being brought to light, and a contemporaneous hell in which sinners are being tormented. There is need of a new Dante to sing of the purgatory on the hither side of death, a new Angelo to fresco terrors of the interminable assize.

* * * * *

He is the sublimest example of self-negitation. When there was universal disposition to identify him with the Messiah, he nipped it in the bud. When signs of waning popularity were apparent, he said, "He must increase, I must decrease."

Child-Study and Sunday School Methods.

Childhood is music alive. The normal boy or girl is an incarnation of harmony. In repose or action, in voice, poise, and gesture, the child, unmarred by self-consciousness, has a natural rhythm which is one of its most fascinating characteristics. To such, melody is as delicious as air and almost as necessary.

From the beginning the Sunday-school has furnished a sphere in which the child can exercise itself in "harmonical sounds." And for this it deserves high commendation. The song book and Bible are the only text-books of the school.

The sentiment of many of the songs is confessedly crude and shallow. An expert has recently shown by several examples that it is entirely immaterial as far as sense is concerned, whether the successive lines of the verses are read as written, or in inverse order. But that seems to make precious little difference to the small songsters. It would be an interesting study for the psychologist to find just what sense, if any, the average child attaches to the average Sunday-school song. It might be found to be a mere succession of accordant sounds.

A little fellow was heard singing in the school:

"I will fight under the banner of King Gee-ban-you-ell," putting stress on the "Gee" and "ban."

"Dare to be a a Dan-yell!" was another of his favorites.

One chorus still floats in memory:

"Oh golden hereafter thine every bright rafter Shall shake with the thunder of sanctified song!"

It made precious little difference whether another chorus read, "Isles of palms or palms of isles," or "Palms, palms, and isles, isles."

It would, of course, be well if better sense was attached to the melody; but, after all, it is the melody and quick time that is so dear to the juvenile heart. Some publishers, to gratify their customers, have not hesitated to put sacred words to "Annie Laurie," "Swaunee River," "Old Kentucky Home," "Marching Through Georgia," and even to the "Wedding March."

For once "the children of light" were wise when they bated the Sunday-school hook with a song-book.

BANK MONEY ORDERS.

This country needs the enormous commercial conveniences of bank money orders, but the national bankers do not seem able to propose for themselves any device better than an adoption of the cumbrous system now used by the government and express companies, says a writer in the Atlanta Constitution.

What the business people of the country need is a system of bank transfers whereby Jones in Atlanta can go to a bank and deposit $100, or any other sum, to be paid to Smith in New York or Seattle on the same day by a bank in either of those cities. The bank in the receiving city notifies Smith that it has a sum to his credit and that with his identification, enables him to get it at once. The cost of the transfer, including telegram and bank commissions, is held out of the remittance or arranged between Jones who pays it and Smith who is the beneficiary.

A system kindred to this has been in vogue in Germany for some years and has resulted in tremendous faciliation of money exchanges within the empire, accommodating the public, hasting business and proving profitable to the related banks. Such an arrangement between national banks only in this country would soon give to them an immense volume of business annually, with profit better than ordinary exchange, and would do a public service that the people would not be slow to appreciate. If the banks do not soon adopt some such immediate transfer system the express companies will at last come to it and trap the patronage and benefits that will follow its popular employment.

MARYLAND LEGISLATURE.

Governor Warfield Inaugurated on Wednesday In Imposing Style.

ASSEMBLY AGAIN IN SESSION

Tuesday Night—Managers Seem To Be In a Snarl Over Proposed Legislation—Rayner People Hard at Work In Montgomery County.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS, January, 14th, 1904.

Governor Warfield was inaugurated yesterday in imposing style, and the new democratic regime opened auspiciously, with a large majority in both houses of the General Assembly to back up his Excellency and his party in their plans for the management of State affairs. But, as has often happened before, when openings were most auspicious, the peace and serenity does not last, and already there are mutterings in the air which indicates that before long trouble may come and the way of the new administration be strewn with thorns rather than with roses.

The General Assembly reconvened here Tuesday night from its adjournment last Wednesday, but the meeting was of little interest, being used merely to get the members back to Annapolis, in order that the democrats in caucus might discuss the various party measures to be adopted during this session.

The managers seem to be in more or less of a snarl over the proposed bill to eliminate the negro voters, and at the present moment, the Attorney-General of the state, Mr. William Shepard Bryan, and the distinguished lawyer and ex-Attorney-General Mr. John P. Poe, are having a very hard time to agree themselves as to just what is to be done. When this is understood, some idea may be gleaned of the difficulty which will be encountered in getting the members to understand and vote on such a measure, after it is presented.

The town has been full of people during the week attending the inauguration of Governor Warfield, but even that was in the back-ground, for the senatorship occupies the center of the stage. The developments of the past week, especially the frantic activity of the Sun, has kept interest in this fight up to an unusually high pitch. Petitions have been appearing for several days now in the columns of the Sun, all tending to prove what it has been claiming since the 3rd of November, that the people en masse want Rayner.

A dead set has been made, too, on Montgomery county, in order to move Spencer C. Jones, the President of the Senate, if possible, in Rayner's favor. Montgomery has always been a hot-bed for anti-Gorman and anti-ring democrats, who are making their hostility to the regular organization apparent at this time, by endorsing with great vehemence this anti-organization candidate. If their appeals move Jones, who has always been a friend of Senator Gorman, and if their petitions induce him to support Rayner, the moral effect of the move will be worth the votes of half a dozen county delegations put together, hence the efforts on Montgomery especially.

Colonel Jones has given no sign, and his friends consider it extremely doubtful if he will, for that gentleman is a very resourceful and wise old politician indeed, and it would be strange if he did not see through this maneuvre for moral effect.

Furthermore, the secret of these Rayner petitions all over the state is well known, and the fact that the men who carry them around are paid for every name they get, weakens their effect materially. Thus, in Montgomery county, although the petitions were very large, only one delegate has announced himself thus far as favorable to Rayner, and it is very doubtful if more than that one votes for the ex-Attorney-General after the first ballot,

The present plan of the managers seems to be to begin the balloting next Tuesday in open session for the Senator. A few ballots, as a result of which no one of the various candidates can possibly get a majority, will demonstrate the utter impracticability of the open plan, which the enemies of the regular organization have been so loudly demanding. After that the democrats will retire to the secret caucus as has been generally done heretofore and Jackson or Smith will be elected.

At this time all the surface indications favor Smith, but it is very doubtful if the indications will favor him so strongly a week from now, when the caucus is just that much closer. It has been noticeable for several days that Mr. Gorman's lieutenants have been falling away from Smith—taking the "hands-off" position—which it was announced several days ago that the Senator himself would assume in a contest between these two, reserving the right only to interefre in case of the very improbable possibility of the Hon. Mr. Rayner developing any strength.

While it is too early yet to say what the Garrett county delegation will do this session, the indications are that it will be well taken care of on the committees, etc.; as well taken care of at least as minority members usually are, and that Garrett will be represented as usual in a fitting manner. While old timers at Annapolis miss Senator Ravenscroft, and while Delegate Finzell is decideely missed in the House, there seems to be no doubt about the fact that the men sent in their places will give a good account of themselves.

Senator Palmer is by no means a stranger at the State House and finds many familiar faces, and many people who are glad to see him once more.

DIRECTORS ELECTED

At Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Oakland Banks.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Oakland banks was held Tuesday of this week when directors were elected for a period of one year as follows:

Garrett National Bank—D. E. Offutt G. S. Hamill, John M. Davis, George W. Legge, John T. Mitchell, William R. Stull, and Scott T. Jones. The above named directors will meet today and elect the officers who have served in their various capacities heretofore.

First National Bank—F. A. Thayer, N. U. Bond, M. N. Wilson, A. G. Sturgiss, E. E. Sollars, W. A. Smith, R. A. Ravenscroft, Owen Treacy, C. E. Ellithrop, C. E. Hilleary ard Edward H. Sincell. Immediately after their election the directors elected the old officers as follows: President, F. A. Thayer; vice president, M. N. Wilson; cashier, R. E. Sliger; assistant cashier, M. R. Hamill.

Good Coasting.

The young people of town are having a good time just now coasting down the numerous hills, especially down the street from Treacy's corner to the railroad track on Second street which is a very dangerous proceeding in view of the fact of so many trains passing during the day and may result in the serious injury and probable death of some of those engaged in the sport if they should happen to collide with the cars.

An Intermission

By CORDIA GREER PETRIE

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

HE SANK wearily into the recesses of the big chair and silently called down blessings on the head of the considerate soul who had the forethought to arrange this sequestered nook, where, in the shadows of the balcony, a man could enjoy a brief respite from social frivolities and smoke his Havana in blessed quietude. It was such a bore, this thing of simulating interest for ennui, but then one of the disadvantages in possessing an acknowledged queen for a wife is in being dragged from one function to another. But there are advantages—their name is legion—and he unconsciously thrilled with pride as he thought how the other fellows envied him. . . . Even now, he marveled that he had won her.

The music floating out from the ballroom suddenly ceased, and presently a man and woman stopped in their promenade and established themselves amid the bower of palms and rubber plants just inside the adjacent window.

"It's astonishing," he heard the woman say, "how quickly one tires, with advancing years. It is one of the first signs of age. Time was when I could have danced on and on—like the proverbial brook, forever—and not feel the slightest fatigue."

"It depends on one's partner," her companion grumbled. "Now, I was just breathing maledictions on the director for the brevity of that last number."

"You always danced divinely," the woman graciously conceded. "I hold that dancing is an art not to be acquired. My husband, for instance, after years of patient endeavor has but to make a single revolution around the room to gain a complete and undisputed monopoly of the floor. The others, to put it correctly, his victims, precipitately seek places of safety, where they can nurse their wounds or adjust their detached trains."

She laughed lightly, displaying teeth of milklike whiteness.

The man in the shadows stirred uneasily in his chair. He started to leave, but something—an odd, unfathomable look on the man's face just inside the window transfixed and held him.

"Do you know, Madge," he heard him ask, in a low, eager voice, "why I am 'among those present' to-night?"

The woman inclined her head so that her face was in the shadow.

"How should I—mind reading not being included in the inventory of my accomplishments?" Then—as if an afterthought: "Probably to make new conquests among the buds out there," indicating the ballroom with a graceful little sweep of her fan. "Your old propensity, you know. Or, perhaps, to make glad the hearts of your erstwhile friends, whom you knew were eager to welcome you back to the old circle after your long absence abroad."

"Your penetration is not remarkable for its acuteness to-night," the man submitted tentatively. He gave her a long, searching look. "This is the first function I have graced (?) in five years. The night you gave me my conge, I foreswore society, and since then have sought companionship among the beasts of the jungle. They are, at least, merciful, as they inflict mortal wounds, which are far less cruel than the lingering variety."

The woman winced slightly, then with an effort, she said, quite steadily:

"Why recall by-gones, Albert? It is so hopeless, so unavailing. Let us draw the mantle of forgetfulness over the old days, and for to-night give ourselves over to the present. Let our watchword be 'To-day,' for yesterday is gone from us forever, and to-morrow we may not live to see. Life is too short to waste in vain regrets."

"Agreed—on one condition," said the man, earnestly.

"And that?" with a rising inflection in her voice.

"That you tell me—at least do me the justice to explain why you threw me over and married a man whom I have every reason to believe you did not love."

The woman's face was as white as the rope of pearls which encircled her fair throat. She sat nervously toying with the rings on her small, shapely fingers. When she at last looked up, there was a tired, weary look about her eyes.

"Since you persist"—and there was a sort of break in her voice—"I will tell you. Father's business affairs were tottering, ruin was imminent. A rich son-in-law, he said, would reestablish confidence among his creditors, and bridge him over. He put up a pitiful story; there was no time for hesitancy—no alternative, and so—I broke with you, who had at that time no prospects to speak of—and gave myself up as a sacrifice."

The man in the shadow caught his breath fiercely. Inadvertently his hand sought his pocket and drew forth something small and glittering. He smiled grimly as he turned it over in his hand, and reflected with what facility it did its work. In one brief second it could forever remove the barrier which stood between her and happiness. But he must not make a scene and spoil her evening. Later . . . He set his lips resolutely, threw away his cigar (long since gone out), and then, like far-off music he could hear her saying:

"After all, Albert, it was the hand of Providence. We were such children, and did not know the meaning of love. Why, compared with the real thing, that youthful passion was but a spurious imitation. At that time I had not the faintest conception of the beauty, the fullness of what Drummond defines 'the greatest thing in the world.'—A wonderful being is the little god of love. Though blind and deaf to our wishes or desires, he dissipates cares, lightens burdens, and makes life one grand, sweet song. Ah, Albert, in the old days, I never dreamed of such perfect love as now fills my life."

The man rose and offered his arm.

"Before returning to the ballroom," he said, in a voice disciplined to steadiness, "I should like to offer my congratulations, and—pardon me—but should you mind telling me the name of the fortunate one upon whom you—"

The woman interrupted him with a soft, rippling laugh.

"As if there could be but one—that noblest and best man God ever created—my husband."

They passed on, and the man in the shadows sank back into the chair and drew forth another cigar. Before lighting it, he returned the glittering object to his pocket. In a voice strangely soft and tender, he murmured:

"God! I thank Thee!"

Far down the street some one was strumming on a guitar and singing:

"Tell me that you love me,
Tell me softly, as of old,
Tell me that you love me,
For that's the sweetest story ever told."

FATHER DON LUIGI SARTORI

Father Sartori, of the little mining town of Midland, Md., has much documentary evidence to prove that he is a cousin of Pope Pius X., whose family name, "Sarto," is virtually synonymous with Sartori. Father Sartori recently wrote a book in which he denounced dancing in such harsh terms that it was suppressed by order of Cardinal Gibbons. This decision has prompted Father Sartori to resign his pastorate, and he will leave in February for Europe. It is his intention to call upon his distinguished relative, after which he expects to enter the Franciscan monastery in the desert of St. John, not far from Jerusalem.

LOOK AT THE LAKE.

Diners in Chicago Restaurants Overlooking Lake Michigan Ask for Seats at the Windows.

A New Yorker who is a frequent visitor here says that to ask for a seat overlooking the water has become an unconscious habit with the Chicago restaurant diner, says the Tribune.

"Let him go into a hotel or restaurant on Michigan avenue or one of the high eating places from which a view of the lake may be had, and the first thing he does is to ask for a table from which he can see the lake. If they are all full he expresses disappointment at having to take one a few feet away, and if there are any women in the party they are positively uneasy and feel themselves defrauded if they don't get that location. Nine times out of ten he will telephone to have a place by a window on that side saved for him.

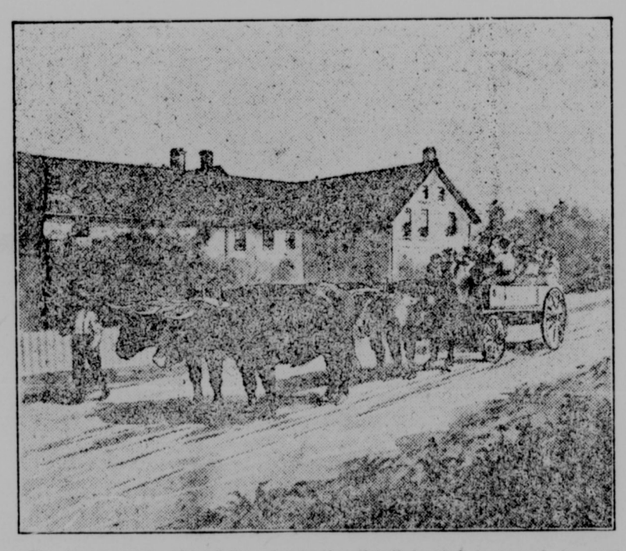
"The funny part of it is," continued the observer, "that after it is secured no one in the party ever glances at the water, but all go on with their talking and eating apparently as oblivious of the lake's existence, much more so, than if they sat on the other side of the room. This, and the fact that the same people go back and forth on Michigan avenue and ride in the Illinois Central trains without speaking of Lake Michigan or giving it a glance, make it appear that this request which the Chicago man invariably makes is a habit rather than something that adds to his enjoyment of his dinner."

MODERN RACE HORSES.

High Average of Speed That Has Been Attained To in the Last Few Years.

The average race of 1903 was run a half second faster than in previous seasons. Years ago when the Suburban and the Brooklyn handicaps were created, they were intended primarily to be endurance races, in which horses should take up strong weights and run a respectable route at a moderate pace, says Outing. We once called those handicaps "distance" races. Now they are "sprint" races—nothing less than that. The pace is terrific. Five years ago horses sprinted six and seven furlongs. Last summer they sprinted a mile and a quarter, taking the popular handicap routes at a pace that not many years ago would have been that of a quarter horse. The first of the great handicaps is the Metropolitan, a mile at Morris Park in May. Only those horses that are especially "forward" in their preparation may start. So early in the year no great deed is anticipated in the Metropolitan, and yet the running in the season that has just passed was remarkable for the pace. William C. Whitney's splendid four-year-old Gunfire was the winner after a terrific struggle, during which the clip set by the front runners was a strain of the most trying sort. Alternately Gunfire, carrying 108 pounds, and Old England were leading with no great distance separating them at any time. With the field close at their heels they ran the first furlong in 12 3-5, the first quarter of a mile in 24 seconds, the three furlongs in 35 1-5 seconds, and the half mile in 48 2-5, the five furlongs in 1:00 4-5, the six furlongs in 1:14 3-5, and the full mile out, Gunfire beating Old England by a length and a half in 1:38 3-5.

STREET SCENE IN AMANA COLONY, IOWA.



The Amana community of "true inspirationalists," located in one of the most fertile valleys of the state of Iowa, consists of 5,000 souls, who are anxiously awaiting the coming of a prophet who will bring such tidings from the Infinite as will counteract the inducements to a worldly life constantly being offered from without to the growing generation within their midst. The original members of this unique and prosperous colony came from Germany in 1842, to avoid religious persecution, and they have since that time accumulated a vast amount of wealth. The picture gives a fair idea of an Amana interurban transportation line.

GEORGIE ON DIETING.

At breakfast ma she says to me
That bread's the staff of life, and when
I take a lump of sugar she
Just makes me put it back again;
I can't have doughnuts neither, 'cause
Pa says I mustn't eat such truck—
I wish boys didn't have no pas
Or mas to watch them, blame the luck!

Pa takes molasses on his cakes
And sugar in his coffee, too—
You ought to hear the row he makes
When I want sweets!—I never knew
The time when he let doughnuts go
Because they might be rich, you bet!
I wish the doctor'd fix it so
He'd only eat the things I et.

At dinner when it comes to pie
Pa says I mustn't have a bite,
Because I might get sick and die,
Or have the nightmare in the night,
And then he takes two pieces, 'cause
He gets the one I ought of had—
If boys would never have no pas
I guess they'd all be pretty glad.

When I grow up to be a man
I'm go'n' to be a doctor then,
Because I've thought about a plan
For boys to even up with men—
I'll fix it so their pas can't eat
A thing unless the boys can, too—
I guess that then the things that's sweet
Won't be so bad to take, don't you?

It makes my pa and ma feel bad
To have me ast for sweets or pie;
You'd think one little doughnut had Enough bad stuff to make me die—
But if they couldn't eat them till
They'd not set heavy on my chest,
I guess they'd let me have my fill,
And just keep hopin' for the best.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Speed of Rifle Bullets.

The muzzle velocity a second of the rifles of the large countries is as follows: United States, Springfield, 2,300; French, Lebel, 2,073; English, Le Metfield, 2,000; Spanish, Mauser, 2,388; Italian, Mannlicher Carcano, 2,100; German, Mauser, 2,034 feet. Sights on these are now graduated thus: United States, 2,000; France, 2,187; England, 2,800; Spain, 2,137; Italy, 2,100; Germany, 2,187 yards.

CLOTHES OF STATESMEN.

Salisbury and Gladstone Cared Little for Appearances—Other British Notables Dress Better.

The late Lord Salisbury shared with Mr. Gladstone a disregard for clothes, and several times his attire was referred to with regret by sartorial writers. So long as his coat hung fairly well from the shoulders, says London Men and Women, the deceased premier cared little, but he never went the length of Mr. Gladstone, whose clothes were often so shabby that only an eminent person would wear them. Lord Salisbury's hats were enormous affairs, quite equaling Mr. Gladstone's in size, and much more respectable. Indeed, Mr. Gladstone's headgear was generally in the "shocking bad hat" category. While in attendance in the commons Mr. Gladstone dressed fairly well, but outside the house he paid little attention to his garments. The successors in office of the great departed are, on the other hand, careful dressers, especially Lord Rosebery, who designed a collar for himself with the turnover peaks rounded for great comfort and durability. Mr. Balfour's appearance is usually very smart on social occasions, although he seemingly does not endeavor to attain the well-groomed condition of Mr. Chamberlain.

What Smokers Consume.

According to the internal revenue report there are no less than 26,423 cigar factories and 517 cigarette factories in this country and they turned out last year 6,787,458,108 cigars and and 3,258,883,303 cigarettes for domestic consumption. Of course, these figures are exclusive of all tobacco smoked in pipes, as well as of imported cigars and cigarettes.

Big Pile of Diamonds.

The largest pile of diamonds ever brought together, states the National Geographic Magazine, was collected at the De Beers mine in South Africa in July, 1900. The directors wanted to know the quantity of diamonds necessary to fill a certain measure. Diamonds of all kinds were put in just as mined, and it was thus ascertained that a cubic meter of diamonds weighs 11,976,000 carats and has an approximate value of about $76,000,000. Up to the present time the Kimberley mines have produced more than $500,000,000 worth of uncut diamonds.

The "Sola" Tree of India.

The "sola" of India is a small tree from 6 to 10 feet high, with a tapering stem. The leaves are consumed as a vegetable, and the light spongy wood serves for a variety of purposes, one of the latest being sun-proof hats or helmets. The wood is cut into thin bands which are stuck together and molded into shape. Another recent use for the wood is to make non-conducting covers or vessels for keeping water and other drinks cool. They might be useful at home in summer.

Underworld Exploration.

Prof. W. W. Watts, the English geologist, strongly advocates a new geological survey of England, which shall do as much to make known the subterranean world there as existing surveys have done to make known that which lies on the near surface. This demand grows out of the ever-recurring question of the approaching exhaustion of the British coal-fields. Prof. Watts says that there is still an area of concealed coal fields left, possibly at least as large and productive as those already explored, but to develop them work will have to be done at a depth of thousands instead of hundreds of feet. The first step must be systematic and detailed exploration of these invisible fields under the guidance of scientific principles.

Colon, Panama.

Colon is a mere sand pit a mile long and a mile wide. At an expense of about $5,000,000 causeways have been built connecting the town with the mainland.

NOTES OF THE MODES.

Furs and Fabrics That Are Much in Evidence in the Season's Coats and Wraps.

A beautiful fur coat for evening or very dressy occasions is of mink, untrimmed with other fur. It is a short kimona shape, and is collarless, reports the New York Post. The lining is cafe-au-lait satin, and is richly trimmed at the opening with a gold Persian embroidery. The sleeves are very wide and flowing, and fall a little below the elbow. Under sleeves of deep yellow lace fall below the full sleeves. They are very full and long, and are drawn in at the wrist, with a narrow band of mink. Ruffles of the lace fall over the hands. There are silk braid ornaments and pendants on the front of the jacket, giving a long effect in front.

Another short coat, for street wear, but handsome enough for any occasion, is a blouse jacket of baby lamb, belted at the waist and having a short skirt of the fur below. The deep gauntlet cuffs of white moire astrakhan are embroidered in a Persian design with black and gold. The cravat collar is also of the embroidered white astrakhan. This ties once over at the throat.

Fur hats and hoods are sold to those confirmed automobilists who think nothing of cold weather traveling in an open vehicle. They are like the summer hats and veils in shape, and are warmly lined with soft silks. Leather and velvet hats are shown with fur linings. Whole leather suits, including a hat, are made of finest tanned leather lined throughout with squirrel.

One very bad effect has followed the vogue of squirrel and mole furs, and that is the increased use of rouge. The gray fur requires bright color, or at least a warm complexion, in order to be becoming. The prevalence of rouged faces and touched up lips cannot be denied, nor can it be sufficiently deplored. With the interest in golf and other outdoor sports it was hoped that cosmetics had received a permanent conge.

In spite of the great popularity for rough weaves of cloth for street wear, the only correct fabrics for more elaborate occasions are smooth. This applies to silks as well as wools. Velvet and velveteen novelties are hardly seen at all. The reason is that plain materials, always richer in their effect than rough or mixed fabrics, have the additional advantage of lending themselves well to the present fashion of trimming and manipulating into gaugings, shirrings, etc.

TAKING A SERIOUS RISK.

They Had to Finish Their Dinners Whatever Might Befall the Nation.

The tall, loose jointed, fidgety man with the goatee had not been long on the east-bound train before everybody in the car knew he was a congressman-elect on his way to Washington from a district which, for purposes of identification, may be described as located somewhere between the Mississippi river and Puget sound, relates the Chicago Tribune.

The train was not traveling fast enough to suit him. He had a haunting fear that the regular session of congress would be delayed in consequence of his failure to arrive on time or that it would have to open without him, and either alternative was terrible to contemplate.

At every stoppage of the train he looked at his watch, and if the delay was more than a minute or two he sent the porter in haste to ask the conductor what was the mater.

At Harrisburg there was a wait of ten minutes.

"Porter," he shouted, as that functionary made his appearance after a prolonged absence, "I wish you would find out why in thunder we're stopping here so long!"

"Beg pahdon, suh," said the porter, "but we leave the dining kyah heah."

"Well, why don't you leave it?"

"Some o' the gent'men, suh, hain't finished their dinnahs yit."

Clapping his hat on his head, the distinguished passenger strode forward to the dining car.

He opened the door and thrust his head inside.

"Gentlemen," he roared, "do you know that your infernal gluttony is hindering the public business of the United States of America?"

Macaroni Baked with Jelly.

Take 20 sticks of macaroni and cook in plenty of boiling water for three-quarters of an hour; drain, rinse with cold water, carefully mix in a level teaspoonful of salt. Have ready a baking dish suitable to go on the table. Make a cream sauce of one cup milk, one tablespoonful flour, one-half tablespoon butter, one-quarter teaspoonful salt and three shakes pepper. Lay a layer of macaroni in bottom of baking dish, next put a layer of the sauce, and cover this with currant jelly. Repeat until the dish is filled, and cover the top with bits of butter. Some use only a half-tumbler of jelly, but it makes it better to use a whole one. A layer of grated cheese over the whole dish adds greatly to the flavor. Set in oven and bake for one-half hour—N. W. Christian-Advocate.

Almond Nougat.

Soak quarter of a pound of gum arabic in a cup of cold water for several hours, then boil until clear, strain and add a pound of confectioner's sugar; cook in a double boiler over the fire until it is thick, then beat lightly with a wire egg whip; add the white of an egg beaten to a stiff froth and beat until light and stiff; flavor with vanilla and stir in two cups of blanched and chopped almonds. Mix well, pour out into shallow oiled pans and when nearly cold cut into squares or bars, wrap each piece in oiled paper and pack in tin boxes to keep fresh.—Washington Star.

THE KEEPING OF FOODS.

Careless Handling and Neglect Often Responsible for Spoiled Perishables.

It matters little how much care is exercised in the selection of food or the sum expended in its purchase if it is not properly cared for after it reaches the house. Through carelessness and ignorance the loss is often great, proving, says the Washington Star, that there is more than a grain of truth in the old adage, "A woman can throw out on a teaspoon what a man brings in on a shovel."

Salads and vegetables that arrive in good condition are dumped down in a hot kitchen to wilt and wither until the cook gets "good and ready" to put them away. Meat is left in its paper to absorb the taste and get glued fast to it. Fruit is bruised in emptying it out, butter left uncovered to grow rancid, and milk standing to sour.

When green vegetables come they should be put at once in the cellar or into the icebox. Salads may be wrapped in a damp cloth, then in newspaper and put in the air.

Cereals should be emptied in their proper receptacles of tin or glass and closely covered to prevent insects getting in. Coffee should go immediately into an air-tight canister in order to keep its aroma. Olive oil should be put into a cool, dark place, and salt, soap and cheese into dry places.

Dried fruits should be kept in air-tight glass cans; nuts in a cool, dry place to prevent their growing rancid, and chocolate, cocoa and cocoa shells in cold storage. Molasses and sirups need to be where it is cool.

Eggs should be handled carefully, so as not to break the membrane separating the yolk and white, and kept in a dry, cool place.

Flour belongs in a bin or barrel raised a few inches from the floor. While wheat flour may be obtained in quantity, cornmeal or graham flour should only be purchased in small quantities and kept in tin or glass.

Melons should go on the ice or be covered with a damp piece of carpet and left where the air will circulate about them freely. Onions should not be left cut, as they are great absorbents. Neither onions, bananas nor muskmelons should be put in an ice box with other foods.

Winter vegetables should be fully matured when gathered, dried thoroughly and then stored in a cool, dry place. Carrots, beets and celery keep better if packed in sand.

Small and soft fruits should be scattered on platters, not left in baskets as purchased, as their own weight crushes them, and they decay. Peaches and fine pears should be removed to a shelf, and not be allowed to touch one another. Tomatoes may be ripened by exposure to the sun.

Milk and cream should be kept separate from other foods, as they absorb odors. Butter, if purchased in quantity, should have a cloth spread over the top, and on top of that a thick layer of salt.

When necessary to take out butter, lift the cloth from one side, cut out a square, even piece and recover with cloth and salt. If only a few pounds are purchased at a time keep in a tin or agate pail, cover with a cloth wrung out of salt water, and the lid.

Lard should be kept in tin and in a cool place.

Fresh fish should never be permitted to soak in water. Put in a cool place, but never place directly on artificial ice.

Meat should not be laid on the ice, as that draws out the juices. If fresh killed, allow it to get chilled before putting in cold storage; otherwise the animal heat is driven inside and causes fermentation, which is poisonous. Do not let chops or steak rest against one another, much less ham and steak.

All meats and poultry require a cool, dry atmosphere. If necessary to hang them, suspend with the choicest and tender parts down. Hang lamb and mutton by the shank and poultry by the feet.

Boiled Cod.

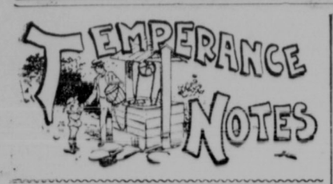
Choose either head and shoulders, or a small whole fish. Clean it thoroughly, put in a fish kettle and cook until done in boiling, salted water. Remove carefully to a heated platter, and garnish with slices of lemon and parsley. Serve at once with oyster sauce. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, then add a heaped tablespoonful of flour, and stir into a smooth paste. Add gradually one cupful of milk and the liquor from a dozen oysters. Let the sauce boil for a few minutes, stirring all the time to keep it smooth, then add the oysters, season to taste, and let stand on the back of the range for three or four minutes, or until the oysters are quite hot. Serve in a hot sauce tureen.—Country Gentleman.

Broiled Bacon.

Margaret's mother believed there was only one very nice way to cook bacon. It was like this: Slice the bacon very, very thin, and cut off the rind. Put the slices close together in a wire broiler and lay this over a shallow pan in a very hot oven for about three minutes. If it is brown on top then you can turn the broiler over, but if not wait a moment longer. When both sides are toasted lay it on a hot platter and put springs of parsley around. This is much nicer than bacon cooked in the frying pan or over coals, for it is neither greasy nor smoky, but pink and light brown, and crisp and delicious, and good for sick people and little children and everybody.—Good Housekeeping.

For Stringing Beads.

The best thing in the world for stringing beads, gold or coral, as well as the popular glass bead chains, is catgut. Next to that dental floss is to be preferred. Never use common thread.—N. Y. Post.



WHO WILL SIGN?

Sign the pledge! Who will sign? Make no more delay;
Wait not till to-morrow, better sign to-day.
Sign the pledge right early! Offer no excuse,
Stopping short of duty never is of use.
For a million pledges we have set our plow,
You can lend a good hand; lend it here and now!
For the sake of others, for your own sake sign,
For the wide world's welfare, come, with us combine.
See the drink curse raging! Join to stem its course
By your wise example, by love's gentle force!
Parents, answer quickly to your country's call,
Christians, for this service Christ requires you all!
And this sacred crusade; hear the voice Divine,
Let each say with fervor: "I will make it mine."
Then in years to follow we shall thankful be
That we helped the people to be pledged and free!
—Dawson Burns, in National Advocate.

ALCOHOL AND CASUALTIES.

The Very Close Relationship Which Exists Between the Two—Some Accurate Figures.

Another argument for the suppression of the saloon comes from Germany, a surprising source, where a painstaking investigator has been trying to find out, by statistics, on what day of the week most accidents occur, and at what hour of the day. This is what has been done by Dr. Wolff, of Strasburg. He bases his conclusions on 1,071 cases of accidents among the working classes.

DRINK CAUSES MOST ACCIDENTS.

It thus appears that Monday is no less unlucky than Friday, when it comes to accidents, and for this fact he accounts by the statement that the drinking shops are most frequented by workmen in Germany on the days previous, viz., Saturdays, Sundays and Thursdays. Fewer accidents happen on Tuesday than on any other day of the week, because on no other day are drinking houses so empty as on Monday. He has also discovered the remarkable fact that the hours after breakfast, dinner and the afternoon rest, are signalized by most accidents. He attributes this to the lassitude caused by the work of digestion, and to the use made by men of intoxicants during meal times. It was not his intention to preach a temperance sermon, but he has done so, unconsciously. —Ram's Horn.

SERIOUS CONSIDERATIONS.

In Successful Warfare on Liquor Evil Pledge Signing Must Be Supplemented by Legislation.

Is it not fearful that Americans spend in intoxicating liquors more than $1,400,000,000 every year? Complaint is made as to our high taxation, and we sometimes grow nervous in view of its steady increase, but here is a tax for which we cannot blame the government—a tax for which we can only blame ourselves, as it is self-imposed and self-levied.

But tremendous as is the $1,400,000,000, which, as a people, we yearly engulf in strong drink, the thought which afflicts and appalls us is, that this terrible impost is mainly a tax on the working man. The lamentation is that many an industrious man will spend in liquor as much money as, had he saved it, would this year have furnished a room, and next year would have bought a beautiful library; or, in the course of a few years, would have made him a landlord, instead of a tenant; an employer, instead of an employe.

Oh, it is a fearful infatuation! It is nothing short of national madness to spend so much wealth and shatterings of nerves and debasing our characters and ruining our souls.

Take another view: The sum spent in the United States in one year would prove sufficient to supply every individual of the adult population of the globe with a copy of the Scripture in less than four years.

If the same sum was devoted to the supplying of Christian missionaries, the whole population of the globe might rejoice in the instruction of such missionaries in the same period, in the proportion of one to every 1,000 hearers.

It has been computed that there are in the United States about 10,000,000 professors of Christianity, who are friendly to the cause of missions, and that these expend on an average ten cents per day in the use of various intoxicating beverages, which are not necessary for persons in health, but rather injurious. Were that ten cents per day devoted to the cause of missions the whole would amount at the end of one year to $365,000,000, which would support 73,000 missionaries at the rate of $500 each.

These are serious considerations. Thousands of heathens are sitting "in darkness and in the shadow of death," and it is the duty of Christians to care for their souls and to furnish means whereby "the Gospel may be preached to every creature." But, then, ability to do this is greatly narrowed, and almost cut off by their indulgence in drink.

The need of the time is sound and thorough instruction among all classes on the liquor question. The people are literally perishing for lack of knowledge on this subject.

The usefulness of alcoholic liquors as beverages and something of the extent of the injury—physical, moral and intellectual—which they inflict upon the persons who use them in what is called excess is matter of common knowledge; but the destructive effects of the drinking customs of our social, economic and domestic well-being ought to be far more fully understood among all classes than it is at present.

On these points a surprising amount of ignorance prevails, and, while it is so, the right legislative remedies of intemperance will be exceedingly difficult to obtain, and when obtained can only be partially and fitfully successful.

The time, we repeat, has fully come for an educational campaign of the most vigorous character. For the success of our movement this is essential. And for the future of our country the success of the temperance movement is imperative. But, by itself, education is not sufficient. Legislation is also indispensable. Both are necessary. The following facts will illustrate this: In Sweden, half a century or so ago, a magnificent educational temperance agitation took place. It had been inaugurated by devoted temperance missionaries from America, and carried on by the intellectual and spiritual elite of Sweden. The people were much influenced by the work of the mission, and many of them were thoroughly convinced of the evils of the use of intoxicating liquors. But the per-head consumption of alcohol was but little reduced. The drink trade, with all its machinery of popular temptation, was maintained, and the people continued to fall before it. In 1885, however, a local option law was passed, giving the power to localities to suppress public houses within their own borders; and, drunken and drink-demoralized though the people were, the law was so successful that out of about 2,400 public houses which were in full operation when the law was passed, over 2,000 were suppressed within two years.

In fact, as we are told by the Swedish historian, Dr. Wieselgren, in whole districts "where before the passing of the law almost every second house had been a brandy shop, you might, after it had been in operation for less than two years, ride a whole day without seeing one, and the consumption of alcohol for the whole of the country was reduced to about one-third of what it was before the passing of the law." What this shows is the vitally important fact that men who could not stand erect in the face of the temptations of the liquor traffic very gladly acquiesced in the suppression of that traffic. Education alone, or legislation alone, would have done but little for Sweden, but both together were its salvation.

Fresh and paramount is the question of personal total abstinence, without which abiding convictions are not to be expected. Greater attention needs to be paid to this foundation department of temperance work by all temperance societies. It has been and is the backbone of the reform. Intelligent convictions as to the drink itself, and its fects on the human system, are indispensable if public opinion is to be made strong and reliable.

The Lancet, the greatest medical authority in Great Britain, wrote not long since that "the most powerful and fascinating means of degradation which human nature has found to debase itself with is alcohol." That is pretty strong, but what does the nation do? What do we as individuals do? We, as part of the nation, are responsible as far as it goes for the government of the nation.

What does the nation do? It maintains the system; legalizes and protects it by establishing drink places in this country with no other object than to supply the means of degradation and debasement. And this it is claimed is a Christian government. See the results. If wou sow the wind, you reap the whirlwind, and if you spread drink throughout the land, you reap the prison, the poorhouse, the lunatic asylum and the scaffold.—National Advocate.

ITEMS.

The United States drinks enough liquor each year to float all her battleships.—National Advocate.

Under the Adams local option law the saloon has been driven out of every one of the 5,500 towns in Tennessee, except 16, and now exists in only 12 of the 96 counties in the state.

Prohibition in New South Wales is becoming so strong that a resolution asking that the prohibitory bill be pushed forward in the house was carried, and the audience of 600 forthwith formed into procession with bands and banners, and marched off to the chief secretary's office, to the premier.

Mr. Nelson, the most distinguished of English actuaries, after long and careful investigations and comparisons, ascertained by actual experiences the following astounding facts: Between the ages of 15 and 20, where 10 total abstainers die, 18 moderate drinkers die. Between the ages of 20 and 30, where 10 total abstainers die, 31 moderate drinkers die. Between the ages of 30 and 40, when 10 total abstainers die, 40 moderate drinkers die.

HER CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

"I HAVEN'T seen you since Christmas eve!" cried the little woman in broadcloth. "Tell me about your Christmas presents. I saw the ones Frances had prepared for you."

"Don't mention Christmas presents to me!" wailed the young woman in velvet. "You see, we haven't as much money as I need myself, so I have to send handsome presents to make other people think I have."

"How sad! Personally, I take the money I've saved and buy a lot of things I just can't part with. Then I tell everybody that giving Christmas gifts is out of date—and isn't it a good thing, since it was such a vulgar custom?"

"But you're rich enough to make people call you eccentric when you do such things; they would merely say that I couldn't afford them."

"By the way, Frances asked me today if you were not obliged to economize dreadfully. I'm very charitable, so I said I thought not, since you never paid cash for anything if you could help it."

"How sweet of you, dear; I'll do as much for you in your absence. Well, this year I knew that Frances' husband had made a quantity of money, and resolved to give her something so handsome that she'd think mine had made more. I don't know how it happens, but I never have time to buy my Christmas presents until the last moment. On Christmas eve I went out early to do it and the first person I met was Frances. I told her I hoped she and the babies would like the gifts I had selected for them, as I'd chosen things they really needed."

"But had you bought them yet?"

"Well—er—no, but I had started out and—ah—what is well begun is half done,' you know. I had decided to give Frances either a piece of bric-a-brac or a ring. I was a little upset that day; George had made such a fuss about giving the washerwoman and her children nice presents, just because she is a widow. I said it was wrong to encourage expensive tastes in them; but George is so illogical."

"Pshaw, he had to provide the money."

"But I need one of those lovely long amethyst chains—I do hate to be so shabby; but George has no pride."

"Did you get your presents?"

"Yes, and an awful headache, as well! The things for Frances were easy to get, but the cheap counters were crowded, and I had a hunt for the washerwoman's presents."

"But you got—"

"Oh, yes; some cheap, showy toys, and added some old clothes to make up a good bundle. I made up the two packages, called a messenger and went to bed."

"Then everything was all right? I thought—"

"Alas, no! I got a letter from Frances saying I oughtn't to deprive myself and the children of things we evidently needed in order to keep up appearances. The washerwoman called down blessings on my head—"

"For the cheap toys and the old clothes!"

"N—no. I had somehow got those two packages mixed and—and the man who swore at the altar to love and ch-cherish me seemed to think it a g-good joke!"

How to Restore Chinchilla.

Chinchilla is a becoming fur, but it has a way of taking on a ghastly yellow tinge when soiled. When this happens it can be cleaned by this method: Take a bag of fine sea sand, sift it well to eliminate all grit or gravel, and then rub it vigorously, just as hot as the hand can bear it, through the fur. When shaken out the fur will be found to have resumed its freshness and that at the cost of very little labor and no expense.

Little Trick Worth Knowing.

Doughnuts or biscuits may be heated "amaist as good as new" by putting them in a whole paper bag, sprinkling in a few drops of water, twisting the ends, putting in the oven, raised a little from the bottom on a grate. The oven must be very hot.

SKIN SOFA PILLOWS.

A Fad Which, According to Report, Has Taken Eastern Housekeepers by Storm.

The woman who does not own a skin sofa pillow has not acquired the latest fad, which was born of sorrow over the death of a pet.

This pet was a calf, which had met an untimely end, thereby awakening much grief among the feminine members of the family. In the midst of their woe it suddenly occurred to one of the girls that, inasmuch as a stuffed calf would be rather out of place in the household, the skin might be used for some other purpose. That was when the pillow idea presented itself.

The men scoffed at the proposition and said that it was absurd, but they had to admit that the glossy brown skin, with its beautifully marked white spots, was to handsome to be buried with the calf, so before the last sad rites were performed the body of the little Jersey was skinned.

In due time the skin was cured, trimmed into shape and used to cover an air cushion. It was made square, with the exception of the corners, which were trimmed to represent ears—three at each corner, and tried with strips of calfskin in a bowknot. When done the skin had the look of a delicate shade of panne velvet.

This novel method of preserving the pet calf's skin suggested to some one else an idea which resulted in another unusual pillow. On a square of plain chamois skin a fireplace was painted, bricks and all, showing the glowing wood, the kettle and andirons. Paper patterns of a cat and two kittens were cut and a piece of black fur was brought into requisition for the tabbies. The fur was cut the same size as the patterns, padded slightly and glued securely to the chamois skin. The cats were placed at an angle that brought them to the left of the hearthstone, facing the blaze, and with their backs to the public—a thoroughly domestic scene.

The Washington Star says that some of the newest college pillows are made of skins. An especially handsome one was recently fashioned out of a black and white calf skin, yellow chamois skin strips about an eighth of an inch wide being used to form the legend "Yale." The letters were first outlined on the pillow, then the chamois ones were glued on. Small holes were made with an awl at frequent intervals about the letters, then little brass clasps, with nail heads, were pushed through the holes and the clasps spread in position underneath. Of course this pillow is not especially desirable from the standpoint of comfort, but it makes a good show pillow.

Calfskin and chamois skin are softer and better adapted to useful pillows, if properly made, than other skins. However, those who are so fortunate as to have beautiful skins of any sort in their possession will be able to put them to a new use in this way.

For instance, some of the new men's dens are upholstered with the skins of animals, small heads and tails being suspended from the corners to give a finishing touch.

A BEDSTEAD SETTLE.

How to Make Excellent Use of Discarded Bedroom-Furniture, the Older the Better.

This is attractive either on the lawn or on a deep porch. It is always inviting the passers to take a seat a few moments and enjoy the cool shade and fresh breezes. On the piazza it is of the nature of a fine old-fashioned settle. To construct one is the man's rainy-day work. Any old bedstead will do, the older the better.

The headboard and posts make the back of the settee. The foot posts, minus the board, complete the four legs. These are joined by cleats on which rests the seat. The width of the seat is made to fancy, 12 to 16 inches The sides of the bedstead are fitted for the arms to the settee, although it is not necessary to have them. The settles made from grandmother's bed will not need staining or painting. Those of later date need a dressing to be attractive.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Use of Colored Napery.

Colored napery is allowable at breakfast and luncheon, but never at dinner Little starch should be used in laundering white linen. A handsome monogram embroidered in white in one corner is all the ornamentation that is permissible on either tablecloth or napkins.

SISTERS OF CHARITY

Use Pe-ru-na for Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrh—A Congressman's Letter.

In every country of the civilized world Sisters of Charity are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs.

With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease, these wise and prudent Sisters have found Peruna a never failing safeguard.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters from all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir:—"The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis, and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after further use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured."—Sisters of Charity.

The young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity and used Peruna for catarrh of the throat with good results as the above letter testifies.

The following letter is from Congressman Meekison, of Napoleon, Ohio:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen: "I have used several bottles of Peruna and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head, and feel encouraged to believe that its continued use will fully eradicate a disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison.

David Meekison.

Dr. Hartman, one of the best known physicians and surgeons in the United States, was the first man to formulate Peruna. It was through his genius and perseverance that it was introduced to the medical profession of this country.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 14, 1904.

THE South has become strenuous—in its demand for the canal.

THE White House would be painted yellow if a represenative of that colored journalism should become President.

COLUMBIA has become less warlike. Perhaps she feared the invasion of troops carrying a flag that is likely to stay put.

THE Democrats are sincere in declaring they are not satisfied with the President's Panama policy. It is too popular for them.

CHANCES of leading the Democratic ticket next fall are about evenly divided between the Jim Crow and Yellow candidate for the nomination.

IT IS no doubt a great consolation to Mr. Bryan to think that if he had been successful in the last campaign he would have been deprived of his trip to Europe.

THE Texas Congressman who declared that Senator Gorman was a "slick politician" has revised his opinion since the Maryland Senator tried to lead his party colleagues in opposition to the canal treaty.

SENATOR GORMAN is said to be worried over a report that the X-rays can turn negroes white. If the color line were obliterated the Maryland aspirant for the Democratic nomination would lose his political capital.

AMERICAN marines were the first to reach Seoul, the capital of Corea, where troops are being sent by the different nations to guard their respective interests in the hermit kingdom, in case of a conflict between Japan and Russia. The Democrats should notice that it is not only to Panama that American marines are sent in preparation for an emergency.

SENATOR LODGE'S recent speech in defense of the President's policy toward the republic of Panama was the most able which has yet been delivered in the Fifty-eighth Congress. It dealt a seyere blow to the Democratic opposition and is being quoted throughout the country. The Senator pointed out that it is not a breech of neutrality to recognize a revolted state as independent; that such recognition can come at any time after the state is sufficiently established to assume international obligations, and that the question of secession does not enter the case, as secession is the right of revolution and has nothing to do with law.

He cited many instances where recognition of state had been purely executive, and declared that President Taylor was ready to recognize the independence of Hungary before a government was established. Replying to the Democratic objection that the President had gone beyond his power in nominating a minister to Panama, Senator Lodge quoted many instances where early Presidents had made nominations to otner countries for which Congress had made no provision. He said that as early as May, the world had known that a revolution was pending on the isthmus in case the treaty was not ratified, and that if the President had not taken precautionary measures he would have been in the highest degree censurable.

After many interruptions by the Democrats the Senator's speech took a political turn. He declared that as a Republican he would like no better issue in the coming presidential campaign than the canal question, but as an American he would regret a division on this important question. He compared the policy of former President Cleveland, who tried to set up Liliuokalani in Hawaii with that of the Republican party which made those islands a part of the United States.

Speaking of the President and Secretary Hay, he said: "I believe they acted as patriots and as far-seeing Americans, and when that canal is completed the voice of the American people will acclaim the action of this Administration, which threw open the gateway between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, even as they acclaimed the action of Jefferson when he bought the territory of Louisiana."

MCKINLEY DAY AND CARNATIONS

"The Carnation League of America," instituted as an annual memorial to the late President William McKinley and dedicated to national patriotism, is a fixed institution and insures a perennial observance of January 29, the anniversary of his birth, as "McKinley Day." To wear the late President favorite flower, the carnation in the lapel of the coat, in the hair, or at the throat, in silent memory of a departed public servant is what is contemplated by his movement, in which the young and old of both sexes can have part. The custom was first observed on January 29, 1903, with the greatest unanimity throughout the country, and by Americans all over the world. It is a simple, inexpensive act and full of patriotic sentiment. All through Mr. McKinley's life both public and private, ran a distinct evening of sentiment, and a memorial of this sort is, therefore peculiarly appropriate to him. This custom will undoubtedly be observed the coming 29th day of January more universally, if that is possible, than on the initial day, a year ago. Interest in the memorial has increased wonderfully during the past year, and Lewis G. Reynolds, Dayton, Ohio, who suggested the idea, has received letters of the most unqualified approval from Americans everywhere. No expectation is had of giving the movement the importance of local organizations or annual meetings and conventions, but in a quiet, unobtrusive way it can be made to weild an influence for good almost incalculable and to foster a spirit of true patriotism worthy of our country and of the man whose memory it is proud to honor.

THE following editorial appeared in the Grafton Daily Sentinel of last Saturday and is of such a highly commendable nature on the manner in which the physicians of Oakland handled the smallpox cases that it is with more than ordinary pleasure that we reproduce it:

"Graftonians will learn with pleasure that the smallpox situation over about Oakland and Loch Lynn is improving wonderfully, and that the former town is past all danger of the epidemic that threatened at one time. The physicians and health officers over there who worked so untiringly and so fearlessly to break the progress of the disease have certainly succeeded in a remarkable manner, and the unceasing thanks of the entire community should be ever theirs. The situation along the line between Oakland and Grafton is improving. No new cases are reported, and old all getting well. Here in Grafton there appears to be no danger whatever of a spread of the disease, and the few persons afflicted have very mild cases."

WALL Street threatens to go Democratic. There is no political significance in the news.

DIED.

CODDINGTON—At his home in Oakland on Friday night last, after several weeks of suffering, Warren Montgomery Coddington, aged nearly 78 years. The deceased was born near Friendsville, this county, and has been a resident of Oakland for the past thirty years. For many years he conducted the Coddington (now West) hotel on Second street. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church nearly his entire lifetime and was a consistent christian and good citizen of the community in which he lived where he justly merited and received the respect of all. He leaves a widow but no children. His funeral took place Monday morning from his late home where services were coducted by Revs. Dr. Scott and John M. Davis. Interment was made in the cemetery in Oakland.

SHAFFER—At the residence of his parents in Oakland, of scarlet, fever Frederick, aged about six years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shaffer. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery on the following day. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of the entire community in their great bereavement.

MICHAEL—Mr. W. R. Michael, one of Garrett county's well known citizens, died on Tuesday Dec. 28, at his home at Franklin. Mr. Michael, while walking from his house to the barn 10 days previous to his death, slipped on the icy path and broke his leg, after which blood poison set in and caused his death. His many friends were shocked to hear of his death as many of them did not even know of the accident he met with. He was never married and his sister Miss Mattie kept house for him. He leaves two brothers and six sisters to mourn their loss. They are as follows: P. T. of Westernport and B. F. of Frostburg, Md. The six sisterare as follows: Mrs. Joshia Sigler, Westernport; Mrs. Samuel Kight, of Keyser; Mrs. Geo. H. Sigler, Mrs. Cleaver A. Michaels, Mrs. Tonry, and Miss Mattie Michaels. The funeral took place Wednesday of last week Rev. G. T. D. Collins, his pastor officiating. The pall bearers were as follows: Wm. T. Sigler, John W. Whitfield, Wheeler Kight, Frank Sigler, and Samuel Kight, all relatives of the deceased.

BUILDING GOOD ROADS.

Maryland Geological Survey Reports On Its Share Of Work.

HAS AIDED IN VARIOUS WAYS.

Tested Material For the City and Counties—Laws For Improved Highways—Synopsis of Related Acts.

The Maryland Geological Survey, which is conducted under the direction of Professor William Bullock Clark of the Johns Hopkins University, has just issued the third biennial report of his highway work. This report has been prepared by Mr. A. N. Johnson, highway engineer of the survey and gives an account of the roads which haye beeu constructed during the past two years under the plans and specifications of the Geological Survey. By the act authorizing the highway division of the Geological Survey plans, specifications and estimates are furnished to the various boards of county commissioners or county road commissioners, as the case may be, for the construction of up-to-date roads. It has come to be recognized by many of the progressive States in recent years that the construction of modern roads is an engineering problem that must be taken up in a thoroughly intelligent manner, and as a result highway bureaus, similar to that conducted by the Geological Survey, are now in operation in a number of States. The system is one under which the splendid modern highways of Great Britain and the Continent have been built during the past half century.

The highway report shows that the Geological Survey has been called on for servises by 10 counties during the past two years as well as by several cities and towns, particularly by Baltimore, which has availed itself largely of the laboratory facilities afforded by the survey staff. The counties which have carried on work to greater or less extent under the direction of the survey are Allegany, Baltimore, Cecil, Garrett, Harford, Howard, Montgomery, Prince George's, Queen Anne's and St. Marv's county. The most important work has been carried on in Baltimore, Cecil, Harford, Howard, Prince George's and Queen Anne's counties, where important pieces of modern highways have been constructed.

The Geological Survey has prepared plans and specifications for a number of roads for the road engineer of Baltimore county, and an illustration is given in the report of Eastern avenue, which is a modern Macadam road consisting of trap-rock top and slag foundation.

The road between Belaire and Churchville, in Harford county, is also a macadam road of modern construction, and a picture of this road is likewise shown in the report. Another fine piece of macadam highway is that which is now under construction near Rising Sun, Cecil county, which is also pictured in the report. A particularly interesting piece of road is the section of the Chestertown-Centerville road in Queen Anne's county, which was built of slag secured from Sparrows Point and which has resulted in a hard, smooth road on one of the worst portions of this highway.

The highway testing laboratory of the Geological Survey has proved of great value in the selection of proper materials for highway construction and particularly in determining the relative value of paving brick submitted for city streets. The city of Baltimore, through the City Engineer's Department, now submits the various types of vitrified brick to the survey for testing prior to their acceptance. Paving brick vary so widely in their permanency that this is regarded as one of the most important phases of the work which the survey has under its control. Highly practical tests of great value in concrete construction have also been devised for cements. Many such tests made for the City Engineer's Department during the past year are described in the report, which contains an illustration of the cement-testing machine devised by Mr. Johnson, the highway engineer of the survey.

The report closes with the form of specifications used by the Maryland Geological Survey and which it advises all the county officials to employ in letting contracts for road improvement.

A unique feature of the report is the suggested outline for a county road law. It is suggested that there be established a department of roads, or Board of Road Commissioners, to consist of three persons, one elected each year to serve three years. It is proposed that there should be a road engineer who should hold office during good behaviour and who should keep account of all expenditures connected with the work, and should make a detailed annual report of the same to the board of commissioners, this report showing under the proper headings the actual amount spent for bridges, general road repairs, surfacing (such as macadam, gravel or shell), grading and opening of new roads.

It is also suggested that the counties should be divided into road districts, over each one of which there should be a supervisor or superintendent, who should give all or the greater part of his time to the road work of his district and who should employ regularly year after year men who would become familiar with their work and would thus constitute a trained corps of road menders. The Geological Survey believes that such a trained permanent force would produce far better results than could be accomplished by the present methods.

The Geological Survey has also compiled all of the public general and public local laws of Maryland relating to highways, adding to its pamphlet on this subject which was published in 1899 laws passed by the General Assemblies of 1900 and 1902.

Both of these pamphlets are being sent out in large numbers to the people of the State. The survey will send its last report to any citizen applying.

DEER PARK.

Sledding parties are all the rage.

Mrs Grant Lipscomb is seriously ill.

Dr. B. A. Reese, of Cameron, W. Va., was the guest of J. W. Wheeler during the holidays.

Allan Thrasher, of Fairmont, W. Va., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thrasher.

A. Freeland has gone to Washington, D. C., to spend the remaining winter months.

Miss Osa Fisher spent the holidays with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Fisher, who are now located at Boonsboro, Md.

James Glotfeltv, S. P. Specht's genial clerk, spent the holidays with McHenry friends.

Miss Josephine Grimm, who has been visiting friends and relatives in town for the past two weeks, has returned to Dodson, W. Va.

Prof. H. Browning, principal of the Deer Park school, spent the holidays at his home near Thayerville.

Dr. J. W. Laughlin, of Mountain Lake Park, was in town last week.

Mr. John Walters, who has been visiting his brothers, G. J. and J. H. Walters, has returned to his home in Meyersdale, Pa.

Frank Browning, who has been visiting his mother, returned to Fairmont Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. West, who have been residing in Westernport for the past three months, have returned and are now "at home" to their friends in the Garrett apartment house.

Mrs. Bridget Griffin and Miss Josephine Griffin returned Thursday from a visit to Elkins, W. Va.

Miss Minnie Stemple, of Morgantown, who is teaching the Sang Run school, was in town Saturday and Sunday.

Lawrence Hennen, of Cumberland, was in town Sunday.

Dr. B. F. Laughlin, of the Maryland University, Baltimore, and Miss Sada Laughlin, of Peabody Institute, who were visiting their parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Laughlin, Mountain Lake Park, were in town several days during the holidays.

Gilbert Thrasher, who has been visiting friends in this place, has returned to Friendsville.

Miss Belle Hennen, of Romney, W. Va. spent the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hennen.

Hon. A. F. George was in town Friday.

Messrs. Albert Clarey, of Fairmont, and Staton Clary, of Mountain Lake Park, were in town during the holidays.

Dr. R. F. Bartlett and Miss Rose Maroney, of Oakland, were calling on friends in this place New Year's Day.

Robert Wilson visited friends in Blaine during the holidays.

Rev. Clary, who has been in town for several days has returned to Keyser.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Steiding and children, of near Swanton, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wiley last Sunday.

Mrs. Wm. Wright, of near Altamont, visited her daughter, Mrs. F. Y. Reis, last week.

Miss Lucinda Glotfelty, who had been visiting her sister, Miss Emma Glotfelty, has retutned to her home in McHenry.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. George, of Barton, were the guests of Rev. and Mrs. W. E. George, New Year's Day.

Prof. A. L. Lee, of Swanton, was in town last week.

Mrs. G. L. Lininger is visiting Baltimore friends.

Mrs. Clary and daughter, Miss Anna, are visiting friends in Antioch.

W. E. Beeghley, who taught school in this place some years ago, but is now located near Connellsville, Pa., was in town Saturday and Sunday.

Roy Thrasher has gone to Lebanon, Pa., to study telegraphy.

The stork left a daughter in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ott McRobie Christmas day.

Owing to the smallpox scare all public entertainments were tabooed during the holidays, but a number of social affairs were given by some of our popular young ladies at their homes. Among the number deserving special note were those given by Miss Nellie Thrasher, Miss Bessie Hennen, Miss Florence Thrasher, Miss Anna Clary and Miss Sada Thrasher and Clarence Thrasher.

The young ladies gave a leap year party in Friendly Hall New Year's night, and it was a very enjoyable affair, but rumor says that some of the young ladies who escorted the young men home were so timid that the young men had to then go back with the young ladies. Is this so, girls?

Deer Park has had three weddings since the new year came in. The girls havn't had a chance for the past eight years and from the pace they are beginning with they intend to make this leap year count.

Howard Thrasher has retured to the State Agricultural school near Washington, D. C.

Messrs. Chas. A. and Ray Jones, who spent the holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Jones, have returned to the West Virginia Conference Seminary, Buckhannon, W. Va.

Married—At the residence of W. E. George, Monday, Jan. 4th, 1904, Doddridge DeCost and Miss Rosa Mayle. The happy couple will reside in Fairmont, W. Va. We wish them a long and prosperous journey through life.

Married—At the residence of James Hinebaugh, Friday evening, Jan. 8th, 1004, by Rev. W. E. George, Israel Moore and Miss Ida DeCost. May they, too, have a happy and prosperous journey through life.

Rumor says there was also another wedding but the contracting parties wish the affair kept secret for awhile. Wonder who it was?

Scott Shreeves, of Oakland, was in town Sunday.

KEARNEY.

I beg to say that I am not a subscriber to your paper, but a constant reader of the same.

We are having fine sleighing weather and the people are taking advantage of it.

Mrs. Lottie King, of near Kearney, has been quite ill for some time.

While we have had some rough days we must not forget to mention that a visitor came to I. W. Thompson's on the 9th, and from appearances it has come to stay. It's a girl.

The Methodists are having a good meeting at the White church.

A fine horse belonging to Mr. J. G. Hamill died on the 9th at Mr. I. W. Thompson's.

The coal mine near here operated by J. M. Lish, is being worked.

Mr. W. G. Riley butchered his big hog a few days ago. It netted 636 pounds.

Messrs. F. C. Haney and Clarence V. Guard, of Friendsville, were in Oakland Tuesday on business.

Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Scott's Emulsion is simply a milk of pure cod liver oil with some hypophosphites especially prepared for delicate stomachs.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

For all weak and pale and thin children Scott's Emulsion is the most satisfactory treatment.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Mr. Moses R. Hamill's riding horse which was being kept at the farm of Mr. Isaac W. Thompson, near Gorman, during the winter, was found dead in the stable last Saturday morning. The supposedly cause of the animal's death was acute bronchitis.

The tender on train No. 46 last Thursday afternoon jumped the track at the Washington Spring bridge, just west of town, which delayed traffic several hours and required the services of the wrecking crew to replace it up on the rails.

Considerable of the space in this weeks, Republican is taken up by the list of road supervisors appointed at the recent session of the Board of County Commissioners but as the matter is of utmost importance to the the citizens and taxpayers it should be interesting reading to the public generally.

This paper has engaged the services of one of the best newspaper writers of the State to furnish weekly letters from Annapolis during the session of the Legislature. The letters will be concise and particularly interesting to the Garrett county folks as they will follow minutely all legislation affecting the welfare of the people of this county.

Editor James M. Litzinger, of the Leader, was forced to return to his home in Oakland yesterday on account of the severe effects of a vaccination made a couple of weeks ago. Vaccination serves some persons very severely, while others feel but little bad effects from it, but when it is all over and the "taking" process ended, one can feel mighty safe, with so much smallpox scattered about the country. —Grafton Sentinel.

Mr. Albert Lohm of this city, who was operated on surgically in a hospital at Pittsburg, a couple of weeks ago for appendicitus mention of which was made in these columns at the time, was brought home last evening and is now resting easily at the residence of his grandfather, Mr. Robert Shaw, on the south side, where he is being attended by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lafayette Lohm of Deer Park. We are glad to note that the young man is rapidly coming back to health and strength after the recent severe operation, and that his many friends hope to see him up and about at an early date.—Grafton Sentinel.

Mr. Joseph Rembold, one of our old-time friends from out Horseshoe Run-way was a visitor to Oakland Tuesday and while in the city paid his respects to this paper. He states that owing to disappointment in receiving the necessary machinery with which to rebuild his saw mill which was consumed by fire early in the spring, he will not be able to resume business for several weeks. An engine was shipped to him from Chicago but it was received here in a damaged condition and he refused to move it from the railroad station and immediately ordered another from an eastern manufacturer, which is now on the way.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETING.

Office To Be Moved Into the First National Bank Building.

A meeting of the School Board was held in Oakland Tuesday with the full membership of that body and Examiner Browning present, at which many matters concerning the future welfare of the public schools were discussed and action taken upon matters brought before it.

An order was passed to have all books used by persons or members of families infected with smallpox to burn the same at the homes of those having them in charge and under no circumstances are any of these books to be returned to the schools or taken from the houses where they now are.

It was also ordered that all schools which have been closed owing to the prevalence of smallpox or other infectious diseases be allowed to make up the time thus lost.

The board adopted a resolution instructing the secretary to secure office rooms in the First National Bank building and to have furniture, etc., in the office at present occupied by the board moved therein as soon as practicable. The rooms secured in accordance with the above resolutions are on the second floor of the building and face Alder street.

A number of bills were audited and ordered paid after which adjournment took place.

POLICEMAN ASSAULTED.

By Three Rodeheaver Brothers Who Are Now in Jail.

Tuesday afternoon Clel, Will and Lou Rhodeheaver came to town and filled up on forty-rod whiskey and while in this condition it is alleged that one of them became so noisy that Policeman Broderick placed him under arrest. The prisoner resisted the officer and he used strenuous measures to land his man. Seeing this the two other brothers assaulted the officer and bruised him pretty severely about the face and body. The three then escaped and went to their respective homes where they were later caught by deputy Sheriffs and brought to Oakland. Yesterday they were given a preliminary hearing before Justice Gonder who fined each of them $5 and costs and committed them to jail for the action of the grand jury.

Natural Gas Failed.

The supply of natural gas at Grafton failed shortly after midnight last Thursday night, owing to a break in the supply lines a few miles west of the city, and for several hours a great portion of the town was without fire or lights. An effort was made by the gas company to warn everyone of the danger, but many of the houses were missed, and when the gas was turned on again it escaped into the houses, and in several instances almost caused the death of the inmates before they were awakened.

Select Place for Well to be Sunk Near Sand Patch.

The officers of the Piney Run Oil and Gas company, recently organized at Washington, met at Sand Patch and decided to sink a well in Greeneville. They placed their order with the Pittsburg Drilling company, work to begin as soon as possible. Penrose Wolf of Rockwood, gets the order for the lumber necessary. Two-thirds of the stock allotted have been taken by Somerset county capitalists.

Land Leased for Gas Operations.

Within the past week or ten days Upton Cuppett, Esq., of near Thayerville, has secured options upon more that 6,000 acres of land lying along the Yough river and in the Deep Creek valley for the Snyder Coal company of Pittsburg who expects to operate upon the land in the near future for natural gas.

MR. RUDISILL RESIGNS

As Superintendent of the Mountain Lake Park Association.

REV. T. S. LONG TAKES THE PLACE

Having Been Elected by the Board of Directors Yesterday—Will Assume His Duties April 1st, When Mr. Rudisill's Resignation Becomes Effective.

Considerable surprise was expressed yesterday by the friends of Rev. L. A. Rudisill, who for thirteen years or more has been the superintendent and manager for the Mountain Lake Park Association, when they learned that he had tendered his resignation as such.

Mr. Rudisill placed his resignation in the hands of Rev. Dr. Charles W. Baldwin, president of the Association, on the 7th inst., but it was not acted upon by the directors until yesterday when a meeting was held in Oakland to consider it and transact other business. The directors' meeting was attended by a majority of the members, among them being Dr. Baldwin, C. W. Conner, Hon. G. C. Sturgiss, Rev. J. M. Davis and Mr. D. E. Offutt.

In accepting the resignation of Mr. Rudisill the board did it with a great deal of reluctance and passed the appended resolutions unanimously. He always had the confidence of the board and the esteem of the general public.

The directors elected Rev. Thomas S. Long superintendent and manager in place of Mr. Rudisill. Mr. Long has been a member of the Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church for about seventeen years and has occupied pulpits in Allegany, Carroll, Baltimore and Howard counties, and also in Cumberland and Baltimore. He is now pastor at Savage, Md. In all his work he has had pronounced success. He is affable in manner, energetic, practical and faithful, and success is confidently predicted for him in the important position to which he has been elected and that he will carry out the work planned for the future welfare of Mountain Lake Park by his equally energetic predecessor.

In resigning Mr. Rudisill carried out a purpose he had in mind for two years past and it gives us pleasure to state that he will continue a resident of the Park and Garrett county.

The resolutions adopted by the board of directors follows:

WHEREAS, The Rev. L. A. Rudisill, who for thirteen years has been superintendent and business manager of the Mountain Lake Park Association has tendered his resignation; therefore,

Resolved, By the Board of Directors of the Mountain Lake Park Association, that the severance of the relation hitherto existing between Mr. Rudisill and ourselves causes us unfeigned regret.

Resolved, That, while we accept his resignation, we cannot permit this occasion to pass without expressing our high appreciation of the faithful, laborious and difficult sarvices he has rendered our Association and the Community of Mountain Lake Park, by which, under the blessing of God, our property has greatly improved and our community has grown in numbers and importance.

Resolved, That in parting with Mr. Rudisill we would anew express our confidence in his integrity and uprightness. Our prayers and sympathies shall go with him whatever sphere of activity he may choose.

Resolved, That a copy of this paper signed by the President and Secretary of the Board be given to Mr. Rudisill and be published in the papers.

CHARLES W. BALDWIN, President.
J. M. DAVIS, Secretary.

Brother Litzinger, of the Oakland Democrat and the Grafton Leader, has been having a most strenuous time with his newspaper properties recently. In his Oakland office the assistant editor has been quarantined for the past two weeks owing to a case of smallpox in his family. His foreman met with an accident on Wednesday of last week whereby he received a very serious injury to his knee and consequently has been confined to his bed ever since. This left as sole editor and mechanical force in the Democrat office Mr. Litzinger's young son. In the Grafton plant, where the proprietor spends most of his time, an accident befell his newspaper press which effectually put it out of business and but a portion of the edition was issued. His perplexities did not end here, however, as the proprietor is all but laid up with a very sore arm resulting from having undergone the process of vaccination. Brother Litzinger can console himself with the thought that all clouds have a silver lining and that the sunlight of surmounted obstacles will soon break forth.

Her First Love

By
ISABEL C. WHITEHURST

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

YOU will let me confess to you, won't you? You are just the listener I want. You can be sentimental. I have seen the tears in your eyes when you have listened to a tale of distress, and when you are moved I have seen the color come and go, and your lips quiver, and I have known that you could feel. Be quiet, you interrupt me. You say you are not priest, but man? That if you sit and listen, and I sit and talk, some day you may also be found with arms about me telling me to be faithful. Absurd! We know each other too well, you and I. You will never again be my lover, there must be mystery and difficulty and reticence for love, and it is an atmosphere we have emerged from long ago. So long ago that I have almost forgotten, and I do not hate you for that past. No, I do not hate you. I like you, and I will believe you, and when I have told you all my story, and there comes the moment when you will know why I have told you, I will be guided by you entirely; because what I know you know, only more—for I know only the men I have loved or those who have loved me, while you know men when they do not love, and it may come to that.

When, where, how shall I begin my confession to you? Here, I will roll you a cigarette, I will light it for you, see; I will take one myself. Sit there, in that low chair, that cushion will fit your back, and through the smoke-rings you shall see me young again. No! I do not want compliments from you. I am young still, fair still, of course; were I not, you would not listen. But the youth of 30 and the beauty of 30 is not the youth and beauty that I wish you to see through the smoke.

You have often wondered why I love Ashbury Park. It is because I first met him there. I was barely 17 then, and had gone down from my home, my country home, on the upper Hudson, where papa was a poor Episcopal clergyman, to visit my uncle, who had a cottage there for the season.

I remember it well. We were about to start a game of tennis, and I had a racket in my hand.

"Dolly, dear," said my eldest cousin, "do you mind not playing this set? Papa has brought a man down with him; see, they are just getting out of the coach. He is asthmatic or consumptive, or something, and can't play. Talk to him instead of me, there's a good girl." I was always amiable; am I not amiable now, dear? I consented, and they began their game.

"This is our little cousin from Oakley," said my uncle, patting my shoulder kindly. "Dolly, dear, this is Mr. Basing; he is a little out of sorts. You girls must cheer him up among you, and you had better be the first. You are the quietest, and won't frighten him."

He turned to me, and said, in a voice that had in it a musical hoarseness, such a voice as I had never heard before, nor will again, I think, unless I hear it in Heaven, for I have listened for it all my life:

"No; I don't think you will frighten me."

He was a tall man, very slender, with a brown beard, and hair so thick it stood up on either side of the parting quite an inch above his head. His eyes were small, deep set, and brown, with a distant look in them. I can see him now more distinctly than I can see you. I have always seen him distinctly. Shall I show you his portrait? There it is. Be quiet, be quiet, do not say a word; it hurts like a touch on a wound if you should criticise, if you should even admire.

If you dare to laugh I shall hate you; but, there, you may laugh if you will, it is true, all the same. I have been faithful to him—in my way. But I will put away the portrait, then I can tell you of it better.

Salt air sprayed in our faces in those summer mornings by the long sea walk. In the evening the band played, and by the band it was light, and the crowds moved hither and thither in the gas. But we walked apart from them all, he and I, between the green hedges, hand in hand. I believe there never was a love dream like ours. He was dying of consumption, and half my love was pity, but he went down so deep in my heart, and the uprooting left the place so tender, I could not bear a touch, and so I shut it up, and people say since then I have no heart.

If you ever love a young girl—don't protest, you are the very man to do it, with your blue eyes and sensitive lips—if ever you should love such a one, then remember this: If, though she love you, she does not shrink from you, if, though she love you, her hand barely presses yours in return; and her lips quiver and move away under yours; if, though she love you, she does not shrink from you and fear you, and she jests when she would rather cry, and mocks you when she would rather caress—if she does none of these things, why, then, you are deceiving yourself, or she is deceiving you, or both, but she is no young girl.

I was happy when we talked of the sea; when he quoted poetry to me, and, with that dear, mild humor of his, made me relish Bret Harte and Mark Twain, two heroes of whom the vicarage library contained no record. When we talked of things I was happy, when he spoke of me I was nervous. He was coming too near, I dared not listen, was not strong enough for happiness, feared it and him. I loved him most when we were apart. But even into cognate thought I could not put my love. There was no future in it then, and it had no form.

The time came when we must part. To-morrow I must return to my father; he, I knew, was going to Colorado to have one more last try for health.

Up to this last evening he had always been the ideal lover of a young girl; the lover who never spoke of love, whose gentleness always implied what his lips never uttered. Why or how our hands had sought each others I never knew; I cannot even now remember nor even when that involuntary joining had commenced—I think from the very first day we had met.

I never called him Bernard; never, never, never; and, yet, as Bernard I always think of him. B. Z. B. was inscribed on the umbrella which he always carried; leaning upon it now and then in his weakness. I asked him once for what the Z. stood; he made me guess, and teased me, as I failed to do so. In revenge, I insisted it must be Zeroboam, and Zeroboam I always called him, even on the last day of our parting.

We had strolled together far up the beach. We were between sandhills and the sea, with not a soul within eyesight. My hand rested in his. It was dark, moonless, still, only an occasional whiff of air blew us a strain of the distant music; and always far away in the light the dark masses of people surged to and fro.

"This is our good-by," he said, and I answered nothing.

How he knew, how he understood, has always been a mystery; we never spoke of love, yet he never doubted mine, nor I his. He went on, always in that hoarse, sweet voice: "I shall go to Colorado first, California next; then I shall come back, and we will go to the south of France. I cannot live in this climate." I was trembling; I felt I wanted him to be gone. I could not face the sadness, and I did not wish to be sad. I was restless, nervous and excited.

"Say good-by to me here," he said, suddenly, and his arm was over my shoulder and his face near mine.

"Good-by," I said, hastily drawing back from him. He held my hand—no, now both my hands were in his.

"Is that the way friends say good-by?"

Hot as fire glowed my cheeks in the darkness, and my heart stilled my breath with its quick throbbing. His face was near mine. I shrank back and back.

"Good-by, good-by," I said, with nervous haste, and then when he would have come nearer, I felt his breath on my cheek. "No, no!" I cried. "Don't, don't."

He sighed—a short, quick breath rather than a sigh—and then stood up.

"Very well," he said; "perhaps you are right. Wait until I come back. But mind, if not me, no one else. You promise that?"

"Yes," I answered, soberly and gravely, rising also. "Yes, I promise."

I have longed for that kiss ever since. How I have longed for it you will never know.

Can you understand? But, yes, somehow I feel you can. That kiss I have never had has colored all my life and made me what I am. Always I have snatched at a momentary gratification, for fear of the hour when I should long for it. And so I have drunk when the cup was offered me—drained it for every drop of sweetness, and never missed but that one kiss which I can now never have. I loved him; yet when we parted my lips were dry, and I laughed while he looked sad.

My cousins had laughed at our friendship; they laughed when we said "Good-by" to him at the railroad station, and I with them. I was not sad, nor gloomy; I had no forebodings.

That summer the trees and grass were greener than they have been before or since, and I was as gay as the sunbeams. I never heard from him, and I never wrote to him, but I dreamed of him all day and at night. He seemed so close to me that I did not even miss his presence. That three weeks we had been so constantly together had given him to me absolutely. I could hear his answer to every question, see his sunken eyes light into consciousness and gleam with quiet humor, feel his hand in mine both when I slept and when I woke. Nothing disturbed my memory but that longed-for, empty, wasted kiss. Sometimes I would feel again his breath on my neck, and his beard would brush my cheek. And then I blushed, my heart beat, but I held up my lips, and always he was not there. I learned to listen for him in every footstep, to look for him behind every tree.

One day my uncle came. We went out into the garden. We chatted. I was very happy. My uncle had come unexpectedly, just walked up the avenue while we were at dinner.

I pictured Bernard walking up like that; a quiet smile, a "Well, child, here I am again."

I felt that was what he would say. Then I would take his hand and we would go away together. And I would kiss him and lay my cheek against his beard, and tell him I was sorry I had not kissed him before he went.

"Do you remember what friends you were with that poor fellow, Bernard Basing, last year?" asked my uncle.

My heart gave one great thump. It was the first time I had heard his name—his dear name.

"Yes, I remember," I answered.

"Nice fellow, wasn't he? Poor fellow."

"Poor fellow!" I said, faintly.

"Died in San Bobadil; beastly place for him to have to go to. They had to bring the body down in a coach; no rail road, you know."

Thank you for your wet eyes.

Strange Fact.

There are 183,000 miles of railway mail routes. Strange as it may seem, this mileage is considerably surpassed by the distance over which mails are carried on horseback or by wagon. The quantity of mail so carried, however, is comparatively trifling.

EDUCATION IN ENGLAND.

London Journal Says It Is the Worst of Any Highly-Civilized Country.

Whatever the explanation may be, there is unfortunately a contempt for education throughout all classes in this country. Naturally, therefore, our education is the worst of any highly-civilized country, says the London Statist. And because it is so we are gradually losing ground and our competitors are forging ahead of us. We are losing ground, not alone in trade and manufactures, but in every department of life. Our whole government system is inefficient to a surprising degree. What our army is we saw in South Africa. What our administrative departments are we have had of late several disconcerting illustrations.

If, then, we are to recover our old place in the world it is in the highest degree desirable that we should reform our system of education and supply all classes from the highest to the lowest with a real and scientific mental training. In order to oppose logically Mr. Chamberlain's proposals there is no need to deny that this country does not hold now the position of preeminence which it held formerly. Indeed, we venture to think that reasonable and thoughtful men like Lord Rosebery rather injure the cause they have at heart than promote it by making such a denial.

Fever That Seldom Dies Out.

Do you know there is such a thing as "newspaper fever" and that it just worms and burns its way into a fellow's system and remains there as long as life lasts? It is a fact, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat. Men who work around newspaper offices know it to be true. They know it is true not only to the men who work in the business, but many others who never happen to get into the business at all. There is an old legend to the effect that if a man once takes the Mississippi river water he will keep coming back to the same old river, no matter where he goes. It is the same way in the newspaper business. Taste it once and you have got it in your system for good.

Profit in Sugar Beets.

It costs $30 per acre to produce sugar beets. The yield per acre throughout the country in 1901 was 9.6 tons. The average yield secured by the more intelligent growers, however, is 12 tons an acre. The factories pay $4 to $4.50 a ton, giving a gross return of $48 to $54 per acre and a net profit of $18 to $24, which is more than double the average profit on crops.

English Like Cheese.

England's cheese consumption is greater than that of any other country.

WILLIAM INSCO BUCHANAN.

Mr. Buchanan, who has just been appointed minister to the new republic of Panama, is a man of wide diplomatic experience, having been minister to Argentina from 1894 to 1900. He was director general of the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo and was one of the Iowa commissioners to the Chicago fair. Mr. Buchanan was born near Covington, O., September 10, 1853, and received his education in the country schools. He lived in Indiana for a time, and in 1874 was engrossing clerk of the lower house of the legislature. Recently he was arbitrator to fix the boundary line between Argentina and Chili. He has lived in Sioux City, Ia., since 1882.

HORSES FOND OF BEER.

Many Belonging to Washington Breweries Want Their Buckets Regularly.

"Fully one-half of the horses used by the brewers of Washington," said a fat and ruddy driver of one of the big wagons, according to the Post, "are beer swillers, and there are horses belonging to our company which will not leave the delivery yards until they have had their bucket of beer in the morning and at lunch time. They have acquired a taste for the beverage, and they refuse to do their work until they have been supplied. Now, I say the horses acquired a taste for beer, but I guess I am wrong about that, for it is my candid opinion that horses naturally love beer. They seem to have the same taste for it that hogs have for 'mash' and 'beer' from the stillhouses. It is a well-known fact that in running down and locating illicit stills in the mountain districts the revenue officers are frequently aided in their work by watching the hogs, the razorbacks, sniffing the 'mash' for a distance of two miles.

"Our horses fatten on beer, and it is a noticeable fact that the ones drinking the most beer can do the most hard driving. The horses draw the line on stale beer, and one of them will have to be powerful dry in the throat before he will drink it. But give him a bucket of fresh beer and it will soon disappear, and he will neigh for more. Drivers' helpers and horses are allowed a liberal supply of the fluid by the company, and I would do without my mugs before I would see my horses go thirsty."

Temperature and Life.

The range of temperature suited to terrestrial life is comparatively narrow. All vital actions are suspended temporarily, some permanently, if subjected to a temperature near the freezing point; while the highest that most organisms can bear lies somewhere between 95 degrees and 113 degrees Fahrenheit. Only the spores of certain bacteria can survive boiling. It is, therefore, probable that if the general temperature of the earth's surface rose or fell 40 degrees (a small amount relatively), the whole course of life would be changed, even perchance to extinction.

AT THE VILLAGE WELL AT BETHLEHEM.

Women play an important part in the little town of Bethlehem, the birthplace of the Messiah. They appear most picturesque and charming at the village well, where they go morning and evening to fill the large family pitchers of drinking water. At the sunset hour women and girls meet around the well for a pleasant hour of gossip and laughter, and here the news of the day is rapidly passed around. Perhaps it has traveled for miles by word of mouth, and thus it passes on again to the next village, for newspapers are unknown in Bethlehem. Indeed, reading and writing are unknown mysteries to the majority of the dwellers in modern Palestine.

OBEYED INSTRUCTIONS.

Photographer Planted His Camera Where He Was Told To and There Was Trouble.

The city editor summoned the photographer of his staff, relates Youth's Companion. "Col. Welligan's house is burning," he said, "and I want a picture of the fire. Get out there as quick as you can with your camera and take a view of what's left of the building, from the inside of the fence corner."

"But," said the photographer, "if—"

"That's the point I want it taken from—right in the corner."

"But I think there's—"

"I don't care whether there's a better point or not. You know what I want. Hurry up! You are losing time."

The photographer took his camera and departed. A few hours later he came in with the proof of a picture he had taken from the desired point of view.

"What is this?" asked the city editor.

"That is a photograph of the ruins of Col. Welligan's house from the inside corner of the fence, near the street."

"I can't see anything of the house."

"I can't, either," responded the photographer. "I tried to tell you there was a big tree standing between that corner and the house, but you wouldn't let me."

Mr. Grover's Case.

Frederika, Ia., Dec. 28.—Mr. A. S. Grover is now 74 years of age. For the last 30 years he has suffered a great deal of sickness, and, although he is a temperate man and never used spirits of any kind, his kidneys had troubled him very much. He said:—

"I was told I had Diabetes, and my symptoms corresponded exactly to those of a young man who died of Diabetes in this neighborhood. My feet and limbs were bloated quite a little.

"I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and at last determined to try them. I took in all ten boxes before I was well, and now I can truthfully say that I am all right. The bloating is gone from my feet and legs. I have gained eight pounds in weight, and can sleep well at night, and every symptom of my trouble is gone.

"It is some time now since I was cured, and I have not had the slightest return of any symptom of the old trouble."

An English Earl's Opinion.

The English, next to the Americans, are the greatest travelers in the world, and while they as a rule insist upon having the best there is to be obtained, they appreciate good service and beautiful scenery. The Earl of Shaftesbury, having, with his wife, spent some little time in the United States during the summer, speaks most enthusiastically in regard to what they have seen. A few days ago he said to a gentleman in Buffalo:

"Our stay in New York was a delightful one, and the picturesque grandeur along the Hudson and its surroundings was a source of much joy to us all.

"It has seldom been my good fortune to pass the time in such excellent sport as that furnished in your enchanting Adirondack Mountains."—Albany Times-Union.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. GUESSING SONG.

Oh, ho! oh, ho! Pray, who can I be?
I sweep o'er the land, I scour o'er the sea;
I cuff the tall trees till they bow down their heads,
And I rock the wee birdies asleep in their beds.
Oh, ho! oh, ho! And who can I be
That sweep o'er the land and scour o'er the sea?

I rumple the breast of the gray-headed daw,
I tip the rook's tail up and make him cry "caw;"
But though I love fun, I'm so big and so strong,
At a puff of my breath the great ships sail along.
Oh, ho! oh, ho! And who can I be
That sweep o'er the land and scour o'er the sea?

I swing all the weathercocks this way and that,
I play hare-and-hounds with a runaway hat;
But, however I wander, I ne'er go astray;
For, go where I will, I've a free right of way!
Oh, ho! oh, ho! And who can I be
That sweep o'er the land and scour o'er the sea?

I skim o'er the heather, I dance up the street;
I've foes that I laugh at, and friends that I greet;
I'm named in the east and I'm known in the west,
But I think the Dean Bridge is the place I love best.
Oh, ho! oh, ho! And who can I be
That sweep o'er the land and scour o'er the sea?

ROOSTER FINDS MOON.

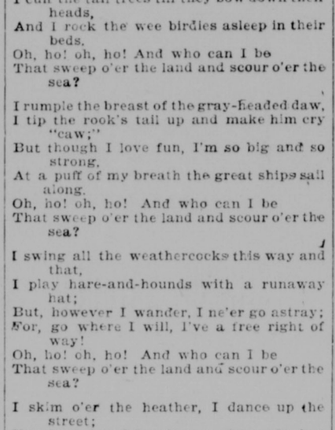
Lord of the Barnyard Made a Strange Discovery Which Surprised Him Very Much.

Because he had eaten too much supper, a rooster one night was unable to sleep, and he just had to sit up on the roost and gaze out through the cracks in the henhouse roof at the stars while all the rest of his family slept and snored.

He thought the stars were very wonderful, and the moon seemed marvelous.

The next day, as he crossed a field, he came across a ball—one of those fancy colored bouncing balls that children love to play with. Now, Mr. Rooster had never seen one of them before, and he did not know what it was.

"This must be the moon that I saw last night," he said, finally. "I wonder what it is doing down here, instead of being up in the sky. It is very beautiful, it is true, but I would like to see it shine as it did last night. I suppose it doesn't shine during the day, so I'll wait until night and see it."



THIS MUST BE THE MOON.

So Mr. Rooster sat down by the ball and waited. The sun went down and it grew dark, and black clouds hid the stars and all the sky, but still the ball would not shine.

"It is very strange," declared the rooster, as he sat and waited.

All the other chickens had gone to roost hours before, but still the rooster waited and watched.

Then the wind began to blow and the thunder to roll and the lightning to flash, and the first thing Mr. Rooster knew it was raining in torrents, and he was soaked to the skin, and most frightened out of his pits.

"I'll save the moon," he cried, and he grabbed up the ball and tried to run with it. When he reached the henhouse door the rain had stopped, and the wind had swept the clouds from the sky, and Mr. Rooster looked up and saw the moon smiling sweetly at him.

"So this isn't the moon, after all," said Mr. Rooster, looking down at the ball. "Well, I guess it must be one of the stars."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Relic of Roman Rule.

A most interesting memorial of the Roman occupation of England has just been sold under the auctioneer's hammer. This is the Roman station of Amboglanna, the largest on the famous wall which marked the limit of the Roman province. After an existence of 1,800 years the walls of the station, five feet thick, are in a wonderful state of preservation. The gateways are noble specimens of Roman work. Some of the wedge-shaped stones in the arches are still to be seen on the ground. The interior of the camp is marked with lines of streets and the ruins of buildings.

Small Willie was trying to write with a dull lead pencil that his mother had given him, but meeting with poor success he finally exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, the wood has slipped down over the lead, and the marks can't come out!"

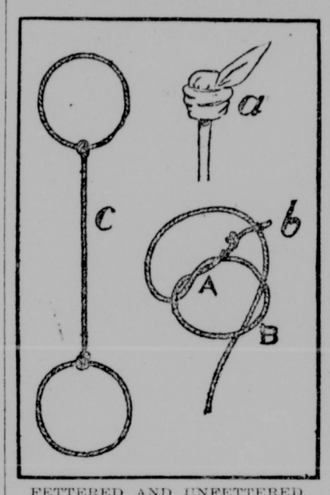
AMUSING PARLOR TRICK.

It Is Called "Fettered and Unfettered" and Any Bright Boy Can Learn to Perform It.

The performer allows himself to be tied with a fetter (consisting of a band) as is shown in C of illustration. One hand is tied to the end of the band first, then the other. The band must be so long that the hands can move pretty freely. The performer, after being tied, speaks a few words of introduction, excuses himself for being obliged to take off his coat, takes off his coat and appears fettered as before.

Finally he slips his coat on again and asks somebody to cut the fetters, which appear to be intact and in the same condition as when they were tied at the beginning of the performance.

To perform this trick effectively, a cutaway coat should be worn, having in its back pockets the principal requisite, a second fetter. Besides this fetter a small pair of scissors is secreted in the same pocket. This pair of scissors serves to cut the band tied by the audience, for these fetters must come off to make room for the others.



FETTERED AND UNFETTERED.

After the hands of the performer are tied, he goes into the pocket with one hand, takes the pair of scissors and cuts the fetters. As his hands are tied behind his back, nobody can see this manipulation. The old fetters are put away in his pocket and the new fetter is made ready for use. This second fetter is made in the following way. The band used is just as long as the one used to tie the hands.

On each end a simple knot is made (a), then a loose knot in the shape of a loop (b), allowing the band to slip for tightening around the wrists and loosening as the performer desires (a-B). After the original fetters are cut and the coat is taken off the performer slips both hands into the loops and pulls them tight.

This fetter cannot be distinguished from the original one. By repeating this experiment, all sorts of variations in tying and untying can be shown, until finally this pseudo band is cut off by one of the audience.—Boston Globe.

SPIDER ENTRAPS BIRD.

A Brown Creeper Invades the Field Museum and Suddenly Comes to Grief.

"Will you walk into my parlor?
Said the spider to the fly."

This time it was not the fly that the wily spider sought to entangle in his meshes, but a small bird, against which he felt he had just cause for grievance.

It seems that during the past season the Field museum at Chicago has been infested with large quantities of obnoxious spiders. They have festooned the ceiling and great columns of the building with yards of their shuttle-work, much to the annoyance of the authorities. Scrubwomen and janitors have tried in vain to relieve the building of the pests and their work. Even the suggestions of frost did not seem to greatly diminish the insects. Finally a wee brown creeper, discovering the state of things there, decided to take up his abode inside and assist the authorities in ridding the building of the pests. For several days he flitted about very much as he pleased, confining himself mainly to the rear entrance room, wagging up and down column after column and probing his long bill into every crevice. With his murderous vigilance he actually carried on a very effective work there. He seemed a permanent fixture, and the authorities and the public eyed him amusedly.

The other morning, however, as a curator of one of the departments was passing, a guard remarked:

"There's a bird for your collection! Looks as if it was done for."

The bird lay panting on its side at the bottom of one of the columns.

"Bring a fly," said the scientist, as he took the little creeper in his hands.

The guard held a buzzing fly on the point of a pin to the bird's beak, saw it bite at it voraciously.

"Doesn't look as if he were going to die," said the scientist. "I wonder what's the matter with him, anyway?"

Turning the bird over in his hand, he found it had been entrapped in a large spider's web, which had bound the wing and tail together in such a manner as to preclude flying. It looked as if some wise old spider had resented the bird's work of extermination and had purposely ensnared him in a trap.

The queer bandage was removed and the bird darted out over the iron grating and shot out of sight across the lagoon. —Chicago Daily News.

The Armchair's Sleeves.

BARN FOR THE DAIRY.

Description of a Structure That Is Supplied with the Most Modern Sanitary Conveniences.

The stable floor may be of plank, brick, cement or mixed clay and gravel. If good stiff clay can be had, and clean gravel, a floor made of two parts clay and one of gravel, thoroughly mixed and well pounded, when of proper state of dryness, will make a floor which I prefer to all others. There should be a fall of one-half inch to a foot to the standing floor towards the trench, and if a clay and gravel floor be used a plank of good, durable wood 2 by 12 should be set up on edge and securely bolted to the back of three-by-three-inch pieces firmly driven into the ground. The trench may be made of durable planks, but cement is better. Very few trenches are made deep enough, for when shallow the cows will often step down into them and stand with the hind feet in the manure, thus making it hard to keep them clean. But if the trench is not less than eight or ten inches deep the cow will not step into it, except by accident, will never stand in it and consequently keep much cleaner. If the trench is made only wide enough to fit the scoop shovel used for cleaning, it will be found better than if made wider.

Whatever the material of floor or style of fastener or stall used plenty of bedding should be used where it is obtainable; it adds greatly to the comfort of the cows and helps to keep them clean. The plan shown gives arrangement of stalls, feeding alley and box stalls with driveway for cleaning out manure. The doors of box stalls are shown, the one opening into the other, but if preferred the back one may have the door inside. The water pipes are shown by the dotted line with drinking basins in each two stalls, and a supply tank at A or B as convenient. This supply tank is fed from a large tank or from spring as desired. The silo is shown outside the stable, but so placed that the door opens into the feeding alley and still leaves a window for lighting. If the basement is ten feet and the posts about 8 feet, the silo may be made 30 feet deep by excavating a little for the bottom, or by running the roof upon the roof of stable a few feet, thus making it necessary to have silo but ten feet square. If the walls of this stable are made of stones, they need not be over 18 inches thick and in this case the driveway would be only nine instead of 12 feet. The box stalls would be six by nine feet, which would still give plenty of room.—J. S. Wodward, in Rural New Yorker.

Take Care of the Roads.

It is the duty of every farmer to keep his roads in good condition. Those about the house and in the more conspicuous parts of the premises serve a double purpose of being both useful and ornamental. A road is not any particular ornament, it is true, under any circumstances, yet a well-kept road is a credit to a place, whereas a neglected road is always a shame. The farm roads need cleaning up and resurfacing almost as much in the fall as in the spring. After the rush of the summer is over, they ought to be put into condition for winter wear. It is a timely piece of work just now.—Country Gentleman.

Pure Milk for City Dealers.

There is being made a steady advance in the matter of producing pure milk. This advance is largely stimulated by the business men of the cities, who are here and there establishing plants for the reception of milk from the country, its pasteurization and its putting up in the most popular form. We hear of pure milk plants being established in different cities. The city handler of milk is becoming every year more exacting in his demands of the producers of milk.—Farmers' Review.

Texas Farmers In Unions.

The farmers of Texas are being unionized. There are more than 3,000 unions in Texas, with a total membership of 40,000. It began at Emory, under the name of "The Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of America," and is now established in nearly every populous county in the state. The purposes of the union are to buy and sell in bulk, to educate along agricultural lines, to study politics and to discuss political economy.

Milk for Cheese Making.

It would seem from the experience of those who are in a position to know, that when milk for cheese making has been properly and thoroughly aired by some of the excellent devices on the market for that purpose and then cooled to a keeping temperature, it is not at all necessary to resort to what is known as the soaking process in cheese making to insure fancy quality. — W. W. Hall, Secretary New York Dairy Association.

A cow becomes restless if she is kept at milking longer than is necessary, consequently will not give down freely.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

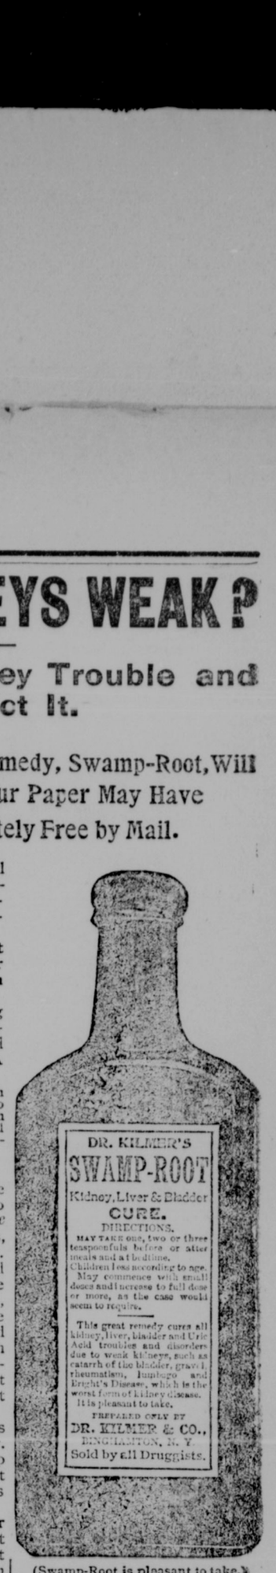
To Prove What the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root, Will Do for YOU, Every Reader of Our Paper May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Absolutely Free by Mail.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected, and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

I was a constant sufferer for a number of years with weakness of the kidneys and back and frequent desire to urinate, but after using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, I am entirely cured and cheerfully recommend this wonderful remedy to any who may suffer from these common complaints.
Most truly yours,
B. H. CHALKER, Chief of Police,
Ozark, Ala.



(Swamp-Root is pleasant to take.)

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue much suffering with fatal results are sure to follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles; makes your head ache and back ache, causes indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, you get a sallow, yellow complexion, makes you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

The cure for these troubles is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the world-famous kidney remedy. In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that has ever been discovered.

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust settling, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy for kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

EDITORIAL NOTE—You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root, and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives, to its wonderful curative properties. In writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in this paper.

DEATH RATE LESS.

Inroads of Consumption In New York City Have Been Reduced 40 Per Cent. In Recent Years.

Since 1881 the death rate from pulmonary tuberculoses in New York city has fallen from 4.2 per 1,000 to 2.29 per 1,000, a reduction of more than 40 per cent. This is set forth in a circular of information just issued regarding measures adopted by the board of health for the sanitary supervision of tuberculosis in the city. Since the disease was recognized as infectious the board registers all cases of pulmonary tuberculosis at the department of health.

The board also furnishes instructions as to measures to prevent infection; disinfects or orders the renovation of all premises which have been occupied by persons suffering with the disease; provides as far as possible for charitable assistance and hospital care for cases needing it; educates the general public as to the nature of the disease, the precautions to be taken against its spread, and the advisability of institution and sanitarium treatment. As a result of these and other similar measures a great impression has been made in the fight against the disease.

Deserves Punishment.

A New York man signed his love letters "Swak." This, according to the lady who got the letters and is using them as evidence in a suit for breach of promise, means "sealed with a kiss." Guilty or not, the man who swakked should be swatted.

"Wine of Cardui is indeed a blessing to tired women. Having suffered for seven years with weakness and bearing-down pains, and having tried several doctors and different remedies with no success, your Wine of Cardui was the only thing which helped me, and eventually cured me. It seemed to build up the weak parts, strengthen the system and correct irregularities."

By "tired women" Mrs. Adams means nervous women who have disordered menses, falling of the womb, ovarian troubles or any of these ailments that women have. You can cure yourself at home with this great women's remedy, Wine of Cardui. Wine of Cardui has cured thousands of cases which doctors have failed to benefit. Why not begin to get well today? All druggists have $1.00 bottles. For any stomach, liver or bowel disorder Thedford's Black-Draught should be used.

Baptism and Temptation of Jesus.

Jesus' consciousness of his divine mission, which had been first quickened into life in his father's house eighteen years before, had now flowered out into the full apprehension of his Messianic character and work. He wiped the sweat of manual labor from his brow for the last time. He laid down the tools of his craft, and closed the door of his carpenter-shop behind him forever. His forerunner had come more than half-way up the Jordan Valley to meet mim. Indeed, he was a scant twenty miles away. With what sacred emotions Jesus went to his epiphany, his inauguration in the sight of heaven and earth! At the close of one day's preaching when perhaps this torch of truth had flamed most fiercely, and the last conscience stricken sinner had taken upon him the seal of a new life, the Nazarene approached the Baptist. By signs infalliable, John knew the Messiah stood before him. There was nothing fortuitous in Jesus' request. He left his Galilean home for the express purpose of receiving baptism of his forerunner. It seemed incongruous to John that the less should bless the greater. He was in the act of hindering him. He who had been father-confessor to the nation, now turned confessionist, and cried, "I have need to be baptized of thee!" A mock humility would have persisted in the refusal. John showed his faith by obeying a command that was incomprehensible. Jesus' reply is the second recorded utterance of his lips—the first of his public ministry; it is his inaugural to his Messianic office. "Suffer it to be so now." That "now" signifies the transitoriness of his humiliation. "For thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness"—the perfection of his identification with humanity. What was obligatory on man was binding upon the man Jesus.

The temptation of Jesus has been declared the most difficult of all the events of sacred history to interpret: but the difficulty is reduced to a minimum if one keeps in mind that Jesus had a true human soul, with all its natural powers. It has been well said that in this fierce conflict, Jesus raised himself from the state of natural and instinctive innocence to a holiness of choice—a perilous transit, in which the first Adam fell, but in which the second Adam conquered by the sole arms of faith and prayer, and not by grinding on as an impenetrable panoply his eternal Godhead. Jesus had become aware of the mighty miracle-working power with which he was invested: also of the lowly and suffering way in which his Messianic kingdom was to be established. These disclosures were enough to impel him to some uninhabited place where, free from interruption, he might adjust himself to his calling, and develop a plan of procedure. "The forty-day mountain," if that was the site of Jesus' trial, was a place strangely in harmony with his experiences. Just as Jesus emerged from his long period of absorbed meditation, and his physical nature asserted its claims, the tempter injected the thought, "If you really are, as you imagine, the son of God, command these loaf-shaped stones to be changed into bread, and by that means assure yourself of your divinity, and appease your hunger." But Jesus responded: "The Israelites were forty years learning the dependence upon the simple word and promise God. With their example I ought to learn the lesson in forty days." Again Jesus felt himself to be standing on a dizzy height. The devil wanted him to entertain in his mind the purpose of casting himself down; but Jesus considered that to make an emergency for the sake of display would be despicable. Finally, Jesus knew he was to set up a kingdon on earth,—slowly, and by his own suffering. Now, the kingdoms displayed to him as in a panorama are offered to him instantaneously by the god of this world, if he will serve him as well as his Father, and make his mission a temporal one, such as the Jews were expecting. The moral nature of Jesus rises to its full height, as with holy wrath he scorns the very suggestion, and cries, "Be gone!" to the tempter

In his baptism, Jesus was both identified with and separated from sinners After all the people had been baptized, he, apart from them, received the rite. And John expressly affirmed that he stood in need of it as a sign of repentance or cleansing; but for exemplary purposes, he on his own part proposed to submit to it. Having been circumcised—"redeemed" by his parents—having offered his sacrifices, and attended the feast, so would be faithful to this latest ritualistic requirement, and thus fulfill all the ceremony that typified the for righteousness.

* * * * *

Some time since, there was talk of a patent bullet-proof cloth, which could be cut and made into garments, which should absolutely protect the wearer. Did the divinity of Jesus from such an impenetrable armor? Then, how was he tempted, as we are? His was a sham fight in that case.

* * * * *

The human was not overslaughed by the divine. The appeal of the tempter was to the human soul of Jesus. Yet he was sinless. The prince of this world found nothing in him.

* * * * *

It is entirely an indifferent matter whether one believes this a lilteral approach of a personal devil or a figurative description of a moral struggle entirely subjective. The outcome is the same. In this exposition personification is used merely as a matter of convenience, not as an expression of belief.

* * * * *

The devil showed Jesus a short cut to his kingdom. He is doing the same for men today. He whispers to the bank cashier: "Why plod along at this slow pace? Why let these funds lie idle? Under your skillful manipulation you can make them double themselves. You can readily replace them: and, if your conscience ever troubles you, you can put a poultice on it by endowing a college."

* * * * *

The devil has yet the subtle power to spread a mirage of all the kingdoms of earth, and all their glory and "barbaric gems of gold" before the eyes of the ambitious, and proffer them if only one will install him as master. Alas! how many fail to thrust the tempter through with the sword of the Spirit, and say, "It stands written—an abiding, eternal command—'worship the Lord, and him only shalt thou serve.'"

* * * * *

The advantage of perfect familiarity with the word of God is here brilliantly exemplified. The sword of the Spirit is the believer's trustiest offensive weapon.

Child-Study and Sunday-School Methods.

The danger is of leaning too hard upon the "helps;" of deeming them indispensible to the study of the lesson: of putting off preparation to the close of the week because the "help" is handy. It may be an "old saw," but it is a good one, "Mark, learn, inwardly digest." This is a work of time. Again, if one always uses the same help and follows it closely, he is predestinated to become stereotyped. Assert your selfhood. Take the pleasure, occasionally at least, of a little independent research. Make your own analysis; find your own illustrations: emphasize the points you think most important. Your class will feel the pleasurable thrill which always comes with originality. You will feel it yourself. If not before, at least as you start to the class, throw away the "help." Have nothing in your hand but a bible. Have the rest of it in your head and heart. Don't hobble to the class on a crutch, or even a cane. You have seen, no doubt, the patent-medicine advertisement representing the rheumatic, cured and smiling, tossing away his crutch and cane. That ought to be the picture of the model teacher as he starts to his class. The best use one can make of lesson helps is to throw them away after they have once been studied with care. Pity the teacher who must needs hobble to his class with a Journal under one arm and a Times under the other. Pity the class more!

The Senatorial Fight Warming Up With Rayner Leading.

GORMAN WILL THROW SMITH OUT

If He Possibly Can and Displace Him With Bernard Carter, Pennsylvania Railroad Attorney—Mr. Rasin Indignant at Newspapers.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS, January, 20th, 1904.

Although by the time you go to press it will, doubtless, be all over, the senatorial situation as it now stands is more mixed than it has been since it opened, and the fact that the Senate and House of Delegates in separate ballot failed today to elect a successor to Mr. McComas, does not simplify the situation.

As the result of a conference in Washington Saturday, at which Senator Arthur Pue Gorman was the host, rumors were current all over Baltimore that night and the next day that Rayner's strength had scared Messrs. Gorman and Rasin to such an extent that they were nearly frantic for a candidate to beat the independent runner. It was alleged that Senator Gorman and Mr. Rasin even feared Rayner's nomination on the first ballot, unless some one was produced who could draw votes away from the ex-Attorney-General. To accomplish this it was plausibly stated that they were willing to turn to anyone, Bernard Carter or ex-Gov. White or anyone who could get votes from Rayner.

This of course alarmed Smith and his friends, who had no idea that Rayner had grown so strong, and by the same method inflated Rayner, who had claimed all along that he was very strong indeed. To add to the force of the manouvering it was developed that this and that man could not possibly vote for Smith because of the intense feeling in this and that man's home county. The Montgomery delegation was doubtful about voting for Smith in the face of the enormous petition for Rayner, and "Josh" Miles announced that the ex-Governor was the most unpopular man in Somerset county, all of which showed the trend of the current that Smith was unpopular and that it would be impossible to force him through.

On the heels of that, however, came a rumor that this deal had been hatched up weeks ago between Senator Gorman and the Pennsylvania railroad to elect that corporation's counsel, Mr. Carter, and that all this balderdash about Rayner's strength and Smith's unpopularity was simply a bluff to give Senator Gorman an opening to throw Smith out of, and by means of which to drag the railroad lawyer in. Anyhow, the result of this conference (to which Smith was not invited) was divulged to the ex-Governor, and with it he was requested to withdraw in Bernard Carter's favor. The ex-Governor promptly and flatly declined.

The right-thinking men, even the ones who bitterly oppose ex-Governor Smith, realize that he has ten claims on this senatorial seat where Carter has one, and to nine out of ten men in this State Smith is the choice over Carter. In addition to that, men who remember that Senator Gorman owes the very office he is in at this time on two separate and distinct counts to the generosity and unselfishness of the present candidate, are more than free in the expression of opinion. To throw Smith overboard after all he has done, is, in the opinion of even the Rayner men at Annapolis, about the most cold-blooded piece of work that even Senator Gorman has perpetrated in a long time.

Last night Mr. Rasin took charge of the democratic organization at Annapolis and exerted every effort in his make-up toward forcing Carter through the caucus which had been called for that evening. Rayner, Smith and Jackson combined and adjourned the caucus for the reason, which Smith later gave to Gorman over the long-distance phone, in response to an inquiry on the subject, that they thought it was best for their interests.

Today in the balloting Rayner lead with 38 votes, Smith following with 29, and Carter polling only 11. The The republicans voted solidly for McComas and the rest of the delegates voted for favorite sons.

The generally accepted analysis of that vote is about as follows. It is demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that Smith could have been nominated last night had the leaders shoved him with half the vim they devoted to Bernard Carter. Having failed to push Carter through in secret caucus, they played "hands off" this morning to see just where the vote stood, and in order to get the first ballot over with. The first ballot, as many of the delegates see it, releases them from obnoxious pledges, especially with regard to Rayner. The vote polled is the unassisted strength of the various candidates, less the votes which Carter got and which were mostly taken from Smith.

Now if the leaders are in earnest in their endeavor to elect Carter there is little doubt of their ability to do it. That is true unless Jackson and Smith combine pocket-books as well as forces to withstand the influence of money which will soon be felt, the generally accepted opinion being that the Pennsylvania railroad funds will be used to push Carter through.

The attacks in the papers on Mr. I. Freeman Rasin are said to have infuriated the city leader beyond anything of the kind before in his experience, and are said to have caused him to swear a great oath that it shall be Carter no matter what is to pay, and there are many who believe it. Mr. Rasin is getting to be an old man and the game will have but little interest much longer.

It is beginning to be generally believed now that the springing of Carter is but the managers' efforts to carry out one clause of their side of the bargain made with the B. & O. and Pennsylvania when those roads agreed to support the democratic ticket in the last campaign.

In the Senate this morning, during the very brief session, preceding the balloting for United States Senator, Senator Ulysses Grant Palmer introduced a bill entitled "An Act to make valid defective conveyances of real and personal property." It repeals (if passed) Section 3 of the Acts of 1900—"An Act to make valid deeds, mortgages, bonds of conveyances and bills of sale, defective in the acknowledgement or in the certificate thereof."

The two houses adjourned immediately after the vote this morning, until tomorrow at 11 a. m. In joint session a second ballot will be taken at noon.

Tonight the forces are still encamped at Annapolis, although long trains loaded for Baltimore helped to relieve the congestion last night and this morning. Nearly all of the leaders are under the same roof—Caryel Hall.

WRECK AT HUTTON

Several Cars Derailed And A Lot of Mixed Merchandise Destroyed.

A freight train drawn by engine No. 1856 was wrecked at Hutton Monday night. A broken hanger fell down and derailed a housecar. When this car became derailed it turned over upon its side and five other cars followed making a wreck of all derailed cars. The wrecking crew from Piedmont was speedily called to the scene. In a few hours both tracks were cleared.

Hotel registers are not as well filled as usual but they show that many people are on the road even at this time of the year.

The issue of World's Fair stamps will be ready before long. The stamps are about the same size as the Columbian stamps issued several years ago.

LECTA'S WAY

By HORACE SEYMOUR KELLER.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

THE lusty young farmer, prize milker and hay tosser of the Twin Farms, laid aside his corn cutter and crawled upon the fence, from which elevation he could survey the valley below, where the little station was situated.

"There comes the train, getting nearer and nearer, Lecta. There, it's rounding the curve and shooting over the bridge and—poor little girl! I know it's tough, mighty tough, for he was your first city beau. The other girls have had them before and knew how to take them. The engine is steaming into the depot yard and—I can see you, dear, I can see you standing by him. Poor Lecta! Now you're shaking hands with him and—no, he don't kiss you good-by. Has got feelings for you and don't want to make you abashed before all the folks. The train's off, the last car is switched around the turn; he's gone, and your summer dream is over, poor little girl!"

Then Eli resumed his work. Every time he slashed a stalk he gritted his teeth—why, he did not know. Every time he bundled and stacked he muttered: "There, hang you! Stay where you belong!" Up and down between the rows he went, slashing right and left with his sharp cutter, bundling and stacking, doing the work of two men. Eli knew how to make every motion count. He did not drag nor loiter; he worked, worked, worked until the sun began to sink in the west. Then he unlimbered his back and shouldered his cutter and turned from the field. He reached the path leading to the house, and said, as he looked back over the result of his day's toil: "There, hang you! Stay where you belong!"

Supper over, and Eli is up in his room preparing for the great ordeal of his life. His best clothes are laid on the bed; the wonderful tie that Lecta said was so pretty, the fancy colored shirt that was his special pride, the tan shoes and the neat Fedora, all his finery lies there.

"Not such a pretty face as the other fellow has got," uttered he, as he scraped the down from his chin. "He's pale and thin, but he can sing and make the most of his good looks. I have no good looks, can't sing no more than a hen hawk. Don't know much poetry—he's got all the poets and their pretty songs at the end of his tongue. But the summer dream is done for, and Lecta will be glad to see me now, I hope. Poor little girl! You'll forget all about it soon. I've stayed away and given you both a clear road. I haven't bothered, nor snooped, nor watched you. You've had your fun. Now I'll resume mine." Thus the young rural swain muttered as he arrayed himself in his best. To his elder brother Jim, whom he met at the side door, he said: "Leave the door unlocked for me, old boy, when you come back. You won't stay so late as I. Tildy hasn't had a city beau. I may have to urge Lecta some. Lecta and the young fellow parted to-day. Maybe she'll need cheering up a bit."

"Luck to you, Eli. Give my love to Lecta," said the other, as he walked away. Jim turned and looked after the tall figure swinging with long strides through the moonlight, and muttered: "Lecta, pretty little girl—almost too pretty for dear Eli—I wonder, I wonder how it will be with you? I wonder how it will be with Eli?"

Lecta was leaning upon the gate under the beeches. She was leaning with one hand against her chin, the other hand was pressed to her bosom. The monlight, drifting through the branches, fell upon her; she looked almost too dainty and pretty for Eli to approach. She was so occupied with her fancies that she did not hear the sound of footsteps, nor did she see the friend of her childhood until he loomed up before her. Then she started, looked into his eyes and stepped away from the gate. His eyes were so blinded by the beauty of the face before him, his heart was throbbing so with the wonderful spell that he failed to notice her backward step. And Lecta, she did not speak; if she wanted to the words would not come. She only stood there while the words fell softly and slowly from her old friend's lips. If they touched her heart she gave no sign of emotion.

"Lecta, I've come again. I waited until the—the other went. I didn't want to bother you while he was here. He was the first city beau you ever had—don't get angry with me for saying that. No doubt he told you of many things you never dreamed of. He said pretty things that girls love to hear. He belongs to a world that is new to you and I. He could tell you about the poets and what they sing. I have heard you and him singing in the parlor when I drove to the factory with the milk. It sounded nice, for your voices were well matched. While I was heaving hay and working like a beaver I used to see you and him riding down the shady lane or gathering flowers in the woods. While I was fishing you and him leaned upon the rail of the old rustic bridge in the moonlight. But I didn't care, Lecta. I knew it would soon be over and that you would be glad to see me come again. I kept away and never bothered you and him. He has only known you for a few weeks; he has only walked and talked with you for a short spell—and I have known you all my life, dear Lecta. I dragged you on my sled to school, and tramped paths for you through the snow many a time. I've picked the first violets for you when you were sick. I can see the sweet smile on your face, Lecta, when you took them and thanked me. Lecta, he has only known you for a few weeks, but I have known you always."

The plain young fellow, whose heart was so filled with love, lifted his hat and stood there in the moonlight as the balmy breezes tossed his hair. There was a glad look in his eyes as he held out his hands, and his face was aglow with expectancy.

The girl started and again drew back from the gate. She opened her lips to speak, but the words died in a whisper that was like a sigh. Then recovering her composure she leaned forward and reached out the hand she had pressed to her bosom and faintly uttered:

"We will always be good friends, dear—dear Eli."

He took the little brown hand, and as he pressed it the touch of a ring sent a chill to his heart. He shivered, and his voice lost all its old buoyancy as he said, softly, sadly, slowly:

"I see—it's all right, Lecta, it's all right. He knew you in the few short weeks better than I did during all my life. He walked a few times with you, he sung a few songs with you in the parlor, he stood on the old bridge in the moonlight and said pretty things to you. He did not drag you from the milldam when you went down for the last time, as I did. I would have died for you, then, dear Lecta! I saved you—for your city beau. But I'm glad, dear, I did. For you will be happy, you know. It's all right, Lecta, all right. Yes, dear, friends forever."

And the fair young girl's eyes followed the tall form that passed away; and there were tears in her eyes—but her thoughts were for the other one far away from her.

When Jim came home he saw a light in his brother's room. He stepped to the door and was about to lay his hand upon the latch when the sound of a sob fell upon his ears. Turning to his own room he said, in a soft, low tone:

"She's broke the best heart that ever beat. Women are queer. They have strange ways. This is little Lecta's way. Poor old boy!"

NOT THERE.

Across a new-made grave soft breezes blow,
The sun looks down with tender, loving kiss
Close by, a little bird sits, singing low,
As if its heart had lost its spring-time bliss;
As if some joy it evermore must miss.

Beside that grave you sit with head bowed low,
Your tears are falling like the summer rain.
Vainly across your brow the breezes blow,
The sun looks down with loving kiss in vain;
Nor breeze, nor sun, nor bird can ease your pain.

Your heart seems crushed beneath the earth piled high
Above another heart that silent lies.
Close to the earth you lay your ear and cry
Aloud the sleeper's name; no voice replies;
Upon the air your piteous wailing dies.

In vain upon the grave you lie, and throw
Your arms around as if to clasp the form
That lies so still in the cold house below.
No kisses sweet from death-sealed lips shall warm.
Your aching heart, nor quell the rising storm

Of sobs that shakes your frame, as tempests shake
The mighty forests, when the Storm King calls
Them from their hidden caves, and bids them take
Their way with angry roar that oft appalls
The hearts of those upon whose ears it falls.

O, mourning one, who pour your heart in tears,
Not there, not there, beneath the senseless clod,
But evermore through the eternal years—
Although that form may crumble 'neath the sod—
Your loved, your lost, shall be at home with God.

Not in that breeze-swept, sun-kissed grave to-day
Look for your loved one, then, but lift your eyes
To that fair land that stretches far away
Beyond the sun and stars and widespread skies;
That land where no one weeps; none ever dies.

Turkish Physicians Wise.

The sultan has cancer of the stomach and can't live more than two or three years. A German doctor made the discovery, says the Chicago Record-Herald, probably because the Turkish physicians were afraid of getting themselves beheaded if they told the old man about it.

ITALY'S NEW Ppremier.

Although Democratic in Principle, Signor Giolitti Is a Thorough Disciplinarian.

It would be hard to find a more genuinely picturesque man of affairs among European statesmen than Signor Giovanni Giolitti, Italy's new prime minister, to whom has just been handed over such a tangled skein for unraveling by the retiring Zanardelli.

Giolitti is the most lugubrious looking man in Italy. To see him walking about the streets, with his head trust forward and his hands clasped behind his back, attired in a rusty overcoat, one would take him for an overworked and slightly anxious shopkeeper. When some one speaks to him, however, he straightens himself, while a smile softens his, on the whole, quite harsh features, and he at once shows what he is—a leader of men.

Although a democrat in every drop of his blood and in every line of his figure, he is respected, but feared, by his subordinates. When he first went to the ministry of the interior, the clerks, ignoring the lesson which they should have learned in a glance at the man, thought that, as he was a democrat they might relax some of that deference which is used to exaggeration in monarchical countries, and Italy in particular. But a few prompt transferrings to small country places soon made matters lear and showed them who they had to deal with.

When minister, seeing the king often and being treated by him as a friend, Giolitti lost none of his "republican" implicity. One day he arrived at the royal palace, and, instead of waiting for all the usual red tape of being passed from one flunkey to another, introduced himself immediately into the royal presence. Victor Emanuel III. looked up surprised, but Giolitti disarmed his anger by saying:

"Your majesty knows I am not used to courts. You called me, and here I am."

The two chief fads of the new premier are that he has an absolute detestation of tailors and a tremendous aversion to having his photograph taken.

YOUNG MAN WENT HOME.

How a Hard-Headed Missouri Business Man Rescued His Son from Starvation.

Hon. "Champ" Clark is fond of telling the following story of an old friend of his, who, in his home in Jefferson City, Mo., enjoys a local reputation for grim humor.

The old gentleman in question is the possessor of a large fortune, which he has accumulated by much hard work and the closest attention to business. He has a son whom he wished to train up in his father's business. But the boy was set upon leaving home and seeing the world. So he procured a position in Chicago. He soon lost the job, however, and in a short while found himself without means of livelihood.

Then he telegraphed to his father for money—in fact, he sent several urgent messages of this sort over the wire—but to all his appeals he received no answer.

Finally, in desperation, the son of the rich man telegraphed his father in these words:

"You won't see me starve, will you?"

The old man's answer came thus:

"No! Not from this distance!"

Then, says Mr. Clark, the boy decided to go home and work in his father's firm.

Are Economical Housekeepers.

The wives of French peasants are excellent housekeepers, and are noted for their thrift and tidiness. In most cases the earnings of the husband are small, but his wife is an excellent manager, and generally a capital cook. She evolves dainty dishes out of trifles; makes a leek or a cabbage, with a few bones, produce soup which is delicious; and transforms dried beans or macaroni, with an egg or a vegetable, into a nutritious and palatable dish.

MIGHT CHECK CRIME.

Sale of Firearms to Be Controlled by National Government.

Postmaster Coyne, of Chicago, Advances an Argument Which Certainly Is Worthy of Serious and Immediate Consideration.

It used to be said that crime was at its minimum during prosperous times, but the records of the two years just passed has upset this time-honored theory. In all parts of the country, but more especially in Chicago and other large cities, murders and highway robberies, in which the use of firearms has played a conspicuous part, have multipled almost beyond belief. Students of the problem ascribe the increase in lawlessness to the pernicious influence of slum life, but as many of the more youthful criminals come from the so-called "lower middle class," this theory cannot be accepted without reserve.

Police authorities believe that the purchase and carrying of weapons by boys and young men and the reading of sensational newspapers lie at the bottom of the evil, and the concurrence in these views has led Mr. Frederick E. Coyne, postmaster at Chicago, to recommand the control of the manufacture and sale of deadly weapons by the national government.

"Much space," writes Mr. Coyne, "has been given in the columns of the papers to the reckless disregard for human lives as the result of the promiscuous sale and use of firearms, particularly, the magazine revolver.

"The thought has occurred to me that there ought to be federal supervision over the manufacture, importation and sale of firearms of every kind and description. The federal government, through its internal revenue laws, has supervision over the manufacture and sale of whisky, beer and cigars and all manufactured tobaccos; it imposes a tax on all wholesale and retail dealers of spirituous and malt liquors; and also has stringent laws against the importation of opium.

"Without desiring to open discussion as to the propriety or justice of the laws referred to, I simply want to call attention to the results and to show that the laws of the federal government are more respected and better enforced than those of the city, county or state, and particularly those of large municipalities.

"What I advocate is this: that the manufacture, importation and sale of all firearms be placed under government supervision, and that a suitable tax be levied on same, sufficient, at least, to cover the cost of such supervision. It seems to me that a government which can enforce a law against a citizen having in his possession a copper still or worm, with which it is possible to distill spirits, ought to pass and enforce a law that will prohibit a 14-year-old boy from purchasing a magazine revolver, with which he can depopulate a town if given half a chance. There should be a law requiring the impression of a government seal on each and every firearm manufactured, and no one should be permitted to have in his or her possession a firearm of any sort without having it registered at the office of the internal revenue collector of the district in which he resides. I do not believe that such a law would entirely check the reign of lawlessness which seems to prevail all over our country, but I do believe that more boys go wrong and step from idleness to crime through the ownership of a revolver than from any other cause. There are laws now in different states throughout the union requiring what is equal to a license on shotguns and rifles, but those laws are for the protection of game. It would seem to me that it is time for the government to pass a law regulating the manufacture and ownership of firearms for the protection of human lives."

Horse Is Cured by Music.

Fire Island, a very valuable English race horse, has just given a most remarkable proof of the healing powers of music. He lost his appetite and refused to train, a condition of affairs that drove his trainer and jockeys to distraction. All manner of remedies were resorted to without avail till the happy idea occurred to them to place a music box in his stall. Twice a day a string of dances and "God Save the King" regaled the equine ears. The effect was marvelous. The horse regained his spirits, and the trainer and jockey had no further trouble. Whether the horse had any previous circus affiliations to determine his musical taste is not stated.

Professors Are Poorly Paid.

College professors will never become rich because of their generous salaries. This is particularly the case with those in Germany. In that country 191 of them get $250 a year or less; 87 less than $400; 74 get $1,000 a year. Only four get as much as $5,000 a year.

THE CROW AND THE MUSSEL.

Find a Fisherman.

A Crow, having found a Mussel on the seashore, took it in his beak, and for a long time tried to break the shell by hammering it upon a stone. Another Crow—a sly old fellow—came and watched him for some time in silence. "Friend," said he at last, "you'll never break it in that way. Listen to me. This is the way to do it: Fly up as high as you can and let the tiresome thing fall upon a rock. It will be smashed then, sure enough, and you can eat it at your leisure." The simple-minded and unsuspecting Crow did as he was told; flew up and let the Mussel fall. Before he could descend to eat it, however, the other bird had pounced upon it and carried it away.

EXPLORING MT. WRANGELL.

Great Volcano in Alaska Furnishes Some New Discoveries for Surveyors.

Only a few years ago the incessantly active volcano, Mount Wrangell, in Alaska, was represented on all our maps as an isolated mountain situated in the midst of a great snow covered plateau. Almost nothing was known of that inland region, but Mount Wrangell had attracted attention because smoke was always pouring from its summit.

Exploring parties of the United States geological survey have been particularly active in this region for the past three years and are at last able to give much definite information about it, reports the New York Sun. It has been found that Mount Wrangell is not a solitary mountain, but is in the midst of a vast array of summits covered with snow and glaciers and spreading over an area of no less than 5,500 square miles.

Within this area are at least ten snow-clad peaks 12,000 feet or more in height. Several of these are still unnamed and two, Mount Sanford, 16,200 feet, and Mount Blackburn, 16,140 feet, are higher than Mount Blanc or any of the peaks within the United States south of Canada. Mount Wrangell, which has attracted more attention than the others, because it is an active volcano, is third in altitude, 14,000 feet.

This entire mountain region, in the basin of the Copper river, is now known as the Wrangell group of mountains. W. C. Mendenhall, of the suvery, has an article on the group in the latest number of the National Geographic Magazine. Among his illustrations he gives a fine panoramic view, about three feet long, of the part of the group which contains some of the highest summits.

It is a wonderful scene of the grimmest desolation peak after peak rising from high valleys, their black, steep sides streaked with snow and the higher elevations completely white with it, and in the center of the picture is Mount Wrangell with its column of smoke.

But Wrangell itself is a grand mountain, though dwarfed by the higher cones of Sanford and Blackburn. It is a wide-spreading cone nearly three miles high and eight times as broad. Its gently arched surface is a glistening snowfield, smudged here and there by volcanic ash from the crater, which sends up rolling columns of smoke and vapor to a height of three miles.

From its eastern slope descends the Nabesna glacier, a frozen river 50 miles in length. On its western face a dozen jets of steam may be seen on a still morning issuing from as many vents. The glaciers proceeding from the shallow valley where these vents occur are black with breath of the mountain. The summit has never been reached, though a prospector named John Bremner declares hat he got within a mile of the top.

But Mount Wrangell may be ascended. Mr. Mendenhall thinks that some time may elapse before the summit of Mount McKinley is reached, but he says it will not be a difficult feat to get to the top of Wrangell. The line of perpetual snow is about 6,500 feet and the summit rises 7,500 feet above this. He describes four feasible routes of approach and thinks that the ascent of the only known active volcano in the interior of the continent north of Mexico may well appeal to any mountaineer. All the other active Alaskan volcanoes are on or near the seacoast.

The Wrangell mountains are, for the most part, masses of lava and volcanic mud which had been piled up on an earlier surface, burying the old land forms and substituting for them the present splendid group of mountains.

THE FUTURE OF COREA.

Fate of the Island Hangs Upon the Issue of Troubles Now Pending.

Whatever may be the result of the negotiations now going on between Russia and Japan for the peaceable settlement of the questions which have led these nations to the verge of war, it is certain that the isolation of Corea is at an end, says the Philadelphia Ledger. Two powerful peoples, representatives of the modern spirit—one of them only recently awakened from a sleep of centuries, and the other not yet fully emerged from barbarism, though probably the most virile and aggressive human force in the world to-day—two great modern peoples stand ready to fight for the territory of the last of the hermit nations. In the inevitable course of events not remote, the land of morning calm must yield entrance to the influence of either Russia or Japan and awaken to take a part in the bustling day. Already some thousands of Japanese traders have invaded the country; a railroad connects the capital with its seaport, and at least one telegraph line crosses the country. Russian officers drill its soldiers. Missionaries of every form of faith have established themselves in its chief cities. The time is close at hand when Corea will be a part of civilization, though under which of the contending influences does not yet appear. In the meantime, what kind of a country is Corea?

The Coreans are a people entirely distinct from the Chinese, as they are from the Japanese. They are a rather handsome race. All who have come in contact with them admit their quickness of perception. They acquire a foreign language with ease and speak it better than Mongolians of other nations are able to do. Their own tongue is syllabic, but it is written with an alphabet. The educated class affect the use of Chinese—an archaic Chinese in use in the celestial kingdom 1,000 years ago, though since the separation from China the popular tongue has been employed officially. All Coreans read and write. The nation has no religion. Confucianism is the official code of morality, and Buddhism lingers in the mountains, but a benighted ghost worship prevails among the masses.

Up to 1876 Corea successfully preserved her isolation. Japan in that year wrung a treaty from her. The United States in 1882 entered into a convention with her, the various European powers following us. In these treaties the ports named above are open.

Up to 1895 the king of Corea acknowledged the suzerainty of China, but the present king, Heui Yi, at the conclusion of the war between China and Japan, renounced the Chinese allegiance and proclaimed himself absolute monarch. Since that time the political history of the kingdom has been that of the strife of Japanese and Russian influence at Seoul.

There are between 10,000,000 and 15,000,000 people in Corea, the population being about as dense as that of our own state. They are a race of quick-witted children. Their ignorance of everything but the Chinese classics is total.

Education of Young Women

By Mrs. Lydon Evans.

DOMESTIC science should be taught every young woman in the land. The present system of educating our daughters is all wrong. Young women should attend college, but instead of learning professions they should acquire the knowledge necessary to take care of a home.

Here are a few figures which will prove my contention. There are 15,000,000 homes in the United States at the present time. That means that there are 15,000,000 housekeepers at the head of homes. Then there are 2,000,000 servants. That makes a total of 17,000,000.

That is the demand. Now for the supply. In all the United States there are only 24,000,000 women above the age of 15 years. Do you realize that there are only 7,000,000 women above the age of 15 who are not at the head of households? Now cut the remainder in half, for there are 3,500,000 women engaged in the professional and mercantile world. That leaves 3,500,000 women in the United States who are not engaged in business or in household work. That proves conclusively, to me at least, that there is no room for any save an education that has for its end the taking care of a home. I believe it is all right for woman to get an education and just as complete a one as possible, but it should be an education that teaches her her sphere is in the home.

My plan would be to establish an institution where housekeeping could be taught as a science. The women could take up the scientific end of the problem and study the chemistry of foods, for instance. That would insure pure and wholesome food. Then they could study art for the sake of the household. That would mean more attractive homes and instead of housekeeping being classed as a drudgery it would be recognized as a science.

People often wonder why there is a scarcity of servants in a certain locality. A glance at the statistics will tell. You will notice that there are 2,000,000 domestics in the United States. You will also notice that there are 15,000,000 homes. That explains it, does it not?

Rise of the Mannish Woman

By Dr. Morgan Dix,
Prominent New York Clergyman.

One of the deplorable monstrosities of these degenerate days is the mannish woman. Women, some of them, I mean, have come down to the level of mere man. They talk like men; they smoke like men; they swear, they gamble, they drink, and do all things that men do—even dress like men.

I saw a woman in a street car and she had on a man's cravat, man's overcoat, and a waistcoat. She looked as much like a man as a woman can look and wear a skirt and long hair done up in all sorts of effects. Again I met a young woman walking with four men, all in a row, in the street. She wore a short skirt, coat and waistcoat, just like those of her male companion. She carried a stick—a regular "banger"—and she strode along with a gait like theirs.

If there is anything that the true manly man despises, and rightly despises, it is the womanish man, and I think the mannish woman goes a step farther and is infinitely worse. Man may brush elbows with the mannish woman. In the business world he may endure her, but he has no admiration or real respect for her. All this comes from leaving the womanly things of life and invading the sphere of man.

But I would not exclude women from all occupations to which modern-day life has called them. On the contrary there are many things women can do and still be womanly. They need not lose their rightful place in the business world.

But there are things not fitting in women to do. They should not have suffrage. Women lawyers are not in the right place, and I don't think much of women doctors. As for women preachers—is there anything clearer than the express language of the Scripture forbidding them?

Teaching Patriotism

By Hon. Albert J. Beveridge,
United States Senator from Indiana.

We expect our nation to lead the other nations of the world. But America will not succeed in so doing unless the sense of civic duty is as exalted as faith. And to make it so is the duty of every teacher. In a republic, in short, civic education is the soul of the school.

Patriotism can be taught. Our forefathers were taught it in the stern school of experience. Those heroic days gave birth to a patriotism which laid the foundations of this great republic. But to-day conditions and circumstances have changed and patriotism must be taught in the schools very much as the other branches of learning are. It can be taught. It must be taught.

Other nations are teaching it to the rising generations. Loyalty to the nation and conscious sense of duty as a citizen to that nation are two things which must be taught to the youth of any nation which is to be strong and exert a worldwide influence. Education is the finest thing in the world if it increases interest in the nation—if it produces pure, brave and effective citizens.

Two Cardinal Virtues

By John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

A man possessed of genuine worth, dignity, and self-respect always speaks of himself moderately, if he speaks at all. Self-praise usually marks a serious defect in character.

Self-commendation is wrong when it springs from personal vanity and when it exalts itself at the expense of others or even in comparison with them.

Half of the people in the world to-day are on the wrong scent in pursuit of happiness. They seem to think it consists in having and getting and in being served by others. That is a mistaken idea. It consists in giving and serving others.

Self-sacrifice for others always wins abundant applause. It is because self-sacrifice, while universally admired in others, conflicts with the ruling passion of selfishness in the human heart, that it is so rarely practiced.

THE WATER HEMLOCK.

This Plant, Commonly Known as Wild Parsnips, Is Fatal to Men and Animals.

Every year the newspapers tell us of children being poisoned by eating wild parsnips. On investigation it is found that the "wild parsnips" eaten were not wild parsnips at all, but water hemlock, known botanically as cicuta maculata. This plant is known by a variety of names, dependent on the locality where found. Some of these names are, wild hemlock, spotted parsley, snakeweed, beaver poison, musquash root, muskrat weed, cowbane, spotted cowbane, children's bane. It is a smooth, erect perennial, three to eight feet high, with a rigid, hollow stem, numerous branches, finely-dissected leaves, white flowers, and a cluster of spindle-shaped roots, which vary in length from one and one-half to three inches, and are very characteristic of the plant. It grows commonly in swamps and damp soils from the Atlantic states to Iowa and Minnesota, and less commonly in Nebraska and New Mexico.

This is one of the most poisonous plants in the United States, being rapidly fatal to both man and animals. The roots are especially dangerous, because the taste, being aromatic and to some people suggestive of horseradish, parsnips, artichokes, or sweet cicely, lead children to eat them. Cattle sometimes eat the tubers when they are washed out of the ground by freshets. The loss to stock from eating this plant is quite considerable. The prominent symptoms of the poisoning are colicky pains, vomiting, staggering, unconsciousness and frightful convulsions, ending in death.—Farmer's Review.

CATCHY ADVERTISING.

Suggestions for Farmers and Breeders Who Have Learned to Value Publicity.

Farmers and breeders are rapidly becoming advertisers on the same scale as merchants and manufacturers. They are learning that where they have surplus products to throw upon the market the best way to get the right customer is through the use of advertising space in reputable papers that circulate among the people they wish to reach. In fact, the farmer and stock raiser is as much of a manufacturer as the builder of self-binders and as much of a merchant as the storekeeper who sells him his clothes. The same elements of success enter into agriculture as in commerce, although possibly in varying degrees, and one of these elements is advertising.

The farmer and breeder, however, are still new at advertising. They have yet to learn by experience that the best advertising is that which produces the best results, and that results are gauged, first, by the circulation of the paper, and, second, by the attractive character of the advertisement. The farmer who is placing advertising should insist on knowing what he is paying for—how many copies of his advertisment are to be distributed. He should, furthermore, follow the example of the merchant in the makeup of his announcement. He should have something to sell, and tell what it is in unmistakable language. He should picture how his advertisement will look in print, so as to make it attractive in every way, and write the copy just as he wants it printed. The publishers are always eager to help their patrons make their announcements attractive and effective, both for the sake of the advertiser and for the improvement of the paper. Farmers who are advertisers will do well to remember these suggestions.—Twentieth Century Farmer.

Shipping Eggs in Winter.

Shipping eggs in winter requires careful packing. Eggs are liable to become frozen in the crates when the cold is intense, although the crates may be made tight and the eggs inclosed in paper partitions. There is no remedy for the drawbacks, and the only safe plan is to keep the eggs until the weather moderates. Sawdust is sometimes used in the crates to fill up the spaces and prevent the ingress of cold air, but it only adds to the weight. If one has the time to bestow, the eggs may be wrapped in wadding, and placed in the paper partitions; but the merchants who receive them may object to the extra labor imposed upon them of removing the covering from the eggs after arrival.—Farm and Fireside.

BABY BEEF PRODUCTION.

Gain Largely Depends on Age of the Animal and the Way in Which It is Fed.

Feeders of baby beef, who keep their animals up to their work, are known to make a gain of over two pounds daily for 12 months. This gain depends upon the age of the animal and the manner in which it is fed. A matter that should not be overlooked by the farmer is the appropriate food for each animal; he should aim to increase the weight by making the animal as fat as possible, as fat is more easily produced on an animal than either lean meat or bone. It has been shown that to increase the excess of either fat or lean on an animal depends upon the age. The natural inclination of a yearling animal is growth, and the system demands materials containing but a small portion of fat producing qualities, but as growth adds to weight, the more rapid the growth the greater the increase in weight, which, of course, accounts for the quick gains made by young animals as compared with those approaching maturity, and which fact gives rise to the claim that baby beef is the cheaper form of the two. To know the breeds and how to use them; to be aware of the fact that some breeds assimilate more food and give off less waste than others, and to learn how to convert food into a salable product quickly and economically is what each one must study out for himself. Have a pair of scales, weigh frequently and note the ratio of increase in weight. By so doing one can cover the causes of failure and correct mistakes. The time is coming when the farmer will not be satisfied with less than a pound a day from birth for his farrows and wethers up to one year old. In approaching maturity gains are not so great, but previous to that animals for the block should be pushed. Finally, breeds that gain weight in the high-priced portions of the carcass must be given preference, and feeders must know that they are breeding for definite results. Baby beef must have the fat in the right place.—Agricultural Epitomist.

GOOD TONICS FOR HOGS.

The Kind of Mixture That Should Be Accessible to Them All the Year Around.

It is necessary to keep constantly accessible to all hogs, both pigs and old hogs, some material that supplies lime and salt to aid in bone-building, as an appetizer, and to remove intestinal parasites. This mixture should be kept in a strong box protected from rain, and quantity and frequency with which pigs will visit and eat of the mixture will often be surprising. The following is the mixture that we use:

Charcoal, one and one-half bushels.
Common salt, four pounds.
Hard wood ashes, ten pounds.
Slacked lime, four pounds.

Another thing which is good for the pig is a variety of feeds. Pigs do better on a variety than on any single feed. This fact is scarcely ever disputed by the farmer, but is often enough ignored to give it some emphasis. Just how much better the pig will do if fed a variety, we will let the pig himself testify; for whatever other mean thing a pig will do he will not tell a lie about his feed.

Fresh water, shade in summer, grain food when on grass, and dry bed free from dust, shelter in winter, and above all, when confined, have the area sufficiently large so that it will not become foul with droppings and mud bugs. These are essential for successful hog-raising.—Arkansas Bulletin.

POULTRY YARD NOTES.

To treat fowls for health is better than to dose them for disease.

Season soft food with salt. It sharpens appetite and aids digestion.

A handful of sunflower seed now and then adds luster to the plumage.

Hens will pay well for table scraps. It is wasteful to feed them to mongrel dogs and cats.

Litter in which there is tough, wiry hay is not safe to put on the scratching floor. If eaten it causes crop-bound conditions.

Much time is wasted on farms in winter by the men folks that might be made profitable by caring for the poultry and producing winter eggs.

To renew the vitality of a flock it is not necessary to cross-breed and make them mongrels. Better get males of a different strain or family of the same variety.—Farm Journal.

Miss Alice Bailey, of Atlanta, Ga., tells how she was permanently cured of inflammation of the ovaries, and escaped the surgeon's knife, by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The universal indications of the approach of woman's great enemy, inflammation and disease of the ovaries, are a dull throbbing pain, accompanied by a sense of tenderness and heat low down in the side, with occasional shooting pains. On examination it may be found that the region of pain will show some swelling. This is the first stage of inflammation of the ovaries.

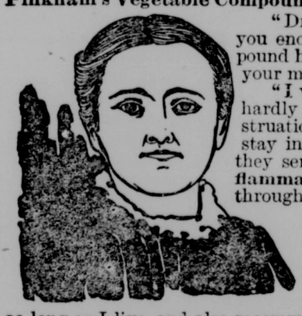
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for the restored health and happiness Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought into my life.

"I had suffered for three years with terrible pains at the time of menstruation, and did not know what the trouble was until the doctor pronounced it inflammation of the ovaries, and proposed an operation.

"I felt so weak and sick that I felt sure that I could not survive the ordeal, and so I told him that I would not undergo it. The following week I read an advertisement in the paper of your Vegetable Compound in such an emergency, and so I decided to try it. Great was my joy to find that I actually improved after taking two bottles, so I kept taking it for ten weeks, and at the end of that time I was cured. I had gained eighteen pounds and was in excellent health, and am now.

"You surely deserve great success, and you have my very best wishes."—MISS ALICE BAILEY, 50 North Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

Another woman saved from a surgical operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Read what she says:—



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot thank you enough for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. If it had not been for your medicine, I think I would have died.

"I will tell you how I suffered. I could hardly walk, was unable to sleep or eat. Menstruation was irregular. At last I had to stay in my bed, and flowed so badly that they sent for a doctor, who said I had inflammation of the ovaries, and must go through an operation, as no medicine could help me, but I could not do that.

"I received a little book of yours, and after reading it, I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am now a well woman. I shall praise your medicine as long as I live, and also recommend the same to anyone suffering as I was."—MRS. MINNIE OTTOSON, Otho, Iowa.

All sick women would be wise if they would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and be well.

I. FREEMAN RASIN, OWNER!

Since the convening of the Legislature Mr. I. Freeman Rasin, the Democratic political boss of Baltimore and the State of Maryland, has preempted a section of the Maryland State House at Annapolis and enthroned himself as supreme dictator of the people of this commonwealth.

Heretofore Mr. Rasin has issued his edicts through his trusty lieutenants who have carried out to the letter his orders. Monday night, however, he stepped out into the open, taking personal charge of the work mapped out for the caucus of the Democratic members of the Legislature and to carry his schemes through ordered certain corridors of the State House closed and placed them in charge of some Baltimore city policemen with orders to arrest all who should step over the death line drawn by him. Mr. Rasin thus dispossessed the people of Maryland of their own property and said to them: "This is mine trespass at your peril!"

His actions called forth indignant protests from everyone acquainted with the facts. The Baltimore city papers were especially, and justly, too, harsh in their criticisms. The Sun of Tuesday under the head "An Insult to the State which the Legislature and Governor Warfield Should Investigate," deals with the matter as follows:

"The statement contained in The Sun's special dispatches from Annapolis as to the autocratic conduct of I. Freeman Rasin yesterday and last night in Maryland's State House will create a storm of indignation in every section of the State if the people of Maryland are not dead to every impulse of self-respect and manhood. The Black Beast of Baltimore politics, as he has been appropriately called, has been accustomed heretofore to ply his nefarious trade under cover and to hide from rather than invite public scrutiny. But yesterday and last night he boldly took possession of certain important rooms in the State Capitol and, placing Baltimore city policemen and detectives on guard, refused admission to all but his own followers. He even had the supreme insolence to forbid not only the public, but persons connected with the Legislature, access to certain halls and corridors which he had preempted, and to threaten his police and detective agents violence to those who should refuse to obey his will.

"Such an usurpation of the authority that belongs to the State of Maryland alone calls for positive action on the part of the General Assembly. It is without a parallel or a precedent in the history of Maryland and constitutes an offense againrt the dignity and honor of the State, and the General Assembly owes it to the commonwealth and to itself to investigate and punish it. The Police commissioners of this city cannot escape the obligation of at once calling to account the members of the force who lent themselves to these outrageous and high-handed proceedings.

"Mr. Bernard Carter owes it to his good name and his standing before the community to say whether he indorses this conduct on the part of the man who is supposed to represent his interests at Annapolls.

"To be in such company as that of the political buccaneer who has had the audacity to take armed possession of the State House is enough in itself to damn any candidate in the public estimation. I. Freeman Rasin has long been a stench in the nostri's of all decent people. Yesterday's proceedings cap the climax of his long and unspeakable career. He should be whipped from the State House with the lash of public scorn and indignation.

"If Governor Warfield has any authority in the matter he should exercise it for the protection of public rights and the preservation of public decency. He is a high-toned gentleman and such scenes as those of yesterday will unquestionably excite his deep indignation."

THE METHODIST LIMIT.

From the tenor and volume of the discussions on the time limit in the Methodist Episcopal pastorate, it is apparent that this subject is to be an important, if not overshadowing one in the General Conference at Los Angeles next May. Four years ago the General Conference abolished the time limit, thus setting aside a great and distinguishing mark of the Wesleyan polity, much to the regret of a large body of Methodist, who regard the rules and practices of early Methodism as binding and applicable even under the changed conditions of society brought about in the past hundred years. The Wesleyan movement had much of its strength and peculiar triumphs from the doctrine of itineracy, and its most glowing and thrilling page is that whereon we read of the labors and sacrifices of the circuit-riders, the Napoleons of the Cross, the "preachers on horseback." The founders of Methodism in America, its illustrious first apostle, whose dust rests in Mount Olivet, spent the whole of his career as an itinerant, and, from the flush of manhood until old age, rode the rounds of the increasing societies from New England to the Carolinas, until, at last, in Virginia, he went from the saddle to his deathbed. Wesley began the itineracy when turned from the church of his fathers and of his own faith, he took "the world for his parish," and became a traveling preacher.

In the dawn of the introduction of Methodism into this country—when its stronghold was Maryland and the adjacent territory—the preachers were changed two, and sometimes three, times a year on the "stations." Dr. Abel Stevens says that then "The itineracy was under a stern regimen, and was prized as not only affording variety of ministerial gifts to the societies, but as a sort of military drill to the preachers. It kept them energetic by keeping them in motion. No great captain has approved of long encampments. The early Methodist itinerants were an evangelical cavalry they were always in the saddle; a mode of life which conducted not a little to that chivalric spirit and heroic character which distinguishes them as a class." At length the preachers came to remain as long as three years on a charge, and at the Genera. Conference held at Baltimore in 1804 it enacted that two years on one appointment should be the time limit. There was a great controversy over the matter, and Bishop Asbury, in his journals, notes that in 1806 he found on the Eastern Shores of Maryland such a condition of affairs as to render the Methodist future there unpromising: "The peoples minds are agitated about stationed preachers, some for and some against. The devil would rather they wouldde something worse than disagree: but this to him is better than nothing. Sixty years after the Baltimore Conference of 1804 the time limit of two years was extended to three, and in 1888 the maximum of pastoral service at one appointment was made five years. At the last General Conference the time limit was removed altogether.

It is evident, however, that, notwithstanding the expunging from the Church statute book of the time limit, the hold of the doctrine of the itineracy is still strong upon "Old-side Methodism." The proportion of long term pastors in the Baltimore and every other annual conference of the Church is surprisingly small. In fact, most of the oppositions to the itineracy as a cardinal rule of the Church is found in the large cities, in which wealthy and aristocratic congregations have, from time to time, practically defied the time limit rule and set at naught the once all-powerful dictum of the bishops. The early Methodist bishops were, with all their heroism, kindliness and fiery enthusiasm the strictest disciplinarians. The Methodist Protestants Church is the outgrowth of rebellion against Episcopal "tyranny." Even now the word of the Bishop is supposed to be law; he sends the preachers wherever he listeth, and it is rebellion of the deepest ecclesiastical dye to question his wisdom or refuse to receive his appointees. This was being done, however, with such frequency and effect that it was perhaps thought best to let the congregations have their own way in the matter of retaining favorite pastors. it was recognized, too, that local conditions in many of the large cities were such as to handicap in his work the pastor whose term of service was limited. But the concession appears to be far from meeting with the approval of a large proportion of the preachers and laymen, who fear that departure from the foundations of American Methodism will ultimately produce more evil than good to the Church.—Baltimore News.

As To Kissing.

Richard Grant White, the eminent philosopher, father of Stanford White, of architectural fame, was asked once upon a time to conjugate the verb "kiss." He believed and maintained that English is a grammarless tongue, hence he felt no compunction when he gave this: "Bus, to kiss; rebus to kiss again; pluribus, to kiss without regard to number; sillybus, to kiss the hand instead of the lips; blunderbus, to kiss the wrong person; omnibus, to kiss every one in the room; erebus, to kiss in the dark."

HENRY WEBER, Sr., DEAD.

His Demise Occurred This Afternoon At His Home.

At his home adjoining Oakland, at 2.15 this afternoon, after months of suffering, Mr. Henry Weber, Sr., aged about sixty-eight years. No funeral arrangements have yet been made. A more extended notice of the deceased, who was loved by all who knew him, will appear in these columns next week.

DIED.

HOOK—It is with feelings of sadness that we announce the sudden death of our neighbor's son which took place Sunday morning, Jan. 10th, at 5.40 a. m. It was that of Joseph Floyd Hook, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Hook, at their home at Blooming Rose. Death was caused by catarrh of the stomach. He had not been feeling well for some time, but no one thought he was dangerously ill. Had worked at his chosen profession on Friday and had complained some during the night and when he arose at his usual time was taken very ill. The doctor was hastily summoned and all done that medical skill could do, but all in vain. He peacefully passed away at the above named time communing with his Redeemer for help. Joseph Floyd was in his 25th year. Was an upright young man whose example is worthy of emulation. Was always found obedient to his work and faithful and kind to all with whom he came in contact. When not at work in the mill, was found at home with his parents doing all he could, assisting them in their labors on the farm. For the past nine years or more he had been employed by A. Knabb & Co. at Krug in their extensive barrel factory. He held the position of stave joiner. None did their work better than "Jack," as he was familliarly called by the boys. When staves were to be jointed "Jack" was at his post. Among the great number employed he was a friend to all and respected by all who knew him. He will be greatly missed, as much by his employers as by his host of friends and companions.

Jack was a faithful member of Youghiogheny Lodge K. of P., of Friendsville and carried a policy of one thousand dollars in one of the old line insurance companies of New York.

His funeral at Blooming Rose church on Monday was conducted by Rev. Joseph Guthrie, and his body laid to rest in Blooming Rose Cemetery, after appropriate services conducted by the order of Knights of Pythias, led by Rev. A. L. Louachry, Prelate of the Lodge.

Our sympathies go out in behalf of the stricken father and mother, brother and sisters, and point them to Him who doeth all things well, in whom they can confidingly trust, waiting for the final day when we all shall meet around the altar of the Living God, who will bid us all welcome if we are faithful here on earth. May our Heavenly Father guide us and so lead us that we may be permitted to share the blessing of life eternal in that last great day, when we shall be like Him.

A BROTHER IN F. C. B.

Blooming Rose, Jan. 12, 1904.

CRANE—At her home in Loch Lynn Heights, of consumption, Mrs. Benj. F. Crane, aged about forty-five years, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 19th, 1904, after months of suffering. Mrs. Crane was a sister of Mr. George P. White, of Loch Lynn and leaves besides her husband eight children, some of whom are quite young. Her funeral took place yesterday afternoon, the interment being made in the cemetery on the White farm near Kearney. Mr. Crane and his family have the sympathy of the entire community in the great loss thus sustained.

HARVEY—At the home of her parents, Capt. and Mrs. James A. Hayden, in Mountain Lake Park, on Sunday morning, of consumption, Mrs Ellen Belle Harvey, wife of Rev. John S. Harvey, of Democracy, Ohio, aged 27 years and 9 months. The deceased was born in Oakland on April 17th, 1876, and was married April 29th, 1903, after which she went with her husband to Ohio where they resided until her return to the Park early in the fall with the hope of benefitting her health. Mrs. Harvey was of a gentle, retiring disposition, loved by all for her womanly ways and kindness of heart. She was the only daughter of her devoted parents. Her funeral took place from her parents home at the Park on Tuesday afternoon, after services conducted by Rev. Henry E. Friend of the M. E. church, assisted by Revs. Dr. Scott, J. M. Davis and L. A. Rudisill, who paid glowing tributes to the worth of the deceased lady. The floral tributes were many and all very handsome. Interment was made in the Oakland cemetery.

Church Services.

Rev. Henry E. Friend, the pastor of the Mountain Lake Park and Deer Park M. E. charges announces services on next Sunday as follows: Sunday school at Deer Park, 10 a. m.; preaching, 11 a. m.; Sunday school at Mountain Lake Park, 2.30 p. m.; preaching, 7 p. m.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

The worst blizzard of the winter passed over this section during the past week, beginning during the night of the 13th, and continuing for about thirty-six hours, and as a result various public roads were so completely blockaded with snow that travel was stopped, Friday being the first suspension on the mail route that has occured this winter, on account of impassable roads.

The hand of death has again been stretched forth in our midst, and the sudden taking of Mrs. Mary Snyder, early last Thursday morning, has again evoked the sympathy of our entire community. The deceased lady was born in Bavaria, Germany, and her maiden name was Mary Hetrick. She is survived by a husband (Mr. Andrew Snyder) and seven children, and twenty-one grand-children. The interment was made at this place on Saturday afternoon. Services were conducted by the pastor of the German Lutheran congregation at Accident.

Mr. Peter G. Stark was kicked by a colt last Wednesday evening, and as a result he has been confined to the house.

Mrs. Fannie Witzel, of Avilton, who has been visiting relatives and friends here for a few days, returned home last Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Asa Orndorf made a business trip to Lonaconing one day last week

Mr. Mahlon Brenneman accompanied by Miss Clara Beechy, were visitors at Chestnut Springs, Pa., a part of last week.

Mr. George Brenneman was visiting his father, Mr. Daniel Brenneman, over Sunday.

Mr. C. E. Ellithrope and daughter, Amanda, are in posession of very sore arms as a result of being vaccinated.

Resolutibns of Respect.

We, the committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect upon the death of the wife of Rev. J. S. Harvey a brother Eagle and former member of Olive Branch Castle No. 9, K. G. E. of Mountain Lake Park, submit the following:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty and Most Worshipful God in his love and wisdom to take unto himself the wife of our beloved and esteemed former pastor and brother Rev. J. S. Harvey, who, by her Christian living and kindly deeds had won our admiration and esteem; therefore be it

Resolved, That deeply conscious of our loss we submit ourselves to the will of our Heavenly Father, whose dealings, though sometimes strange, are ever for the good of them that love Him.

Resolved, That we extend to Bro. Harvey and the bereaved families our deepest sympathy in this their time of sorrow.

Resolved, That these resolutions be recorded in our minutes, a copy be sent to Bro. Harvey and that we request the county papers to publish them.

Preacher Ejects From Church Drunken Men.

Rev. J. B. Workman, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Davis, W. Va., a city of 5,000 people preached a sermon without words at a revival service a few nights ago. Two young men, intoxicated, entered the church just before the sermon and went to sleep. They snored and disturbed the large congregation. Without saying a word Rev. Mr. Workman, who is small of stature quietly walked down from the pulpit, seized one of the men, bodily dragged him to the door and down the steps and hustled him off to the Mayor. He then went back after the other and with the assistance of a gentleman seated nearby, proceeded with him to the lockup, but finding that the other one had been released, Rev. Mr. Workman gave the young man a scathing lecture and turned them loose. Rev. Mr. Workman declares that his church shall not be a sleeping place for drunken bums.

Will Go into the Real Estate Business.

Rev. L. A. Rudisill, whose resignation as manager of the Mountain Lake Park Association was mentioned in this paper last week, will soon embark in the real estate business with an office in Oakland and also at the Park.

It has been Mr. Rudisill's intention for a year or more to give his entire attention to the real estate business and now that the opportunity has presented itself he will avail himself of it at once. He has a good field for the work and all wish him unbounded success.

To Bridge The Gap.

While we have always been very retiring, we feel that the time has come for us to rush to the rescue of the Automobile of State, which is now ambling over a Desert of Differences with a Punctured Tire and Two valves blown out.

Therefore, if they can't agree on Rayner, Smith or Carter, we stand convicted of ambitions.

Our platform: We have never held a public job, and no man can point a finger of scorn at any of our official acts.

We favor anything that the caucus wants.—Baltimore News.

DROPPED FROM WINDOW OF CAB

Fireman Howard Martin's Daring Flight From Escaping Steam.

To save himself from being boiled to death by steam escaping from the boiler of his engine, Fireman Howard Martin, who resides in South Cumberland, who was running on the main line Baltimore and Ohio train, No. 12, crawled through his cab window and dropped to the ground on Saturday night. Later he was found lying on the tracks in a badly bruised condition and suffering with painful cuts on his head and face. He was picked up and taken to Cumberland where he was placed in the Western Maryland hospital.

Martin made his jump near Deer Park. While the train was passing through the latter place, a fixture on the boiler of the engine blew out on the fireman's side, allowing the steam to escape in a death dealing shower. Martin had no way to communicate with the engineer. He first held to window sill for several minutes, thinking that the escape of the steam would cease, but the steam followed him to his new position and he was forced to drop to save himself from being scalded to death.

The train went its way, the engineer being unaware of the absence of his fireman, until the steam all escaped from the boiler and the engine "went dead."

Confession After Acquittal

Joseph Lupis and Domonic Avarro, Italians, indicted for the murder of Joseph Cavallo at Piedmont in October, were tried separately at Keyser, W. Va., and both acquitted. Lupis was tried on Tuesday, and the State being unable to connect him with the crime agreed to have the evidence excluded and the jury rendered a verdict of "not guilty." In the trial of Avarro, Lupis went on the witness stand and testified that he had shot Cavallo himself, knowing that he had been acquitted and that his life could not again be put in jeopardy for the same offense.

Loss of Flesh

When you can't eat breakfast, take Scott's Emulsion. When you can't eat bread and butter, take Scott's Emulsion. When you have been living on a milk diet and want something a little more nourishing, take Scott's Emulsion.

To get fat you must eat fat. Scott's Emulsion is a great fattener, a great strength giver.

Those who have lost flesh want to increase all body tissues, not only fat. Scott's Emulsion increases them all, bone, flesh, blood and nerve.

For invalids, for convalescents, for consumptives, for weak children, for all who need flesh, Scott's Emulsion is a rich and comfortable food, and a natural tonic.

Messrs. T. O. Collier and Joel Diehl, two good citizens of the Cove country, were visitors to Oakland Tuesday. They said that they were taking their annual sleigh ride and embraced the opportunity when they did fearing that the good condition of the roads for such a purpose would not last many days longer.

Mrs. D. M. Mason left Oakland for Uniontown, Pa., this morning where she was called by a telegram announcing the serious illness of her niece, Miss Madge Chisholm, who has been visiting relatives and friends at the above city several weeks.

This snow and cold weather have been very hard on the birds and those who care for the birds are placing food for them. The little fellows gather about barns and straw stacks for feed and shelter. Any one who will kill the birds at this time will be doubly violators of the law and should be handled severely.

Send in your items by phone or otherwise. One of the friends of the paper said this morning that he didn't like to come up as he feared we were busy. We don't want people to feel that way and no matter how busy we are there is no reason why we can't get a little busier in order to get some more items.

Our good friend Charles E. Hoye, of San Mateo, Philippine Islands, has our thanks for a box of cigars which was received on Tuesday morning via U. S. mail. The package contained an assortment of the weed, all of excellent quality, fragrant and fit for a king. They were mailed from Mr. Hoye's town on December 7th but evidently were delayed in transit, otherwise they would have reached us in time for Christmas.

Services were resumed Sunday morning in the Oakland churches which were ordered closed by the health authorities when the outbreak of smallpox occured here a few weeks ago and hereafter the regular routine of preaching and other religious worship will be observed.

Mr. Clark DeBerry, of near Oakland, left here this morning for Southern Pines, N. C., where he went to visit his daughters who are at the latter place with the hope of benefitting their health. One daughter, Miss Emma, is quite sick and her friends entertain slight hopes for her recovery.

Miss Rebecca Thayer, who has been at her home since the Christmas holidays, left this morning for Westminister where she will reenter Western Maryland College for the spring term. She was accompanied as far as Baltimore by her father, Mr. Fred A. Thayer, who will return home tomorrow.

After the loafer who spits filthy tobacco juice on the streets and uses vile language so that it can be heard by people passing, the meanest of the tribe is the man who places himself in front of a big plate-glass window where goods is displayed, thus robbing the merchant of the advertisement it contains and annoying shoppers who would like to glance in.

The advertising columns of the newspapers of the country furnish a fairly reliable index to the condition of the people, says the Chattanooga Times. There are many substantial people who have been disposed to wear long faces because of the shrinkage of securities in the money centers under the apprehension that the financial health of the country has been thereby seriously impaired. But at the present time this does not seem to have the result. There have been probably a larger number of "fleeced lambs" in and about the New York stock market than ever before during the past few months, but the great body of the people has not suffered.

At the Indiana teachers' institute a week ago last Thursday, a purse of $1,000 was presented to Henry Houck, Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction, by the school teachers of Pennsylvania. The presentation was the result of a movement set on foot among the teachers of the state some time ago by Prof G. M. Brumbaugh, of the University of Pennsylvania, for the purpose of sending Mr. Houck as the representative of the educational interests of the state to the International Sundayschool Association, which meets in Jerusalem next summer.—Canton (Pa.) Repository.

Prof. Houck is remembered by many of the people of Oakland and the school teachers of the county where he attended a number of county teachers' institutes when school matters were managed by Senator Palmer as examiner.

The Smallpox Condition.

Dr. Henry W. McComas, who has had charge of the smallpox cases in and about Oakland, reports no new cases and desires us to state that if the quarantine regulations established by the health authorities are rigidly observed by those affected the chances of any new cases developing are very remote. He also says that all the patients have progressed so far toward recovery that no further visits from the physician will be required except for fumigation purposes.

This will be good news to all, we have no doubt, and that the doctor's predictions will be verified is the earnest hope of every one in the community.

Horse Found Dead In the Ice.

A very peculiar fate overtook the driving mare belonging to Hon. R. T. Browning, at Lake Brown, on Friday night last. Mr. Browning had turned the animal out of the stable into an enclosure when it jumped over the fence and went out on the ice covering Deep Creek. The ice not being sufficiently strong to bear the weight of the horse it broke through and was unable to extricate itself. A search was made for the horse by Mr. Browning but it was not until the following day that he found the animal stiffly frozen in the ice where it had perished during the night from the cold. The horse was a valuable one and highly prized by Mr. Browning and his family.

DIED NEAR HER HOUSE.

Emily Ann Galloway Found Dead In Her Yard a Few Days Ago.

Emily Ann Galloway, a respectable colored woman who resided on her farm over in District No. 13, near the home of Orphans' Court Judge Daniel Wilson, was found lying dead in the yard surrounding her house one day last week, her death evidently having been produced by heart failure or exposure to the extremely cold weather then prevailing.

Mrs. Galloway was a widow, residing alone, and the presumption of those who discovered her remains is that she was returning to her house from the barn where she had been to feed her cows when death overtook her. She was buried Wednesday.

Feeding The Game Birds.

From the viewpoint of the humanity, as well as the sportsman, a notice just issued by State Game Warden John W. Avirett is to be highly commended. It is to the effect that, game birds being threatened with starvation by reason of the prevailing snow, the deputies in various counties are authorized to furnish screenings, broken wheat and other foods to all responsible persons applying for the same, to the end that the birds may be preserved from the ravages of hunger. Warden Avirrett inaugurated this system of what might be termed "bird soup houses" two years ago, and the result has been the preservation and multiplication of many game birds. That it is a wise provision is evidenced by the simple relation of the facts.

Persons who desire to aid in feeding hungry game birds may secure the necessary food from the nearest deputy warden, or by writing to Warden Avirett at Cumberland.

WHEN THE WINDS SAY "BOO."

It don't seem like nothin's doin'
When the leaves are dead an' brown,
An' the wind is in the tree-tops
Just a-shakin' of 'em down.
An' there ain't no place to go to,
An' there ain't a thing to do,
'Cept ter set o' nights an' listen
When the wind says "Boo!" to you.

'Cept to set o' nights an' listen
Whilst the winds talk high or low,
'Cept to think o' summer lan'scapes
An' o' fields o' long ago,
'Cept to 'member slopin' hillsides
An' ol' twisty paths you knew;
Naught to do but set a-dreamin'
When the wind says "Boo!" to you.

Just to set an' dream while waitin'
Through the winter wind and wrack,
For the summer's smiles an' sunshine
When the violets come back,
An' the marguerites are noddin'
Dewy wet an' sweet to you;
Naught to do but just remember
And the winds say "Boo!" to you.

Or to just let up on dreamin'
Of the things yeh knowed o' yore,
An' git down an' go to tumblin'
With the baby on the floor,
Till the wee one's happy laughter
Lets no other sounds come through;
Till you're comfy and ain't carin'
When the winds say "Boo!" to you.

NINITA---
A TRAGEDY OF ARIZONA

By MRS. M. L. RAYNE.

WHEN Philip Delmar exchanged the hard, uncongenial climate of his native New England states for the semi-tropical latitudes of Arizona he hoped only for a temporary respite from the sentence of death which his doctors had imposed upon him. He settled up his few affairs and bade good-by to his friends and relatives, thankful that he had never married, and would leave none bearing his name to mourn for him.

That was 16 years ago. Here he was alive and well, the fortunate owner of a rich mine, living in a handsome home, and married—aye, there is the rub—married to a little half-Spanish, half-Mexican concert singer, with whom he was madly in love, people said. Otherwise why did he marry her, a girl who could have been had for the asking, so the American contingent declared. And he had taken her away from Apache Jim, the handsome half-breed who had been educated by the government and had more rich mining claims than he could count on the beringed fingers of his two hands. When he took a fancy to Ninita—Spanish for "baby girl"—he built her a concert hall in the worst town in the region of Prescott, and made money from her musical notes. He dressed her like a high-born Mexican lady, beat her, and burned her finery in his tantrums, and swore that some day he would kill her.

This girl was now the wife of Philip Delmar. Sweet-tempered and obedient, she sat at home and waited for her husband. She had been married a year and yawned wearily most of the time when she was not praying her thanks to the virgin for giving her such a good home and husband.

Ninita would have been glad to talk with old Terese, their one servant, but her position as mistress debarred her from that privilege, and she found refuge in her musical occupations, her piano and guitar, and the practice of her rare contralto voice.

"I sing for my Felipe," she would say sweetly, the little brown thing, dressed by Philip in American clothes, such as he remembered that his mother and sister wore, and looking so incongruous amidst her surroundings.

"Yes, my Nina"—to him she was always Nina—"sing to your Philip and charm away his mood, as David soothed Saul."

"So? He was Americano. You lofe him too?"

Then this grave, elderly man would laugh at her, he who had snatched her as a brand from the burning—for her soul's salvation was it, or for her native charm and beauty?

She yawned again and looked at the watch at her belt. To old Terese, loitering near, he said:

"Tree o'clock and he come not—my Felipe. Oh, if he hurt—die—my hyart go broke—I lofe him so."

With that she gave a great start. Coming out between the walls of the Williams canyon was a man on horseback, and it was not her husband, Philip Delmar. He was a far handsomer man, and he sat his fiery Mexican mare with a grace that tallied well with his picturesque outfit. There was a riot of color in his ensemble. Ninita's eyes flashed with the old half-wicked light that had been quenched for a year. This was a cavalier, grand, superb, and once he had beaten her, but that was nothing; she had not hated him. Yes, it was Apache Jim. He had been incarcerated in a jail in Albuquerque for a year. Now he was free and looking for Nina, and joy at seeing him made her forget her husband.

"So you run off with the senor Americano?" he said after a scant salutation. "You come back now with me—yes?"

"No, no. He marry me; he give me dose." She held up a slender brown hand and showed him the plain band of gold, her wedding ring, guarded by a superb diamond. "Me wife now."

"So! But you come to me—my Ninita—that make no difference—you hear?"

He grasped her shoulder rudely and turned her about to face him. His teeth clicked savagely, and the force of that cruel hand was crushing her arm. But the violence was dearer to her than a caress—the Americano lover was too tame. She often longed for a blow.

"Me go with you a leetle of the way," she said, temporizing. How splendid to her eye the rude bearing, the barbaric opulence of his dress, while she was not any more like her people, not even a reboso or the common tapia to remind her that she was the descendant of a don.

"Me ride to the chapparal with you, Jim; you wait."

She sent Teresa for her horse while she ran upstairs and slipped into the braided cloth habit that she wore when riding. Her husband permitted a concession here. Every button was a nugget of solid gold, with the initial letter of her name engraved on it. When she rejoined Apache Jim she called his attention to the buttons. There are women who play with fire. Nina was one of them.

Her horse was a fiery mustang that never felt whip or spur. Its nature was to run like the wild things of the plain, and Nina was allowed to ride it because it could carry her swiftly out of danger. Now she hurried and sprang to the saddle before her old lover could reach her. She did not want to have the "so good Senor Americano" find them together. She was beginning, too, to feel afraid, not of Apache Jim, but of herself.

Teresa, watching them, saw the two talking earnestly together as they rode rapidly down the darkening sides of the great valley. Once her young mistress turned back, but the man caught the bridle of her mustang and the two disappeared, swallowed up in the darkness.

Philip Delmar made no search for his lost wife, feeling absolutely certain that she had gone of her own free will. But he marked the time when Apache Jim would throw her aside, and there would be none to care for her. Never could he see her again, but through others he would save her from the final wreckage which was sure to come. And one day he heard a strange story. Apache Bill was in Yuma—had been there for a long time, but Ninita was not with him—had never been with him. Then Philip Delmar went to meet his enemy and have a reckoning.

They faced each other at a table in the public plaza, and neither flinched. Apache Jim was wearing in his short front the nugget buttons that belonged to Nina. Philips sprang upon him like a tiger and caught him by the throat.

"Where is she? Where did you get those buttons?" he asked, deliberately.

"She—Ninita—give them—me," he gasped forth.

"Wretch! You lie!" Philip loosened one hand from the half-breed's throat that he might strike him in the face again. "Where is she? Speak before I kill you, hound!"

There was the glitter of a deadly knife, which Philip flung from his enemy's hand as if it had been a child's toy. Men gathered about the two, but made no interference; they knew better than to interfere in such quarrels in that country. A revolver shot struck Philip in the arm. He drew his own and a fusillade left them alone. Apache Jim sank to the floor.

"I'm done for, curse you," he gasped, "but I have the sweet revenge. You feel mooch bad—when Nina go with me—she not with me—nevair. She lofe the Senor Americano all the time—d—d him."

Philip bent over the carrion, fearing he would lose a word.

"Where is she? What have you done with her?"

"She go not with me—Ninita—no. She say: 'Keel me before I leave Felipe'—so I keel her so you have no wife—my Ninita—she bury—there—by the—old—Pima claim—she—"

"Thank God!" cried Philip, spurning with his foot the now lifeless form, "Nina was true, she loved me—it makes it easier to bear that she is dead, and not false." He knew that the desperado spoke the truth, and his next move was to prove it.

Yes, for once Apache Jim had told the truth. Those who live in the country about Williams canyon are familiar with the entombment of Nina in the magnificent granite mausoleum, near the spot where the poor girl's remains were found, where she had perished for her fidelity to her Senor Americano.—Chicago Record-Herald.

ENAMEL FOR STUDS AND LINKS.

London Fads for Evening Dress Displace Pearl and Plain Gold.

It is no longer correct to say that no gentleman would ever think of wearing anything but mother of pearl or plain gold stud links in an evening shirt. Enamels are being very much used for these adjuncts of evening dress, and when lightly treated are certainly beautiful for waistcoat buttons; links and studs of pale rose enamel on gold, with a raised design in the center of brilliants, are now made.

Another design is a set of studs made of white enamel in hexagon form, outlined with diamonds, and the effect on the shirt front is extremely good, giving the appearance of diamonds only and causing people to wonder how they are fitted to the shirt. Single studs are not nearly so much worn as formerly, and perhaps two studs are more fashionable than three, though it is purely a matter of taste.

The very latest design for studs and links is bright crimson enamel with Louis XVI. latticework of diamonds in platinum over enamel. White waistcoat buttons are nearly always fancied nowadays. Though some men still prefer plain mother-of-pearl, lately a tendency has come in to have these pearl buttons outlined with platinum or plain gold and studded with either a diamond or a colored jewel. They occasionally are made of onyx with a diamond in the center, and these look well even with a black dress waistcoat. But the smartest men of the day not infrequently are seen with waistcoat buttons matching their studs and links.

Books are lifelong friends whom we come to love and know as we do our children.—S. L. Boardman.

HARRY C. PULLIAM.

Mr. Pulliam, president of the National Baseball league, was born in Scottsville, Ky., in 1869. He got his first insight into ball politics while reading law in the office of Zach Phelps, of Louisville, who was president of the American association in 1871. As secretary of the Louisville club Mr. Pulliam became well known, and later as a clever writer on sports for the Louisville Commercial. From Kentucky Pulliam went to Pittsburgh, and finally landed in Nick Young's old position at a time when the old National league was about ready to take the count. Mr. Pulliam is known as the "boy president," but has the making of one of the best.

WING SHOTS AT SEA.

Novel Sport of Shooting Flying Fish—Need for a Retriever That Can Swim.

One morning the yacht Linda steamed out of the Bay of Avalon with two or three friends and myself sitting on the upper deck, about eight feet from the water, each armed with a shotgun, says a writer in Outing. The Linda was headed up the coast and was presently running at fair speed, and in a short time into the flying fishes, which rose at or near the bow and went skimming away in graceful lines. The first flyer went to the left, and was cleverly dropped by one of my companions, who killed another with his left barrel. The third fish fell to me. It rose 20 feet ahead with a vigorous trembling of the body, produced by the screw-like motion, and dashed away three feet above the surface. As it swerved to the right I fired, dropping it; as it fell the splash startled another fish from the water, which came straight toward the boat, rising slightly on the stiff wind. I did not fire, as the fish was too near, and it passed over the boat into the preserves of my companion, who dropped it when 50 feet away.

There was something essentially novel in this sport. The fish appeared as though by magic, shooting out of the water with little or no splash, often apparently sailing along a foot above the surface, which it so resembled that it was as difficult to drop them as it would be the woodcock darting over cover that it perfectly resembled. There was one essential lacking in this novel sport—a retriever. Many of the fish sank before the small boat could be cast off to secure them.

Costly "Spite" Tower.

Every one is familiar with various spite fences or houses, but it is safe to say that quite the most costly and elaborate enterprise of this kind in the world is the famous Wainhouse Tower, in Yorkshire, England. Its builder, John Edward Wainhouse, was the owner of dye works in that valley, says the New York Herald. Next to his estate lay that of an English lord. The two quarreled, and Wainhouse built the tower so that he could always overlook his neighbor's grounds, although they lay very much higher than his own. The tower is nearly 300 feet high and cost $50,000 to build.

Cruel Punishment.

A man who was caught in the act of committing burglary at Paterson, N. J., was ducked several times in clean water and then told to leave town. It is reported that the friction he created in the air as he left almost set his clothes on fire.

SPIRITS OF THE DROWNED.

How the Chinese Appease the Manes of the Departed—Custom of Taoist Religion.

Shanghai residents seeking cool breezes on the river recently could not fail to notice the number of Chinese boats flying gayly colored lanterns and scattering burning paper on the water. Not only paper, but wonderfully constructed oiled paper lamps of various colors, which were dropped from the boats to float on the water, sometimes trails of 12 or 13 red, blue and green lamps bobbing up and down on the muddy waters of the Wrangpoo, says the Shanghai Mercury.

Inquiry of even the meanest natives elicited the reply that joss pidgin was being done to keep the drowned men quiet. This is in reality a very ancient custom developed under the Taoist religion, which teaches that the spirits of the drowned flit miserably over and under the water until such time as cash is paid to the gods to release them from their purgatory. Failing this release, the drowned spirit lays in wait to catch boatmen sitting by the water's edge at dark and pull them into the water to take their places, when they themselves escape.

Hence, clinging to the old superstition, everywhere for the past 15 days of the seventh moon the Chinese assemble in bands and go down the rivers in their boats, beating gongs and burning paper money. Products of modern life are curiously blended with the old ideas, as we see everywhere in China, and in this festival steam launches are often to be seen towing a string of boats with colored lanterns waving to and fro. One procession of boats carrying over 100 lanterns and scattering others in their wake was preceded by the music of a cornet, a strange anomaly indeed.

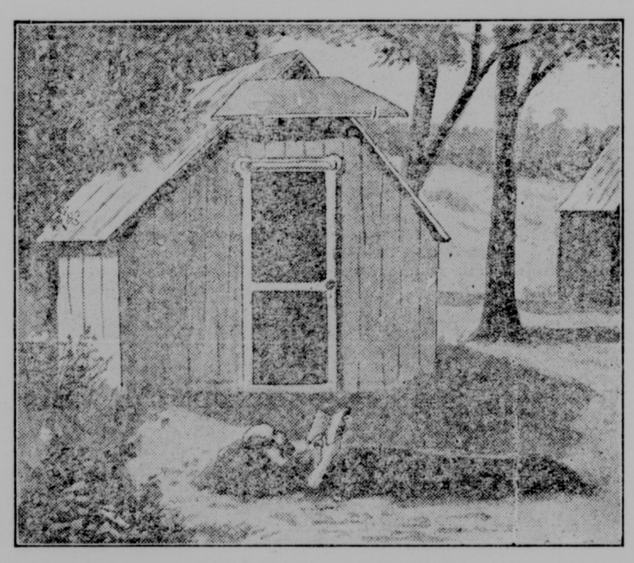
Railway Construction.

In 1857 an American named Collins first proposed a railway from the Amur to the village of Tchita. Later, several plans were formulated, but it was not until March 17, 1891, that the Trans-Siberian railroad was definitely determined on and projected by an imperial order. On May 19, 1891, the first stone was laid. The line covers 3,562 miles in Russian territory and 1,604 miles in Chinese territory. In ten and one-half years 5,166 miles of rails were laid. In the Canadian Pacific, constructed under similar conditions, it took ten years to lay 2,921 miles of rails.

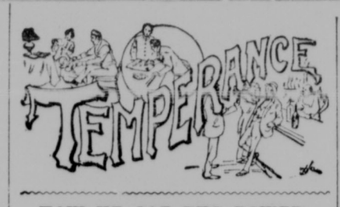
California Dried Fruit.

California dried fruit is now to be found in every grocery in Germany.

NOVEL HEALTH CURE.



There is a certain colony in Milton, N. J., to which hard-worked city men repair to recuperate on a diet of fruit and milk. The idea is that in reverting as closely as possible to nature lies the secret of true health, and in this strange little colony the only cooked food allowed consists of bread. The first meal of the day is at 12, the last, and only other one, at six, and the rest of the 24 hours is spent in sleeping, bathing, walking and playing outdoor games and lying for hours in shallow trenches covered with a thin layer of earth. This practice is kept up, no matter how inclement the weather may be.



HOW HE GOT THE POWER.

The Story of W. F.'s Victory Over Drink—A Message to Victims of Alcohol.

It was early on Sunday morning, when I was roused up by a man wanting an interview, being in distress of soul. Hastily dressing, I went out to him, and we stood talking in the delicious early morning air of a typical colonial spring day.

"My name is W. F., and I have had a dreadful night. I made up my mind I would come and see you the first thing this morning. I want to be saved properly. I am just going down fast under the drink. I came out from the old country some years ago, having had a good education, but I began then to give way, and here I am no better."

"What made you come to me?"

"I heard you preaching in the open air last night and I stopped to listen, and something you said made me feel there might be hope for me. I want to know how to get deliverance from this habit of sin that so completely masters me."

Then there followed a long conversation about his past history, where he lived, what he was doing for a living, and a variety of details, leading up to the previous night, when he had been drinking, the effects of which were only too visible. In fact, he was not then, strictly speaking, sober, but his mind was clear enough to understand the truth. He was thoroughly awakened and sincerely anxious. What he felt he needed, and what I saw he needed was a Gospel not of pardon so much as of power over sin, and this is what many to-day are wanting. Men believe that somehow God is good and kind, and is willing to forgive their sins, but it is to be delivered from the awful control of it that they are longing for.

"Behold, I give unto you power over all the power of the enemy."

This is the sort of goodness we want to know about, and that W. F. was to hear of. So our talk came round somehow to the story of how the Lord Jesus healed the paralyzed man that was carried on his mattress by four of his friends, and because there was no room for him in the crowd that had blocked the passages as well as the meeting place, had taken him up by an outside staircase, had most unceremoniously torn up the roof and let him down upon the heads of the people, who were obliged to make room for him, whether they would or no!

To this man the Lord said: "Son, thy sins are forgiven thee."

The Lord had, in a moment, read through the past story, had seen all the history of sin and suffering, and had attacked the root of the trouble first, which was the sin in the heart. It is no use lopping off some of the branches and leaving the roots and stump to sprout out again. W. F. and I talked out this first fact very fully, until he saw that his future must very largely depend on a fresh start being given him, with a new power, from an entirely new source—alone from God.

Then he began to ask for, and receive, the pardon of all his past life up to that Sunday morning hour, trusting to a person to see to and carry through what He had offered to do, and for which He was thoroughly competent and willing.

"But how shall I know that I am truly and really forgiven? What will be the result?"

"The very thing you most long for—namely, power over the drink craze. Let us continue the story.

"Jesus said: 'But that ye may know that the Son of Man hath power on earth to forgive sins, I say unto the sick of the palsy, Arise, take up thy bed and walk!'

"To carry what had carried him, to master what had mastered him, was to be the proof of the genuineness of His pardoning, and the man accepting the forgiveness of sins. Immediately the man took up his mattress, and throwing it over his shoulder, walked straight home. This was power accompanying pardon.

"The question is, 'Is the Lord Jesus as competent, as able, as willing, to save a man like you from the drink habit as to save that man from the paralysis?' If so, will you let Him? Do you agree that He shall, and do you expect Him to take you in hand right away, as you stand here this Sunday morning?"

After some little time of thinking it all seemed clear to him, and there and then he told the Lord he trusted Him to do all this, he expected it, he accepted it. It just had to be, and he gave himself up fully and unreservedly for the extinction of the drink power, for the incoming of the new power that should expel and repel the old temptation.

"And," said I, "you'll know, and we shall know, that you have been fully forgiven, by seeing you saved completely from the love and power of the old enemy.

"But, W. F., mark my words. You will have a bright, happy Sunday, full of a new-found peace and joy. You will be thrown among fresh friends, who will give you a warm welcome, a hearty hand-shake, and treat you right off as one of themselves, and you will feel you are a new man.

"But by six o'clock to-morrow evening the effects of the drink will be out of you, and you will go down, down. A fit of the 'blues' will be on you, and then will come the strong temptation to go back to the old thing. You will begin to think, 'What a fool I made of myself yesterday, and what a fool they've made of me! It's all rot, there's nothing in it; I am no different, I am no better, nothing has really happened. I am as far off as ever.'

"Now will come the first real bit of fight. You have got to keep telling the Lord this: 'Lord, I'm in the "blues," and I can't help it; but I'm not going to mind. Thou art all right, and I am Thine, and it's Thy business to drive the "blues" away, for I can't and shan't try to. I gave myself to Thee yesterday with my full will and heart, and I haven't changed, so please look to the "blues" and look to me, for I am trusting Thee all the time.'

"You haven't got to help the Lord do His own work, but you have just not to hinder Him by not believing He will. Be sure you come and see me at 7:30 to-morrow evening, it will be our prayer meeting night."

And so it happened, after a delightful Sunday, Monday evening arrived, and about six o'clock came the woeful "blues." At 7:30 he made his way down to the week night prayer meeting. There, surrounded by judging friends, some of whom had gone through the same experience before, he simply trusted Him who had pardoned, to empower, and He did.

W. F. was splendidly saved. By nine o'clock that evening he was right through on the other side of the "blues," and from that night his voice was continually heard praising and blessing God for His mighty mercy.—George Soltau, in Ram's Horn.

DRINKERS CAUSE ACCIDENTS.

Why It Is Not Safe for Even Moderate Drinkers to Operate Motor Cars.

A friend has sent us a table of a hundred accidents, and the causes, occurring among inebriates or persons intoxicated. The causes were breaking of carriages, runaway horses, getting in front of railway trains, falling out of windows, and so on. From this table it appears that over half of the accidents are due to railroads and motor wagons. Within the last year a large percentage of accidents occurred in the use of automobile wagons, and he draws the inference that these vehicles are the most perilous for any persons who use spirits. An inebriate engineer in the cab of an engine has only to open or close the throttle valve, and the rails will hold the wheels on the track, and the driver has little danger unless some obstruction occurs. In driving a horse, the inebriate has the intelligence of an animal to protect him from some of the dangers, but in guiding a motor wagon there is absolutely nothing to protect him except his senses and reason. When these are defective and faulty, disaster is invited at every turn of the road. Nothing will more clearly bring out the defects of reason and sense than driving a motor wagon. In a recent race the drivers were examined carefully before the race began, and cautioned under no circumstances to use spirits in any form. A moderate drinker, who probably was convinced that alcohol had a food and stimulant value, invited two friends to take a ride with him for the purpose of showing the great value of his machine. They stopped at a roadhouse, drank freely of spirits, and were never seen after. The motor wagon was found at the bottom of a river some miles away, but the occupants were carried out to sea on the tide. Several very sad accidents on motor wagons have been traced to the alcoholized state of the driver.—Journal of Inebriety.

TEMPERANCE POINTS.

When London has decided whether or not it eats too much, says the Chicago Tribune, it will find it equally profitable to ask itself if it doesn't drink a little too much.

A new $100,000 hotel with 240 rooms especially for the moral, religious traveling public is one of the latest projects in Indianapolis. It will be without bar or billiard room and card playing will not be allowed.

The Total Abstinence society of Copenhagen, Denmark, reports a membership of over 100,000, among whom are 37 ministers and 403 teachers. Last year the society arranged for 3,981 temperance lectures at a cost of about $17,000.

Gen. Coronnat, commander in chief of the French troops in Indo-China, is making especial effort to suppress drunkenness among the soldiers. He expresses his regret that warnings concerning the serious effects of drinking habits upon the health are not heeded.

Out of 670 members of parliament 87 are reported to be total abstainers. England and Wales are credited with 50 abstainers out of 495 representatives, and Scotland with seven out of 72 members, while Ireland with 10[illegible] representatives has as many as 30 abstainers.

PARASOL FOR DEFENSE.

London Women of the Upper Tendom Are Learning Protection Against Ruffians.

For some reason there has been a great increase of late in what London folk call "hooliganism." The riotous street demonstrations on "Mafeking night," and in celebration of the close of the Boer war, taught the stream of toughs who poured out from Whitechapel into the West end that the renowned London "bobby" could not be everywhere at once, and that with a ratio of 20 hooligans to one bobby quite a bit of lawbreaking might be done in more safety than had been supposed.

Since then a number of solitary wayfarers have been attacked and robbed, and two or three have been murdered—all of which was most disconcerting to the independent English woman, who has taken to going on bicycle rides into the country by herself, and to walking about the city streets in the daytime without the chaperone who was considered so necessary a few years ago. Lady Jeune had her purse wrenched from her recently by a hooligan in the fashionable Kensington district of London, and Lady Mary Sackville was robbed of her bag and chatelaine not long ago by a rough who struck her and decamped. Many other attacks of the sort have been made on less famous folk.

In consequence of this state of affairs it occurred to a young French woman, the wife of the famous French swordsman, Pierre Vigny, to undertake the instruction of Englishwomen in the art of self-defense with a parasol or walking-stick, according to a system devised by her gallant husband who has devoted years to its perfection. It may best be described as a mixture of the various different methods of self-defense, practiced in England, France, Germany and Japan. Many of the passes, thrusts and wards used in fencing are comprised in it. Some of the guards used by boxers and movements of the leg and foot practiced by exponents of French boxing are introduced, as well as certain methods peculiar to German swordsmen and professors of the rapier. Numerous tricks are borrowed from the marvelous Japanese system known as "Ju, Jit Su," or "weakness against strength," against which Fitzsimmons would be as helpless as a babe, and any delicate lady who becomes proficient in the art can rest assured that she is a match for at least one or two roughs so long as she retains her presence of mind and her umbrella!

The accompanying photograph, made for the Kansas City Star, and for which Mme. Vigny consented to pose, gives a better idea of the system than any description could.

Miss Baden-Powell, the sister of the famous general, impressed by her brother's adage that "a smile and a stout stick will carry one through any difficulty," has become proficient in self-defense with a parasol and walking-cane.

The method of self-defense with an umbrella or walking-stick does not take long to acquire. After three months' tuition an average young girl would be equal to almost any emergency. No matter how well a rough might box, he would have no chance to get in a blow, and he would be powerless to protect himself from terrible punishment in the shape of thrusts or prods, and while staggering from the effects of these he would receive blows on the head and face that would speedily dispose of him. Furthermore, the pupils are taught how to trip an adversary up and throw him with the handle of the umbrella, and how to throw him, should he close, after the manner of the Japanese. A combined knowledge of the laws of dynamics and anatomy can always defeat mere strength, and in a street fight where the Queensberry rules of the ring are not observed the skilled pugilist would be at the mercy of the girl who understands these arts and possesses the nerve to put them to practical account.

Proper Use of the Corset.

The use of the corset is to transmit the pressure of the skirt bands to the hips and the ribs, and so to protect from their pressure the organs in the region of the waist. The conclusion is that so long as skirt bands are fastened round the waist corsets should be worn. They should be stiffer than usually made if they are effectively to protect the soft middle portion of the body from the pressure of the waistband. The front should be quite straight, and the waist measurement should be at least as large as the wearer's waist, measured over a single soft garment.—Chicago Post.

DAINTY NEEDLE WORK.

"French China" Is the Euphonious Name Given to the Latest Fancy in Embroidery.

New suggestions for embroidery or adoptions of old ideas that pass muster as novelties are always welcomed by the woman skilled with her needle, particularly if she be of an artistic bent of mind, and French china work a new and charming manifestation of needle skill is likely, therefore, to find many admirers. It is comparatively easy of execution, and is as dainty as a bit of Sevres porcelain, this dominant characteristic of delicacy accounting for the name that has been bestowed upon this latest development in needle painting. The same patterns are used and there is the same idea of raised effect as in eighteenth century ribbon work, but the end is achieved through the medium of embroidery silk and stitchery, pure and simple. Half a dozen threads of filo are employed for the satin stitch which is ingeniously adapted to the rendering of leaves and flowers, while the stalks and finer details are worked out in one or two strands. One advantage of this work is that no frame is required while the patterns may be carried out in washing silk upon linen intended for table covers, dresser scarfs and any of the many accessories of this sort for table and boudoir.

An exceedingly effective example of this work is the table cover of which a corner is here illustrated. Its graceful ribbon-tied festoons of diminutive blossoms, in tones of rose, soft, faint blues and yellows with here and there a touch of purple or orange, are charmingly blended with the greens of the foliage. By a clever arrangement of stitches, the characteristics of the flower forms are indicated, especially in the roses, in which, touched in with three shades of rose color, the satin stitches are worked horizontally and overlapping one another here and there indicate the little crumplings of the folded petals. A couple of stitches are all that is necessary to indicate each of the delicate green leaves in the sprays of foliage. It is this that constitutes one of the charms of the work that, while by no means difficult to carry out, it affords so much opportunity for lightness and variety of touch. Edged with French lace, such a cover is especially adapted for the five o'clock tea table with its equipment of glistening silver and dainty china. Another design that may be successfully carried out on fine white linen shows pink roses incased within an empire frame of laurel leaves and small purple berries.—Brooklyn Eagle.

WINDOWS OF THE SOUL.

Eyes Have Always Been Recognized as the Mirrors of the Character Beneath.

The most important of all physical faculties is sight. The eyes, the window of the soul, are the chief avenue of communication between the inner nature and the external world. Therefore, they should be carefully guarded. However trying other physical disadvantages must be, such as premature wrinkles, baldness or loss of teeth, yet, compared with the great calamity of failing eyesight, they are featherweights in the balance. Science can help us successfully hide the loss of our hair and teeth, and, if powerless to hide the wrinkles, at any rate aids us to bear them with philosophy. But the veriest suspicio nof failing eyesight is quite sufficient to bring terror to the bravest soul. Our vision is as precious to us as life itself. Our intellectual enjoyments, our outlook on God's beautiful world—nay, in most cases, our very bread and butter—depend on the clearness of our eyesight. There is no possession more coveted by women than a pair of beautiful eyes. Yet the owner of the ugliest or most repelling eyes imaginable is more to be envied if she can lay claim to better vision. The eyes which possess clear sight, whatever their color may be, are verily the windows of the soul. What instinctive confidence we place in a frank, sincere gaze! We feel that those eyes which spell goodness, and even holiness of life in every glance, are the faithful mirrors of the character beneath. In the same way all the great generals or leaders of men have possessed in a preeminent degree the calm magnetism of eye, sure symbol of the iron will of their owner. Great orators have swayed vast audiences quite as much by the fairy magnetism of the eye as by the golden harmony of language.—N. Y. Weekly.

How to Clean Lace Curtains.

A professional cleaner says that the best method of cleansing lace curtains at home is to make a suds of warm water, white castile soap and a little borax. If the curtains are very dirty, scrub them gently with a soft scrubbing brush. Lace curtains should never be rubbed between the hands. This stretches the mesh and is very likely to tear holes in it. When quite clean, rinse in clear water to which a little borax has been added, squeeze between the hands, but do not wring, and dry in a sheet.

Filling for Sofa Pillows.

Cattails dried and pulled apart into down are said to make a capital filling for sofa pillows. This cattail down does not absorb dampness, neither does it ever grow mouldy.

USE ALUMINUM COINS.

How Business Men of Williams, Ia., Keep Trade at Home—New Medium of Exchange Popular Among Farmers Because of Its Lightness.

For several months past the coin of the Williams Exchange, Williams, Iowa, used by the farmers of that section of Hamilton county, has been passing current, and it is now in general use almost to the exclusion of dollars, half dollars, quarters, dimes and nickels. The new currency is made of aluminum and the coins are about the same size as those used by Uncle Sam, but not nearly so heavy. Farmers come to Williams often with an overcoat pocket filled with dollars, and the whole outlay of riches will not weigh as much as twenty silver dollars.

The aluminum coin used by the farmers in and near Williams is now being talked about, and inquiries are coming from various sources as to the system which is in vogue. The exchange has without doubt received more free advertising the past few weeks than any other financial institution in the world. The advertising is world-wide, and letters are being received almost every day at the bank of Williams making inquiry about the aluminum coins, and from collectors of coin all over the world, offering large premiums for specimens.

In fact, the Williams Exchange is not a very pretentious affair. It is intended only for the use and accommodation of the business houses of the town of Williams, in business deals with their customers.

The purpose of the exchange is to buy butter, eggs and poultry, and when the produce is sold to the exchange the farmers receive a ticket for the amount, which may be exchanged for merchandise at any of the Williams stores. Farmers may receive any or all of their payment in trade checks or coins, good in trade only at any store in Williams

Inasmuch as the trade checks pass for money in any store in Williams, the checks are looked upon by the farmers the same as money and are exchanged back and forth the same as money. Small debts are often paid in trade checks at no discount.

The Williams bank is the only institution in town where the fiat money is recognized. Bankers will not accept the coin.

The farmers like the Williams elastic currency plan because the Williams exchange pays a little higher price than is paid for produce in surrounding towns. Of course, this bigger price is paid in aluminum coin, of which merchants in other towns make all sorts of sport, but so long as the Williams store keepers sell as cheap as the store keepers in other towns, the farmers feel that they are ahead.

It has been a losing game for the Williams Exchange so far. The exchange has lost money every day that it has been in business. But the merchants who make up the company claim to have increased business and to make up on their business what they lose as members of the exchange. In the meantime the farmers, their wives and daughters, the boys and hired men, and even the older men, rattle their aluminum coin and are happy.

GEOGRAPHICAL TAFFY.

Rare Distinction of the Town Was Not in Line with the Expectations of the People.

"What town is this?" asked the eminent statesman, who, relates the Chicago Tribune, was making a political tour of the provinces.

"Ionia," they told him.

The eminent statesman stepped out to the rear platform of the gorgeous private car in which he was traveling.

"My countrymen," he said, impressively, to the cheering throng at the station, "your beautiful and thriving young city has a rare distinction. Independently of its commerce and manufactures, independently of its charming location, independently, I may add, of the stalwart men and fair women who inhabit it, so many of whom I see before me—not forgetting these bright and winsome young children who are also here, the hope and mainstay of the republic—independently, I say, of all these, your lovely city—"

Here he became truly eloquent. His eyes flashed, his voice rang out in clarion tones, and he shook his clenched fist at the zenith.

"—has the rare distinction of bearing a name that has only five letters, and yet has four syllables!"

The applause, as the train moved away, was simply deafening.

PE-RU-NA PROTECTS THE LITTLE ONES

Against Winter Catarrh In Its Many Phases.

Neglected Colds in Children Often Bring Disastrous Results.

Peruna should be kept in the house all the time.

Peruna should be kept in every house where there are children.

Don't wait until the child is sick then send to a drug store. Have Peruna on hand—accept no substitute.

Pe-ru-na Protects the Entire Household Against Catarrhal Diseases.

As soon as the value of Peruna is fully appreciated by every household, both as a preventive and cure of catarrhal affections, tens of thousands of lives will be saved, and hundreds of thousands of chronic, lingering cases of disease prevented. Peruna is a household safeguard.

ALICE SCHAFER.

ANNA R. BROWN

Mrs. J. M. Brown, Dunnegan Springs, Mo., writes: "My little daughter three years old was troubled with a very bad cough which remained after an attack of catarrhal fever. She has taken one bottle of Peruna through which she has obtained a complete cure. She is now as well and happy as a little girl can be. When our friends say how well she looks I tell them Peruna did it."

In a later letter she says: "Our little daughter continues to have good health."

Mrs. Schafer, 436 Bope Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"In the early part of last year I wrote to you for advice for my daughter Alice, four years of age. She has been a puny, sickly, ailing child since her birth. She had convulsions and catarrhal fevers. I was always doctoring until we commenced to use Peruna. She grew strong and well. Peruna is a wonderful tonic; the best medicine I have ever used.

"I was in a very wretched condition when I commenced to take Peruna. I had catarrh all through my whole body, but thank God, your medicine set me all right. I would not have any other medicine.

"Peruna cured my baby boy of a very bad spell of cold and fever. He is a big healthy boy fifteen months old. I have given him Peruna off and on since he was born. I think that is why he is so well. I cannot praise Peruna enough. We have not had a doctor since we began to use Peruna—all praise to it.—Mrs. Schafer.

Pe-ru-na Kept in the House for Five Years.

Mr. Albert Lietzman, 1596 Milwaukee Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I am only too glad to inform you that I am feeling splendid and have never felt better in my life. Through the advice of a friend I tried Peruna, and am glad to say it cured me to perfection. I began to tell a friend about Peruna the other day, and I had no sooner commenced than he told me his folks have kept Peruna in the house for the last five years. I am sure I wouldn't be without it. Mother also uses it to keep herself in good health."

Be Sure to Have Pe-ru-na on Hand During the Inclement Months of Fall and Winter.

Croup, capillary bronchitis and articular rheumatism are the special banes of childhood. These all alike result from catching cold.

One child catches cold and scares its mother into hysterics by having croup in the dead of night.

Another child catches cold, develops a stubborn cough that will not yield to ordinary remedies. The parents are filled with forebodings.

Still another child catches cold and develops that most fatal malady of childhood, capillary bronchitis. The doctor is called, pronounces the case pneumonia and, if the child is lucky enough to live, it has developed weak lungs from which it may never recover.

And yet another child catches cold and articular rheumatism is the result. Ankles, knees, wrists and elbows become suddenly swollen and painful. A long disastrous illness follows. The child may live and become convalescent, a miserable invalid of valvular disease of the heart. All these mishaps are the direct result of neglected cold. Peruna is the safeguard of the family. If a child catches cold Peruna should be used immediately.

A few doses of Peruna and a child's cold is gone. The apprehension of the parents flee away. The household is free from fear once more.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

FOR WOMEN

A Boston physician's discovery which cleanses and heals all inflammation of the mucous membrane wherever located.

In local treatment of female ills Paxtine is invaluable. Used as a douche it is a revelation in cleansing and healing power; it kills all disease germs which cause inflammation and discharges.

Thousands of letters from women prove that it is the greatest cure for leucorrhœa ever discovered.

Paxtine never fails to cure pelvic catarrh, nasal catarrh, sore throat, sore mouth and sore eyes, because these diseases are all caused by inflammation of the mucous membrane.

For cleansing, whitening and preserving the teeth we challenge the world to produce its equal.

Physicians and specialists everywhere prescribe and endorse Paxtine, and thousands of testimonial letters prove its value.

"Wine of Cardui is indeed a blessing to tired women. Having suffered for seven years with weakness and bearing-down pains, and having tried several doctors and different remedies with no success, your Wine of Cardui was the only thing which helped me, and eventually cured me It seemed to build up the weak parts, strengthen the system and correct irregularities."

By "tired women" Mrs. Adams means nervous women who have disordered menses, falling of the womb, ovarian troubles or any of these ailments that women have. You can cure yourself at home with this great women's remedy, Wine of Cardui. Wine of Cardui has cured thousands of cases which doctors have failed to benefit. Why not begin to get well today? All druggists have $1.00 bottles. For any stomach, liver or bowel disorder Thedford's Black-Draught should be used.

Jesus Rejected at Nazareth

That synagogue in Nazareth was a plain, small, rectangular structure, its only effort at embelishment being in the form of a Greek portico, with the conventionel Hebrew-twisted foliage for ornament. Here stand the two alms-boxes—that on the right for poor of the congregation, that on the left for pilgrim Jew. The interior vies with exterior in plainness. "Plain as a pipe stem" certainly applies here. Common wooden benches seat the congregation. In a recess in the rear wall is a chest exactly proportioned after the ark of the covenant, only not overlaid with gold, and destitute of cherubim. It faces towards Jerusalem, and contains the scrolls of the law and prophets. In front is the reader's desk, and in front of it the elevated stalls, the "chief seats," for which there was often an unseemly scramble. The congregation gathers. The angel, or president of the synagogue, is in his place, with veiled face. The rulers mount to the chief seat. They are on dress-parade, with their blue ribbons and white phylacteries. Strange sight this, an audience of men! Where are the women? talk about separate sittings! The women not only sit apart, but entirely out of view. In a gallery behind the lattice sit the matrons and maids of Israel. Service begins. The minister steps into the pulpit. The audience rises. They burst out in the recitation of the Shema. (Deut. vi, 4 9, 'etc.) The minister, with veiled face and hands spread toward heaven, chants a prayer He opens the ark, takes out the roll of the law, finds the passage appointed to be read, calls a layman fom the congregation, and has him read it. The scroll of the law is then returned, and that of the prophet brought out. It was just at this juncture, in Nazareth, that the minister, glancing over the audience, and noticing the benignant countenance of a stranger, calls him to the pulpit and puts the roll of the prophet Isaiah in his hands. Jesus found the place where it was written: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me." That audience could not have been ignorant who was ocupying their pulpit that morning. The fame of Jesus had reached the city where he had been brought up. His baptism by John Baptist, his cleansing of the temple,—news of these matters must have been brought by returning pilgrims. They had certainly heard of the miracles in Capernaum, if not at Cana, too.

Jesus did his best to propitiate his auditors. He might have selected a paragraph setting forth his regal character. But, instead, he chooses one which pictured him as a lowly messenger of helpfulness, and he carefully stopped short of the sentence which declared his judicial office. He had purposely delayed his coming in order that the fame of what he did and said in other places might reach Nazareth, and overcome, if possible, the contempt which was bred by familiarity. He almost succeeded, There was a sweet persuasiveness in voice and manner. There was a veritable impersonation of humility—a self-obliviousness that was captivating to the last degree. The fate of Nazareth trembled in the balance. In audible terms, as well as by look and gesture, according to the free manner of the synagogue as well as to the demonstrative custom of Orientals generally, they indicated their admiration of both speaker and word spoken. But as the sermon proceeded. the reaction set in. Jesus was perfectly aware that it was coming. He knew what was in man. He knew he was to be rejected before he set foot in Nazareth; but love and sympathy for his townsmen constrained him not to pass them by. Those who a moment before were wondering at the graciousness of his words, were now vociferating about his low birth and humble profession, and resenting his mild claim to the Messiahship. They were saying to him: "If you are really the promised one, why don't you work a miracle on yourself to begin with? Convert your poverty into wealth, your weakness into strength, and we will believe you!" Then their local pride, village jealousy, began to assert itself as they cried: "Why did you not favor your own city with your miracles, instead of Capernaum?" Jesus half apologizes for his fellow-townsmen as he says: I am only meeting the prophet's fate. My townsfolks are not doing worse than Israel in general." But it was his next word which proved a veritable firebrand in their hearts. It was the suggestion that as Elijah and Elisha passed over the unworthy descendants of Abraham and conferred their gracious benefits upon Gentiles, so he, who was their prototype, must do likewise. "What! the inalienable rights of the elect people go to Gentile dogs?" The synagogue is in an uproar. The pendulum of feeling was swung from the point of admiration to the opposition extreme of vindictive hatred.

Services closed in a most uncommon and unseemly manner that day There was no closing hymn, in which the soprano and alto came pouring through the lattice from the choir invissible, to blend sweetly with the tenor and basso. There was no blessing or benediction, as was wont, pronounced by priest or invoked by laymen. The synagogue had judicial prerogatives. As Renan says, "Each was a little independent republic, each could pronounce sentence for penal offense." This is exactly what the synagogue of Nazareth did. It excommunicated Jesus on the spot. It cast him out judicially. It proceeded to put him to death in a legal manner; casting down from a precipice being a lawful substitute for stoning Jesus did not elude his enraged neighbors by either striking them with blindness or making himself invisible to them. Luke expressly says: "He passed through the midst of them." They saw him as he passed, but were powerless to detain him. They instinctively opened an aisle through the awed mob to let him pass. As Pfenninger says, "They stood, stopped inquired, were ashamed, fled, separated."

The Teacher's Lantern

Despicable conduct, that of the Nazarenes! Yes! but they only did what humanity is always doing.

* * * * *

Dejected preachers may find some comfort in the fact that even the Master himself sometimes failed.

* * * * *

A prophet not without honor, save in his own country. Fenn, the artist, met some ignoramus in Salem, who remarked to him: "Hawthrone writ a lot o' letters. I hearn tell he wrote a scarlet letter or two, whatever that is!"

* * * * *

An ideal preacher was Jesus. He "took a text." His style was expository. He sought a common ground with his hearers. He read their minds, and shifted his matter to suit their changing moods. He faithfully, firmly, fearlessly made his application.

* * * * *

Did Jesus return to Nazareth? Steir says well: "The denial of his return strikes out of his life a trait as beautiful as it is significant." That he came again to 'his own," the probability is strong, through the chronology of the visits may trouble us. But see the inveterate character of prejudice and unbelief—they rejected him again!

* * * * *

Longfellow, in "Divine Tragedy," finely voices the changing sentiment of that synagogue audience which made the "wicked close" possible.

Child-Study and Sunday-School Methods

Jesus thought it not beneath him to study the child. No teacher, ancient or modern, has ever shown a more appreciative or sympathetic interest in childhood. His own genuine boyhood prepared him for this. He had all the various experiences, the hopes and fears of the average youth. So the children can say, "We have not an high priest who can not be touched with a feeling for us." Jesus and the child has formed a favorite theme for artist and poet. The incidents are among the most familiar of the Bible, He said, "Suffer them to come." He took them in his arms; he set a child in the midst; he worked more miracles of mercy on children than on any other class. He granted the Magna Charta of childhood when he said, "Of such is the kingdom."

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

THE QUESTION OF ADJOURNMENT

Three Motions Before the Caucus was Finally Ended—Appearances Indicate a Long Drawn Out Fight by the Organization Against Gorman.

STATE HOUSE ANNAPOLIS, Jan. 27.—Again the Democratic majority in the Maryland General Assembly have met in caucus and again they have adjourned without deciding on a candidate for United State Senator. The efforts of the organization in circulating the call for a caucus proved successful and tonight the Democratic members of both houses met in joint session, but the wishes of the machine leaders were not carried out, as a motion to adjourn before the question of a senatorial candidate was brought up, seemed to meet with favor and was carried.

Senator Robinson presided over tonight's caucus. The motion to adjourn made by Senator Moore was carried. Senator Gorman moved to adjourn until Monday night, while Delegate Bosse, of the Baltimore city delegation, moved that the caucus should adjourn subject to the call of the chairman. Mr. Gorman,s motion failed to carry as did that of Delegate Bosse.

The Carter vote was cast first for motion of Senator Gorman and then changed to that of Delegate Bosse and finally against adjournment. The adherents of ex-Governor Smith and Hon. Isador Rayner voted almost solidly for Senator Moore's motion.

Obituary.

This humble tribute is reverently laid upon memory's sacred altar, as a last token of respect to the memory of Mrs. Mary Snyder, who was taken to her better reward Jan. 14th, 1904, just at the close of her seventy-third year:

Mother hands no more shall labor,
Weaving golden threads of love;
She has passed beyond the river,
To a better home above.

"Though 'twas hard to give thee, mother,
When at last thy rest was won,
But we bow before the Master, meekly
Saying, "Father, dear, Thy will be done."

FRIENDSVILLE, ITS BANK AND BUSINESS MEN.

A Short History of First National Bank and Its Executive Officers.

A GROWING, THRIFTY INSTITUTION

Located in a Bustling Town Along the Great Youghiogheny River where Large Lumber Mills are the Chief Industry—The Business Men.

THE town of Friendsville, Garrett county, has always been recognized as a very important point, commercially, by other towns and settlements of the county. Its commercial affairs, however, were seriously handicapped by the absence of banking facilities until about two years ago when the First National Bank, with a capital stock of $25,000, was established and thrown open for business. At the outset the bank was liberally patronized by the merchants and business men generally of Friendsville and the surrounding communities in Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. The patronage accorded the new venture upon its institution has been ever on the increase both in volume and the number of its customers, until today, when it is recognized as one of the solid and most substantial financial institutions within the confines of the county.

MR. LESLIE E. FRIEND,
Pres't First Nat. Bank, Friendsville.

The bank's first home was a small wooden structure which very soon became entirely inadequate for the demand made upon it by the rapidly increased patronage and to overcome this the officials were compelled to either seek larger quarters or erect a building exactly suited to the banking business. The latter plan was thought the most feasible in solving the difficult problem thus presented, and in accordance therewith a plot of ground on the principal street of the busy little town was purchased and an architect employed to draw plans for the proposed new building, which plans were adopted and work on the building was begun last summer and only recently completed when the furniture was moved in and occupied for the purpose for which it was erected.

MR. JOHN W. McCULLOUGH,

The building is two stories high and has a frontage sufficient to give it the appearance of being well proportioned. The material used in the construction of its outer walls was brick and iron. This, with a slate roof, makes it practically proof against fire originating on the exterior. Inside, the ground floor is divided into the banking room proper where the business with the public is transacted and where all are welcomed with a smile and courteously treated by the obliging cashier, Mr. R. C. McCandlish, and his equally affable assistant, Mr. George B. Frazee. Back of the counters in the banking room is located the fire and burglar proof vault with massive double doors, fitted with time locks and modernly constructed in every respect. Inside the vault are located a number of safe deposit boxes which are rented for a nominal sum to the customers of the bank, and also the burglar-proof safe where the funds and securities belonging to the institution are kept. On the first floor is also located the cashier's room, neatly and comfortably furnished. The second story of the building contains the directors' room which is furnished with all the requisites necessary for the purposes for which it is intended. The building is finished in its entirety in polished oak of handsome design, is extremely comfortable and is a credit to Friendsville and the community surrounding it. In the building a system of water works has been installed, which is found to be a great convenience.

MR. R. C. McCANDLISH,
Cashier First Nat. Bank, Friendsville.

The officers and directors of the bank are all intimately identified with the business and social interests of the town, and are—

President, Leslie E. Friend.

Vice President, John W. McCullough.

Cashier, R. C. McCandlish.

Assistant Cashier, George B. Frazee.

Directors, the president and vice president, Kimmell Frazee, Wm. H. H. Friend, John H. Cupper, W. W. Savage, D. S. Custer, C. W. Friend, H. M. Rumbaugh and Dr. T. J. Jacobs. These gentlemen are all successful business men in their respective communities and are highly esteemed for their integrity.

MR. GEORGE B. FRAZEE,
Ass't C. First Nat. Bank, Friendsville.

Mr. Friend, the president, is a native of Friendsville. For many years he has been extensively engaged in the mercantile business in that town where he was also postmaster for ten years or more. He is a representative citizen of his community and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and a lineal descendant of the first settler of what now comprises Garrett county. His family connections are probably greater than any other man in the county, as the Friend family, collectively, is larger in number and more powerful than any other in Garrett county.

Mr. John W. McCullough, the vice president, is engaged on a large scale in the manufacture and shipment of hardwood lumber, his mills being located at or near the town and his extensive forests of valuable timber reached by a railroad over which the logs are transported to the mill where they are manufactured into lumber and shipped thence to the market via the C. & O. Railroad. Mr. McCullough gives employment to many men who have become greatly attached to him through the kindness and consideration shown them by their employer.

The cashier, Mr. R. C. McCandlish, comes of a distinctive family who have been identified with the banking business in Maryland and West Virginia for many years. His father was cashier of a Parkersburg (W. Va.) bank for a long term of years. He has two brothers in the same capacity. Mr. McCandlish is a thoroughgoing, energetic and reliable business man in every respect. The success of the institution with which he is identified is in a great measure due to his untiring efforts. He is courteous to all having business relations with, affable to a marked degree and sound of judgment in matters pertaining to banking affairs. He is also associated in the Bruceton (West Va.) Bank, being vice president of that institution, which is meeting with unparallelled success.

Mr. George B. Frazee, the assistan cashier of the bank, is well and favorably known througnout Garrett county owing to his identification with educational matters for many years. He recently entered the bank but is still interested in school matters. He was principal of the Oakland schools a few years ago and gave eminent satisfaction to the patrons. He comes of sturdy stock and is an agreeable gentleman in every sense of the word.

Among the stockholders are Mr. F. S. Landstreet, who is prominently identified with railroad matters in different sections of the country, chief among them being his interests in the Wabash system and the efforts now being made by that road to build a connecting link east from Cumberland.

A great many persons have an erroneous idea of this place, and consider it only a little lumber town but those who visit it will find a lively village doing a thriving business, and having a large trade with the surrounding country. It is our aim at the present time to give the readers of THE Republican a synopsis of its location, business, etc.

The village is located on both banks of the Youghiogheny river and connected by a substantial bridge. It is 17 miles from Confluence on the Confluence and Oakland branch of the B. & O. railroad which has two trains each way every day. These trains run up the branch about three miles above Friendsville to what is known as Krug, Kendall or Manorsland. The residents here call the place by all three names. The population is estimated at about 700 inhabitants. It has a graded school, three churches, Methodist Episcopal, Christain and Lutheran, telephone exchange, post office, a large grain and flour mill, three hotels, two livery stables, a large saw mill, several stores and other business places. There are two mails daily from Confluence and two to the same place.

The large saw mills of the Bear Creek Lumber Company are located here and employed over 200 men in its different departments. This company also has a store in the same building with its office. They have about 18 miles of railroad track.

J. W. Haney & Son do a large business in flour, feed, buckwheat flour etc. Besides doing a large trade locally, they ship large quantities of the product of their mills. The output of this firm has a first class reputation all over the surrounding country.

The stores here will compare favorably with those in far more pretentious towns and its merchants appear very prosperous. We will enumerate these stores.

D. S. Custer does an extensive business in dry-goods, groceries, furniture and a general line of goods, and is most energetic and persevering. Here the telephone exchange is located and a short visit to the place will convince any person that the business done over the lines centering here is a large one.

J. H. Cuppett keeps a general store and handles a large variety of goods, in different lines, he also has a hotel in connection with his other business.

L. E. Friend, handles clothing, dry goods, hardware and groceries and has a large stock on hand in these lines.

L. Hardy deals in notions, small wares, etc.

C. V. Guard deals in farming implements, wagon and bugggies and being surrounded by a large, prosperous farming community, he does a lucrative trade.

F. G. Fox, contractor and builder, does a thriving business in this line. He also runs a planing mill, manufacturing planed lumber and deals in doors, window frames and sashes, glass, paints, oils, and builders supplies. He has also in connection with this business a furniture and hardware store, well stocked with a good supply of house furnishing goods.

F. Schiable has a harness shop and keeps a well supplied store, where horse owners can have all their wants supplied.

The wayfarer who arrives here need not go hungry nor want for lodging as the place is well supplied having three hotels and tw resturants, all conducted in a neat and tasty manner. The hotels are the Crawford House near the railroad station conducted by L. M. Welsh, who although not long in this business is a most genial landlord and makes everything pleasant for his guests.

On the west side of the Youghiogheny river is the Riverside Hotel, W. D. Collier proprietor. This hotel is neatly furnished and travellers here find every comfort as Mr. and Mrs. Collier are both untiring in their efforts to give their guests every comfort and attention.

The Cuppett House is also a well conducted hotel and Mr. Cuppett is an ideal landlord.

There are two undertaking establishments here kept by M. Frazee and S. Savadge.

Mrs. W. Taylor keeps a neat restaurant near the railroad station and carries cigars and groceries combined with the former business.

W. Romesburg keeps another restaurant not far from Mrs. Taylor's and all that has been written about the latter will also apply to Mr. Romesburg.

Those who want horses, carriages, buggies or other outfits in the livery line can be accommodated here, as there are two first class livery stables well supplied and equipped with horses and vehicles of all kinds; L. Nugent who has his stables near the station commenced business here the present year and being well adapted to this business is very successful.

Edward Schlossnagle keeps a stable near the bridge and is also very successful and all that has been written about Mr. Nugent will equally apply to him.

Those who wish to have their pictures taken can be accomodated here as J. Thompson, keeps a neat photographic gallery and does good work in his line.

W. Holman & Son do a general blacksmith business in all lines of this work and bear a good reputation as good workman and straight forward business men.

The town business establishments and private residences are illuminated with electric lights. The Bear Creek Lumber Company furnishes these lights and there are over 600 lamps in use. These lights give the utmost satisfaction.

De Poincy's Flier

By A. J. MANN

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

IT WAS rather a lazy afternoon in the Cotton Exchange, as midsummer afternoons anywhere in New Orleans are apt to be. Several of the older members of the "talent" had gathered in a quiet corner under the breeze of an electric fan to while away the time and talk over weather conditions and speculate on the chances of a good crop with the cotton fields of Texas burned to a crisp and no rain in sight on the weather maps.

Outside on Carondelet street there was little life and only an occasional linen-clad stock broker walked by on his way to the ceremonious call in the Stock Exchange.

The ring in the farthest corner of the 'change floor had been left to the younger and more strenuous members who varied the monotony of dull trading with yelling like mad and singing "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" and other selections that find favor with brokers when they feel musically inclined.

Once in awhile a furious burst of bidding would come from the bull clique, but there was more yelling than trading, as is frequently the case when the market is a little off.

Suddenly a more than usually energetic yell rose to the historical pictures

DE POINCY APPROACHED HIM IN A CONFIDENTIAL WAY.

painted on the ceiling of the trading room. Above the mingled voices coming from the ring could be heard a deep bass voice with enough life in it for three ordinary men. One of the old-timers paused in his estimate of how much per cent. of condition the crop had lost through the drought and exclaimed: "That's young DePoincy. Say, he can yell almost as loud as I could when I was his age."

"DePoincy is a wonder for a youngster. Ever hear how he got his wife?"

"Didn't know he was married? Sure. Married old Albert Carriere's daughter, the same old Carriere who made so much money in a street railway deal.

"Old man Carriere was bound that DePoincy would either stay single or marry some other man's daughter, and DePoincy was just as determined that Miss Carriere should become Mrs. DePoincy. Of course I don't say that the old man's money had anything to do with DePoincy's desire, but still—well, anyway, DePoincy proved too crafty for the old man and got his daughter. It came about this way:

"You see young DePoincy and Carriere's daughter used to go to school with each other. That was all right, but when they grew up and DePoincy got a place as a broker's clerk and messenger while Miss Carriere commenced to blossom out in swell society, old man Carriere decided that any little familiarity which had sprung up between the two must be nipped in the bud, especially as he was contemplating a trip across the water, when the daughter should get a little older, with the view of picking up a title to annex to the family.

"The young couple, however, didn't take to this pleasant little plan of pap's, even if it was all the go in exclusive society. But the old man was obstinate. To tell the truth, he always was pig-headed, as they say up the river. I went to college with him and therefore I know. Besides his obstinacy he never was blessed with more brains than the law allows, but his father had left him well fixed with cash and somehow or other he stumbled into a big street railway deal and made his pile all the larger. His head swelled in proportion with the idea that he was a financier in a class all by himself.

"Old Carriere's ideas of the importance of himself and his family made it rather difficult for the young people to see much of each other. DePoincy's love affair didn't discourage him in the least. He kept right on plugging away and doing everything he could to get into touch with the cotton market. About the time that old man Carriere had decided that mere brokers' clerks were too low down in the scale of society for an heiress who would some day have a bank account as large as the one he had tucked away for his daughter DePoincy was admitted to membership in the Cotton Exchange. He had lots of nerve and good common sense and some little knowledge of cotton, for he had been studying the market ever since he had left school. It wasn't long before he began to be felt once in awhile and his firm commenced to respect his judgment.

"All this time old Carriere never forgot the big deal in which he had made such a pile. It was just a stroke of fool's luck on his part, but he thought it was due to his shrewdness and ability and after awhile he commenced to take a few fliers in stocks again.

"This time he lost right along. He couldn't get on the right side of any move.

"The daughter found out what the old man was doing and of course she told DePoincy, whom she continued to meet probably just because her father told her not to; anyway, instead of trying to be good and learning French so that she might talk to that count the old man was figuring on buying, she held stolen conferences with DePoincy. As I have said there was nothing slow about that youngster, and if he couldn't think up a scheme to get around a difficulty there was no scheme to be found anywhere.

"One morning, just after the old man had sunk another thousand or two by getting on the upside of the market when it was going down, DePoincy approached him in a confidential way. At first he would have nothing to do with the "upstart," as he called DePoincy, but when the hint was let out that a big deal was ahead and that DePoincy was on the inside but he couldn't get aboard because he couldn't raise the money, and that the old man could pick up four or five thousand just as easy as not Carriere got interested right away and in a moment of weakness consented to an interview in his private office.

"That settled it; DePoincy could talk a book agent into buying a book if it had to be done and the old man was easy prey.

"Somehow Carriere always had a good opinion of "the upstart's" honesty, and when DePoincy left the office he had a big check with him to put on a stock which he really believed would shoot skyward in a few days. He didn't dare back cotton either way just then as a trance medium couldn't tell which way the market would go in the next five minutes.

"DePoincy simply had to rely on something turning up and then use plenty of nerve to carry him through. He knew the old man was easy and that he didn't know enough about the stock market to refuse to swallow any story about it if he was disappointed in the stock he was going to buy. If it shouldn't go as high as he expected he planned to borrow the money some way and make the old man believe he had cleaned up $5,000 in no time and was dead on the inside of the charmed circle.

"In other words he was going to hypnotize the old man by his ability as a profit taker until he was sufficiently dazzled to be unable to say a word of protest against such a solid and promising would-be son-in-law when he asked to be admitted into the family.

"Say, do you know what that stock commenced to do? Instead of doing the balloon act it commenced to take on the prettiest and steadiest decline that ever made a bear hug himself for joy.

"DePoincy sold out just in time, but before he had time to see what was really doing and sell short the bottom fell out and the stock went to the lowest figure it had ever sold at.

"Old Carriere thought something was wrong and rushed about trying to find DePoincy, but that youngster wasn't in sight.

"The next morning, however, he turned up smiling at Carriere's office and handed him a check for $5,000 over the amount the old man had given him. Carriere had not finished gasping when DePoincy in his smoothest tones was asking him for the hand of his daughter.

"'But,' gasped the old man, 'I thought the stock was going up?'

"'Oh, that's all right,' said DePoincy, in a matter of fact way, 'I told you I was on the inside. At the last minute I received word that the stock was going the other way, so I sold. It was a neat turn and I won't charge you any commission.' And the old man swallowed it.

"How did he do it? Well, he went around to the girl and told her all about it. She had a few ideas herself and when she found that DePoincy was only about $6,000 shy toward making good with the old man she dug up some securities that he had put away for her, and which were within easy reach and gave them to DePoincy. He cashed just in time.

"The old man set DePoincy up in business and gave him his daughter. The youngster is doing well, but the worst of it is that old Carriere keeps insisting that his smart son-in-law repeat that $5,000 act every once in awhile. It doesn't cause him so much trouble now because the old man turns all the winnings over to his daughter, who gives them to DePoincy, and so the same money keeps right on going around. Meanwhile Carriere goes about telling his acquaintances what a wonder of a son-in-law he has and how fast he can make money.

"I think I told you to start with that although Carriere has lots of money he isn't exactly bright."

Ammonal, a New Explosive.

The latest in explosives, according to Metal Industry, is powdered aluminum, mixed with nitrate of ammonia. This explosive is said to be one of the safest and surest known, as it cannot be exploded by friction or blow, while otherwise containing all the requisites of an explosive. The fact that aluminum is not affected by frost, accidents which so often occur when thawing out dynamite are no to be feared. The explosion is caused by an ordinary cap. Another important property claimed for ammonal is that it is not affected by moisture

THE TRAIN TO TRUNDLEBED

Every night, when the sun goes down,
The train pulls out for Trundlebed town,
For Trundlebed town, that is far away,
In a land where goblins and elves hold sway,
A land that is Summer the whole year through,
The grass ever green, the sky ever blue,
And every night, when the stars look down,
The train pulls out for Trundlebed town.

Choo!—Choo!—Choo!—
"Hushaby," the bell is ringing;
Choo!—Choo!—Choo!—
"Hushaby," the steam is singing;
Singing, ringing, ringing, singing,
Choo!—Choo!—Choo!—

TOM WAS ASTONISHED.

"Snoop Cat" Has a Christmas Eve Experience Which He Will Not Forget Very Soon.

Thomas was a very exemplary cat, except for the fact that he was inquisitive. His cold nose would be stuck into all the jars and pitchers on the table, until they gave him the name of "Snoop-Cat," which hurt his feelings. It was Christmas eve when Thomas wandered into the dining-room. "My! that's a funny looking box over there by the fireplace. Wonder what's in it?" said he to himself. "Been told not to touch things that didn't concern me, but I'd certainly like to know what it is.

"Wonder if it'd hurt just to push that hook back and look in. I'll die if I don't see what's in there."

Softly he stole up and pushed the wire hook back. "Must be some sort of a Christmas present for Bill. If I see it first, that will be a joke on him, won't—"

Fizz! squeak! slap! slam! bang! wow! Up flew the cover and out of the box came the worst-looking ogre that ever disgraced a fairy tale.

"PUT ME BACK, OF COURSE."

"What d'yer mean, you rascal?" shrieked the figure.

"Oh!" groaned puss, as he shrank back, trembling, "this is so sudden!"

"I should say it was," said the ogre, "I had just settled down for the night, hoping to get some rest before those children got hold of me to-morrow, and here you come 'snooping' around and meddling with the hook and my spring sprang, and now we're in a pretty mess, for I can't get back in the box by myself, and to-morrow is Christmas."

"What shall I do?" asked Thomas.

"Put me back, of course, you stupid."

"But I can't get you back."

"That's just the moral of the whole affair," snapped the ogre. "One never can do over what they have undone, which is to say, they can never undo what they have did, which is to say that—"

But Thomas was so terrified that he did not wait to hear all the moral.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

BOY SCHOOL TEACHER.

Although But 13 Years Old He Larruped a Pupil Who Was Nearly Thrice His Weight.

The youngest pedagogue in Missouri, and perhaps in the United States, is teaching a country school near Gainesville, in the Ozark mountains. He is Glenn Harrison, aged 13 years. Glenn is the eldest son of Guy T. Harrison, a lawyer.

He completed the course of study of the Gainesville public schools in March, 1902. The same month he took the examination given candidates for third grade teachers' certificates in Ozark county, making a good average and securing a certificate. He continued to study, and just after he became 13 years old he took the examination for a second grade certificate. This time his average grade was the highest made, being 96 per cent. Mr. Harrison believed his promising son was too young to teach and refused to let him accept several offers. But one day when his father was absent attending court, Glenn took the job of teacher of a rural district, the directors of which came and offered him the place. He began work before his father returned, and the latter, finding him so ambitious, decided not to interfere.

Glenn now has 29 pupils. The majority are larger and older than he, but he maintains a degree of discipline which many older and more experienced teachers may well envy. "How are you getting along, Glenn?" asked his mother one day, when he came home at the end of a week's work. "I had to whip several of the boys," the youngster replied. It turned out that among others he had larruped an obstreperous youth that weighed 180 pounds. Glenn doesn't weigh much more than half that.—Kansas City Journal.

ARE FIERCE FIGHTERS.

The Masais in Whose Country the Zionists Propose to Locate Are Handy with Weapons.

In Africa there are many native warriors, but, as the accompanying picture shows, few are as picturesque as those of the Masai tribe, which has for many generations made its home in British East Africa. To this tribe peculiar interest attaches just now, and for the reason that its members are scattered over that portion of the country which has been promised to the Zionist colony and which is known as

A NASAI WARRIOR.

"The Promised Land." Though comparatively few in number, these Masai warriors are fearless and independent, and those who have studied them closely say that they are becoming more and more opposed to the British on account of the high-handed manner in which they are parceling out the country, which they rightly or wrongly regard as their own property. However this may be, it is certain that these stalwart fighting men are well worthy of study, a fact of which ethnologists have recently become aware.

AWFUL SWEAT BATHS.

Native Boys of Alaska Have a Hard Time When They Take Their Weekly Ablution.

Boys who make a fuss because their parents oblige them to take frequent baths should be glad that they are not Eskimo children living on the shores of Norton sound. In that cold region of Alaska all the boys are obliged to take a sweat bath every week, and this bath is no joke.

A fire of driftwood is built in the center of the floor of the kashim—the one-roomed house where the men and boys of a village pass most of their time—and when the smoke has passed off and the wood is reduced to red, glowing coals, a cover is put over the smoke-hole in the roof and the place becomes intensely hot.

The boys then must take off their clothes and sit about the furnace-like apartment until their skin becomes as red as the shell of a boiled lobster and seems on the point of blistering.

Owing to the intense heat the bathers are obliged to wear respirators to protect their lungs. These respirators are pads of shavings bound together, concave on the inside and convex on the outside, and large enough to cover the mouth, nose and part of the cheeks of the wearer.

Across the inside runs a little wooden bar, which is held in the teeth to keep the respirators in place.

The boys sit there until they are dripping with perspiration. Then they rush outside into the intense cold and roll in the snow.

E. W. Nelson, who spent between four and five years in investigating for the government the Eskimos living about Behring strait, says: "On several occasions I saw them go from the sweat bath to holes in the ice on a neighboring stream, and squatting there, pour ice water over their backs and shoulders with a wooden dipper, apparently experiencing the greatest pleasure from the operation."

Although the Eskimo boys seem to withstand such a bath as this all right and even to enjoy it, it would, in all probability, kill any white boy who tried it.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

JOHNNY'S LATEST ESSAY.

Subject Is the Hog, and the Knowledge He Displays Still Leaves Him Star Scholar.

The hog is called a hog b'cuz he makes a hog of himself. It runs in the family. All hogs are hogs.

The hog has two sides to his character, one of which is good to eat and the other we can't so cordjully admire. As an article of diet the hog is one of the warmest friends to the human race that I know of. Most of him is good for food and the rest is useful in making sausages, bristle brushes and other utensils. Nearly everything about him is palatable but his voice. The latter always seems to me to sound as if it had kind o' soured. It is said that you can't make a silk purse out of a lady hog's ear. I have never heard of any fool big enough to try it.

As a citizen the hog is not so warm. His manners and instincts are gross in the extreme, and his sole ambition 'pears to be to eat from early morn till far into the night. When a man is dead he becomes the late Mr. So-and-So, and we say nice things about him. When a hog is dead he is pork, and pa often says: "Confound this pork!" When I eat too much pa calls me a pig. A pig is a hog's little boy. This is all I know about the hog.

How Races Are Timed.

In timing a racing man, the watch is started at the crack of the pistol, and stopped when the runner breasts the tape. When three watches are held on a race, it is the custom to take the average time.

To Avoid Tie Vote.

In the histry of our comic literature there have been many genuine "Irish bulls" recorded, but rarely one that is of a neater brand than that encountered a few nights ago at a political gathering on Locust street, above Broad, in Philadelphia, says the Record, of that city. A convention of delegates had been called to revise the rules of the party and in order to expedite matters a delegate moved that a committee of 15 be appointed to draft the proposed rules. Before this was adopted another delegate suggested that a committee of 15 would be unwieldly and proposed an amendment, reducing the number to eight. This was agreed to, but before its adoption the aged delegate, with a rich Milesian brogue, arose and solemly proposed: "Misther Chairman, I move yer that the committee be increased to noine, so that in case of a toie vote there'll be a majarity of wan."

Salzer's Home Builder Corn.

So named because 50 acres produced so heavily, that its proceeds built a lovely home. See Salzer's catalog. Yielded in 1903 in Ind. 157 bu., Ohio 160 bu., Tenn. 98 bu., and in Mich. 220 bu. per acre. You can beat this record in 1904.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THESE YIELDS PER ACRE?

120 bu. Beardless Barley per acre.
310 bu. Salzer's New National Oats per A.
80 bu. Salzer Speltz and Macaroni Wheat.
1,000 bu. Pedigree Potatoes per acre.
14 tons of rich Billion Dollar Grass Hay.
60,000 lbs. Victoria Rape for sheep—per A.
160,000 lbs. Teosinte, the fodder wonder.
54,000 lbs. Salzer's Superior Fodder Corn—rich, juicy fodder, per A.

Now such yields you can have, Mr. Farmer, in 1904, if you will plant Salzer's seeds.

Are the Blessings of Liberty Safe?

By HON. WHITELAW REID,
Editor of the New York Tribune.

ARE we really taking a safe course to preserve the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity when we hesitate now to sift out of our immigration, not merely the pauper and anarchist and the poor Chinaman, but, with less invidious discrimination, more of the notoriously undesirable elements? Or when we hesitate to exclude peremptorily from the suffrage, national, state or municipal, any newcomer who cannot read the laws before he votes for lawmakers, and who does not pay taxes himself when he votes taxes upon others?

Are we finding that safe course when we hold public meetings, for an immigrant detained and about to be deported, to protest against the enforcement of the law, in his case, since the poor man was merely under contract for preaching anarchy, or, to give an explanation lately made by some of his friends, was merely an anarchist under contract to visit the trades unions; while we have not one word of protest against the arrest and deportation of a laborer when he is guilty, the wretch, of coming under a contract to earn an honest living by honest toil? Away with the honest workman, we exclaim; his stay might help to free white labor and to weaken the padlocks on the close shops; but as for the preacher of anarchy, how dare you in this free country interfere with his liberty of opinion?

Are we taking that safe course to preserve the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity, if, after fighting four years to free negro labor at the south, we now, under this new guidance, permit organizations unknown to the law to enslave white labor in every building and manufacturing center at the north? Are we following that safe course if a workman, however intelligent or industrious or competent and deserving, is deprived of the right to earn his living on terms mutually satisfactory to himself and his employer? Are we following that safe course if an honest laborer can be driven from his employment and denied work anywhere at his trade because he obeyed the call of the governor of his state, on the militia of the state, to maintain order in the state?

You have seen no occasion, your fathers have seen no occasion, in which in the end the sober second thought of the American people did not assert itself. You will not doubt that somehow, in some time, these dangers too will be successfully met. But neither will you doubt that if we will refuse to sift our immigration, if we still refuse to require from newcomers some intelligence and some character and thrift before we ask them to help us conduct our own government; if we neglect to hinder the plans of politicians for gathering in new states in the American union from the Caribbean sea, from the Chinese sea, or from Polynesia; if we refuse to protect individual initiative and fail to keep white labor free at home; if we persist in making this land an asylum for the anarchists and outcasts from every other civilized land in the world, the common sewer for Christendom—if we will persist in all this, then, to the imperfect vision of the human eye, the path of our unexampled progress seems likely some day to lead into hopeless entanglements, and end in an impasse, from which advance is improbable.

The Spirit of the Inquisition

By JOHN TURNER,
English Anarchist Leader.

THE spirit of the inquisition is by no means dead. Every steamship company sailing to United States ports now asks intending passengers, among other questions: "Are you an anarchist?" If anyone replies: "Yes," they will refuse to carry him, as he can be denied admission. It is very easy to say "No," however, and since opinions are unknown unless expressed, the law is quite inoperative for those who are not publicly known, if they can be dishonest and deny it. Neither does this law prevent people with sinister intentions from entering. But it does create a most vicious precedent. If this goes unchallenged, how long before other opinions will be placed on the list? One by one, all those who do not comply with the desire of the party in power will be denied admission—at least those who are honest enough to avow these interdicted ideas. It is the beginning of a new political tyranny, in which America, with its democratic institutions, can give points to monarchical Europe.

What is the meaning of this reaction? Whenever privilege is in fear it falls back upon force to sustain it. Old weapons, discarded when the social relations are such that no one is afraid of their being discussed, or of new ideas being propounded, are refurbished anew, to uphold institutions growing morally decrepit. This desire for repression takes the place of political change for the better. From aliens it will extend to citizens. It is the eternal struggle of the old against the new, in which the new, beaten again and again, ultimately triumphs, only, however, to be replaced in its turn. This reaction has been remarked by some of the best scientific thinkers. They see that civilization is not progressing as it ought.

Have Americans so little faith in the principles of liberty they profess to love? If so, her institutions have become rotten before they are ripe. Personally I cannot credit it, and though I may be deported, I shall look for her return to more robust principles by abrogating this insidious interference wtih freedom of opinion.

THE SPIRIT OF JAPAN

By KOGORO TAKAHIRA,
Japanese Minister to the United States.

WITH us one of the most earnest desires we cherish is that neighboring peoples, peoples in some sense kindred to us, shall enjoy the same advantages we enjoy, and shall adapt in the same manner those elements of western civilization which stand for the preservation of national entity and the promotion of national happiness.

This is a spirit in a way like the New England spirit, and I assure you in all sincerity and earnestness that it is the spirit which actuates my countrymen and our government in those momentous affairs that are now holding the stage in the far east, not a spirit of self-aggrandizement or of self-exploitation, but an assured and sincere conviction that we have found peace, plenty and security from adapting to our use the civilization of the west, so our neighbors will find the strongest safeguard against aggression, lawlessness and retrogression, and the amplest guarantee of happiness, comfort and progress by following our example, which is, I venture to say, in accord with the principles of New England and of the whole United States of America.

THE TRAVELERS AND THE CROW.

Find a Fourth Traveler.

Some Travelers, setting out on a journey, had not proceeded far when a one-eyed Crow flew across their path. This they took for a bad omen, and it was proposed that they should give up their plan, for that day at least, and turn back again. "What nonsense!" said one of the Travelers, who was of a mocking and merry disposition. If this Crow could foresee what is to happen to us he would be equally knowing on his own account; and, in that case, do you think he would have been silly enough to go where his eye was to be knocked out of his head?"

Moral—All bad omens may usually be dismissed as easily as was this one by the optimistic traveler.

GAVE THEM A SETBACK.

How the Automobile Interfered with the Domestic Economy of One Village.

"I was making a little tour of a suburban county in my automobile last summer," said a New Yorker, relates the Sun, "and one day drew off to one side of the road with my machine and stopped to let an approaching farm team pass. The team came up, showing no fear at the sight of the auto, and I hailed the farmer in the wagon. He stopped his team.

"'I'm glad to see that the horses through here have become used to the automobiles and are no longer frightened by them,' I said.

"'Yes,' replied the farmer, "but it's a big setback to us farmers. It's goin' to raise our taxes like all possessed.'

"'Raise your taxes!' said I.

"'Yes,' he replied. 'You see, some of our feller citizens has been hot foot fer a good while back to have the town git one o' these steam road makin' machines, and they cost tremendous—$2,000 or $3,000—and we've been objectin' to it every time, and carryin' our p'int, on the ground that one o' them machines workin' on the road and tinkerin' of 'em up all the time would be everlastin'ly sheerin' our hosses so at every turn that there'd be nothin' but smashed wagons and broken bones in the town from one year's end to t'other, and it wouldn't be safe fer us to drive nowheres.'

"'Well?' said I not a little puzzled.

"'Well,' continued the farmer, 'then by and by along comes the automobiles of all kinds and sizes and shapes, and with all sorts o' noises, and the first thing us farmers knows it gits so our hosses ain't no more afeard of 'em and don't keer no more about 'em than if they was only ox teams geehawin' by. And that knocks us.'

"'How so?' said I, still puzzled.

"'How so?' responded the farmer. 'Why, consarn it, if our hosses ain't skeered by automobiles, of course they ain't goin' to mind a steam road makin' machine, and so we hain't got no legs to stand on in arguin' ag'in the gittin' of one! And they're goin' to get one and set it to work, and our taxes is goin' to be humped up like all possessed to pay fer it! Two or three thousand dollars, and all because our hosses has got used to automobiles on the roads, and won't skeer no more! Big setback? I should say so! Geet up, Bill!'

"And the farmer drove on, but he didn't appear to be as much cast down over the setback as one might have thought.

Coldest Liquid.

Liquid hydrogen is by far the coldest liquid known at the present time. At ordinary atmospheric pressure it boils at—422 degrees F., and reduction of the pressure by an air pump brings the temperature down to—432 degrees, at which the liquid becomes a solid, resembling frozen foam. According to Prof. Dewar, to whom the credit is due of having liquefied hydrogen in 1898, the liquid is a colorless, transparent body, and is the lightest liquid known to exist, its density being only one-fourteenth that of water; the lightest liquid previously known was liquid marsh gas, which is six times heavier. The only solid which has so small density as to float upon its surface is a piece of pith wood.—Cassier's Magazine.

STRANGE SEA MONSTER.

How the First Sight of a Manatee or Sea Cow Impressed a Fisherman in Florida Waters.

A sight that is getting more and more rare now is that of a manatee, or sea cow—the wonderful mammal lives exclusively in the water, like a fish, and that has furnished the foundation of many a mermaid story by thrusting its head and shoulders out of the ocean near shore, just in time to let a startled crew see it, says the Washington Post.

"I shall never forget the scare I got at the first sight of a manatee," said John Mansfield, the angler. "It was last year, in the Indian river, in Florida. My boat was anchored under a bank of grasses, and I was lolling in the stern, looking idly downward into the water and thinking of anything except a sea monster, when suddenly a vast form made me pull my head back instinctively.

"The thing was so dark that it looked almost black. It was shaped like a huge, thick carrot, only, instead of the thin tail of a carrot, it had a broad, flat tail exactly like that of a lobster.

"It came along smoothly and silently, gliding close along the bottom, and at first I couldn't see any head at all. It looked weird, and I couldn't imagine what it was.

"Suddenly, it bent that big lobster tail backward, doubled it beneath itself, and instantly its progress stopped as if it had put on brakes.

"The next moment the thing was apparently standing straight up on end. Then I saw two bony things like arms shoot out from the upper part of its body, and the thing began to bob back and forth like a very clumsy person trying to make funny little bows.

"Then I realized that what I was looking at was a manatee, or sea cow, and that it was in the act of feeding. A big bunch of river grass grew just where it had stopped, and it was taking it down in great mouthfuls.

"I now saw that it had a head, sure enough, although it was a most absurdly small head, looking like a little cork in a big, fat bottle. But the most remarkable thing about the head was the mouth.

"The lower jaw was all right. It was like that of a seal. But the upper jaw was split vertically, so that it opened like the upper lips of a rabbit. It was a true hare lip, only it was about 40 times as big as the worst hare lip that ever was on dry land.

"With the queer upper lip the manatee seized the big whisps of river grass, and handled them as an elephant would handle hay with its trunk. Then the lower jaw would shoot out and yank it into the cavernous mouth. It was a great sight—the funny mouth, the tiny head, the huge body, twice as big around as that of a man, and about as long; the rough hide, the tiny flippers, and the lobster tail—a veritable cross between a cow and a seal, and a fish and a waterbug."

Unhealthful Palaces.

The illness of the czarina has been attributed to the insanitary condition of many royal palaces in Russia. It may be so, but there are cases where inflammation of the ear arises from quite other causes. There is, of course, considerable difficulty in renovating the private apartments of a monarch whose life is in constant and imminent danger from obstinate anarchist intrigues. Unless rumor gravely lies, the czar himself does not know where he will sleep before night comes, and to throw open the geography of the palace to workmen would increase its terrors tenfold. The best plan would be to employ foreigners, and, preferably, Englishmen, who are least of all touched by hatred of monarchy. A court is always conservative, like a university, and it is not uninteresting to compare the statements about the damp and unhealthy palaces of Russia with the famous American mother's characteristic condemnation of the colleges at Oxford.—London News.

ELECTRO-THERMIC FAN.

It Heats the Air Current It Delivers to Any Degree the Operator May Desire.

An electric fan that heats the air-current that it delivers has been devised by M. de Mare, a Belgian electrician. The device, which is termed by its inventor the "electrothermic fan," is thus described by Emile Guarini in the Scientific American Supplement:

"The apparatus consists of an electric motor and rotating fan, the blades of which are of mica. Upon these mica blades are fastened resistance-coils, which are heated by the passage through them of a current of electricity."

In order to heat the air to a high temperature by means of these coils, without melting the wire or even producing light, which would waste the energy, M. de Mare incloses his fan in a case, in which its action compresses the air. The compressed air rapidly absorbs the heat from the wire coils and prevents the wire from reaching the fusing-point. M. Guarini concludes:

"The pressure of the air upon the resistance coils revolving in it is almost uniform at every point. When the fan turns and a current of electricity is passed through the coils, a very lively heat, an insupportable heat, issues from the mouth of the casing. In the experiments made before me Mr. De Mare allowed the revolving fan to attain a satisfactory speed before turning the electric current through the resistance-coils. The wire, which while the fan was in motion glowed but dimly, was, in fact, so thin that the current employed—20 amperes—would readily have caused it to melt at the ordinary air-pressure."

TOBACCO BLINDNESS.

Chief Trouble in This Disease Is Traceable to the Stomach as the Primary Source.

A British oculist has called attention to a new and indirect method of treating tobacco blindness, and notes the extraordinary fact that the chief trouble in this disease is traceable to the stomach as the primary source. Excessive smoking, as is well known, causes in many individuals partial and sometimes total blindness. Tobacco blindness (and also the failure of vision which comes from the excessive use of alcoholic beverages) is remarkable because of the absence of any change in the structure of the eye itself.

Microscopic examination in these cases has disclosed peculiar alterations in the ganglion cells of the retina, and these changes were formerly believed to have been produced by the poison of the tobacco itself. Three years ago a Philadelphia physician published the opinion that the alteration in the cells, followed by failing vision, was not produced by the nicotine itself, but by poisons which the nicotine created in the system. These secondary poisons, finding their way to the eye, modified the cells in the retina, this modification being followed by inadequate power of vision or by loss of vision altogether.

With this original suggestion for a starting point, other observers took up the investigation, with the result that the seat of the trouble has been located. This is found to lie in the stomach. Nicotine disturbs the normal function of the stomach, and instead of a healthy digestion, the smoker has a veritable poison factory in his gastric region. Instead of treating the eye, therefore, the new method goes at once to the stomach and attempts to stop the manufacture of poisons in that important organ.

Several interesting cases are reported of complete cures by this method. One patient, an excessive smoker, whose eyes were rapidly failing, was treated for indigestion. The stomach was pumped out and found to contain evidences of gastritis. The man's diet was corrected, his tobacco cut off, and other remedies of a hygienic kind were applied. In a few weeks the blindness had disappeared.

These facts seem to clear up the mystery attaching in general to tobacco blindness. Some men can smoke to excess without impairing the eyes, while others are affected in that way by a much smaller quantity of smoking. This anomaly can be understood when it is remembered that it is the stomach and not the eyes upon which the nicotine acts directly. Some stomachs can resist the poison-making force of the tobacco; others cannot, and it is those whose stomachs are affected by the use of the weed that suffer blindness. Smokers should therefore have an eye to their digestion.

Immense Waste of Fuel.

With the methods now in use seven-tenths of the force in coal is wasted. A few years ago the waste was nine-tenths. Mr. Edison declares that a bucketful of coal should drive an express train from New York to Philadelphia, and a few tons be sufficient for the largest ocean steamship, whose bunkers must now hold thousands.

Low Cost Modern Farm House

FARMHOUSES with modern conveniences, such as hot and cold water, water closet, bath room, sink rack and wood and fuel room, are the exception. Those who have resided in a city for any length of time, even a few weeks, will see the contrast between the comforts of the average city dwelling to that of the average farm dwelling. The farmer, however, in most cases does not realize this contrast, and hence so-called modern conveniences are the exception in the farmhouse. This is not as it should be. A farmer in moderate circumstances should and could very easily have these conveniences, and probably would have did he realize their advantages and comforts. These modern conveniences are sold cheaply.

The accompanying plans are intended for a farmhouse of this kind, suitable for a farm of 100 acres or less. I give detail plans of the two floors and front elevation, and bill of timber, so that the reader needs but submit the plans to a building contractor for estimates.

The home is two stories high, built of brick or wood, 48 feet long at the back, 37 feet wide at the left end, and 19½ feet at the right end, outside measurement. The basement walls are of stone, and the cellar extends beneath the whole house. The roof is shingled and stained. All of the rooms are of good size and nicely finished. The dining room, living room and vestibule, hall and stairs, may be finished in oak or a cheaper material if one's purse does not permit. The floor in the kitchen should be of maple or similar hard wood, but throughout the remainder of the house the floors may be of spruce or pine. There are mantels in the living room, dining room and front bedroom, and there are closets off each of the bedrooms. There is a large linen closet and storeroom off the hall upstairs, which the women will appreciate. The bathroom is of good size and fitted with good modern plumbing fixtures. The front bedroom may be finished white, the remaining rooms natural wood. There is a balcony connected with the front of the house and front bedroom.

Estimate material needed to build: 580 feet 2x6 inches for plates; 20½ squares (100 square feet); 2x12 inch for joists, placed 16 inches on centers; 19 squares 2x6 inches for rafters, 16 inches on centers; 20½ squares seven-eighths-inch matched spruce or pine flooring; 19 squares one-inch rough boards for roof sheathing; lath and plaster, 600 square yards; 23 inch rough boards for roof sheathing; box frame windows, 23 doors. First floor or ground plan, dimensions, living room, 16x19 feet, dining room 11½ x17½ feet, kitchen 14x11 feet; wash room, 10x10 feet; second floor plan front bedroom, 15½x20 feet; back bedroom, 14½x10½ feet; bath-room, 7x8 feet; small bedroom, 7x11 feet; end bedroom, 10x7½ feet.—J. HOYES AND VICINITY.

The Garrett County Telephone Co. held its annual meeting at this place Saturday last and transacted some very important business. Officers for the ensuing year were elected.

Ex-Sheriff W. A. Maffett attended the telephone meeting here Saturday.

Thomas Thayer, of near here, is lying very low with typhoid fever. His death is momentarily expected.

Rev. Hart and wife of Loch Lynn were visiting Frank Conneway's and Adolph Enlow's last Saturday and Sunday.

Misses Clara and Pearl Bishoff, Miss Maggie Lowdermilk and Messrs. Alvin Lowdermilk and Willie Bishoff all made Miss Mae and Lorenzo DeWitt a visit Sunday last.

Mr. Dan. Thayer and wife, of near Crellin, spent a few days with relatives in this vicinity last week.

P. P. McAndrews, of New Germany, Messrs. Broadwater and Madison Durst, of Merrill, also attended the telephone meeting Saturday. Mr. McAndrews spent Saturday evening with W. A. Smith and Mr. Durst with Mr. Samuel Mosser.

Arthur Custer is able to be out again after having quite an attack of tonsilitis.

Miss Bernadetta Mattingly is also able to go to school after suffering with "grip" the past week.

Messrs. S. P. Specht and Joe McRobie, of Deer Park, were visitors in our town Saturday.

Mr. Thomas Bishoff had the good fortune to capture a red fox Monday.

MEADOW MOUNTAIN.

Willie Pritts is suffering from an attack of pneunomia.

Clarence Raley has secured employment with P. F. Mellinger, the enterprising saw mill man.

J. R. Harrison, of Dry Run, is sawing for Mason Bros.

The dwelling house of Buckner Mason was burned to the ground Monday, Jan. 11th. The fire was first discovered in the roof. All efforts to subdue the fire was in vain. Most of the household goods were saved. Insurance on building, $200.

Milton Raley is driving team for Buckner Mason.

A. R. Bernard is all smiles—it's a boy.

P. J. Lohr was up at the county-seat on business last week.

JOHNSONS.

Bad colds the order of the day.

The Frostburg sewing society came up to Mr. F. A. Warner's last Thursday and spent a very pleasant evening.

Willie Dennis, who is suffering from diphtheria, is slowly recovering.

Thomas J. Johnson, who has been so ill, is up and around again.

Miss Lillie Steinla, who has been visiting her sister at Westernport, is home again.

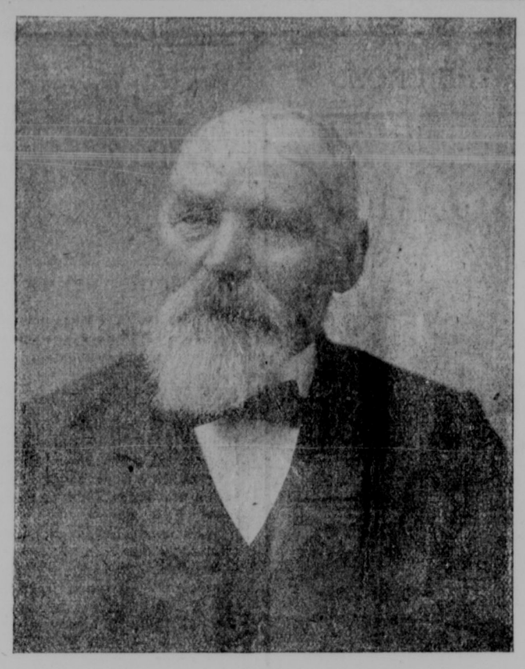
Our schools are progressing nicely. No complaints anywhere, which is a good indication that the teachers are doing their duty.

The Union Mining Company has found a fine vein of fire clay at their Klondike mines.

The Great Savage Firebrick Company has their yard almost completed and has a beautiful vein of fire clay six feet thick.

William Arklie, who acted as administrator of his brother's estate at Ada, Kansas, has returned home. He reports the personal property bringing seventeen hundred dollars, and while the buyers had eight months credit they paid all the bills in cash, showing the prosperity of the farmers.

Dr. Beverly Briscoe, of Baltimore, Md., who succeeded Dr. Murray at Finzel, this county, returned home last week via Richmond, Va., where he was married to Miss Bertha Shetzer. After spending their honeymoon at Washington, D. C., they returned to Finzel where they were tendered a reception by Mr. and Mrs. William Finzel. The rural band tendered them a serenade, and after playing several delightful airs they were entertained by the doctor and his bride, Dr. Briscoe giving each member of the band a present.



THE LATE HENRY WEBER, SR.

DEATH AND FUNERAL OF HENRY WEBER, SR.

One of the Most Widely Known Horticulturists of the Country.

HE WAS A BRITISH SOLDIER

In the Crimean War and Came to America In 1865—His Success As a Florist and Agriculturist—The Funeral Services.

With the death of Henry Weber, Sr., at Oakland, on Thursday afternoon of last week, one of the most noted men in horticulture in this country passed away. Mr. Weber was a man of many interesting traits. He had the German penchant for gardening. Some years ago he came here from Cumberland and with $1,000 he bought 100 acres of glade land and started an industry which brought him note and wealth. The land which he bought for a mere song is today worth forty or fifty times the amount he paid for it. He made additions to the original tract, and his holdings at his death aggregated many hundreds of acres. His property lies along the Baltimore and Ohio railroad just east of Oakland, and makes a beautiful picture from a car window.

Mr. Weber was born in Hesse-Cassel, Germany, in 1835, being a son of John and Elizabeth Weber. The father was a farmer by occupation and died at the age of sixty-three years as the result of an injury. His wife, the mother of five children, of whom Mr. Henry Weber was the youngest and sole survivor, died when in her fifty-ninth year.

In the usual manner of German lads Mr. Weber attended the government schools until he was fifteen years old, after which he began serving an apprenticeship to a florist. In time he became a trusted and competent employe and was placed in charge of his employers' business. During the Crimean war in 1854 and 1855, he served in the British army and in the following ten years he was stationed at various points in Asia, Africa, Australia and New Zealand. Thus it may be seen that he was literally a world-wide traveler and that his experiences were something uncommon and extremely interesting. It was in 1865 that he decided to come to America, and with his brother John he embarked in general farming and market gardening at Mount Savage, Allegany county. There he was married in the following year to Miss Catharine Schultz, and four years later he removed from Mount Savage to the Potomac Meadows, about two miles west of Cumberland, where his nephew, John A. Bopp, now has extensive greenhouses. Mr. Weber was among the pioneer vegetable and flower growers in Western Maryland, devoting more of his time to the former in his early days.

Then it was that he looked to the bog lands of Garrett county, fog-enshrouded, despite the fact that they are on the summit of the Alleghanies. Here he raised celery with such success that he became known as "The Celery King." With equal success he raised cauliflower and cabbage, and his products took first prizes at the World's fair at Chicago.

His land is similar to that around Kalamazoo, Michigan, the great celery-growing section, made famous by the Holland colony, and worth $500 an acre. There is a similar soil on Long Island.

While known as "The Celery King," Mr. Weber gained prominence in his latter days from the cultivation of flowers, developing the rose, carnation and chrysanthemum. At flower shows everywhere he was a premium winner. He introduced distinctive varieties, including the pink Genevieve Lord carnation, named for a daughter of Charles K. Lord of Baltimore, and the Governor Lowndes, a white carnation. He also grew the President Carnot rose, besides many kinds of chrysanthemums. William Weber, a son, managed the business largely in his father's declining days, assisted by his brothers, Messrs. Henry and George, who, with their father, constituted the firm of H. Weber & Sons.

Mr. Weber was the father of eleven children: Miss Mamie, Henry P., William, Elizabeth, Katie, George, Anhie, Edith, John, Frank and Ralph. Of this number two—Messrs. Henry P. and William—are married. The balance reside in the beautiful home erected but a few years ago with their lately widowed mother.

The deceased was the soul of honesty, a devout believer in Christianity and a model of perfection in his domestic life. No resident of Garrett county was held in greater esteem by his fellow men, while he was almost idolized by his wife and children because of his constant kindness and never-ceasing thoughtfulness for their comfort and happiness.

The funeral of Mr. Weber took place Saturday afternoon last at two o'clock from his late home, the interment being made at a spot on the farm near the family mansion.

While an ardent Christian, his belief was peculiar to those who are unacquainted with it and its teachings. He belonged to the Bible House Congregation, which claims not to be a denomination. It is known as the "Millennial Dawn" sect, of which Mr. C. T. Russell, of Allegany City, Pa., is one of the leading spirits, and it was he who conducted the funeral services, choosing for his text a quotation from the Book of Revelations. Mr. Russell, in his discourses alluded to Mr. Weber as a true Christian, a believer and one of God's chosen vassals on earth to expound the true gospel as revealed. The funeral discourse was an exposition of the faith of the sect and in it the speaker made many truths plain.

Mr. Weber was a "pilgrim" in the sect. He visited many cities in the south and west where he spoke at meetings held in public halls and in churches. The belief of the sect is that Satan is the ruler of the present world and at the millennial dawn Christ will take charge of the affairs of the earth. According to the teachings the dawn is near. The sect does not believe in a literal hell, but that death is hell. Some are resurrected spiritually, at death, not being permitted to sleep, while others who are earthly, sleep, until the general quickening of the dead, when the church is all formed at which time the earth will be transformed into a paradise such as was that chosen by God for Adam where all the good spirits will dwell forever.

The pallbearers at the funeral were Messrs. J. W. Alexander, of New York; J. A. Bopp, of Cumberland, Messrs. D. E. Offutt, A. D. Naylor and J. A. Grant, of Oakland, and P. T. Garthright, of Mountain Lake Park.

A Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our thanks to the many friends for their services and kindnesses shown during the long illness and upon the occasion of the funeral of the late Henry Weber, Sr.

MARRIED

WASHBURNE—JENNINGS—At Brunswick, Md., yesterday afternoon, by Rev. Yellott, Mr. V. V. Washburne, of Oakland, and Miss Rose V. Jennings, of Brunswick. The couple arrived in Oakland last night on train No. 1. The groom is the Baltimore and Ohio agent in Oakland where he has made many warm friends. The bride is a favorite among her acquaintances at Brunswick.

THE MARYLAND GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Third Week of the Session and No Legislation Enacted.

SENATORIAL DEADLOCK STILL ON

Notwithstanding the Efforts that have Been Made to Break It by Mr. Gorman and Backers of Mr. Bernard Carter—Local Measures.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS,
January, 26th, 1904.

Although by the time this reaches you the senatorial mixup, which since the 19th has dead-locked the legislature, will very probably be over. At this writing another ballot has just been taken with the same negative result which has terminated the work of the joint convention in its sessions thus far.

General Murray Vandiver, Mr. I. Freeman Rasin and ex-Governor John Walter Smith were in conference, behind locked doors this morning during the balloting, but immediately upon the adjournment of the joint assemblage left the treasurer's office, a call for a caucus preceding them.

The work of securing the 46 names for calling the democratic members of the two houses together went forward rapidly, Smith men eager to get their names on the paper and Rayner's city delegates, tired out by the long dead-lock, and without consulting Rayner, fairly falling fell over each other to get theirs on.

Just what sort of an assurance Governor Smith has had, none seems to know, since all that was done in Washington Saturday and Sunday at the conferences with Senator Gorman was to decide that Rayner was to be beaten at all hazards, and that a caucus should be called as soon as possible.

There was absolutely no talk whatever about dropping Carter and no talk about jumping back to Smith, unless, it is said, he polled 35 votes in the open session, which he has thus far failed to do; yet the ex-Governor's stock has boomed since Sunday when Rayner's men began to be less confident.

Rayner himself looks worried, Smith looks serious, while Colonel Charles H. Carter is absolutely confident that the caucus tomorrow night will nominate his father. It was said today that ex-Governor Smith had moved heaven and earth to get Jackson and Miles to throw their votes to him today, but Wicomico and Somerset men did not move in the matter.

If Carter is elected it will be an exact repetition of the election of Chas. H. Gibson in 1892. Jackson was the retiring Governor then, and Smith occupied about the same figure in the fight that Jackson does now. Had Smith withdrawn then in Jackson's favor the Wicomico and not the Talbot man would have been elected. While Jackson and Smith have formed a coalition for mutual benefit in this fight, it can scarcely be wondered at if Jackson does now as Smith did then.

If Mr. Gorman is still determined to force the election of Bernard Carter, it means but one single thing. He wants and expects to get the support of the Pennsylvania railroad and the Baltimore and Ohio with their allied lines. This practically means the backing of the corporations and moneyed interests of this country against Roosevelt in a campaign for the presidency, and especially against the other democratic candidates in a fight for the nomination. If Gorman gets these people behind him he will be nominated for the presidency, and from this point of view one can hardly blame him for acting as he has done, although there is certainly another side which he ought to have considered.

If Gorman forces Carter through, as it is by no means impossible that he will, although it did look impossible last week, it means further than the above, that the Senator is staking all on this one throw of dice.

Smith and other leaders in open rebellion may be as furious as they like, but rage as they may and snarl as they will, no chance to strike Gorman will they have until after the presidential campaign. If Gorman loses that he won't care what these men do here in Maryland. He will be ready to retire. If he wins, if he is elected—well what should the President of the United States care for the rancor of a politician of the Eastern Shore.

That is unquestionably Mr. Gorman's view, and if the caucus forces Carter through tomorrow night Mr. Gorman might just as well put his O. K. on this statement here, the truth of it will be so patent.

In the meanwhile all legislative work has been at a standstill and only a few bills have even made their appearance, these lodging somewhere promptly, waiting for the committees, yet to be appointed, to go to work on them.

Delegate Howard today introduced a bill in the House to compel coal and fire-clay mine owners in Garrett county to pay off their employees semi-monthly, a fine of not less than $50 and not more than $500 being attached for violations.

Both of the Garrett delegation are pleasant, gentlemenly fellows and have made a good impression on those who have come in contact with them.

Senator Palmer has introduced several bills during the very brief sessions preceding a ballot for the senator. One of these provides for a sum of money, $4,000, to be paid the school commissioners of Garrett county for two years, out of the state school fund. Another prohibits the sale of liquor of any sort within three and one-half miles of Fairview Church, in election district No. 8.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

The village genius, who is locally known as the "Professor," has been laboring zealously for some weeks in the construction of a modern wireless telephone. This twentieth century wonder, according to the "Professor's" predictions, will be a marvel of speed and accuracy in the transmission of sound. We may state without divulging any of the inventor's vital secrets, that the most essential material needed in the construction of this instrument is the untanned covering of the common Garrett county ground hog. And we can assure the superstitious agriculturist of this section, that the ground hog will cut no figure in the weather arrangements this spring, as all the creatures of that specie that were not sacrificed in behalf of the "Professor's" telephone industry, have gone south to visit till the smallpox scare is over.

Mr. Harvey Custer, of Manadier's Ridge, and Miss Effie Blocher, of the Backwoods settlement, were quietly married a few days ago, by Rev. Fike at his home. This event was a surprise to many friends of the young people.

Mr. Simon Brennemen, a popular young builder and contractor of this place, and Miss. Susie Klots, a popular and well known lady also of this community started ostensibly for a sleigh ride, early last week, in the course of which they visited Frostburg, Cumberland and Washington, D. C., and when they returned they were no longer two, but one. We extend our heartiest congratulations, and an earnest wish that their voyage over life's billowy sea may be unmarred.

Mr. Sampson Sibert, a veteran of the civil war, and Miss Mary, daughter of ex-sheriff A. J. Oester, are upon this weeks sick list.

Ex-Deputy Sheriff S. O. Wiley went to Baltimore last Wednesday where we understand he has secured employment.

H. E. Doolittle purchased a fine team of draught horses, over in Somerset County, Pa., last week, the purchase price being $400.

Mr. E. F. Durst, of Grantsville, was here among friends two days last week.

Prof. W. A. Althers was visiting at Fairview last Saturday.

Springs.

Meyersdale Commercial.

Oliver Keim, of Illinois, arrived at this place last Thursday, to visit his father, David Keim, who is ill.

Menno Gingerich, from Amish, Iowa, reached here last Saturday evening. He expects to be united in the holy bonds of wedlock with Miss Mary Burkholder, of near Grantsville, Md., in the near future.

Mrs. P. M. Connor, of Listie, is visiting at the home of her parents at this place.

The teachers' institute which was appointed for this place January 23, has been postponed until February 6, on account of other meetings which seem to conflict.

Prof. P. S. Davis returned home last week from Brantsville, Va., where he had been teaching in the Prince William Academy, on account of ill health. He is improving and expects to leave again on Friday.

Nelson Brenneman expects to move into his new house this week.

Miss Amanda Slabach is working for C. M. Beachy at present.

R. M. Beachy, veterinary surgeon, of near Niverton, expects to move into the tenement house of M. E. Yoder, near Meyersdale.

DIED.

THAYER.—At his residence near Elder, this county, yesterday morning at eight o'clock of typhoid fever, Thomas B. Thayer, aged about 39 years. The deceased leaves a widow and seven children. He was a son of the late Wright Thayer, of Thayerville. He recently took out a life insurance policy with Mr. R. C. McCandlish, of Friendsville, for $1,000 which will be paid to his wife within a few weeks. His funeral will take place tomorrow with interment in the Thayerville cemetery.

TELEPHONE COMPANY OFFICERS

Stockholders' Meeting of the Garrett County Company Elect New Board Of Directors—W. A. Maffett Now President.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Garrett County Telephone Company was held at Hoyes school house on last Saturday afternoon when a majority of the stock was represented by persons holding the same or by proxy.

The only business transacted at the meeting was the election of a board of directors for the ensuing year as follows: William A. Maffett, of Oakland, S. P. Specht, of Deer Park; Meshech Mattingly, of Hoyes; D. S. Custer, of Friendsville, and Philip P. McAndrews, of New Germany. These directors were instructed to appoint local directors in their several localities to cooperate with them in looking after the interests of the company and to have immediate charge of affairs affecting the company's welfare in their respective communities.

A meeting of the newly elected board of directors was held immediately after the adjournment of the stockholders' meeting when the following executive officers were elected:

President, W. A. Maffett, of Oakland.

Vice President, A. D. Naylor, of Oakland.

Secretary, W. H. Gnagey, of Accident.

The advisability of purchasing and installing a new and larger switchboard in the Oakland central and the consolidation of the Hoyes and Accident exchanges has been taken under advisement by the officers and the subscribers may look forward to much needed improvements along the lines above suggested at no late date.

The extension of lines already erected and the building of new lines into other territory is also being considered, as well as other matters tending to improve the company's system.

The rentals for the phones will remain the same as in the past six months.

IN MEMORIAM

Resolutions of respect on the death of Mrs. B. F. Crane, wife of Brother B. F. Crane, adopted by Garrett Lodge, K. of P., No 113., of Oakland, Md:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in His love and infinite wisdom to call from this sphere of life to that better world, the wife of our esteemed Brother B. F. Crane, who by her Christian living and noble life, has endeared her to all who knew her; therefore be it

Resolved, That we deeply feel the loss sustained and we extend to our Brother and his family our heart felt sympathy in their time of sorrow and afflictions and commend them and ourselves to the will of our Most Heavenly Father whose dealings are ever for the good of those that love him; and be it further

Resolved That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our Lodge, and that a copy be sent to Brother Crane and his family.

WEEDS

Consumption is a human weed flourishing best in weak lungs. Like other weeds it's easily destroyed while young; when old, sometimes impossible.

Strengthen the lungs as you would weak land and the weeds will disappear.

The best lung fertilizer is Scott's Emulsion. Salt pork is good too, but it is very hard to digest.

The time to treat consumption is when you begin trying to hide it from yourself. Others see it, you won't.

Don't wait until you can't deceive yourself any longer. Begin with the first thought to take Scott's Emulsion. If it isn't really consumption so much the better; you will soon forget it and be better for the treatment. If it is consumption you can't expect to be cured at once, but if you will begin in time and will be rigidly regular in your treatment you will win.

Scott's Emulsion, fresh air, rest all you can, eat all you can, that's the treatment and that's the best treatment.

We will send you a little of the Emulsion free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Mr. F. T. Martin, of Fairmont, spent Sunday in Oakland with his family

Mrs. R. E. Sliger spent a few days this week among relatives and friends at Lonaconing.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davis spent a day or two with relatives at Terra Alta this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Junkins, of near Deer Park, were visitors to Oakland this morning.

Mr. D. M. Mason is over at Uniontown, Pa., where he is visiting his neice, Miss Chisholm, who has been dangerously ill.

The public schools in Oakland which were closed several weeks ago on account of the smallpox outbreak here, resumed Monday morning with a fair attendance.

Miss Madge Chisholm, who has been dangerously ill at Uniontown, where she is on a visit to relatives, is much improved this morning according to a telegram received by her father.

Mr. G. H. Walters, who has operated the Schley Hotel for a year or more, has sold out to a young man from Ohio Pyle, Pa., who will assume charge on Monday of next week.

We regret to learn that smallpox has appeared at Terra Alta, where there is one well defined case, and also at Kingwood where several cases have developed within the past week or two.

The St. Paul's M. E. Choir is requested to meet Saturday evening at 7.30. A full attendance is desired.

Mr. N. S. Heindel, who spent two weeks or more in Florida and Baltimore, returned to Oakland yesterday morning.

Ex-Sheriff W. A. Maffett, who visited in the lower end of the county on official business last week, returned to Oakland yesterday afternoon.

The contract for erecting a new school building at Grafton to cost over $30,000 was awarded yesterday to Mr. W. H. Spedden, formerly of Oakland but now a leading contractor and builder at Fairmont, W. Va.

Services in St. Mark's Lutheran church as follows: Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings of this week at 7.30; on Sabbath, Sunday School at 9.30; Communion at 10.30; Christian Endeavor at 6.30; Preaching at 7.30 p. m.

Mr. Herman Cruetzberg has sold his meat and grocery business to Mr. Oliver Maffett, brother of ex-Sheriff W. A. Maffett, of Oakland. The new proprietor will assume charge on Monday next. Mr. Cruetzberg and wife expect to leave shortly for the west where they will make their future home. Mr. Maffett has the best wishes of numerous friends in Oakland for success in his undertaking.

At the town election held in Parsons last Thursday, Jeff Lipscomb was elected Mayor by a majority of six votes. Jeff was on the "snake medicine" ticket, and the town will therefore be "wet" this season, no difference what kind of weather we have. The inauguration ceremonies will take place on Ground Hog Day, and will be of a rural character, consisting principally of the consumption of the fluid extract of corn, rye etc., and taking the new Mayor home in a wheel-barrow and putting him to bed with his boots on.—Kingwood Argus.

EISEL—The many friends of Mr. William Eisel, who resided with his parents between the Savage mountains west of Frostburg, were sorry to learn of his death at the residence of his father on Friday evening. He was in his seventeenth year and was the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Eisel. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon at 2 30 o'clock from St. Paul's English Lutheran church, of which the deceased was a devoted member. Rev. F. R. Wagner, pastor, conducted the funeral services at the church and grave.

HAS SOLD HIS PROPERTY.

Mr. John E. Gnagy the Veteran Merchant at Accident, Will Retire from Business.

Mr. John E. Gnagy, who has for many years been highly successful in the mercantile business at Accident, disposed of his stock of goods on last Saturday to Mr. John L. Richter, of Accident, who has been engaged there as a tanner, and his nephew, Mr. J. H. Richter, a traveling agricultural implement salesman.

Mr. Gnagy also sold to the Messrs. Richter his store building and residence property, but retains possession of the latter for a term of one year with the privilege of extending his term of tenancy to two years.

While Mr. Gnagy's friends in his section will regret to learn that he will retire from active business life they can console themselves with the fact that they will retain him as a neighbor for some time to come, as it is his present intention to remove from the village to his farm, situated a mile or so from Accident, upon the expiration of his lease upon the property he now occupies.

His son, Mr. W. H. Gnagy, who has for many years assisted his father in managing the business, may remove to Ohio at an early date.

ROAD PETITION.

Notice is hereby given that at the expiration of thirty days from the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners of Garrett county, Md., for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a proposed new county road beginning for the same at a point on Gap Run, near the residence of Mrs. Archibald DeWitt, in District No. 6 of said county and running up said run through the lands of Mrs. DeWitt, George E. Bishoff and Truman W. Casteel and to intersect the Sang Run road at or near the bridge at Cuppett & Lytle's store in the village of Sang Run, a distance of about three miles.

THE ARMY CAMP AGAIN.

Meeting Held and Committee Sent to Washington Last Night.

On Monday Mr. F. A. Thayer was in receipt of a letter from Congressman Pearre, stating that the Congressional Committee on Military Affairs would hold a meeting this morning to consider the establishment of army camps in different sections of the country and suggested that Oakland send a delegation of her citizens to Washington for the purpose of conferring with the committee.

Tuesday night a meeting of the citizens of Oakland was held when a committee of fifteen was elected to go to Washington in response to Col. Pearre's invitation, a majority of the members leaving here last night for the Capital. The committee selected at the public meeting was composed of Messrs. D. E. Offutt, F. A. Thayer, G. S. Hamill, C. S. Davis, J. M. Jarboe, S. T. Jones, E. H. Sincell, E. A. Browning, Austin Brown, J. C. Renninger, Dr. J. E. Legge, Dr. W. H. Ravenscraft, Dr. H. W. McComas, A. D. Naylor, W. R. Stull and Thomas Little.

The committee met at the Capitol this morning and presented the claims of Oakland in the most favorable light but of course no action was taken by the Military Committee and may not be for months to come.

BLOOMINGTON.

Mr. Robert Morehead, Jr., and Miss Emma Green, daughter of Mr. B. F. Green, of Brantsburg, two well-known and popular young people of this place, were married at Piedmont last Sunday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. H. Kight, at the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. Frederick Poland, on Fairview street. The wedding was a very quiet one, only a few friends being present. The happy couple returned to Bloomington the same evening and will make their future home at Lochiel, where the groom owns a home comfortably furnished.

The revival services in the M. E. church came to an end on last Sunday evening.

Evangelist Riley, of Baltimore, who has been assisting Rev. Snedegar, the pastor in charge returned home.

Assemblyman Cookman Howard spent Sunday with his parents, returning to Annapolis Monday evening in time for the session of the legislature. Mr. Howard expects to introduce some bills this week that will be of special benefit to the laboring interests of Garrett county.

Mr. and Mrs. Gay, of Franklin Hill, return thanks to the obliging doctor who kindly left a little boy baby at their home last Friday morning.

Rev. H. H. Kight, of Piedmont, spent Monday with relatives in this place.

Buxton mine suspended work a few days of last week to instal a new and larger boiler in place of an old one in the boiler rooms at the mouth of the mine.

The coal miners at Dodson, near Harrison, and at Blaine, W. Va., have been reduced to 50 cents a ton. The miners have accepted the reduction of 15 cents a ton and are busy at work and no trouble over the cut is feared. Fifty cent coal is "coming down the pike" and is getting awfully near to this region. No reduction, however, is expected by the men earlier than April 1st.

Miss Katie Devine, of Cumberland, and her brother, Mr. Thomas Devine, stenographer for the Dodson Coal Co., of Dodson, W. Va., spent Sunday with their sister, Mrs. Maggie Collins.

Mrs. Charlotte Kemp, widow of the late Elijah Kemp, and mother of Dr. H. M. Kemp, of this place, who fell and fractured her thigh a few days before Christmas, is lying at her son's home in a critical condition and on account of her advanced age slight hopes are entertained of her ultimate recovery.

Mr. Louie Grant, a popular and well known employe at the Big Vein, narrowly escaped being crushed to death on last Tuesday morning. He was busy at work securing supports to a faulty and dangerous piece of roof in the main heading of the mine near the outcrop, when, without a moment's warning about fifteen tons of rock and earth commenced to fall and break the supports around him. Mr. Grant made a dive for his life and by crawling on his hands and knees succeeded in escaping the heavy part of the fall, but was cut and bruised about the head, shoulders and body by the falling rock and slate.

Miss Katie Jones, of Mt. Lake Park, is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Thos. Swann.

The cable connected with the rope haulage in the Buxton mine broke Tuesday morning about the time the men were going to work and as a consequence about 250 men were thrown idle for the day.

Miss Ollie Bartlett, who has been visiting relatives at Ridgeley, W. Va., for the past ten days returned home Monday.

Mr. Ike Paugh, son of Mr. Nicholas Paugh, of near Frankville, spent a few days of this week visiting his sister, Mrs. Adam Elliott.

Mr. Freely Tibbetts, of Mountain Lake Park, will move to town the latter part of this week and occupy the house on brick row recently vacated by Mr. Del McCrobie, the latter having moved in one of the Burk tenement houses.

New Age Problem.

Meyersdale Commercial.

Under this head J. B. Oder, the veteran editor of the Frostburg Journal gives his readers the following mathematical problem, and, as the parties named are both residents of this vicinity, we trust that our mathematicians will set their thinkers "a-thunkin'" and try to solve the same for this well known newspaper man, who is nothing if not original. We trust that you will be prompt in sending in your answers, directing them to the Mining Journal, Frostburg, Md.

Monday, December 21, last, W. T. Hoblitzell, of Meyersdale, Pa., was 50 years old.

Same day Hon. Peter Longevity Livengood, editor of the Salisbury (Pa.) Star, was 40.

Hoblitzell, it will be seen, had 25 per cent. advantage.

Ten years ago he had 33⅓ per cent.; 30 years ago 50 per cent., and 50 years ago 100 per cent.

Ten years hence Hoblitzell will have 20 per cent. advantage, 20 years 16⅔ per cent., and 30 years hence only 12½ per cent.

As there is some feeling broadcast that Pennsylvania editors will not reach "the better land," the question is—when or where will Livengood "catch up?"

The Woman Who Knew

By WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT

BILL DUDLEY, who owned the peach farm touching the western borders of the hills, peered in through the open door of Hatfield's shanty as he drove by. Hatfield was there, bending over the stove, occupied probably with a rasher of bacon and a tin cup of tea. Above the faint sizzle from the pan and the rustling grind of the wheels in the heavy sand of the road, Dudley heard the muttering of a voice. It was as if Hatfield were talking back at the sputter of the fat. Dudley pulled up in sudden pity and called. The man's murmur ceased, but a flock of geese behind the shanty whanged up a general and animated comment. Hatfield appeared at the door.

He was tall, young, black haired. His face had the yellowish whiteness of an unblued washing. His body was bent, his long arms hanging forward like an aged farmer's.

"Tomorrer's Sunday," Dudley began, with effort. "What be you a-goin' t' do? They's partridge—slews o' partridge—in them swails yonder on the west slopes. Then, ef we want a bluebill, or redhead, or mallard—you know Titman lake, an' fishin' in old Silver? Lew Gail got a 20 pounder thar yistiddy—grass pike. Come on along. Peaches all marketed. Apples are better out in the cool. Least they won't spile. Save yer pork fur winter and hev game fur a week. Come on!"

"Thank you, Dudley, but I'd better not. I'm a poor hunter."

"Time you war learnin', then. Come on'!'

"But—"

"I'll rout you out 'bout three an' a half in the mornin'. We'll go to the duck cove fust, an' wait for light to see the birds. I got two guns. Git up, Pollie! G'long!"

This invitation of Dudley's must weigh in as a virtue. He would far rather have gone hunting alone. Moreover, the day's sport would be strained because free silences and random chatter were impossible in the presence of an inscrutable fellow like Hatfield. Dudley was the happiest man in the hills just now. He turned back after Pollie had plodded on a hundred yards or so. Hatfield was still standing in his doorway, his body appearing long drawn and helpless.

Dudley smoked, chuckled to the mare, and smacked his lips at the west. He had reached the High ridge. The view was glorious, startling. The fields and lakes and forests shone through a golden grenadine of Indian summer haze. All the jewels of heaven seemed to have dropped into the valley, there to glow in the smoky light of the red-hot crucible sagging down west. . . . About a quarter of a mile south of Dudley's place there was a white cottage with green blinds. A handsome young woman appeared at the door of the cottage, glanced back cautiously, then waved a hurried, laughing kiss at Dudley as he passed.

Hatfield lingered at the doorway until the tea boiled over and the bacon was charred. He would, perhaps, have forgotten to eat had not the scalding bubbles aroused him. Most pitiable was his attempt. The odor of food sickened him. He drank the tea from the leaves and set the rest away, handling the dishes repugnantly. Then he rolled a cigarette, and lit it, and hurried out in the air. The dark was growing. He reflected miserably that cigarettes were always endurable.

Why did Hatfield live alone on the Hill forty? One must travel beyond the ridge district to learn this. A few suggested that weak lungs were responsible for his purchase of the little fruit farm and his stanch adherence thereto; others believed that he had dissipated fortune, physique and morals in metropolitan company, and that he sought to repair all three by solitude and toil incessant. Which guess was farthest afield is not for this narrative. A few things were known; that he spoke as one having culture and understanding; that he labored from dawn to dark in the frail but ceaseless manner of a woman; that he paid for what he bought swiftly and without question; that he gladly harbored wayfarers, but avoided affiliations with his neighbors; that he lived carelessly, bitterly, and absolutely alone.

Had you watched him that night, you would have learned that Hatfield's soul held the passion and poetry of a Greek's, the supreme fervor of a man allied with the idols of a boy. And you might have imagined without touching doubtful fabric that his mastering romance was tortured by a knowledge of physical unfitness, fanned by solitude and rendered maddening by its purposeless fruition.

It was dark before moonrise. The geese were regabbing the day's events by the water trough. Hatfield paused suddenly. He had walked for an hour, walked swiftly to and fro, between the barn and the shed. He almost ran indoors, lit his lamp, placed it beside the mirror in the kitchen, and shaved with clumsy haste. Then he bathed outside at the cistern and attired himself in clothing of rare taste and quality but which hung tragically loose. There was an irrevocable sorrow in the largeness of that suit of a year ago. The hills had not added unto his flesh. When all was done, he left the house and hurried up the road in the direction Dudley had taken.

A slip of the moon had dawned in the far southwest. The rectangular clot of shadow ahead was the white cottage with green blinds. As Hatfield approached words softly spoken reached him. He crept into the elder shrubs which obscured the roadside and made his way forward until his suffering eyes caught a dim view of two figures at the gate, the figure of a man and of a woman (whose voices he knew) in lovers' embrace.

"What was that noise?" the woman asked, intensely, drawing quickly away from the other.

"Nothin' but a bunny in th' brush," Dudley whispered, amorously. "We're goin' out after game to-morrer—me an' Hatfield—pore devil, looked so lonesome as I druv by this evenin' thet I just had t' ask him t' come along."

There was a long silence.

"Bill," said the woman, at last, "now that we're engaged and goin' to be married, I've got to 'fess up. You know this spring we all thought Hatfield was dyin' of consumption. Well, I tried to be good to him, brought him little cookin's, you know, an' tried t' tidy up his house a bit. Well, he'd look at me kinda funny all the time, sorta pitiful, an' yet I can't exactly tell how he looked. I took it jus' th' same as any nurse would a fever patient—allowin' fur him, y' know. An' one day he said he wished I could always be aroun' thet little cabin o' his'n, an' the words scared him, an' he looked out at the rainy peach blossoms for a long spell, red as any lamp shade. Another time he said I was the kind of a woman that the supreme intelligence intended the breed to be—strong backed and soft handed! Or somepin' like thet. An' then his cough eased up and he tuk to work, and I didn't go no more. Two or three times he came here in th' evenin', but mother tuk care of him, an' I was allus pickin' plums or cannin' peaches. An' thet's all."

Dudley laughed.

"I ain't afraid of pore Hatfield a-cuttin' me out," he said.

"But be nice t' him t'morrer," the woman whispered, hastily. "He's a pore, sad feller, an' harmless as—"

"Harmless as a rabbit," Dudley finished.

A few minutes before four the next morning, while it was still black night, Dudley drew up his rig at Hatfield's gate. There was neither sound nor sign of light in the shanty, so the driver made a huge noise and prepared to wait. Scarcely 30 seconds passed before Hatfield appeared in the clothes he had worn the night before. Dudley turned his lantern upon the gaunt figure.

"Go an' git yer rubber boots," he commanded, laughingly. "Can't do 'thout 'em."

Hatfield obeyed silently, and two minutes later was driven rapidly toward Titman lake. The horse was fastened on the high rail and Dudley led the way to the cove.

"You've got the best gun," the man of experience explained—"12-gauge hammerless. Press down that little lever on the left side an' you cock her. . . . No, don't cock her yit. She's loaded!"

They had a mile to walk. The day was gathering.

"S-sh-h!" warned Dudley. "We're purty nigh thar. Ye don't want t' skeer 'em! By cripes, but ye're a fool with a gun!"

"Did you say that you press this left lever down to cock the piece—both barrels?" Hatfield gasped.

"Sure," whispered Dudley. "The lake's yonder. D'ye see it?"

Titman was ahead, showing up pearl gray in the dawning, like the mist which hangs over a bog.

"S-sh-h!" warned Dudley. "Thar's a flock down in the cove—hear 'em? We'll get a bunch—fust shot!"

They crept on. Dudley turned at last, his body bent behind an artificial blind in the edge of the bluff over the cove. His arm was raised to further command silence.

Hatfield was crouched, too. The nerves of the man wrung a horrid scream from his throat, before the crash of the gun.

That instant it seemed that the whole lake rattled and clacked, but the sound was merely from the cove where the vast flock was rising. . . . Hatfield saw the other sink upon his gun, his chin and throat a blotch of deep color.

Two or three hours later Hatfield's brain assumed command of surviving faculties. He was two miles away on the far shore of old Silver. He was harboring a world of ancient passion — that of killing himself. The lake was there, but it did not appeal. The knife in his pocket horrified He wanted one more shell. Dudley ha given him two, but both barrels were empty. There were innumerable shells on Dudley's body. He started back, running.

The place was changed. Dudley was not there! Other hunters had come to the blind. Hatfield searched on his hands and knees for one dropped shell. Thus he was found by those who required him.

The twelve wise men adjudged him insane after many days, but the woman who knew most, yet who had done no wrong—remained to weep. — Chicago Tribune.

The Nile Dam.

Sir Benjamin Baker, who built the Nile dam, has just given out some new figures concerning the dam and its consequences. During the critical periods for the crops—March to June—the supply of water for irrigation was doubled by the dam. The irrigation of rice, prohibited in previous years, was allowed, and the increase in value of land now converted to irrigation is calculated at over $25,000,000.

Quick Work.

Word comes from Iowa that the champion corn husker husked 208 bushels of corn in ten hours. That is what might be called moving the crop on the lightning express, remarks the Chicago News.

Must Take Their Choice.

Chicago has served formal notice upon highwaymen, says the Washington Post, that they must either go to work or go into politics if they want to remain in the city.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

THE DRUNKARD'S SOLILOQUY.

Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight,
And make me a man again, just for to-night;
Let me shake off these vile rags that I wear,
Cleanse me from all this foul stain that I bear;
Oh let me stand where I stood long ago,
Freed from these sorrows, unknown to this woe;
Freed from a life that is cursing my soul
Unto death while the years of eternity roll.

Backward, turn backward, oh fast-flowing stream,
Would that my life could prove only a dream!
Let me forget the black sins of the past;
Let me undo all my folly so vast;
Let me live over the dark life that is gone;
Bring back the dark, wasted years that are flown;
Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight,
And make me a man again, just for to-night.

Back! Yes, turn backward, ye swift-rolling years!
Why does your memory bring forth these hot tears?
Why comes this vision of life lost in sin?
Why am I thinking of what might have been?
Where is my home, once so happy and bright?
Where is that face whose presence was light?
Where are the children who climbed on my knee?
Back, flowing tide! bring them once more to me!

Yet the tide rushes on, this wild flight of the years,
And the days only deepen my sorrows and fears.
I call, but no answer comes back to me now,
Naught but an echo as weak as my vow.
For 'neath the sad cypress tree, low in the sod,
Lies the body whose soul has gone back to its God.
And out of the silence no child voices come,
As in days long ago in my sweet, happy home.

Backward? Nay, Time rushes onward and on;
'Tis the dream that comes back of the days that are gone;
I yielded my strength when I could have been strong;
I would fly, but alas! I had lingered too long.
The hell hound had seized me—my will was not mine,
Destruction was born in the sparkling of wine!
So, in weakness, I totter through gloom to the grave,
A sovereign in birth, but in dying—a slave.

ALCOHOL AND DEATH RATE.

Accurate Statistics Gathered by Swiss Government Show Alarming Condition.

Switzerland is a country in which very little drunkenness is to be observed, for the good and sufficient reason that the police arrest on the spot every person who shows the least sign of intoxication. There is nevertheless a large amount of secret drinking, and especially in French Switzerland absinthe has of late increased in use until its ravages are very noticeable.

The government recognizes the drink problem as a most serious one, and is doing all it can to find means for its control. One of its recent investigations concerns the death rate from alcoholism. Statistics of this nature are usually inaccurate, for the reason that it is often impossible to find out just to what extent a deceased person has been given to the use of liquors. Relatives and even physicians conceal the facts out of the natural desire to protect the dead man's good name. Two years ago the Swiss government established, however, a system under which the facts can be secured without revealing the identity of individual drunkards. Doctors are required to make full reports, but on blanks that bear numbers instead of names. Only by a circuitous method involving application to the central government at Berne can names ever be connected with the reports.

The facts thus collected show that among the males over 20 years of age the deaths from delirium tremens average half of one per cent. This is ten times the rate officially recorded in France by the old imperfect statistical methods.

For males over 70 years of age alcohol is given as the principal or concomitant cause of death in ten per cent. of the cases.

The general death rate directly referable to acute or chronic alcoholism, without including hepatic cirrhosis or other subsidiary conditions, is three per cent.

This showing must admittedly be regarded as an alarming one, and as sufficient justification for the most strenuous efforts in the cause of temperance. The worst of it is that there is no reason to believe that the Switzerland death rate would appear exceptionally high if the real facts for other nations were known.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Railroads War on the Drinker.

Railroads throughout the country are waging war against the use of intoxicating liquors and tobacco by employes who are engaged in operating the lines. The fiat has gone forth generally that employes who drink or frequent places where liquors are sold are not safe to intrust with the lives of patrons or with the valuable property transported by the railroads. The rules which have recently been inaugurated against the use of tobacco are not so stringent as those against liquor, but generally they proscribe tobacco while on duty and when about stations. As for the cigarette, the order against it is almost as severe as that against whisky. The rule is being strictly enforced.—Journal of Inebriety.

TEST YOUR APPETITE.

Case of a Young Man Who Found It Was Not So Easy to Quit Drinking as He Had Supposed.

A young man carelessly formed the habit of taking a glass of liquor every morning before breakfast. An older friend advised him to quit before the habit should grow too strong.

"Oh, there's no danger; it's a mere notion. I can quit any time," replied the drinker.

"Suppose you try it to-morrow morning," suggested the friend.

"Very well; to please you I'll do so, but I assure you there's no cause for alarm."

A week later the young man met his friend again.

"You are not looking well," observed the latter. "Have you been ill?"

"Hardly," replied the other one. "But I am trying to escape a great danger; and fear that I shall before I shall have conquered. My eyes were opened to an imminent peril when I gave you that promise a week ago. I thank you for your timely suggestion."

"How did it affect you," inquired the friend.

"The first trial utterly deprived me of appetite for food. I could eat no breakfast, and was nervous and trembling all day. I was alarmed when I realized how insidiously that habit had fastened on me, and resolved to turn square about and never touch another drop. The swearing off has pulled me down severely, but I am gaining and mean to keep the upper hand after this. Strong drink will never catch me in his net again."—Church Life.

FINGERS ROTTED BY BEER.

Instances Where the Hands of Bartenders Have Been Crippled by the Liquor They Handled.

The Mail and Express gives the following significant facts: The attention of the New York hospital surgeons has been called to the big number of bartenders that have lost several fingers of both hands within the past few years. The first case was that of an employe of a Bowery concert hall. Three of the fingers of his right hand and two of his left were rotted away when he called at Bellevue one day, and begged the doctors to explain the reason. He said that his duty was to draw beer for the thousands who visited the garden nightly. The man was in perfect health otherwise, and it took the young doctors quite a time to arrive at any conclusion. But they did finally, and it nearly took the barman's breath away when they did.

"Your fingers have been rotted off," they said, "by the beer which you have handled."

Other cases of a similar nature came rapidly after this one, and to-day the physicians estimate there is an army of employes of saloons whose fingers are being ruined by the same cause. The acid and resin in the beer are said to be responsible.

The head bartender of a well-known downtown saloon says he knows a number of cases where beer drawers have, in addition to losing several fingers of both hands, lost the use of both members.

"Beer will rot iron, I believe," he added. "I know, and every bartender knows, that it is impossible to keep a good pair of shoes behind the bar. Beer will rot leather as rapidly, almost, as acid will eat into iron. If I were a temperance orator, I'd ask: What must beer do to men's stomach, if it eats away men's fingers and their shoe leather? I'm here to sell it, but won't drink it—not much.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

There are at the present time some 1,038 Catholic Total Abstinence unions in the United States, with a membership of 85,729.

In the great battle against intemperance and vice many Christians prefer a toy-pistol to a Krupp gun.—National Advocate.

The New York Evening Post raises the following pertinent question for the advocates of the canteen: "If beer close at hand is really a cure for too much beer outside the barracks, why should we not hear next of a little gambling in the post to cure the passion for a great deal in the civilian resorts?"

During the last 30 years, owing to drink, Normandy in France has lost 147,000 of her people. During the same period, the province of Orne has lost 71,000. In the whole of France in the last 50 years, while the consumption of alcohol has increased 250 per cent., the population has increased only 12 per cent.

It is estimated from a study of cooperative statistics that there are over 10,000 murders a year in the United States. From inquiries made in the large cities, where the facts are more accessible, it is evident that over 70 per cent. are committed by persons under the influence of spirits at the time of the commission of the crime.

HOUSEHOLD

PRETTY CORSET COVER.

It Is Made of Handkerchiefs and Described as Being Cheap as Well as Dainty.

While on a visit to a friend I saw a very pretty and simple corset cover, and on my return home succeeded in making one for myself. It is certainly a novelty and cheap as well as very pretty and dainty. Buy three common-sized ladies' handkerchiefs and cut them in two diagonally, making six equal pieces. Cut one of these halves in two again, leaving you five large pieces and two smaller ones. Narrow lace insertion about one-inch wide is sewed between all these pieces without cutting the insertion, but doubling it over diagonally at the corners between, in order to turn the corners. The arrangement of the pieces is shown in the cut, which shows how the cover will look when sewed together. Pieces a a are cut out just a trifle where the dotted lines are shown, to form the under arm portions of the cover. Piece b is the back, the point at the top of b coming directly in the center of the back.

After getting thus far, begin at corner x and sew the same kind of insertion along the two front edges, which have been previously hemmed with the narrowest of hems, and also sew it across the top cover, which has been hemmed, leaving the loops as shown in the drawing for the armholes, which with the part cut out in a will make all the armhole needed. You can measure an old cover for this measurement, being sure to get it large enough so it will not draw or be tight, and allow a little for shrinkage. Then sew narrow beading across the top of insertion, but not down the front edges. (By beading, I mean lace or insertion with holes in, so that you can run ribbon through). Edge the beading with lace edging, and the top of the cover is finished, except to run in the beading any desired color of baby ribbon. Around the armholes put a row of beading edged with lace and run in ribbons, finishing the armholes.

Gather the bottom of the cover to fit the waist, having the center of piece b in the center of the back. Sew wide beading at the bottom, fixing the gathers firm and stationary, and running wider ribbon through the beading for the belt. The sewing with the exception of the belt and the hemming is all over and over. The insertion and lace are about an inch wide, and the beading about half an inch or little wider. This makes a very full cover and a very pretty and dainty one. It takes five and a half yards of both lace and insertion, two and a quarter yards of narrow beading, three-quarters of a yard beading for belt, five yards narrow ribbon and one yard wider ribbon for belt.—C. B. Morse, in Farm and Home.

LEMON HAS MANY USES.

It Is Good for the Stomach, the Throat, the Hands, Finger Nails and the Complexion.

The usefulness of the lemon begins in the morning, even before you are out of bed. The juice of half a lemon squeezed into a glass of water and drunk unsweetened the first thing in the morning is an excellent remedy for bilious disorders.

If girls appreciated the lemon's usefulness as a beautifier, they would always have one at hand. The fingers or finger nails may have stains that refuse to yield to soap and water, in which case a little lemon juice will usually prove successful. Before manicuring the nails you should always soak them for at least five minutes in a basin of water in which are a few drops of lemon juice. The skin which grows so offensively around the nails is pushed back by orange wood sticks first dipped in lemon juice; and as for the teeth, no more effective cleanser or purer mouth wash can be found than a half dozen drops of lemon juice in a wineglass of water.

After washing the hands, lemon-juice and water makes a splendid bleach, but one curious thing should be remembered. Lemon juice pure darkens the skin, so do not make the mistake of rubbing in plain lemon-juice, instead of diluting it with water.

Lemon juice and glycerine is good for chapped hands. If you have a hoarse voice in the morning, lemon-juice, squeezed on to soft sugar till it is like a sirup, and a few drops of glycerine added, relieves the hoarseness at once, while a cold on the chest, or consumption itself, finds a formidable enemy in the following prescription:

Squeeze the juice of three lemons over three whole eggs, shell and all. In two or three days time the shell will have softened because of the effect of the lemon's acid on the lime composition of the shell. Then add a pint of rum and a pound of pulverized brown sugar candy. You can bottle this, and take a spoonful every morning before rising. It is simply wonderful as a tonic. —Chicago American.

Brown Hairpins.

After many failures, brown hairpins that will retain their color are now on the market.

ABOUT ENGAGEMENTS.

If a Girl Really Loves a Man She Will Wait for Him Patiently and Without Doubt.

It is one thing to fall in love and another to propose marriage. Men may be wise and cautious; they may have most sensibly made up their minds that it would be neither right nor fair for them to speak, and they may have definitely resolved not to say a word on the subject of marriage till they have, at least, a prospect of making a home for a wife.

Then there comes an accidental upset to their calculations—a word, a look, a blush, a smile. All these fine reasonings are thrown to the winds; they have blurted out the love they meant to keep concealed till the correct moment of avowal came. Araminta has confessed she reciprocates the devotion she is told of, and nothing remains but to ask papa's consent, and visit a jeweler's.

But then comes the side that is not all rapture. At first, to be engaged is enough to send any two adoring people up into a seventh heaven of bliss; but by and by that ceases entirely to satisfy. They would like to marry, to belong entirely to each other; to set up housekeeping, and know all the delights of a home which the other shares. The true test of love is not in the proposing and accepting, neither is it in the buying and wearing the ring; it is in the waiting with patience and indefinite time for the fulfillment of a hope of which the proposal and the engagement ring were merely a pledge.

The question again and again arises: "How long is it reasonable for a man to ask a girl to wait for him?" If it is a year, or even two, or three, he may be justified; for, after all, there is a definite end to the waiting, which draws nearer every day. But if after five years, say, the end looks no nearer—if he is still just as unlikely to be able to support a wife—should he still expect a girl to go on wasting the best years of her life on his behalf?

If she really loves him, it will not matter to her though she waited for him 20 years. It will be such an utter impossibility for her to think of any other man than himself that she will not feel her chances in other directions are being spoiled, for if she may not marry him, she would rather not marry anyone else while the world lasts. She will count any waiting short and light that has the hope of being his wife at the end of it, and she will wait without a desire to be free. If she does not love him—why, that is a different matter, and she had better not undertake at all a waiting which she will find intolerable.—Chicago American.

THE MISSION LAMP.

Latest Development of a Fad That Seems to Have Taken the Entire Country by Storm.

Mission furniture has become something more than a fad, and its availability for country and city home use has been demonstrated by the many articles modeled on mission lines that have been brought out by the manufacturers during the past year or so, and which have met with the approval of those who seek for chairs, tables, cabinets and the like that differ from conventional productions. The mission lamp is the latest manifestation of the tendency for furniture of this sort, and is portrayed above. In a den or a hall or any room where mission furniture predominates, such a lamp would add to the effect and the original is considerably more attractive than the picture might imply. As a novelty in the lamp line, the mission model calls for recognition, and, as has been said, it is particularly adapted to an apartment wherein the mission idea is the ruling one in furniture.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Hygienic Value of Fruit.

Hygienists all agree in telling us that we do not eat sufficient fruit, which is infinitely more productive of health and beauty than candy and pastry. Ripe apples are especially healthy, and children may eat them without danger. Some doctors say that an apple at bedtime produces sleep. Pears are more tasty than apples, but not so healthy unless cooked. Prunes have medicinal qualities which cannot be denied. They are better cooked, however. Apricots are also more healthy cooked than raw. Peaches are very healthy. The most healthy of all fruit, however, are grapes. Gooseberries and currants are best cooked. Figs are also excellent; they were in great favor with ancient Roman ladies, who always ate them for breakfast. Pineapples are said to be the best cure for dyspepsia yet known. Nuts of all kinds are indigestible. Oranges are also excellent as a cure for dyspepsia. Lemons produce cheerfulness and prolong life.

ANOTHER "NATURE" BOOK.

In Which Bridget Seton-Clancy Relates Tales of Her Intimacy with Wild Animals.

"Wild Brutes I Have Saw," by Bridget Seton-Clancy. This charming group of essays has about it the odor of the backwoods to a remarkable degree, says the Milwaukee Sentinel.

The authoress explains, in the preface, that her early life was spent in the wilds of northern Minnesota, where she associated almost entirely with wild animals. She says:

"Many times I used to set under a tree for hours at a time, watching for to get a shot at a rabbit. I could shoot good with a rifle, and have often saw men who were worse shots than I be. When the other girls were wasting their time going to district school, I would be walking through the woods, watching the wild beasts playing in the trees and on the grass, and learning something every minute. I seen lots of funny incidents, which I will try to mention in this here book."

Miss Seton-Clancy is one of those free, untamed souls who occasionally startle the literary world by their supreme disregard for the statute in such case made and provided. If she is ever worried by the rules of grammar, it does not appear in her work. She has something to say, and says it straight from the shoulder.

This is one of the best books of the year, and it should enjoy a large sale.

A Physician's Statement.

Yorktown, Ark., Jan. 11.—Leland Williamson, M. D., one of the cleverest physicians, has made a statement, endorsing Dodds' Kidney Pills and saying that he uses them in his daily practice in preference to any other Kidney medicine. His statement has created a profound sensation as it is somewhat unusual for a physician to publicly endorse anything in the shape of a patent medicine. Dr. Williamson says:

"After twenty years' practice in a sickly and malarious country I have come to the conclusion that it is always best to use the remedy that will relieve and cure my patients whether ethical or not.

"I have used Dodd's Kidney Pills with uniform success in the various forms of Kidney Disease, Pain in the Back, Gout, Rheumatism, Inflammation and Congestion of the Kidneys and all kindred diseases; I always prescribe Dodd's Kidney Pills in such cases and can testify that they invariably restore the Kidneys to their normal state and thereby relieve the blood of accumulated poisons, producing prompt and effective cures."

Miss Rose Hennessy, well known as a poetess and elocutionist, of Lexington, Ky., tells how she was cured of uterine inflammation and ovaritis by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For years I enjoyed the best of health and thought that I would always do so. I attended parties and receptions thinly clad, and would be suddenly chilled, but I did not think of the results. I caught a bad cold eighteen months ago while menstruating, and this caused inflammation of the womb and congested ovaries. I suffered excruciating pains and kept getting worse. My attention was called to your Vegetable Compound and the wonderful cures it had performed, and I made up my mind to try it for two months and see what it would do for me. Within one month I felt much better, and at the close of the second I was entirely well.

"I have advised a number of my lady friends to use it, and all express themselves as well satisfied with the results as I was."—MISS ROSE NORA HENNESSY, 410 S. Broadway, Lexington, Ky.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

DITCH-GRADING LEVEL.

Farmers Who Learn How to Use It Will Seldom Require the Services of a Surveyor.

I here give a rude sketch of a straight edge and level for grading tile ditch, which I will try to explain. First, the straight edge is five inches wide by seven-eighths inches thick and four feet one and a half inches long, making one-fourth of a rod of 16½ feet. The straight edge is leveled on the bottom, so that no lump of dirt or gravel stone can get underneath to hold it off from the bottom of the ditch. The two uprights, marked a, can be any length to suit the operator, made of one-half by three-inch stuff nailed on right-hand straight edge and the level fastened on the right-hand side of the uprights, so as to be out of the way of the staff or handle, which can be of any length to suit the operator. The bevel is fastened on the uprights with one common screw at the further end of the level. The other end opposite is fastened onto the upright by cutting a narrow slot hole in the upright, through which put a small bolt that will just fill the slot hole sideways, also coming through the level provided with a thumb nut and washer as shown on the drawing. There must be great accuracy in putting the level upon the uprights to have the bottom of the level and the bottom of the straight edge exactly parallel. When you are getting the grade or fall of ditch to the rod by raising or lowering the rear end of the level by taking the difference on a straight line with the bottom of the level measured down at each extreme end of the straight edge, you can tell just what incline your ditch will have per rod multiplying the variation by four. For instance, if the difference in length of the straight edge and the line of the bottom of the level was three-eights of an inch, the fall in the ditch per rod would be twelve-eights, equal to 1½ inches, as the straight edge is one-fourth of 16½ feet.

Always drive the tile tight at the top of the joint to keep out all the loose dirt. My experience teaches me that the water always enters the tile at the bottom. Always use a scoop to fit the size of the tile, then, when you fill in, the dirt will not crowd the tile out of line. In setting the level for work, have the incline so as to have the bubble always occupy the center of the opening of the level. In so doing you seldom require the services of a surveyor.—Prairie Farmer.

MARYLAND LEADS OFF.

Granges of That State Support National Demand for Federal Aid in Road Building.

The state grange of Maryland is the first of the state granges to follow the National grange in demanding that the government aid in improving the highways. At a fully attended meeting in Baltimore recently a strong resolution on this subject was adopted, and Master J. B. Ager in his annual address said:

"There seem to be great interest at this time all over the state in regard to good roads. It is said that the government has expended $500,000,000 in improving the rivers and harbors and proposes to spend $200,000,000 in building the isthmian canal. Therefore we believe something should be appropriated to assist the farmers in building permanent highways.

"According to Secretary Wilson's report the farmers have aided the government very materially. Discussing the balance of trade, the secretary says that the favorable balance of trade to the credit of this country is due entirely to the farmers. The balance of trade in the farm products during the last 14 years, no year excepted, aggregated $4,806,000,000 in products. Other than the farm products during the same period, the balance of trade was adverse to this country to the extent of $865,000,000. Our farmers not only canceled this immense obligation, but placed $3,940,000,000 to the credit of the nation, when the books of the international exchanges were balanced. He concludes that it is the farmers that have paid the foreign bondholders. Now, why should not the government aid the farmers in the construction of roads? It is shown by careful estimates that it cost $900,000,000 to haul the products of the farm to railway stations, rivers and canals, which is vastly more than it costs to maintain 200,000 miles of railway, and by careful estimates the cost could be reduced one-half. I have no doubt that on some roads it could be reduced much more."

Will Build Good Roads.

The county board of supervisors, of Elmira, N. Y., appropriated $254,000 for the construction of good roads through the county. The roads will be laid out in accordance with the plans of the state engineer and in harmony with the suggestions of the New York and Chicago Good Roads association. The roads are intended to form a part of a highway running from New York to Chicago.

Milk as rapidly as possible without irritating or worrying the cows.

BUT ONE PROPER TIME.

Noted Massachusetts Horticulturist Says That All Pruning Should Be Done in June.

After three score years of experience in orchard culture, allow me to say something on the proper time for pruning. There is but one proper time, the month of June, when the new bark forms on the wood.

More orchards are ruined by being pruned at improper times than from all other causes. If pruned in autumn or winter, the bark will dry around the stump and heal there, but never over the end; this exposed stump will rot out in a few years, leaving a ragged hole where water can enter, and the decay of the center of the whole tree begins, shortening its life many years. If pruned in the spring, the wound bleeds, the sap often running down and killing the bark below, making a black, unsightly wound, which never heals over, and the whole tree is subject to decay.

If pruned in June, when the new bark and wood is forming, the wound begins to heal at once, and no matter what the size of the branch cut may be, the wound will heal before decay begins if the tree is vigorous and in good condition.

Care should be taken to cut close to the trunk or larger branch, so that the wound may heal over the end, for if cut two or three inches from the trunk or main branch, nature forgets to carry the necessary material to heal over the wound, and again the water enters and decay occurs.

When from accident, the effect of snow or ice, a large branch is broken, cut temporarily, leaving a foot or more to be cut again close to the trunk in the month of June.

The reason farmers generally prune in early spring is that they then have time and little else to do and are anxious to be at work, and thus have some excuse; but if they could realize the damage they are doing to their own property, they might perhaps refrain and put their labor to better account at the proper season.—W. S. Ripley, in Country Gentleman.

HINTS ABOUT MILKING.

Before commencing to milk, brush all loose dirt from the sides and udder of the cow.

Always milk the cow dry before leaving her, but do not continue stripping after the milk is all drawn.

Always milk a cow in the same manner, at about the same time and speed. Any change will irritate and tend to excite her.

There should always be a friendly feeling between the cow and the milker, and milkers should not be changed if it can be avoided.

A cow will not "give down" her milk to a milker she hates or is afraid of, and what she does give will be deficient in butter fat.

After a little manipulation of the teats and udder, the milk is ready to "come down." Then is the time to take it, and do not delay.

The last milk drawn from a cow is much richer than the first. The last quart usually contains more than three times as much butter as the first.

No definite rule can be given as to how the teats should be handled in milking, as cows differ and hands differ so much; but be sure of one thing, please the cow if possible.

Have the stable clean and have the cow clean, or you cannot get clean milk. Lime and whitewash for walls and posts is a good thing. Land plaster is a good absorbent in the stable.

When it comes a cow's turn to be milked she knows it and expects it and wants to be milked. If you disappoint her and milk half an hour later, the chances are that you will get less and even poorer milk than if you milked at the proper time.

Telling the Sex of Chicks.

After some experience chicks can be selected before they are two months old. Leghorn pullets soon show their sex on the wings. Barred Plymouth Rock cockerels are lighter than the pullets, and there is a difference in the shape. Pullets seem to fill out the wings sooner and take form early. Cockerels are straight up (their heads curl over their feet), have longer legs and necks and are bare about the shoulders. The pullets have rather more of the Dorking or duck shape, not standing up so straight. Observation and experience are the best guides. It is claimed that if the little combs are examined with a magnifying glass those of the cockerels will be straight, while those of the pullets will be incined to lean over.

THE OLDEST MAN IN AMERICA

Tells How He Escaped the Terrors of Many Winters by Using Pe-ru-na.

Mr. Brock's Age is 115 Years.

MR. ISAAC BROCK, BORN IN BUNCOMBE CO., N. C., MARCH 1, 1788.

His age is 115 years, vouched for by authentic record. He says: "I attribute my extreme age to the use of Peruna."

Born before the United States was formed.
Saw 22 Presidents elected.
Pe-ru-na has protected him from all sudden changes.
Veteran of four wars.
Shod a horse when 99 years old.
Always conquered the grip with Pe-ru-na.
Witness in a land suit at the age of 110 years.
Believes Peruna the greatest remedy of the age for catarrhal diseases.

ISAAC BROCK, a citizen of McLennan county, Texas, has lived for 115 years. For many years he resided at Rosque Falls, eighteen miles west of Waco, but now lives with his son-in-law at Valley Mills, Texas.

A short time ago, by request, Uncle Isaac came to Waco and sat for his picture. In his hand he held a stick cut from the grave of General Andrew Jackson, which has been carried by him ever since. Mr. Brock is a dignified old gentleman, showing few signs of decrepitude. His family Bible is still preserved, and it shows that the date of his birth was written 115 years ago.

Surely a few words from this remarkable old gentleman, who has had 115 years of experience to draw from, would be interesting as well as profitable. A lengthy biographical sketch is given of this remarkable old man in the Waco Times-Herald, December 4, 1898. A still more pretentious biography of this, the oldest living man, illustrated with a double column portrait, was given the readers of the Dallas Morning News, dated December 11, 1898, and also the Chicago Times-Herald of same date

This centenarian is an ardent friend of Peruna, having used it many years.

In speaking of his good health and extreme old age, Mr. Brock says:

"After a man has lived in the world as long as I have, he ought to have found out a great many things by experience. I think I have done so.

"One of the things I have found out to my entire satisfaction is the proper thing for ailments that are due directly to the effects of the climate. For 115 years I have withstood the changeable climate of the United States.

"I have always been a very healthy man, but of course subject to the little affections which are due to sudden changes in the climate and temperature. During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds and diarrhoea.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, I have found it to be the best, if not the only, reliable remedy for these affections. It has been my standby for many years, and I attribute my good health and extreme old age to this remedy.

"It exactly meets all my requirements. It protects me from the evil effects of sudden changes; it keeps me in good appetite; it gives me strength; it keeps my blood in good circulation. I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine.

"When epidemics of la grippe first began to make their appearance in this country I was a sufferer from this disease.

"I had several long sieges with the grip. At first I did not know that Peruna was a remedy for this disease. When I heard that la grippe was epidemic catarrh, I tried Peruna for la grippe and found it to be just the thing."

In a later letter dated January 21, 1900, Mr. Brock writes:

"I am well and feeling as well as I have for years. The only thing that bothers me is my sight. If I could see better I could walk all over the farm and it would do me good. I would not be without Peruna."

Yours truly,

Isaac Brock.

Jesus Calls Four Disciples

There was no need to ring a bell to secure Jesus an audience. People flew to him like filing to a magnet. In this instance it is said the people pressed on him to hear. The little company who first discovered him on his early morning walk by the lake, quickly grew to a great concourse. The Master's fertility in expedients had another illustration. It only took him a moment to convert a boat into a pulpit. The scene makes a theme for an artist. The lake beneath, the sky above, the nine considerable cities on the hill-slopes, looking down like distant observers: the mixed multitude crowding to the edge of the shore, their faces mirrored in the water at their feet, and in the fisherman's boat, screened by the loosened sail, prince of all preachers speaking from the bosom of the placid lake, itself an emblem of the peace he could give.

But the sermon was only an incident. His real errand that morning was to call his apostles. He had already given the what might be called preliminary or probationary calls. From these the disciples were afterward dismissed to attend to their worldly affairs, and while doing so, in their old and familiar environments, and free from excitement of novel situations to think on what they had heard and seen. The calls were also progressive. But this one was final. Jesus had an open rupture with the ecclesiastical establishment. He must needs now organize his followers. He knew where his pledged men were, and came to enlist them for active service.

He prefaced the call by a thrilling pictorial miracle. Nothing could have more significantly taught them what they were to be and do. The command, "Launch forth into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught," was a surprise. Keble voices the fisherman's pliant:

But hesitation, if there was any was momentary. Peter quickly laid all his fisherman's lore at Jesus' feet as a sacrifice to his faith.

That last "catch" after the old order was a symbol of the future occupation. The size of the "take" was a pledge of future success in the new calling. That miracle took Peter and his comrades where they were, in their natural environment and every day employment. It was all the more significant to them, the better understood and appreciated.

The considerateness of Jesus in thus encouraging his disciples is characteristic and worthy of note. He was asking these men to join their fortunes with his, an excommunicated man, to sunder ties of tribe and family, to abandon the only means of livelihood they were familiar with. Again, they were called, not merely to be learners like the flowers of the average rabbis, not to be recipients, but doers. They were to launch out and let down their net into the sea of human life. They were (to translate it literally) to take men alive; to persuade and make converts. And that, too, under the very shadow of a great and hostile ecclesiastical establishment.

If ever man needed to be heartened, it was the four men Jesus called that day. If ever men had immediate and divine encouragement, it was in this instance. That miracle put grimp in their backs. The moment they could get their ships ashore, they forsook all, and followed him.

The Teacher's Lantern

It is helpful to recall Jesus' previous dealings with these men.

* * * * *

During Jesus' forty days in the Wilderness, his Messianic character and work fully dawned upon him. There he evolved his plans and the principles of procedure, to which he adhered to the very close of his career.

* * * * *

He came back to the vast concourse still attending the ministry of John the Baptist at the fords of the Jordan as to a human quarry from which he could select living stones as the foundation of that spiritual edifice he designed to rear. Nor was he disappointed. He found five out of the twelve.

* * * * *

When John saw him, he gave him a joyous welcome. No shade of jealousy crossed his noble heart. He unequivocally cast the full weight of his phenomenal influence upon the side of the new teacher, crying, "Behold, the lamb of God!"

* * * * *

On the morrow, as Jesus reappeared, John repeated his significant exclamation with even increased emphasis. It was as if he had said, "Whoever wishes to leave me now and follow this greater Teacher, is at full liberty to do so." Two of the choisest spirits among his converts, John and Andrew, take the hint, and separated themselves forever from the rugged Baptist to follow the lowly Jesus.

The Nazarene hears their footsteps; and, turning, encourages them with the look and word. They are drawn to him, as iron to the magnet. Under the fresh-cut boughs of a pilgrim-booth, or in the cool depths of some grotto, they sit at his feet, and learn of him, their hearts burning within them as he unfolds to them the principles of his kingdom. Then and there was kindled in the human soul of Jesus that love which made John evermore his bosom companion.

* * * * *

Andrew coveted his brother's superior abilities for the service of his new-found Master. He rested not until he had communicated to him his momentous "find," and had brought him (Peter) to Jesus. The next day he saw the addition of the fourth disciple in the person of Philip, who showed the spirit of a true convert by immediately bringing another to Jesus in the person of the guileless Israelite, Nathaniel (Bartholomew).

* * * * *

In point of fact, it is probable that these four men, and possibly Philip and Bartholomew, witnessed the miracles at Canna, Capernaum, and Bethesda, and the cleansing of the temple, and were with Jesus at the unidentified feast at Jerusalem, and in his Journey through Judea and Samaria.

Child-Study and Sunday-School Methods.

"Don't bring your skillets and sauce pans into the pulpit," said old Dr. Tyng in a brusque talk to theologues.

He meant that it was in no way necessary to display the tools of one's craft before an audience. What the people want is a savory dish. They do not need or care to see the utensils with which it has been prepared. That sight might spoil appetite. The same advice is good for the Sunday-school teacher Commentaries and illustrative notes are just the implements. They are to be left behind. Something appetizing is to be spread before the class. A little entirely ready and made attractive is better than a great deal underdone. The average child is more sensitive to the teacher's method than is commonly supposed. Child-confidence is a shy bird; once frightened from cover, it is hard to win it back. Nothing breaks the teacher's charm more quickly than the child's discovery that the lesson is not a part of the teacher's self.

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

Senatorial Matter Still In Doubt on Tuesday Night.

GORMAN'S INFLUENCE WANTING

In Making Selection as to Who Shall Succeed Senator Louis E. McComas—Some Proposed Garrett County Legislation.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS, FEBRUARY 2nd, 1904.

At the time this is written, and immediately after the 11th ballot in the joint assembly of Senate and House of Delegates of Maryland for a successor to Louis E. McComas in the United States Senate, the situation seems no closer to a settlement than it did last week.

The only change in the balloting today over the last few ballots taken, and not due to absentees, was that caused by the switching of the Somerset delegation in the House from Joshua W. Miles to Elihu E. Jackson and Senator Dashiell was absent as was Senator Applegarth of Dorchester. These two votes would have swelled ex-Governor Jackson's total to nine; and including the two Cecil votes which he got a week or more ago, making eleven delegates and Senators in all who have voted for him.

Rayner, Smith, Carter and McComas polled less than their full strength because of absentees. There was no switching from the columns of any of them. The situation, therefore, saye that five candidates now occupy the field held thus far by six or more is unchanged.

So far it has been impossible to verify the report or to locate its source, but the Smith following comes up once more today with the assertion that Senator Gorman has at last realized the impossibility of Carter's election and has sent word down the line to elect Smith. This may be so, but it has not been demonstrated yet and it is by no means certain that this is Mr. Gorman's plan. The opponents of the ex-Governor wonder if Mr. Gorman is now for Smith what the significance of the Miles votes going to Jackson is, and if Mr. Gorman is for Smith why Miles' votes did not go to him.

Senator Gorman's whereabouts today is also the subject of speculation. Some say he is at home; others that he is in New York, and others think he is coming here. The Smith people seem very confident that he is not coming here, while the ex-Governor's enemies seem to think he is.

There is talk of a caucus for tomorrow night and with the rumor the under lips of the Raynor men begin to droop. It is really surprising how blue these fellows get on the very shortest notice at the barest rumor of a caucus. They understand that a caucus with a secret ballot will leave Mr. Raynor perhaps fifteen votes, but very probably less, so they are blue, for at present Rayner is footing the bills.

The outcome is difficult to predict, since there are combinations of possibilities which might elect any man now in the democratic field. The Baltimore papers seem as much at sea as anyone else, the most of them having predicted, at one time or another, the election of every candidate in the field from the start save Miles, and the Sun did hint, in a two-column story of the possibility of Miles. The papers can nearly all write "as we predicted in the —— two weeks ago, so and so was elected today," when the affair finally closes.

As the contest now stands Senator Gorman's word will make Rayner, or Smith or Jackson his colleague, and a little urging in connection with this word of his would probably make Carter, although there is no gainsaying the fact that the Honorable Bernard Carter will be the hardest man of the lot to force through, in spite of his more than pre-eminent fitness for the place.

There is one consolation in the situation now, however. In spite of the dead-lock the wheels of legislation are beginning to turn. A number of bills have passed the Senate or the House and business is being transacted. A large commission interested in the St. Louis Exposition came down this morning and presented the needs of the Maryland exhibit at the big fair to the Finance Committee of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House. They ask for $60,000 and they want it quick, nearly all the speakers asking for a suspension of the rules in order that the appropriation be railroaded through at once. There is little doubt but that the appropriation will be passed.

No bills have been introduced this week by the Garrett delegation. Indeed today's was the only session since last Friday and it was so taken up with other business that it was just as well that there were no more bills.

From the present prospects quite a good deal of legislation will be asked for Garrett.

A delegation composed of Hon. J. G. Kolb, ex-member of the House, Arthur Chisholm, electrician for the Meadow Mountain Lumber Company will ask the Garrett representatives to secure the incorporation of Friendsville.

It will be remembered that a request for similar legislation two years ago aroused opposition. Friendsville is in a limit law district, and the clause in the proposed bill to license the sale of liquor by the payment of $250 annually to the corporation, besides the tax to county and state—liquor to be sold only in hotels having accommodations for more than fifteen people—will doubtless be opposed again this time.

Another proposed measure, likely to encounter opposition will be favorable action on a petition signed by about 150 names asking for the establishment of a new district to be known as No. 15. This proposed new district would be taken from districts 3, 12 and 11, and its voting place would be Avilton. District No. 8 is the largest in the county and is more entitled to be divided than any other. Due to the extra expense attached to an extra district the representative of No. 8 will not urge his rights, unless this new number 15 is seriously considered. In other words, Garrett will probably get two new districts or it won't get any, with the chances favoring no change.

Mr. M. R. Hamill, president of the school board of Garrett county, and ex-Senator R. T. Browning, the democratic organization leader in Garrett, who will probably be appointed assistant fish commissioner, will be here Wednesday or Thursday.

THREE KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

At the Upper Potomac Workings In Garrett County.

TWO AMERICANS AND AN ITALIAN

The Victims—Wm. Frederick Schmidt and George W. Bowers—Italian's Name Is Unknown—Three Others More or Less Burned and Brulsed.

The Upper Potomac coal mine, which is owned and operated by Philadelphia capitalists, was the scene on last Saturday morning of an explosion whereby three men lost their lives and three others were more or less seriously injured. The dead are:

William Frederick Schmidt, formerly of Thayerville,

George W. Bowers, of Schell.

An unknown Italian.

The injured are three Italians whose names cannot be learned and who are now at Schell, West Va., where they are being treated by physicians.

The mine is located on the Maryland side of the Potomac river, in Garrett county, a mile or two above Schell, and was only recently opened.

The men who were killed as well as those who were injured, were standing at the mouth of the mine waiting to go in after the smoke cleared succeeding a dynamite blast when the dust in the mine ignited, producing a second explosion which came with such terrific force as to hurl Schmidt, who was standing directly in the centre of the opening, a distance of more than a hundred and fifty feet, his body describing a semi circle through the air and falling to the ground after passing over the tipple, a stack of lumber and a large oak tree. Schmidt was employed as a miner, and was the son-in-law of the late Thomas Sollars who was killed in the same mine about a year ago.

Mr. Bowers and the dead Italian were standing near Schmidt and were fatally injured, Mr. Bowers dying on Sunday after having been removed to his home at Schell, and the Italian expired the same evening at his boarding house in the above place.

The other three men injured were all Italians employed at the mine, and while their hurts are serious they are not necessarily fatal.

The funeral of Mr. Schmidt took place at Deer Park Monday afternoon at Deer Park, being conducted by Rev. Manges, of the Lutheran church. The deceased was born in Oakland on June 18th, 1875, and was in his 29th year. He leaves a wife and two small children, a mother, three sisters (Mrs. Wm. Kahl, of Oakland, being one of them), and four brothers.

DIED.

BOUCHER—Isaiah Boucher, an old and prominent citizen of Garrett county, died at his home near Grantsville on January 31, aged about 80 years. He was much respected by all who knew him. He was a farmer and lived upon one of the best farms in the country. He was once county commissioner, but had no taste for office. He left five living prosperous sons: Henry S., a merchant in Somerset county, Pa.; Phineas C., farmer and lumber manufactureer; Samuel A., a prominent physician at Barton, Md.; Charles W., dentist at New Kensington, Pa., and Arthur M., a farmer near Barton. All the sons are married.

KEPNER—At his home at Hambleton, W. Va., yesterday, after a brief illness, Joseph Kepner, aged 51 years. The deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Kepner, of Oakland.

FOR A NATIONAL MILITARY CAMP.

The Bid Of Oakland For the Site Presented to Military Committee

BY REPRESENTATIVE DELEGATION

Of Oakland Business Men—The Advantages That Inure to the Locality—Arguments Made Before the Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—What promises to be one of the liveliest fights ever known before the House Committee on Military Affairs opened up this morning when the question of selecting sites for military encampment in the North, South, East and West came before the committee for a hearing. Pennsylvania and Maryland met today in an endeavor to secure the location of the Eastern camp. California will follow with two sites, Texas has two and the North—nobody knows how many. Sometime ago Congress authorized the War Department to investigate eligible sites, in the four corners of the United States, with the result that the special board, of which Lieutenant General Miles was chairman and Major General Brooke, Major General Otis, Major General Young and others were members, made an exhaustive examination of all the sites offered and filed a report covering 1,000 pages, containing maps and data concerning the various sites.

A number of sites for posts of various kinds were recommended, but for "camp sites" the board advised "one in the vicinity of Chickamauga Park, Ga.; one at Fort Riley, Kan.; one in the Conewago Valley in Lebanon, Dauphin and Lancaster counties, Pa., and one on the Nacimieto Ranch in Monterey and San Luis Obispo counties, California.

All these sites, however, did not find favor in the eyes of the members of the House Committee on Military Affairs, and Representative Esch, of Wisconsin introduced a bill providing for the purchase of sites as follows: The Conewago Valley site; the Nacimiento Ranch; Camp Douglass, in Wiscon, and Camp Sam Houston, in Texas, and on this bill the first of a series of hearings was given today.

It is a good thing for a state to have a permanent military camp of this character, as it is proposed that from 10,000 to 30,000 regulars and militia shall be assembled at each of these camps once a year, and, consequently, many states have sites to present and many members of Congress have constituents who wish to sell property to the government for this purpose. It was natural, therefore, that the room of the Committee on Military Affairs should have been crowded to the doors this morning with members of Congress, land agents, railroad representatives, officers of the militia of the various states and officers of the United States Army.

The contest today revolved around the site for the eastern camp; triangular in character, for Pennsylvania has two, the Conewago and the Somerset sites, and Maryland one, near Oakland. A combination has been formed by which it is proposed the Nacimiento ranch shall be set aside in favor of the Henry ranch, in California, which has superior facilities for water supply and sewerage, and a telegram from California caused former Secretary of the Navy, Hillary A. Herbert, to rush to the committee room to appear in behalf of the Nacimiento ranch. He admitted that he was not equipped at the present time to discuss the comparative merits of the two California propositions, so the committee gave him until Monday next to prepare his argument.

The Pennsylvania and Maryland men, however, were not so badly off, and a number of strong arguments were presented in behalf of each of the three sites in question. Backed by the recommendation of the Army Board the representatives of the Conewago Valley put up a strong argument. The bulk of their testimony was presented by General Corbin, formerly adjutant general of the Pennsylvania state malitia, whose name has been so prominently before the public in connection with the settlement of the strike in the anthracite coal regions. Hurrying from Florida, General Corbin arrived just before the committee adjourned, but held the attention of the members as long as he cared to speak.

Representative Olmstead, in whose district the Connewago Valley lies, also presented Mr. A. D. Smith, president and general superintendent of the Cornwall and Lebanon Railroad Company, of Lebanon, Pa., who argued in behalf of the Conewago site. For the Somerset site Mr. W. A. Scott, Jr., of Pittsburg, representing a real estate syndicate which has options on the property up to 30,000 acres, and Brigadier General John A. Wiley were introduced by Representative Cooper, of Pennsylvania. Representative Pearre presented State Senator Palmer, Messrs. E. H. Sincell and Gilmer S. Hamill, of Oakland, Md., who backed the Oakland site. Representative Smith, of Kentucky, served notice that he would have a delegation from the "Dark and Bloody Ground" in behalf of a site near Bowling Green, Ky. California, Texas, Wisconsin and other states will be heard later.

Maryland offered as a site about 10,000 acres of land in Garrett county, near Oakland. Bills pending before Congress provide for the purchase of this ground for $500,000. Representative Pearre was present but made no argument today. He will appear before the committee next Tuesday and present the case as strongly as possible. Mr. Pearre said today that, viewing the question impartially, he believes the Maryland site, which was more centrally located, is in many respects superior to either of the Pennsylvania sites. Discussing the Oakland site, Mr. Sincell said it was about two miles northwest of Oakland and bounded on the south by the main line of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad; on the west by the Maryland-West Virginia line; on the north by Muddy creek and on the east by the Great Youghioghenv river. He said that it has an elevation of over 2,500 feet above sea level; is absolutely free from malaria and its kindred diseases; the natural drainage is perfect; ample facilities for bathing are afforded, and that the atmosphere was so invigorating that even in the hottest days of the summer men can undergo without fatigue the maximum amount of exertion. The thermometer rarely registers more than 86°, he said, and the nights are delightfully cool and refreshing, mosquitos being unknown.

He further stated that the moral environment is of the highest type and free from the contagion of the city and large towns. Forage and provisions are abundantly at hand and the site is centrally located for troops from New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan. From 10,000 acres upward can be secured at $25 per acre.

His arguments were substantially those of Mr. Hamill, who said that there was plenty of good mountain water of the purest character and the best water and the best climate east of the Ohio river. The scattering timber would easily repay for its own clearing, the roads are excellent and even at this time of year artillery or heavy army wagons could be easily moved over them.

A memorial from the residents of Garrett county was presented to the committee, setting forth in detail the facts stated by Mr. Sincell.

CUT BY AN ITALIAN.

B. & O. Detective Jerry Browning, of Oakland, Roughly Handled At Pittsburg.

The Pittsburg papers last night contained an account of a general mix-up between officers of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and a gang of Italian coal thieves which took place at McKeesport the night preceding in which Detective Jerry Browning, son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Browning, of Oakland, was badly cut by one of the men he had under arrest. The newspaper reports stated that officer Browing, accompanied by two or three city officers had placed three Italians under arrest for stealing coal from cars of the company and while passing through the Italian quarter of the town the prisoners called for help when a number of their countrymen came to their rescue and set upon the officers cutting and slashing at them with knives. Mr. Browning was the only one seriously injured and he is now at a hospital in Pittsburg.

HOYES AND VICINITY.

According to the old adage we will have six week's more winter weather, as the groundhog certainly did see his shadow.

Monday of this week was considered the stormiest day this winter.

Sampson Custer and daughter Alice of Connellsville, Pa., are visiting relotives and friends in this community.

A number of young people from this neighborhood attended the protracted meeting at Friendsville last Sunday night.

William Callis made a business trip to Oakland Monday and returned the next day.

Gilmore DeWitt and sister Florence of near Deer Park, accompanied by Miss Mabel Thayer, were guests of Mr. M. Mattingly and family last Sunday. They also, accompanied by Misses Olia and Bernadette Mattingly and Mr. Richter, made a call at W. A. Smith's.

The Literary society of this place will meet at the school house next Friday night. The subject for debate is; Resolved, That wood is more useful to man than coal.

Edward Shank, of Swanton, made a visit to Youngstown, Pa., last week and on his return made his sister, Mrs. Maggie DeWitt, a short visit.

Our pastor, Rev. D. A. Friend, delivered an excellent sermon to us last Sunday morning. As the sledding was fine the congregation was large.

CAMP FIRE STORIES

DRUM MAJOR HERO.

Led a New Hampshire Regiment Against Hostile Hordes in the City of Baltimore.

Saxie Pike is dead. Of course, his parents never christened him "Saxie" at all. That is a name which came to him later in life. He was named plain Francis Herbert at first. But as "Saxie" we all knew him through the long years of the piping times of peace that followed the excitements of the civil war, says a writer in the Manchester (N. H.) Union. How often we have regarded him with intense local pride as he preceded some procession, his tall form surmounted by a towering bearskin cap, as he manipulated his baton with a skill such as no other drum major could ever acquire, for he was universally recognized as the drum major par excellence—the highest type of that much bedizined genus—admired and mocked at in the same breath, as highest types are apt to be.

He had a pride peculiar to himself, and knew his worth, as does not always happen to men of superior gifts in other lines of human endeavor. Not infrequently, as he went about from door to door, patiently setting forth the merits of the special polishing powder which he offered for sale, he would draw up his tall form before some frigidly repellant housewife and say, with justifiable pride: "I am Saxie Pike."

After that, no housewife who knew his story could well turn him away without remunerative consideration, if not of his polishing powder, at any rate of himself and the day he was a hero. For Saxie Pike was a hero once, and had he died that day even his coat would have been tenderly preserved; congress would have voted him a monument, and his own state would have boasted of him, and justly, to the end of time.

There were two really great days in the life of Saxie Pike. One was when he preceded the band which furnished music for the First New Hampshire regiment of volunteers as it marched through Concord's streets on its way to the defense of the national capitol; the other, the greatest day of his poor life, was when the same regiment marched through an imbittered and hostile throng from station to station in Baltimore.

The Sixth Massachusetts had passed through Baltimore shortly before, had been fired upon and had suffered loss. When Col. Tappan's First New Hampshire boys formed in the railroad square before marching across the city, no one could tell what would happen next. It was then that the spirit of Saxie Pike rose to the inspiration of the hour. Some have spitefully suggested that the needed spirit was furnished at Col. Tappan's private cost, but the thought may be discarded. No horse that lacked the mettle ever yet responded to the spur. Saxie Pike was imbued with the spirit of true patriotism, or no amount of stimulus would have availed. As the regiment moved forward Saxie Pike, our "Saxie," whose earthly course is now ended, led the way. Pressing with his baton against the hostile throng, he pushed its individual components one way and another, urging them to fall back, and repeating mildly over and over the assurance, which carried with it the sternest of threats, that those who came after him carried muskets and the muskets were loaded with ball.

The march across the city of Baltimore was accomplished without the firing of a shot or a brickbat, and in time Saxie Pike came home to us to remain here as a well-known character until slow-working disease has now carried him away. For years he was no longer a hero, only a drum major par excellence, a peripatetic vendor of polishing powder, and a "character." But suppose he had fallen, with bullets in him, that day in Baltimore! Even at this day a tear will not be misplaced if it shall chance to fall on Saxie's humble grave.

An Officer's Pet Dog.

In the case of the captain of an artillery company of South Carolina, who was killed in the American civil war, the officer's pet dog lay moaning upon the grave of his master, refusing to eat or drink, for three days only, and then died. This instance is all the more remarkable from the fact that the officer's body did not reach the family home in Columbia until a week after death. The dog met it at the gate, knew by instinct that the coffin contained his dead master, lay under it in the parlor until the funeral, when he joined in the procession to the grave.—Chicago Daily News.

TWO FIGHTING CLERICS.

Entertaining Tales About Parson Lozier and Chaplain Moody in the Civil War.

"I have a letter," said the major in the Chicago Inter Ocean, "from my old friend, John Hogarth Lozier, of Mount Vernon, Ia., formerly chaplain of the Thirty-seventh Indiana. The letter was called out by Comrade Anderson's reference to Lozier as a fighting chaplain at Stone river. Lozier does not deny that he said to the confederate who shot at a wounded man: 'You booger, you,' or that he used a rifle promptly, as a soldier would.

"Of the story about Col. Granville Moody saying to his men: 'Give them h—l,' Chaplain Lozier writes: 'I was riding at Moody's side, whose regiment pressed closely against mine, when the first volley came from the confederates posted along a fence row thicket. It was the first volley of a personal character that I had ever enjoyed, so to speak. It was aimed at the bunch of mounted officers, of which Moody and I were part, and for an instant I thought a swarm of bees was passing.

"A comrade dropped just in front of me, and I dismounted, threw the wounded man across my horse and started for an ambulance. Soon came the charge Anderson refers to and Moody's alleged proffer of more sulphur than the cartridge contained. Moody assured me that he said: "Give them Hail Columbia." He meant to say that, I am sure, but just as the words were on his lips a bullet struck his leg, and nobody knows what a man, even a preacher, might say under such circumstances.

"Four times in that battle was Col. Moody struck, but he held his men in line until the enemy were hurled back to stay. I could write pages about Moody's good work before the war, during the war and after the war. He was one of the most effective speakers of the Methodist pulpit. Under a beautiful monument in our cemetery here lies the body of Rev. Granville Moody, beside that of his wife, who died before him. I took part in the burial services of both, and I want to say now to the boys of his old regiment that Moody was a great man in the best sense of the term.

"Concerning the stories of my exploits related by Comrade Anderson and others, I will say they are as near the truth as one expects from an old soldier. There was a legend among us in the army to the effect that the men of the Nineteenth Illinois had three points of preeminence—they were the greatest fighters, the greatest jokers and the greatest liars in the army. If I remember rightly there was a Sam Anderson in that regiment. However, Dan R. Anderson, I see, was in the First Kentucky regiment, which wasn't in our division. In battles like that at Stone river the several divisions were very neighborly.

"I thank my comrades for saying so many pleasant things about the fighting chaplain. While I cannot truthfully deny that I pulled a trigger at a confederate in a moment of excitement, I don't think the boys ought to bring that up against a fellow after 40 years. It is outlawed. I was more of a frightened chaplain than a fighting one. Many of the boys, I learn, suppose I am dead. I was very sick several years ago, but am better now, and I hope to meet my old comrades at some of the encampments here and yonder."

"The chaplain is right," continued the major, "as to Granville Moody. The old

fighting parson was a natural orator and a most effective speaker. I heard his famous speech the day after Lincoln was assassinated. He spoke, on a moment's notice, for two hours, giving some experiences of his with Andrew Johnson while the latter was military governor of Tennessee. He told the story of a call on Johnson when the prospect in Tennessee looked very dark, and of Johnson asking him to pray. He related many anecdotes without apparent purpose, but when he had finished, the 30,000 listeners realized that the old Methodist had introduced the president in a new light and had strengthened their confidence in him.

"Nothing could be more impressive than Moody's bearing and manner on such occasions. He was then in his prime, his heavy white hair and beard giving to his tall, stalwart figure a dignity and majesty possessed by few public speakers of that day. He said more in praise of Johnson in that famous speech than the facts warranted, but he meant every word of it, and no speech of the time did more to comfort a bereaved people. Johnson did not come up to Moody's expectations or predictions, but the fighting parson swallowed his disappointment until he had opportunity to scold Johnson himself. If reports were true, the scolding was a corker."

British Somaliland.

It is estimated that the population of British Somaliland is about 250,000. Its area is about 68,000 square miles.

THE WANTON CALF.

Find Owner of Calf.

A Calf, full of play and wantonness, seeing an Ox at the plough could not forbear insulting him. "What a sorry poor drudge are you," said he, "to bear that heavy yoke upon your neck, and, with a plough at your tail all day, to go turning up the ground for a master! You are a wretched poor slave, and know no better, or you would not do it. See what a happy life I lead! I go just where I please,—sometimes in the cool shade, sometimes in the warm sunshine; and, whenever I like, I drink at the clear and running brook." The Ox, not at all moved by this address, went on quietly and calmly at his work; and in the evening, when unyoked and going to take his rest, he saw the Calf, hung with garlands of flowers, being led off for sacrifice by the priests. He pitied him, but could not help saying as he passed: "Now, friend, whose condition is the better,—yours or mine?"

THE LASH FOR THIEVES.

Punishment Inflicted in England Seems to Be Effective in Stopping Theft.

Highway robbery is a crime with which English police no longer have to reckon, whereas in St. Louis it is a nightly occurrence. A cat o' nine tails, used in England and not used in America, explains the difference, according to C. F. G. Raikes, an English resident of St. Louis, says the Post-Dispatch.

"Highway robbery is the one crime for which English law specifies flogging as a punishment in addition to imprisonment," said Mr. Raikes to the Post-Dispatch. "Up to the time I left England several years ago, I remember hearing of but one or two cases of highway robbery, and I kept fairly well informed on such matters. I know that it was one of the rarest crimes in the kingdom.

"In reading of the nightly robberies recently in St. Louis I have often thought of that fact, and the only explanation I can find for the difference between St. Louis and the English cities is in the difference of pnishment.

"In fact, I have heard it said that it was the flogging which prevented highway robberies there. The would-be robbers seemed to be in deathly fear of that.

"A cat o' nine tails, which is a small bundle of leather strips attached to a short handle, is plied on a man's back, and it tells. The number of lashes to be given is specified by the court just as is the number of years the guilty man must serve in prison.

"I do not know that flogging is still practiced in England, but it was a punishment for highway robbers when I left there, and it was regarded as effective.

"It seems different in the United States. Of course, there is no flogging. Furthermore, the prison sentences are shorter and pardons are more frequent. There are also more delays here in execution of the criminal law than in England.

"There seems to be need of some stern measuers in this country to stop highway robberies. I don't know that flogging is the proper punishment, but I often think of the English practice when I read of the robberies in St. Louis.

"Other European countries are equally free from highway robberies, although I don't know that they practice flogging. They all, however, regard the crime as almost as bad as murder, and the law is very severe.

MISS FLUTTERLY ON RADIUM.

The Manufacture of It Ought to Be Stopped for Good and Sufficient Reasons.

"Isn't this an age of marvels?" said little Miss Flutterly, according to Charles Battell Loomis, in Leslie's Monthly. "I really don't know what will be discovered next—do you? Really, it would take a strictly scientific person to tell, because just as you think it's going to be an airship it turns out to be radium or something else just as wonderful.

"It seems as if the manufacture of radium ought to be stopped, because if a single pound of it was—what is it they do with it, turn it on or explode it, or what?—well, anyway, if a single pound of it did what it does do, whatever that is, it would annihilate the world. Just think of the danger of having even a little of it. They say it's diminishing at the rate of a certain number of grains a second, and it's going so fast it would reach the sun inside of a minute, and yet, after watching a heap of it for I don't know how many thousands of years, it doesn't look any smaller—so I don't know how we're going to get rid of it now it's here. And they say it will make anything shine except imitation diamonds. I should think that people wouldn't dear to wear paste after this, because if they suddenly stopped shining it would be so mortifying."

UNNECESSARY FEAR.

French Bill of Fare Was Taken for a Warning from the Italian Mafia.

When Gunbusta returned from business he was astonished at finding his good wife wrapt in mental cogitation over a letter that lay on the table before her. Even his entrance did not seem to distract her. Laying his hand gently upon her shoulder, she jumped back with a start, relates the New York Times.

"Why, my dear," said he, nervously, "what ails you?"

These words seemed to be a clew for her to begin weeping, and between her sobs she blurted:

"Oh, Bert, the worst has come! We are the victims of the Black Hand of the Italian Mafia. See, this letter came this morning."

She handed over the epistle and Gunbusta paled slightly as he saw scribbled scrawling on the paper what appeared to be a treacherous threat in some foreign language. He could not read it; neither could his wife; yet they felt sure it was another case of "money or your life," because numerous incidents of this kind had transpired in their neighborhood during the past year.

"Don't you think we had better lay some money out on the back stoop, my dear?" said the frightened wife.

"But we don't know the amount. I know what I'll do; I'll hurry to police headquarters and have them translate it for me." And the badly scared Gunbusta darted out of the house.

"Minnie," said Gunbusta, returning after being away about two hours, "we're fools! On my way downtown I met Bob Fleming, the court interpreter, and he informed me that the letter was no threat at all, but a French bill of fare from the man who has opened the new restaurant on our block."

Mrs. Gunbusta rejoiced. Gunbusta felt somewhat relieved himself.

HAIR BY THE CARLOAD.

New Style of Dressing Women's Hair Consumes Hundreds of Tons for "Rats."

Since the revival of the pompadour style of dressing women's hair and the use of the "rat" there has been a tremendous increase in the importation of human hair, says the New York Press. It is estimated 100 tons of hair, valued at $3,000,000, have been received at this port this year. This doesn't represent one-half the expense the style has entailed upon women, for it has given a decided impetus to the hairdressing business. Three times as many New York women now patronize hairdressers as did a few years ago. With women of fashion the hairdresser is looked upon now as a necessity.

In most of the fashionable hairdressing shops of Fifth avenue and its vicinity comparatively few women are employed. Formerly women did all the work, patrons being reluctant to have their hair dressed by men, but the prejudice soon wore off, and now the well-groomed women seem to think that only the man hairdresser who has studied the business abroad is artistic.

The hairdressers say this promises to be a great country for their business. The women of America have less hair than the women of Europe. The quality is about the same, but there seems to be something in the climate of the United States or in the habits of the people that is not conducive to women's hair growing as luxuriously as it does abroad.

Large as was the value of the hair imported this year the value of fine toilet articles was far greater. About 85 per cent. of the amber and tortoise shell goods, perfumes, powders and cosmetics used in America are brought from across the water.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

THE LAWYER'S STORY.

Why No Liquor Was Taken on the Camping and Fishing Expedition.

The young men had made great preparations for their fishing trip into the Indian territory, and their disappointment was deep when, on the very morning they were to start, the lawyer, whom they all liked, told them he could not go. To make the matter worse, his explanations were very lame and unsatisfactory; it was evident that he had given up the trip for some reason which he hesitated to name.

As a last resort the others went in a body—six of them—to his office, and demanded that he tell them exactly why he had deserted, when he had been most enthusiastic in planning the outing.

"If you're really to understand it," he said, "I shall have to begin with my own boyhood. My father, the best father, I think, that a boy ever had, always showed me a tenderness which even as a child I knew was somehow different from the love which my playmates had from their parents. It was not until I was perhaps 14 years old that he told me why this was so.

"Although he himself lived a most exemplary life, his father, his father's father and two of his uncles had been drunkards. The taste for liquor he believed to be hereditary in our family, and in me he had recognized many of the traits he himself possessed, and which had made his own life a long fight against the habit of drink. He pointed out the danger that lay before me, and begged me to give him my promise never, under any circumstances, to touch liquor. 'It is your safety,' he said. 'Unless you make this resolution, and have the strength to keep it, the odds will be fatally against you, for, like myself, you are easily influenced by others. If I thought that tomorrow you were to take your first drink, I should pray to God that you might die to-day.'

"Of course I promised. He had never talked to me in that way before, and of course it made an impression on me. I was frightened, and for several years I kept my promise. Then I went with some other young fellows on an all-day fishing trip. While we were eating our luncheon one of our number, a boy whom we all admired, took a bottle of whisky from his pocket, drank from it, and passed it to his next neighbor. The bottle went round the circle, for no one dared refuse to follow George Reitz' lead. When it came to me I tried to pass it on without drinking, but the others began to tease and ridicule me, until from sheer cowardice I took the drink. A second and a third followed, and I began to realize that I liked the stuff, and wanted more of it. My father's warning flashed across my mind:

"'If you take one drink, you may be forever lost!'

"The rest of the day passed wretchedly enough, and I was glad when it was time to start for home. When I reached the house I found that my father, whom I had left in good health in the morning, was lying at the point of death. He had had a sudden attack of heart disease. They told me he was very anxious to see me alone, and with a breaking heart I entered his room.

"He could not move and could hardly speak, but as I took his hand and bowed my head upon it, crying, he smiled tenderly and lovingly on me. When I grew calmer he spoke, although the effort was pitiful to witness:

"'Be strong—mother's sake—my sake—kiss me.'

"As I bent down to kiss him he noticed the odor of liquor in my breath. I shall never forget the look of agony, of despair, in his eyes.

"'My poor—lost—boy!' he groaned; and these were his last words.

"Since that day, God helping me, I have never touched a drop of liquor. But I know my weakness. I don't dare to expose myself to temptation, and I never knowingly go where liquor is to be used. This morning, while the provision wagon was being loaded, I saw that some one had sent along a case of whisky. Forgive me, boys; I'm not preaching nor finding fault with you, but you see now why I can't go."

"You can go and you shall go," spoke up the judge, who had provided the case of liquor, "for the whisky is going to stay here." So the lawyer went, and a jollier, healthier, happier outing none of the men ever had.—Youth's Companion.

A BLACKBOARD EXERCISE.

How a Sunday School Can Be Made to Realize Liquor's Startling Balance Sheet.

A splendid way to interest and instruct, nay to impress a Sunday school in a practical lesson on temperance, is for the superintendent, or some person well posted upon the evils of intemperance, to conduct a general exercise, a blackboard lecture, taking for the topic, "A Debtor and Creditor Account with Mr. Alcohol." Have a good blackboard placed before the school, select some young man who can write well and promptly and clearly, and ask him to come forward and act as clerk for the school. Then let the leader ask the scholars for some items that they can set down to the credit of Mr. Alcohol. None will probably be given, for the glorious reason that there are none; but do not hurry. Continue to ask if there is not one thing that can be set down to the good credit of Mr. Alcohol. After I had almost worried a school in my demands for something to set on the credit side of the account, a little boy said: "Alcohol is good to keep corpses from rotting!"

Finally, when the school is deeply impressed with the fact that there is no good thing that can be said in favor of Mr. Alcohol, let the debit side be called for. You will be surprised to hear the reasons come in. Let the clerk put them down one at a time, and let the leader put a little earnest speech with each one so as to drive the truth home. When through what an exhibit that black-board will show—not one thing in favor, but more than a dozen things against the use of alcohol! How easy now to clinch this truth upon the souls of the very boys and girls who have furnished the items for the conclusion!—Rev. E. L. Eaton, D. D.

TO HELP THE DRINKER.

The Treatment of Inebriety by the Government of Victoria, Australia.

The committee appointed by the government of Victoria in December, 1901, to inquire into the subject of inebriety and the methods for its cure has furnished a report to the chief secretary. After detailing the work of investigation carried out by the committee the report closed with the following recommendations: "1. That provisions be made for the registration, under conditions fixed by the government, of all institutions for the treatment of inebriety. 2. That all such institutions must be placed under government supervision and inspection. 3. That a special place of confinement and treatment must be provided for criminal inebriates, where the offense may be directly traced to inebriety, or where the ground of detention is habitual drunkenness itself. 4. That a government institution, under a board of control, be established in some locality suitable for isolation and classification and the opportunity for employment, to which inebriates can be sent voluntarily or compulsorily, in which different methods of treatment may be adopted. 5. That a bill be immediately introduced by the government determining the conditions under which inebriates can be dealt with on the lines of the New South Wales measure of September, 1900, and making provision for the foregoing recommendation."—British Medical Journal.

NOTES AFIELD.

Raleigh, N. C., by a majority of 194, voted against the saloons and in favor of one dispensary. The law went into effect on January 1, and 23 saloons were closed. The contest was a hard one.

The constitutionality of the Sunday closing law passed by the Minnesota legislature in 1903 was upheld in a decision made by Judge Hine, of the St. Paul municipal court. The case under consideration will be carried to the spureme court.

"There are voters in Kansas who never saw a saloon in the county in which they were born and now live, and in whose minds liquor selling is classed in the same category as stealing or any similar crime." There are counties where the jail has not been occupied for more than eight years.

In Belgium the tax on spirits has been increased, and at the same time the tax on tea has been removed, with the object of encouraging tea as a beverage. In Holland a league has been formed to fight the use of spirits. It aims at legislation, but for the present it is doing personal work by posting agents at the doors of public houses to urge the patrons not to enter.

King Edward directed, last summer, that the officers of the navy be informed that he considered his health "as much honored by those who drink it in water as by those who drink it in wine." Early this month he sent word to a baronet who had violated the doctor's orders by drinking the toast to the king in wine that such a proceeding was undesirable. We are evidently coming to the saner days, when it shall no longer be regarded as polite to urge a man to violate his conscience for the sake of being in the fashion.

What It Does.

The liquor traffic:
Defies law.
Wrecks lives.
Ruins homes.
Divides families.
Destroys wealth.
Breeds criminals.
Produces poverty.
Increases taxation.
Debauches politics.
Disqualifies laborers.
Depreciates property.
Corrupts legislatures.
Profanes the Sabbath.
The traffic must be destroyed.

Mrs. Hughson, of Chicago, whose letter follows, is another woman in high position who owes her health to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for several years with general weakness and bearing-down pains, caused by womb trouble. My appetite was poor, and I would lie awake for hours, and could not sleep, until I seemed more weary in the morning than when I retired. After reading one of your advertisements I decided to try the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad I did. No one can describe the good it did me. I took three bottles faithfully, and besides building up my general health, it drove all disease and poison out of my body, and made me feel as spry and active as a young girl. Mrs. Pinkham's medicines are certainly all they are claimed to be."—MRS. M. E. Billion Dollar Grass and Alfalfa.

When we introduced this remarkable grass three years ago, little did we dream it would be the most talked of grass in America, the biggest, quick, hay producer on earth, but this has come to pass.

Agr. Editors wrote about it, Agr. College Professors lectured about it, Agr. Institute Orators talked about it, while in the farm house by the quiet fireside, in the corner grocery, in the village post-office, at the creamery, at the depot, in fact wherever farmers gathered, Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass, that wonderful grass, good for 5 to 14 tons per acre, and lots of pasture besides, is always a theme worthy of the farmer's voice.

A. Walford, Westlore Farms, Pa., writes: "I have 60 acres in Salzer's Alfalfa Clover. It is immense. I cut three crops this season and have lots of pasture besides."

THE FARMING WORLD

AN OLD CIDER MILL.

It Was Built in 1801, at Middlebury, Conn., and Has Been Preserved Intact.

On the old Crowfoot place in Middlebury, Conn., the place that Chauncy Judd figured in revolutionary times, is an old cider mill which has the date 1801 on one of the posts, probably the date it was built. The stone post, seen at the edge of the accompanying picture, has the date 1815.

A part of the circular trough is shown, in which the large wheel with solid stone center runs. The diameter of trough is about 25 feet. The apples are put in trough and then a horse is hitched to a pole outside of wheel and that crushes the apples. Two little scrapers follow the wheel and keep the apples in center of trough. The wheel is about 15 inches wide, 6 feet in diameter and weighs several hundred pounds.

The presses are made of heavy hewn oak, some of them being 16 inches square. The screws were made by hand. This is probably one of the oldest cider mills in the country.—Orange Judd Farmer.

EDUCATING FARM BOYS.

Some Pertinent Reasons Why Practical Agriculture Should Be Taught in Rural Schools.

Among those who have given the matter attention, there are many who favor the introduction of agricultural instruction into the rural school as a means of educating the farm boy to the farm rather than sending him directly to the institutions whose influence is in another direction.

In a recent address, after commenting upon the more or less popular idea of a "general education of more or less classic foundation," Hon. James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, goes on to say, in regard to the agricultural college and the farm boy:

"The farmer's boy who intends to be a farmer, and his father, who intends to have his son succeed him on the farm, do not care anything about that kind of education. My idea of education is that it should fit a young man for his future life.

"I would begin by teaching on agricultural lines in the primary grades; I would continue this kind of education through the secondary school; I would prepare the boys for the agricultural college, and they would go there as naturally as the boy goes to the pantry to get some bread and butter, with sugar on it. But just now our system of education draws the young people away from the agricultural college into something else."

That there is truth in this is evidenced by the number of boys and young men coming from the farm, and, after attending high schools and other institutions of higher learning, go into other pursuits than that of agriculture.

It has been held by those most interested in keeping the boys upon the farm that with the introduction of agriculture into the rural school there will be a tendency to educate the boy back to the farm. That a good argument favors this proposition there is no question.—Drovers' Journal.

Farmers All Rich in Texas.

"There was never a time in the history of our state when the farmers had as much money as they possess this year," said C. K. McClure, of Brenham, Tex., at the Riggs house. "Heretofore only a minority of our agriculturists have been able to boast of having ready cash, but this year a large per cent. of them are in funds. Another thing is that our farmers are beginning to use the banks, instead of putting their cash in old stockings or hiding it away in secret places; they are going to their county seats and depositing it in banks as business men ordinarily do. This has much to do with the big showing our financial institutions are making. Their deposits are far ahead of what they used to be, and the deposits of many small country banks make an aggregate that is astonishing."—Washington Post.

Severe Root Pruning Favored.

Although the horticulturist of the Georgia experiment station declines to make any positive statement concerning the advisability of severe root pruning when planting young trees, he says that he is fairly satisfied that peach trees from which the roots have been largely cut off will live and flourish in Georgia even in stiff clay and under adverse weather conditions. The same statement may also be made of apple and cherry trees. In some experiments made the last two years he found that the root-pruned trees made fewer, deeper, larger and more robust roots. These roots penetrated 17½ inches, against 9½ inches for the roots of unpruned trees.

SUBSOILS FOR ORCHARDS.

Unless They Are Just Right It Is Impossible to Get a Healthy Growth of Trees.

In his last annual report Prof. E. W. Hilgard, director of the California experiment station, calls attention to the importance of examining into the nature of the subsoil of the proposed orchard site. He says:

Few persons can have an idea of the extent to which the planting of orchards on shallow soils underlaid by hardpan or heavy clays has caused pecuniary loss, often almost ruin, to old-timers as well as to newcomers to the state. Every few days there come letters transmitting samples of tree-branches having the "die-back," and asking about the means of relief. We might usefully stereotype the first sentence in reply to such inquiries, briefly to the effect: "Examine your subsoil!" In nine cases out of ten it is either hardpan or an impervious clay substratum, which deflects the roots sideways after the second or third year, and of course prevents a healthy normal development toward the moist depths of the soil, where abundant plant-food awaits them in all good orchard lands. More rarely it is a layer of coarse sand, or gravel, which prevents the rise of moisture from below; sometimes it is the rise of the bottom water, which causes disease of the deeper roots, and also starves the tree. Almost invariably the question is asked: "What fertilizer must I apply to remedy the trouble?" Well, in most cases no fertilizer of any kind will remedy the difficulty; the existence of which should have been ascertained before planting the orchard, or, better, before buying the land at all. Even in the east and in Europe, careful farmers scrutinize the subsoil before investing. In the arid region this is tenfold more needful, because of the critical importance of the subsoil, overshadowing that of the surface soil, as already explained. The irrigator who pays so dearly for his water is doubly interested in it, and ought always to know how long it takes water to soak to a certain depth in his land, so as to be sure that it does not run off the surface of natural or artificial hardpan, and flow to the neighbor below, instead of soaking down.

Simple Implement Which Reduces Labor Expended in Garden Work to a Minimum.

handles to center piece; for back braces take two pieces of old wagon-tire two and one-half feet long, fasten to each outside piece at back end, punch four holes in each brace and bolt to center piece; by punching several holes in the back braces you can widen or close the weeder to suit the width of row; join handles to center piece and brace handles as shown in cut; take 12 harrow teeth and sharpen like shovel plow, saw a notch on outside piece two-thirds the depth of tooth, fasten teeth with bolts by boring one hole through the outside piece and another half way, in the form of a staple; by this method you can raise or lower the teeth as desired. —A. L. Craig, in Epitomist.

Spraying Kills Apple Scab.

Experiments at the Ohio station have demonstrated clearly that the apple scab is the chief factor in the destruction of the apple crop, and that this fungus can be kept under control by spraying. Four splendid successive crops were produced on the sprayed trees at the station, while the fruit on the unsprayed trees in the same and neighboring orchards was worth less. The director, Prof. Thorne, however, calls attention to the fact that exhaustion of soil fertility, want of water and insect ravages may all cooperate with scab or other fungus growth in shortening the crop, and says: "If our orchards are again to produce the great crops of earlier days, we must, in so far as possible, restore the soil conditions of those days; we must avoid the waste of water in these sections where rainfall is scanty by preventing the growth under the trees of weeds or grass, and by keeping the surface in such condition as to prevent rapid evaporation."

Growing Medicinal Plants.

The extensive imports of leading drugs, exceeding $3,000,000 annually, have led the department of agriculture to study the possibility of profitably producing some of these at home. The cultivation of golden seal, snake root and similar native drug plants, which are becoming exterminated in the wild state, has been begun on a small scale. The leaves of plants like stramonium cannot be produced profitably unless grown where land and labor are cheap. Experiments in curing leaves with artificial heat gave promising results.

TWO KINDS OF LAW.

One for Law-Abiding Citizens and the Other Generous-Spirited Neighbors.

Georgia has a law intended to induce stock-owners to keep their animals in their own fields, says the Atlanta Constitution. When a farmer finds his neighbor's cattle in his corn, instead of sending them to the pound or shooting them, he puts them in his own corral, and when the owner comes for them, charges him 50 cents a head to pay for the trespass.

It happened that when the law was under discussion two neighbors were very violent, the one in favor of it, the other against it. After the law had been passed the cattle of the man who had opposed it got into the other man's field and were captured. Their owner went for them.

"As I am a law-abiding citizen," said the other farmer, "and as there are 14 cattle, it will cost you seven dollars."

The man whose cattle had been impounded was indignant, but he paid the bill. A little later he captured his neighbor's cattle in his field. Wallet in pocket, the owner of the cows rode over to get them.

"Well," he demanded, "how much do I owe you?"

"Not a cent," replied the other. "I may not be a law-abiding citizen, but I'm a neighbor."

PARTY LINE TELEPHONE.

A Squabble Between Subscribers That Was Settled Very Speedily and Amicably.

Washington has thousands of party line telephones. The best of feeling does not always prevail between those on the party lines when both want to use the 'phone at the same time, says the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle. A prominent politician is on a party line with a doctor. He was in great haste to get a friend over the 'phone and began ringing and shouting "hello." The other subscriber wanted to use his telephone at the same time, with the result they were soon saying harsh things to each other.

"Who are you," demanded the politician.

"I'm Dr. Blank," was the answer.

"Oh, pardon me, doctor, you can have the line. It it weren't for you I couldn't make a living."

"Well, who are you?" asked the doctor.

"I'm Jones, the undertaker," was the answer.

Thought It Was Soiled.

They were a party of people from "up state," and nothing in the big city interested them so much as the great ships at the docks. They had been wandering joyfully over the deck of a four-master just about to clear with coal for an eastern port, and after awhile one of the women found an open hatch.

"Come here!" she called excitedly to her nearest companion, with the air of one who has made a discovery. "Look! Look! Just think! She's holler!"—Youth's Companion.

A Dentist's Advice.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 25th.—Mr. Harry L. Lewis, Dentist, 607 Sumit street, this city, says: "I certainly advise anyone no matter how severe they may have Kidney Trouble to take Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I was troubled with Kidney Disease for several years and Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me. I had used many so-called remedies without any benefit. Four months ago, I was flat on my back with this painful trouble and must say that I almost gave up hopes of ever getting any better. Through a friend's advice I purchased six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"At first I could see but little benefit, but after two weeks, I could see an improvement. I had been getting up several times at night and pains in my back were very severe. When I had taken six boxes I felt better than I had for years. The pain had all gone and I didn't have to get up during the night at all. I continued the treatment until I had used several more boxes, and now I am glad to say that I am completely cured."

gives to Salzer's Oats its heartiest endorsement. Salzer's New National Oats yielded in 1903 from 150 to 300 bu. per acre in 30 different States, and you, Mr. Farmer, can beat this in 1904, if you will. Salzer's seeds are pedigree seeds, bred up through careful selection to big yields.

	Per Acre.
Salzer's Beardless Barley yielded	121 bu.
Salzer's Home Builder Corn...	300 bu.
Speltz and Macaroni Wheat....	80 bu.
Salzer's Victoria Rape.....	60,000 lbs.
Salzer's Teosinte, the fodder wonder	160,000 lbs.
Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass...	50,000 lbs.
Salzer's Pedigree Potatoes.....	1,000 bu.

Now such yields pay and you can have them, Mr. Farmer, in 1904.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND DON'T KNOW IT

To Prove what Swamp-Root, the Great Kidney Remedy, Will Do for YOU, Every Reader of this paper May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, fatal results are sure to follow.

Your other organs may need attention—but your kidneys most, because they do most and need attention first.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys begin to get better they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

The mild and immediate effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root will set your whole system right, and the best proof of this is a trial.

14 EAST 120th ST., NEW YORK CITY.
OCT. 15th, 1903.

DEAR SIR:

"I had been suffering severely from kidney trouble. All symptoms were on hand; my former strength and power had left me; I could hardly drag myself along. Even my mental capacity was giving out, and often I wished to die. It was then I saw an advertisement of yours in a New York paper, but would not have paid any attention to it, had it not promised a sworn guarantee with every bottle of your medicine, asserting that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable, and does not contain any harmful drugs. I am seventy years and four months old, and with a good conscience I can recommend Swamp-Root to all sufferers from kidney troubles. Four members of my family have been using Swamp-Root for four different kidney diseases, with the same good results."

With many thanks to you, I remain,
Very truly yours,
ROBERT BERNER.

You may have a sample bottle of this famous kidney remedy, Swamp-Root, sent free by mail, postpaid, by which you may test its virtues for such disorders as kidney, bladder and uric acid diseases, poor digestion, being obliged to pass your water frequently night and day smarting or irritation in passing, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, headache, backache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, heart disturbance due to bad kidney trouble, skin eruptions from bad blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, diabetes, bloating, irritability, wornout feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh, sallow complexion, or Bright's disease.

If your water, when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment or settling or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is the great discovery of Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist. Hospitals use it with wonderful success in both slight and severe cases. Doctors recommend it to their patients and use it in their own families, because they recognize in Swamp-Root the greatest and most successful remedy.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is for sale at drug stores the world over in bottles of two sizes and two prices—fifty cents and one dollar. Remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

EDITORIAL NOTE.—So successful is Swamp-Root in promptly curing even the most distressing cases of kidney, liver or bladder troubles, that to prove its wonderful merits, you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1904.

FORTY-EIGHT YEARS.

Forty eight years ago next summer the Republican party was born in Philadelphia. Since that time it has conducted twelve campaigns for the presidency. In nine of these it has been successful. The first time it lost was the first campaign when a new, untried party, it failed to secure the confidence of the people to a sufficient extent to win, and Fremont and Dayton as nominees, were defeated by Buchanan and Breckenridge, the Democratic nominees, and the last nominees of that party to be elected for twenty-eight years.

The next national convention of the Republican party was held in Chicago and nominated Lincoln and Hamlin. The great victory and the resultant civil war are known to all who are at all conversant with this country's history. The party again made its popular war president its candidate, with Andrew Johnson for his running mate, the convention which nominated them being held in Baltimore. The fourth convention met in Chicago in 1868 and nominated Grant and Colfax. The fifth at Philadelphia in 1872, renominated Grant and nominated Wilson as vice-presidential candidate. Hays and Wheeler were nominated at Cincinnati in 1876, and Garfield and Arthur at Chicago in 1880.

The first Republican candidates after Freemont and Dayton to be defeated at the polls were Blaine and Logan, the Plumed Knight and Black Jack Logan of civil war fame. The defeat was a hard blow to Blaine, who all his life had aspired to the presidency, but had been turned down again and again in convention in favor of some other aspirant. He never fully recovered from the blow of his defeat.

Both the Republican party and the people profited by the lessons taught them during the four years' reign of Grover, and in 1888 Benjamin Harrison and Levi P. Morton, nominated in Chicago, had little difficulty in carrying the day. The Minneapolis convention in 1892 named Harrison and Reid as standard bearers, but the people preferred "four years more of Grover," and the Republican party again defeated for the third and last time during its forty-eight years of existence, went down in defeat. At St. Louis in 1896 McKinley and Hobart were named. They were elected. In 1900, at Philadelphia, McKinley was renominated and Roosevelt was put up to run with him.

And this year at Chicago Roosevelt and some fitting running mate will be nominated, to be triumphantly elected next November. It will be the party's thirteenth convention, but whatever ill luck the number may bring will undoubtedly be brought to whatever party and candidates constitute the opposition.

BOOK OF THE ROYAL BLUE.

The January Number, "Book of the Royal Blue," has started the year with a new feature. Each number during the ensuing year will contain two pages of the characteristic works of two of the most prominent American Press Humorists, and consequently, its readers may look forward to a variety of entertaining literature of this character in the future.

It is also the endeavor of the publishers to present some beautiful picture, on the line of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, each month as a frontispiece, with a descriptive poem of some well known author.

The articles on the World's Fair at St. Louis are the best detailed descriptions published. The February Number especially, will be devoted to the beauties of the exposition from an architectural standpoint.

A noticeable feature of the Book of the Royal Blue is that it stands alone among railroad publications in using its advertising pages exclusively to portray the merits of the Baltimore & Ohio System, and as much care is given to these pages to make them interesting as is given to the other features of the book.

A PLEA FOR THE NATIONAL ROAD.

Agitation for Good Roads May Bear Fruit Shortly.

STATE AID FOR OLD HIGHWAY

Suggested By a Correspondent Who Says That Real Estate Has Depreciated and the Population Decreased Because of Neglect of the National Road In Garrett County.

To the Editor of The Republican.

The movement for better roads is wide and the agitation general. Several bills have lately been introduced in Congress and many of the states are making large appropriations for this purpose, conventions are being held, associations formed, and the press is pushing this pressing problem. The public finally realizes that the progress and development of the country depends largely upon transportation and the improvement of our roads. It is also recognized and acknowledged that the state should assume the iniatory by liberal and generous aid in making these great public improvements. The retiring executive in the strongest terms advocated large state appropriations for better roads. The Governor in his inaugural address assured us that he was in hearty sympathy with this movement, asserting that his party's platform promised the people such improvements and said the pledge should be redeemed. It therefore appears that this long-delayed legislation will be enacted. Various bills are proposed. Perhaps the "Haman" bill will prove the most practical.

The people should urge their representatives to act promptly in this vital matter. The farmers demand better roads. Rural life is made comfortable, the value of farms greatly enhanced and the labor and cost of transporting their products to market largely lessensd. In every way the life and property and business of the farmer is deeply affected by this matter.

Garrett county is more concerned than any county in the state owing to her large area and sparse population. The decline and decay of the National Road running through the northern section of the county has resulted in great depreciatian of property, loss of population and decrease of wealth; in fact, it is difficult to dispose of real estate in that section. The young and enterprising are migrating and all efforts to secure emigration has failed. The condition of our roads appear to be the chief cause of complaint. The National Road was built by the United States government, from Cumberland westward, and when managed and controled by the government it was considered the best road in America if not in the world. Much of it is now in fair condition, while portions are barely passable for vehicles. We speak of that section lying in Garrett county. To those of us who remember this road in the days of her glory, pride and power, the present condition is sad and suggestive. The splendid, wide, smooth, well-graded, deeply macadamized road, with its massive bridges and many culverts, crowded with stage coaches, heavy wagons and never-ending droves of cattle, famous hotels filled with travelers, flourishing towns, busy villages and comfortable hamlets, furnishing markets for all products of the thrifty, prosperous farmers.

This was the first great highway crossing the Alleghany mountains and connecting the east and west. What the railroads are today the National Road was fifty years ago. Presidents, statesmen, senators and congressmen have passed over this road, admiring the scenery and surprised at its traffic. Henry Clay was the founder and always the friend of the National Road. Great, indeed, would be his grief and deep his dispair could he view the ruin, desolation and desecration of his pet project. "Sic transit gloria mundi."

The people should immediately forward petitions or send delegations to Annapolis to urge and advocate an appropriation for this road. As it directly interests the northern and eastern section of the county immediate and concerted action should be taken. The large land owners along the old pike are deeply interested and should bestir themselves in pushing this improvement.

Frostburg is the market for all that region. The merchants of that thriving city understand the importance of this movement and will come to the aid of our people. The urgency and importance of this matter cannot be overstated. For years the condition of our roads have disgusted strangers and discouraged our people. Now that the strong arm of the state is within reach let us at least make a united effort to secure this aid.

APPLICANTS FOR APPOINTMENT.

Several Garrett Countians Are Willing to Receive Favors from the Executive.

A list of applicants for appointment to the various offices within the gift of the Governor, was published recently in one of the Baltimore city papers. The list contained the names of several hundred persons who are willing to become "martyrs," among them being several Garrett countians who are falling all over themselves to get to the pie counter. "Insurgents" and organization men are a conglomerate mass in the struggle and while the former are more numerous than the latter it is a well understood fact that they (the "insurgents") will receive very slight recognition at the hands of the executive.

Among the applicants for State Game Warden are Editor James M. Litzinger, Peter A. Chisholm and Harry Thayer. For Fish Commissioner the name of Mr. E. I. West appears.

It is well known that Hon. R. T. Browning is also an applicant for the position of Fish Commissioner and to further his claims for recognition he has made a pilgrimage to Annapolis where he was received yesterday by Governor Warfield in that gentleman's inimitably hospitable manner and all well informed persons believe that words of cheer and comfort were whispered into "Uncle Dick's" ear. The Governor and Mr. Browning served in the Maryland Senate together and were inseparable friends and if he does not secure what he wants it will be a surprising matter indeed.

Meanwhile the shaking of the green bag is breathlessly awaited by insurgents and organization adherents.

THREE MEN IN DEATH'S GRIP.

Mysterious Mountain Battle with Fatal Results near Austen, W. Va.

FAIRMONT, W. VA., Feb. 1.—James Kennedy, aged 48, shot through the mouth and hip; James Black, of Baltimore, aged 28, shot through the left eye and chest; W.C. Mitchell, of Milwaukee, aged 34, wounded through the right lung, are in a dying state at the Miners' Hospital here to-night as the result of the most terrific mountain battle this section has known, which took place at Austin. The men were all perfectly sober and went into the open to fight it out. Guns were brought into play among themselves and the wounds were inflicted. None will live until morning. Physicians say that the men refuse to discuss the matter and none but themselves saw the fight.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

There is a petition being circulated in this part of the county, in which the legislature now in session will be asked to pass an act prohibiting the sale of all spirituous liquors in district No. 3, at any point not within the limits of Grantsville corporation. This move should be heartily supported by all good moral citizens, as the great amount of evil resulting from the establishment of a number of low class grog shops in this section is being felt in many homes from which we have every right to expect recruits to the ranks of noble and respectable citizenship.

Some criminally disposed person or persons have been committing depredations of a most despicable nature in this neighborhood within the past few weeks. The latest reported was the stealing of a large quantity of meat from the premises of John L. Beechy.

Mr. Henry Wiley smiles in the same old way. It's a boy.

Mr. Mahlon Brenneman was visiting relatives at New Germany last week.

Mrs. C. E. Ellethorp and daughter Amanda, accompanied by Mr. Lloyd Brenneman, were visiting in and around New Germany part of the past week.

Miss Mary Wiley, of Moscow Mills, Md., is visiting her old home.

Mr. Simon Maust was over in Pennsylvania, visiting his parents, last week.

Mr. Charles Buckle visited Oakland last Friday.

Mr. Peter G. Stark and Simon Orndorf did a big business in "hoss" trading last week.

Letter to J. W. Casteel

Dear Sir: The cheap paint to buy is the one that covers more than you think; the cheap one to wear is the one that is young when old.

Mrs. Moore, of Kelsey, N Y, bought 16 gallons Devoe to paint her house two coats; her painters said it would take that. Had 6 gallons, left.

Mr. James Ackley's house, in Cairo (Catskill Mountains), N Y, was painted Devoe; it wore 14 years; and the paint was in good condition then. He was going to paint, the last we knew, though. That's the way to preserve a house; repaint when there's no occasion.

Yours truly

HICKS' FORECAST FOR FEBRUARY.

The Great Weather Prognosticator Foresees a Series of Storms.

A GREAT BLIZZARD IN BEGINNING

And One for a Fnish With the Same Thing Between Will Make the Month of February a Stormy One Indeed.

Rev. Irl R. Hicks has announced his weather prognostication for the month of February through the columns of his publication, Words and Works. He declares that February will begin on the central day of a regular storm period.

The first stage of this period will fall in the last two days of January, that is, change to warmer with barometer falling in the west, and winds shifting to easterly and southerly. By the 1st, storm areas will begin to form over the western parts of the country, marked depressions of the barometer will be moving eastward, and wide areas of rain and snow and sleet will pass eastwardly across the country during the 1st to the 4th. Ordinarily a cold wave and blizzard would appear before the 4th, but the moon does not pass the celestial equator until the 4th, hence the storms of this period may not reach blizzardous proportions until after that date. The Mercury disturbance continues up to about the 10th, hence cloudy, murky, sleety weather will continue in all probability into the reactionary period central on the 6th, 7th and 8th. If heavy snow and sleet storms do not appear during the first four days of the month, such storms will almost certainly develop about the 6th to the 9th. But the chances for marked winter storms on and near the first day of the month are many.

Upon the whole, much threatening weather, with severe winter storms, are almost certainties during the first eight to ten days of February, or until the Mercury influence subsides. This will prove one of the most general and destructive sleet periods of the winter and at least one severe cold wave may be counted on. Two are quite probable, one not far from the 1st, and another on and about the 7th and 8th. Those who live out on the great plains of the west and north should exercise prudent watchfulness for themselves and their live stock at his time. In the nature of the case the Mercury period groups the first two storm periods of the month into the prolonged spell of threatening weather and severe winter storms.

The third storm period is central on the 12th and reaches from the 10th to the 16th. Falling barometer and general storms or rain and snow will return about the 14th, 15th and 16th. This period will culminate about the time of the moon on the 16th, bringing storms of a tropical nature southward, with change to blizzardous features in the west and north. This period is also prolonged by the new moon on the 19th almost up to the reactionary storm about the 18th and 19th. If rising barometer and cold wave follow immediately after the new moon on the 16th, a sudden revulsion to storm conditions will reappear about the 18th to 20th. These storms will also be followed by a high barometer and cold wave about the 20th to 22nd.

Our critical friends who love to dwell upon the facts that we cover the whole time with out storm periods, will have good opportunities to bring out this argument during this month. The diagram shows that the earth brace, or the growing vernal equinox, begins about the 15th of the month. All through the last half of the month this growing vernal equinox will be felt prolonging the regular storm periods, causing sporadic squalls of rain, wind and snow, and bringing some dangerous tropical storms up from the regions of the equator.

The last regular storm period for February is central on the 24th, its disturbing influence reaching from the 22nd to the 27th. The first stage of this period will bring change to much warmer in western parts—winds will change to southerly and easterly, the barometer will fall, the hygrometer will show increasing humidity and more storms of rain, turning to snow on the north side, will pass eastwardly over the country from the 24th to the 27th.

As the month goes out generally fair and colder weather will prevail, In the western extremes, reaction to warmer will have set in, and the barometer will be falling preparatory for the reactionary storms due the first three days of March.

We take occasion to say again that the last half of February annually is under the growing influence of the vernal equinox, and for this reason alone threatening weather withspurts of rain, snow and sleet are liable to appear any day. Our critics are right in saying that we cover almost the whole time with causes of storms. But they forgot in making these criticisms that they themselves claim that "it is storming somewhere every day." If this be so, then there must certainly be some cause. Isn't this logical? If there must be a cause for these things, it must vary in its effects from time to time, or the phenomena which we witness is out of harmony with their cause. All know that here is not the same amount and intensity of storm and precipitation "somewhere every day," but that these phenomena rise and fall to maxima and minima periodically. The intelligent millions have already tested and decided the fact that our storm charts explain and provide for these periodic maxima and minima periods, giving a reason for any light disturbances that may occur "somewhere every day" and for the great storms and tempests that are general at other times. The great equinoctial storms are not predicted to fall on a fixed or specific day but within clearly defined periods. The March and September equinoctial periods extend to at least four weeks before and after the central days of the period dangerous storms being probable at any time in those periods.

THE GROUNDHOG AND SHADOW.

He Had No Difficulty In Seeing It Tuesday.

If the ground hog was fool enough to come out of his snug little bed yesterday morning simply to look at his shadow, he had plenty of opportunity to gratfy his vanity. This sagacious Marmot, whom the scientists burden with the name of "Arctomys Monax." has been snugly ensconced in his burrow since long before Thanksgiving Day and he began to bestir himself for the first time Tuesday. As the gray dawn began to part the curtains of darkness, Br'er Hog emerged from his sleeping quarters and squatted on the little hillock behind the entrance, turning his face toward the east to catch the first glimpse of the sun. When the rays shot above the horizon the little woodchuck turned around, caught a glimpse of his shadow and scuttled hurriedly back in his hole, affrighted at the apparition, where he will curl up for another six-week nap. Many Germans believe implicitly in the old adage that declares: the badger peeps out of his hole on Candlemas Day and when he finds snow he walks abroad; but if he sees the sun shining he draws back into his hole." As long as the badger remains in his hole the Germans expect bad weather.

Will Start on His Long Tramp.

A note to the editor from Rev. J. B. Shoup, formerly of Accident, Garrett county, now a resident of Fitzgerald, Georgia, states that he expects to spend the spring months with his old friend, Rev. H. H. Flick, at Manchester, Md., and start on the National Pike at Cumberland on his 66th birthday, June 11th, for his long tramp over that historic highway to the World's Fair at St. Louis. He intimates that the he would not be adverse to the company of some old comrade in his travels.

Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

FROM THE HEALTH OFFICER.

A Communication Correcting a Misleading Statement.

OAKLAND, MD., Feb. 2nd, 1904.

I herewith inclose clipping from yesterday's Baltimore Sun, in which the writer pretends to give the smallpox situation in Oakland and vicinity. Austin, W. Va., which he says is a few miles west of Oakland, is 35 miles from Oakland, Newberg about 40, and Tunnelton about 30.

There has not been a new case of smallpox reported to the health board for three weeks. All who have been sick from that disease at and near this place are now well. We have no cases in Oakland, nor in the county, so far as the board of health has been informed.

Taking the article throughout it is misleading, to call it by the mildest name.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
County Health Officer.

The clipping above referred to pretends to be a special dispatch to the Sun from Oakland and is as follows:

The smallpox situation at Oakland, Md., is clearing. There has been another death, Mrs. Blanche Crane, at Loch Lynn. Austin, W. Va., a few miles west of Oakland, is still under quarantine, no trains being allowed to stop at that station. There are 125 persons under quarantine at Tunnelton. Newburg, W. Va., is also under strict quarantine, there being 60 cases at that point.

TWO FAMOUS GEORGIA GENERALS

The One Given All Honors By the South, the Other Almost Ignored.

To the Editor of The Republican.

It rarely happens that any state of of this great Union is called upon to pass down to the grave, in so short a time, two of her most distinguished sons, as was the case with Georgia, in the coming of the inexorable demand to surrender her famous Longstreet on the 3d, and her equally famous J. B. Gordon on the 9th of this first month of 1904. Longstreet died at Gainesville, this state, and was quietly laid to rest according to customs and rites of the Catholic church, a bare announcement of the event being about the measure of prominence accorded by the public press of the state. Gordon died six days later at his winter home, Biscayne, Fla., and the same press is full, to repletion, with all possible forms of comment that can be made laudatory. That which comes to Gordon is scarcely overdone, for he was a lovable as well as a loyal man; but why so little for Longstreet? These men held the same rank in the service of their section, and both were eminently efficient and faithful. Longstreet, indeed, held senority of rank, having been made a Lieutenant-General by the mill at Richmond one day in advance of Gordon. There is a plain and all-sufficient reason for the difference in sentiment toward the two; one was consistent, the other was not. When the conflict between the two sections was over Longstreet sought favor from the general government; Gordon from his own section. That the former pursued a course as honorable and reasonable, before the bar of his own conscience, as did the latter, no one with unprejudiced mind will question. But the relation assumed by these two men toward the general government on the one hand and the pseudo-confederacy on the other put them both alike outside the limits of ordinary political judgment. It was not wise, and in the eyes of the people of their section, it was a grave offense for any one, more especially for those who had been advanced to highest rank in the military organization of the south, to change party relations and accept office by appointment under the general government. This is why such men as Longstreet, Moseby, W. F. H. Lee and others, men of unquestioned loyalty to their side during the continuance of the conflict, as well as of high qualifications and brilliant achievements, feel no more the grip of the "glad hand" among the people of their own section. To the world at large this seems unjust. In the south it is fully justified. Impartial history alone can give these men their due.

But aside from political considerations there was that about General Gordon which powerfully challenged the admiration and love, not only of the people of his own section, but of the whole country and of all lands: He was an eminently lovable man; his public utterances throughout the country stamped him as a veritable "apostle of peace." It was my privilege to have some measure of personal intercourse with the man, on one occasion to stand on the same platform with him, and to me he will always be an admirable christian gentleman.

Georgia does herself proud in bestowing lavish praise and honors upon her noble Lieutenant-General John Brown Gordon. But to me and to the readers of THE REPUBLICAN it seems a pity that another, so worthy as was Lieutenant-General James Longstreet should be allowed to pass to his rest with so slight a measure of public notice.

A man resolved to quit smoking on New Year's day. He kept his resolution manfully that day, but in the interval he drank four gallons of water, ate three quarts of salted peanuts, chewed 25c. worth of gum, quarreled with his wife, licked one neighbor's dog and almost had a fight over it, raised a row with another neighbor about his chickens, lost several good customers on account of being cranky, kicked the cat out of the house, fired the hired girl, insulted his mother-in-law, and other things too numerous to mention. He's smoking again. Moral: Never acquire the smoking habit.

DEATH OF MISS MADGE CHISHOLM

She Died at Uniontown, Pa., While on a Visit to Relatives There.

In the death of Miss Margery Rebecca (Madge) Chisholm her parents lost a dutiful daughter, her relatives and friends a kind and loving companion and the community generally a universal favorite who was highly esteemed for her kindly disposition and noble Christian character.

The deceased young lady was the sole surviving child of Capt. and Mrs. Peter A. Chisholm of Oakland, and was on a visit to relatives at Uniontown, Pa., where she was taken ill two weeks ago, the illness being of a nature as to preclude her removal to her home here, death resulting on Monday morning at 7.30 o'clock.

The remains of the deceased were brought to Oakland Tuesday morning and conveyed to the home of her parents and this afternoon taken to the Presbyterian church, of which she was a consistent member, where services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Miller, in the presence of many sympathetic friends, after which the interment was made in the Oakland cemetery.

Miss Chisholm was born in Oakland on July 11th, 1880, and was therefore in her twenty-fourth year.

6 CARS DERAILED AND WRECKED

And Track Torn Up for 1300 Fee Yesterday Afternoon.

A very peculiar accident took place yesterday afternoon two miles west of Oakland on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad whereby six cars were derailed and wrecked and thirteen hundred feet of track was torn up.

An eastbound freight train was descending the grade west of the Yough bridge when a brake beam fell on the rails and threw a steel car loaded with coal from the track. This was followed by four others loaded with coal and lumber, and the caboose. The accident took plate on a sharp curve and the wheels of the cars dropping down turned every rail completely over. Just as the approach of the bridge was made the forward car left the track and rolled down the embankment while the others remained on the roadbed, blocking the tracks several hours.

Track Foreman Morrison was standing near the point where the brake beam fell and had a narrow escape with his life as a large piece of steel was thrown through the air by the rapidly revolving wheels and buried itself in the frozen ground within reach.

He is a Finished Musician.

Dr. John G. Robinson, one of the leading dentists of Western Maryland, with residence at Oakland, was in the city over Sundav, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Schroeder, at their home on West Washington street, and at the special services in the M. E. church yesterday and last evening presided at the organ, rendering at the evening service a splendid vocal solo. During the entire after meeting last night, or rather after the close of the sermon, and throughout the entire prayer service, Dr. Robinson drew the sweetest, most melodiovs strains from the organ, the faint, low, tender notes of which added much impressiveness to the service. Dr. Robinson is a finished organist, having received his training in the city of Baltimore, and having presided at the pipe organ of the leading M. E. church of that city for some years. He is also a splendid vocalist and his solos are very fine and received always with the spirit of appreciation that encourages and perfects. It is stated that Dr. Robinson is thinking of locating in Grafton, and if he decides to do so he will be very heartily welcomed by our people.—Grafton Sentinel.

Never growl because a newspaper fails to give every scrap of news, so long as you take no pains to give the editor information. We have heard of readers who are awfully put out at times because we make no note of the arrival or departure of friends visiting them, or of social affairs, or of the heaven-sent babies that visit their homes over night. The average newspaper man isn't a medium nor a mind-reader, but gets most of his news the same way the milkman gets his milk, by pumping.—Ex.

COMES HOME AT NIGHT.

How the children's faces brighten,
How they drop their toys and books,
How the mother's burdens lighten,
How expectant each one looks,
How the youngsters run to meet him,
How they shout in their delight,
How they throng to kiss and greet him—
When papa comes home at night!

How all troubles seem to vanish,
How all little quarrels cease,
How he seems all gloom to banish,
How he brings in joy and peace;
How his smile smooths every wrinkle,
How he sets all wrong aright,
How he unkinks every crinkle—
When papa comes home at night!

Blest, ah, blest beyond all speaking
Is that happy family,
With a loving father seeking
To preserve it trouble-free.
Let no harm, we pray, come near him—
Sudden death—untimely blight;
But long may his children cheer him—
When papa comes home at night!

The Major's Saddle Bags

ON NOTABLE occasions Basil Ducharme arrayed himself in the huge cocked hat which he had worn as a soldier of France. He possessed, likewise, another relic of former glories—a pair of enormous sadle-bags, with which he was wont to burden Michael, his venerable donkey. But he allowed himself only one vanity of speech. "When Marshal Ney gave me my commission," was a phrase he sometimes used before strangers. Peshtigo people did not need to hear it. They knew him and believed in him as a great man.

The major had been only a boy when he went to the wars, and he was not much more than a youth when the battle of Waterloo and a bullet in his shoulder peremptorily retired him to paths of peace. He had come to America—to the Green Bay region of Wisconsin—to join a brother, a bachelor like himself.

The brother died, but the major remained. There were many colonies of French and Belgians on the shores of the bay. He felt at home. And when he had grown to be an old man he found a special intimate friend.

This was Dr. Louis Bonnet, a Frenchman born, educated and married in Canada, yet with a soul akin to that of the major. Never had the major found so sympathetic a listener to his tales of France, of Napoleon and the grand army. Alas, that their communion was doomed to be interrupted!

Dr. Bonnet was much older than his wife, and the springs of his life seemed to weaken when she died suddenly, three years after leaving Quebec for their new home in the Wisconsin forest. Then there was much illness, and the doctor toiled hard that summer, visiting poor and stricken homes where no fees awaited him. In September he took the prevailing fever and died.

By common consent, the orphan daughter of the Bonnets, little Marie, not yet two years old, was taken in charge by Maj. Ducharme. To his home she was transferred by the old nurse who had cared for her since the mother's death.

The baby had been free of the major's cabin before, but now she ruled it and its occupants in a manner that set at naught all the established rules of baby-tending. The major would put on his precious cocked hat and caper for her. The major would get up in the night when Marie was wakeful, and sing her the old songs of the empire. The major would set aside the most pressing duty to mount with her on the venerable Michael's back and take her for an airing. That was a happy time for him, although his garden was ruined by the drought, his onion-crop a total failure.

There had been no rain since early in July, and it was now October. The country about Peshtigo had seasoned in the sun until the whole region was a tinder-box, ready for the match. Peshtigo itself was a "sawdust town," which meant that every mill, besides the lumber it turned out, belched forth tons of refuse, which was heaped everywhere. A general fire in such a place obliterates the very streets.

On a certain Sunday in October the major stood in the cabin door, surveying his little domain. Fires were smouldering here and there, clouds of smoke hung above the trees, and he was worried. Marie's nurse was ill, and had gone that morning to her relatives in the Sugar Bush. For that reason, and because the fires in the vicinity had become serious, he had determined to take Marie to the home of his friend, Alexis Normand, a Belgian farmer, who lived on the bay shore.

He had hoped to make an early start; but the old donkey had somehow lamed himself, and although the major proclaimed that Michael was an imbecile, Michael must rest a few hours, notwithstanding.

A start the major was determined to make, however. They could spend the night at a village, he expected to reach in the early evening, and go on to Father Normand's the next morning.

In the afternoon, therefore, the donkey was caparisoned with the saddle-bags, the huge pockets of which well-nigh touched the ground on each side, and the major mounted, holding Marie on his arm. Unwillingly the donkey set himself in motion.

As they passed out upon the road, which was little more than a wagon-track overshadowed by trees, the smell of smoke was borne on the wind, and the major turned with some misgivings to take a parting look at the little house he was leaving behind. It was a snug place, and cheery. The cabin, with its whitewashed walls and the pot of flowers brightening the window, made one think of a prim old man with a carnation in his buttonhole—the major himself, perhaps, dressed for a feast-day.

Presently now they were in the forest that pressed close up to the road. But the donkey made painful progress. When the afternoon was well spent they were still some ten miles from the place where the major had planned to spend the night.

The sun sank behind the trees. The first shades merged into darkness. Night was upon them when they came to a bit of rising ground which the major knew was not far from their destination. Off at the southwest he could see a glow upon the sky that filled him with apprehension.

It was after eight o'clock when they had managed to make another mile, and now the fire first seen from the hilltop was spreading very rapidly. It tinged the whole southern sky where storm-clouds hung, and strange sounds, indistinct and ominous, were in the air.

On again the travelers plodded for a little way, and then Michael stumbled and rolled his riders on the ground. When the major had scrambled to his feet, and made sure that Marie's cries were due to fright, and not to injury, he noted that the beacon light on the sky was well up toward the zenith, and the distant sounds were growing louder. Even as he looked up, a tree here and there brightened in the glow.

For a moment he stood irresolute. Then an inspiration came to him. Seizing Marie, he dropped her into one of the saddle-bag pockets and strapped the pocket-flap loosely at the top.

The baby squirmed vigorously and cried lustily, but the pocket, flap and all, held firm. It was a doubtful chance that the major meant to take; but he thought the donkey's instinct would guide him to safety, and since he could not carry both his master and Marie, there was no other way.

There were tears in the old soldier's eyes as he picked up a stout stick and struck Michael a resounding blow across the flanks. His lameness forgotten for the moment, the donkey bounded away.

The major followed, but only as far as Father Ramien's little woodland chapel. In truth, he could go no farther. He had barely strength to scramble up the rude steps and in at the open door. Father Ramien was gone. The only light within was that of the altar lamp, which sent a faint ray out into the little room.

But off at the south the fire was flashing from tree to tree. Terrifying noises accompanied it, and the clouds were so bright that flames from above seemed to mingle with the fire below. The major thought the end of the world had come.

The light grew brighter. He could see the crucifix above the altar, the passion pictures on the walls, the carven text upon the chancel rail that promised eternal life. The major knelt to say a paternoster. Presently the frail little structure shook in the blast, firebrands rattled on roof and walls, the windows burst in, and in the rolling tide of flame the chapel disappeared.

Two days later Marie Bonnet's nurse, desperately hurrying back to Peshtigo, met some people who told her of a miraculous escape. A child had been placed in one of the pockets of a prodigious pair of saddle-bags and committed to the care of a donkey—which trusty beast had saved both the child's life and his own by sagaciously walking into a pond near the Sugar Bush road.

So! And where was the child? One should see William Duquette, the blacksmith? Very well, then. To William Duquette went Mother La Rose straightway, and proved that it was the little Marie who had been in the saddle-bag, and who had come out of it a trifle stupefied by smoke, but very much alive; in fact, wholly unharmed.

Years after, when the little Marie was old enough to understand, she found occasion for pride and rejoicing in the fact that she had been christened Marie Ducharme Bonnet. She liked to think that the name brought her nearer to the spirit of the old soldier who had loved her and guarded her to the last.—Youth's Companion.

DECREASING RAPIDLY.

Birth Rate of the Bay State Has Fallen Off Very Noticeably in the Last Few Years.

Massachusetts is facing the alarming fact that while there was a big increase in the number of marriages in 1902, the birth rate has fallen off so noticeably that Sweden and France are now the only countries where fewer children are born per 1,000 of the inhabitants than in the Bay state. The news is found in the sixty-first annual report of "Births, Marriages and Deaths in Massachusetts," edited by Dr. Francis A. Harris, one of the medical examiners in Suffolk county. Dr. Harris says:

"The birth rate for 1902 is the lowest since 1879, and a decrease of .49 per cent. from the previous year. Doubtless economic conditions of the population have an influential effect on the number of births by increasing or decreasing the number of marriages, but to what extent it is difficult to determine. In the number of births the children of the foreign born mother are largely in excess over the native.

"The average birth rate for 1849-58 was 56.70 per cent. for native-born living births and 40.04 for foreign; the average of 1859-69, the native, 46.06 and 46.89 foreign; the average of 1869-73 was 40.54 for the native and 48.48 for foreign; 1874-78, average 40.52 for native and 45.30 for foreign; average 1879-83, 41.68 for native and 41.32 for foreign. In 1890 the percentage of native-born was 34.82, foreign-born, 44.10; and in 1900 the percentage was 31.45 for native, 49.30 for foreign-born.

"The number of marriages registered in Massachusetts in 1902 was 25,685, which was 794 more than in 1901 and 1,343 more than in 1900, and greater than in any year since the beginning of registration. The number of persons married for each 1,000 of the estimated population was 17.48, so that the number of marriages to each 1,000 was 8.74. The marriage rate, as calculated from the estimated population, was 0.11 less than the average rate for the decade 1893-1903, but the number of persons married was greater than in any year since 1850."

Some singular facts are brought out in the report. In the town of New Ashfield there was neither a marriage, birth nor death. Gosnold, a Martha's Vineyard town, nearly equaled this record, having neither a marriage nor a death, but it did have one birth. In Gay Head there was one marriage, one birth and no deaths. Seven sets of triplets were born, aggregating 14 boys and seven girls. Four bridegrooms out of the 25,685 married over 80 years of age. Three women became brides at between 75 and 80. Seven girls married at the age of 14 and 29 at the age of 15. The youngest boy married was 16 years old.

SHOP BY TELEPHONE.

Advertisements in Newspapers Furnish Buyers with Prices and Other Information.

Business by telephone is now more of an item in all the great department stores and dry goods houses and, in fact, in all lines of trade, than the small order business. Especially at the holiday season the telephone is as much an indispensable adjunct in the placing of orders as is the salesman. Many are the people, men as well as women, who do not care to engage in the jostle and bustle of the crowds during the holidays, who prefer to do their transactions over the telephone.

This does not apply to the very rich alone. People of the most modest fortune who have a telephone in their homes send in their orders in preference to making personal calls. At this time the suburban district telephone exchanges reveal an enormous number of calls with the leading retail houses of the city.

Every big dry goods house to-day is obliged to have its own private house exchange in order that the customer many miles away may be put in direct communication with the buyer in any particular line of goods or with the clerk at any counter so that there may be the most explicit directions as to any purchase, avoiding annoyances both to the house and to the customer.

The use of the telephone in this way shows how newspaper advertising is bringing more business all the time to retail stores. Of course, the people who send in their orders do so because they have seen in their newspaper's advertising columns mention of this or that bargain. They do not need to go to the store to look over the counters or in the shop windows. By reading the advertising columns the customer knows what to buy and where to order it.

An Immune.

They are telling a story down in south Missouri of a "cub" reporter in Springfield whose head was slightly turned by "newspaper perquisites." The new reporter found that by simply saying "I'm a newspaper reporter" he could generally gain free admittance to theaters and other places. He became so used to getting things free this way, the story goes, that when the contribution box came his way in church last Sunday he looked up at the man passing it and, with a wave of his hand, said: "I'm a newspaper reporter." It is a wonder he didn't take a quarter or so.—Kansas City Star.

A Synonym.

"Being a printer, Mr. Dash," said the hotel proprietor, "maybe you can advise me. I want to get a sign painted: 'Writing Room Free to Our Patrons,' or something like that."

"I don't like 'patrons,'" said Mr. Dash.

"No.. Maybe that doesn't sound just right. What would you suggest?"

"'Victims.'"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

FOR DEVOTEES OF DRESS.

Pretty Combinations in Winter Costumes for Home and Outdoor Wear.

For dressy afternoon wear, nothing is in such good taste as a gown of what is known as lustrous faced cloth, which, if for walking, would better be of a rich dark color or some of the tan shades or even violet, and made rich by furs either in "sets" or trimmings. Besides, an almost unlimited amount of lace is used upon some of these cloth gowns.

Combinations of the long haired, silky zibelines and plain broadcloth are novel features on some of the smartest winter models. The effect is like a fur trimmed gown, as the new zibelines bear a striking resemblance to fur, says the New York Tribune.

The latest fad is to wear a short Eton jacket of fur that will either match or contrast with the cloth, velvet or velveteen gown. With all the shades of brown, which are many and rich looking, jackets of mink (in the darkest shades) are worn. With gray and black gowns, sable, mole and squirrel jackets are worn, unless the wearer prefers all black, and then baby lamb is most attractive.

While there is a great run on violet shades (and they are so rich in velvets), there is a pronounced preference for reception gowns of green the exact shade of emerald. It "lights up" beautifully by gas or electric light, the rays playing among the soft half shades and high lights of the draped velvet with wonderful effect; and white flowers, pearls, emeralds or diamonds are appropriately worn with such a gown.

For house dresses, yellow, in all shades from cream to rich orange, is a fad of the season. It is becoming to blond or brunette, looks well by gas light or day, and is wonderfully effective with soft meshed laces, either in white, cream or butter color.

The fichu finish for gowns or the bertha, either, is much favored for demitoilette, as it leaves the corsage slightly decollete, thus rendering it suitable for the house or for theater wear with a hat and wrap.

A new idea, or rather an old one revived, is that the hat must match the gown, thus necessitating the possession of as many hats as gowns. It is artistic and effective, and can be managed with a little extra cost, if one has taste and skill for managing one or two black and white hats with different trimmings, which can be adjusted by deft fingers in a few moments.

But, whatever the style or shape of the hat, to be modish it must be worn lifted rather high from the head, that is, if the wearer's face will admit of it. This effect may be obtained by a "barette" of velvet inside the crown, if the hair is not worn high.

SAT DOWN, ANYHOW.

Chair Was Not in Its Accustomed Place and Dignity Was Shattered.

The dignity of the supreme court was somewhat shaken the other day through the removal of a chair from its customary place, relates a Washington report.

It was during the argument on the Northern Securities suit, and the interest in the case had brought so many lawyers into court that it became necessary to provide additional seats within the railed space reserved for members of the supreme court bar. Chairs were brought from the marshal's office and the clerk's office, and to accommodate a late arrival a chair used by one of the pages who sit in the space behind the justices' seats was taken during the temporary absence of the youngster on an errand.

Now, this page is of particularly chunky and solid build, and when he returned to his station, and without noticing the absence of the chair, plumped himself down in the place it should have been, there was a sound that might fitly be described as a dull, sickening thud. It was sufficiently startling to bring one of the dignified justices to his feet and to cause another to rise partly from his chair, while even the attorney general paused for a moment in the delivery of his argument.

The court officials rushed around back of the partition, with visions, perhaps, of dynamite bombs or something of that kind, and those of the audience sitting where they could see behind the screen craned their necks, but when the offending page pulled himself together and stood up, looking sheepish and rubbing the bruised portion of his anatomy, and at the same time trying to assume an innocent expression, he was greeted with a broad smile that finally spread over the entire room.

Self Consciousness.

Self-consciousness calls for outdoor exercise, plenty of rest and sleep, a mild nerve tonic and mixing more with people. Just remember that all the world is not looking at you. Most of the world is extremely busy hustling for a living and minding its own business. When you have some good ideas in your head, don't belittle them to yourself, but just let them out. It is quite likely that you are just as right as the next one only you don't know it.—Chicago Record-Herald.

CANARY ISLAND LACES.

In Great Demand for Table Decoration by the Leaders of Swell New York Society.

Perhaps nowhere else so much as in New York is the human tendency to desire most what is most difficult of attainment manifested to an almost unlimited extent. The truth of this aphorism is especially noticeable in the present feminine craze for Canary island lace for the table, for the fancy is not based upon the beauty of the lace and the fineness of the linen—there are other forms of lace and linen finer and more lovely—but upon its scarcity in New York.

The leaders in fashionable New York society learned that there was something new to be had in the line of table linen and—best of all—something that few could procure, so they immediately proceeded to deck their lunch tables with the dainty work produced by the deft fingers of the natives in the far-away Canary islands.

The linen from which these fashionable table pieces are formed is heavy in quality and of a very close and pretty weave, with a luster like that of pearls upon it. It is practically indestructible, and when it has had its day in high society and graced a table set with Royal Worcester or finest Limoges it may, perhaps, be relegated to the use of those who cannot live in fashion's heyday, but who will none the less enjoy the delicate mesh of this lace from the islands of southern seas.

The natives of the Canary islands draw the threads of the linen just as do the lace workers of Paraguay and Mexico, and work out their lace patterns upon the remaining threads in the corners and borders of their pieces. Strangely commingled in their work are the old Spanish stitches, introduced by the Moors, and evident in nearly all fine antique lace, and the Indian lace stitch common to South and Central American Indians. This quaint mingling of two styles of lace stitches gives Canary island lace a place of its own.

The borders and corners of the table pieces are very richly worked in an open design that alternates with a closely worked pattern the general tendency of which is to square effects. It is in these portions of the adornment that Moorish influences are perceptible, for the edges of all the pieces are finished with disks very similar in make to those of the Mexicans.

Some of the plate doilies have the prettiest little star shapes of open thread lace, as though some native had copied a starfish or perhaps dreamed sweet, starlit dreams and woven the thread of fancy into the meshes of her lace.

All the small doilies are of solid lace, while the larger ones are worked into fancy open patterns in the linen centers and bordered with wheel-shaped disks of thread lace.

The sameness of this border pattern gives an individuality to the linen sets, because the inner patterns are wholly different from it in type.

In the Canary islands even poor natives revel in the possession of lace beautiful enough to be desired by cultivated metropolitan tastes accustomed to beauty, and its value has hitherto been as little appreciated by them as has been that of the exquisite Paraguayan lace to its patient makers. Now, perhaps, the soft-eyed makers of Canary island lace will rejoice at the solid returns from America which they receive in exchange for its beauty, although to them the information that "all the most fashionable people in New York are buying it" will convey no meaning.

In the simple lives of these little workers beauty comes as an inspiration and has no part in a word not coined in their tongue—"fashion."—N. Y. Herald.

Creme de Menthe Sandwiches.

Creme de menthe sandwiches are a pretty novelty, the recipe for which is given in the Cooking Club. For 20 minutes infuse a tablespoonful of pulverized mint leaves in two tablespoonfuls of hot water; strain and add it to one pint of whipped double cream; add also a saltspoonful of salt, a dash of white pepper and half an ounce of gelatine softened in a tablespoonful of cold water and dissolved over hot water. Cool in a square mold, and when cold cut in thin slices and place between similar-sized pieces of brown bread.

RETURN OF THE GARNET.

After Years of Total Eclipse This Pretty Stone Is Coming Into Vogue Once More.

Garnets, after a long eclipse, have come into fashion with a rush, and girls are ransacking their mothers' jewel boxes for ancient garnet necklaces, buckles and brooches, worn by grandmamma in the '50s, and handed down to descendants who proved rather unappreciative of the blessing.

These semi-precious stones are exquisitely becoming for evening wear, when they shine with a brilliant crimson glow most flattering to the skin of the wearer. Brunettes particularly look extremely well in these stones, and nothing can be more becoming than one of the old garnet tiaras still to be found here and there worn in a mass of waved dark locks. For day wear they are rather disappointing, because somewhat jetty in effect.

Carbuncles are the uncut variety of the same stone, large specimens being ground and polished cabochon fashion. The resulting gem is handsomer than the cut garnet, and dearer. It is not, however, so fashionable as the masses of small brilliant cut stones which one generally sees. Garnet buckles are sometimes used in black millinery with excellent effect.—Detroit Free Press.

DAINTY SOFA PILLOW.

An Exquisite Fancy Work Idea from France, at Once Simple and Yet Decorative.

Pretty sofa pillows add greatly to the furnishings and general appearance of a room, and the one I am about to describe, with its exquisite ribbon-work blossoms, cannot fail to please even the most fastidious. The French people are noted for their artistic tastes, and it is to them that we are indebted for this dainty art of ribbon work.

In this pillow, violets and their foliage are the motif; a huge bunch in one corner, a little group or two in others, and some loose, scattered ones, leaving the careless grace of the natural flower plainly evident. The material used as a background is brown linen. A cream-colored basket weave canvas is also very beautiful carried out in this manner. The leaves and stems are first embroidered solidly in shades of green floss, and then comes the ribbon work.

For this two or three shades of violet colored silk ribbon are required, ribbon that is soft, pliable and about a half inch wide. One shade can be made to answer, but the result is much more pleasing if two or three are used, and as the same quality and width are required the expense will be no greater. The French embroidery ribbons are shaded themselves, so that only the one length is needed, but it is not always possible to secure them. About four yards will be necessary in this instance.

Select a needle with a long eye, and not too coarse. Thread this with a strand of the ribbon. Fasten one end securely on the wrong side under one of the violets, using ordinary needle and thread with which to do the tacking. Now thrust the needle and ribbon through to the right side just at the center of the violet, and down again at the outer edge of one of the petals, continuing thus until all are finished, making each petal with one stitch. The ribbon is then cut off and the end secured underneath as in the beginning. Care should be taken after each stitch to make the folds or wrinkles which the ribbon assumes, turn downward toward the linen instead of curving up. Sometimes a tiny stitch or two with silk thread of the same shade is necessary to make the ribbon stay in place, but this should not be resorted to if it can be avoided, as it produces a stiff, set look, which is not desirable. If more than one shade is used, make some flowers darker than others, or the upper petals in some cases lighter or darker than the lower ones, planning to have the blossoms as varied as possible.

The hearts of the violets are then embroidered with a few stitches of pale green floss on the large petals running from the center a short distance down the petal. This touch of green is then surmounted by a couple of stitches in yellow at either side of it and uniting in the center, thus forming an inverted V over the ribbon. These stitches aid in holding the ribbon in place, and must be put in only after the ribbon is in its proper position.

Use violet or green silk or nearsilk for the back of this pillow, and finish the edge with a cord of like color.—Mae Y. Mahaffy, in Ohio Farmer.

Honey as a Home Remedy.

Honey is a valuable medicine, and has many uses. It is excellent in most lung and throat affections, and is often used with great benefit in place of cod liver oil. Occasionally there is a person with whom it does not agree, but most people can learn to use it with beneficial result. Children who have natural appetites generally prefer it to butter. Honey is a laxative and sedative, and in diseases of the bladder and kidneys it is an excellent remedy.

FUN IN SKI SPORTS

They Furnish Winter's Amusements in North of Europe Countries.

Some Wonderful Records at Running and Jumping in Norway—Their Introduction Into Switzerland and Use in the Alps.

Ski sports are familiar in nearly all the north of Euorpe countries, and grow rather than decrease in popularity in most of them. This is especially true of the nations bordering the northern shores of the Baltic sea.

The earliest mention of skis is in the works of Strabo. The earliest picture of skis is in a book by a Norseman of the sixteenth century. In those days, however, ski-running was only an adjunct to other sports, and not a sport in itself. The early Norsemen put on their skis to go hunting in winter, just as in summer they put on their boots; and it was only towards the end of the nineteenth century that separate ski sports came into existence. They were practiced in a crude form by the villagers of Telemarken; but their introduction to more civilized circles is due to Dr. Nansen. He saw the Telemarken lads disporting themselves on skis, and he took lessons from them. In particular they taught him to jump on skis. The new amusement became popular in Christiania, and, in due course, competitions were organized. The first competitions were rather a "hole-and-corner" affair, and took place at Telemarken. Afterwards they were transferred to Holmenkollen, where they assumed such importance that the meeting is sometimes spoken of as the "Norwegian Derby." It is a three days' meeting, and two of the days are devoted to steeple-chasing on skis. The third is given up to the famous sport of ski-jumping. The competitors come skidding down a snow-slope until they reach a cliff about 12 feet in perpendicular altitude. This is the taking-off place, and they see how far they can jump from it. The taking-off place is artificially constructed by banking up the snow, and below it the snow-slope continues as before. The distances jumped by the best men are prodigious, the record being something like 130 feet.

Ski-jumping in Norway, however, is an old story. Another, and a better, story is the introduction of skis into Switzerland. It came about because Herr Zdarsky, of Austria, went to live on an estate at Lilienfeld, where the winters were severe and the snowfall was heavy. Remembering to have heard of skis, he decided to import a pair. It is not very easy to learn to manage them without assistance, but Herr Zdarsky managed to learn. He not only mastered them, but he invented improvements. After many experiments, the Lilienfeld ski was evolved. It is more convenient than the Norwegian ski for many reasons, but chiefly because you can wear it with any kind of footgear, including the heavy hob-nailed boots used by mountaineers. Having thus perfected his skis, Herr Zdarsky taught his visitors how to use them. It was gradually recognized that they afforded a novel and agreeable means of getting about in the winter snow, and they were taken up by climbers. Herr Paulcke succeeded in crossing the Bernese Oberland on skis; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle made a considerable expedition on them. They are now ordinarily used by mountaineers in winter.

There has been talk of late of the introduction of the sport into the British Isles. It is of course only in a limited portion of the British Isles that it is feasible in such mild winters as have fallen to them of late. The fact, however, has not prevented the formation of a Ski Club of Great Britain, or the successful pursuit of the pastime by keen enthusiasts. It has been pursued, in particular, in the district south of Loch Ness. There is a range of hills there about 2,000 feet high, and in 1900 the ski-ing was excellent and lasted until the end of April.

Leap Year.

"I don't understand what ails all the men," said Miss Elderly New Year's morning.

THE PARISIAN WASHERWOMAN

From Her Chic and Gay Appearance No One Would Associate Her with Suds.

Among the working classes in Paris there is no more coquettish member than the jaunty little washerwoman, the "blanchisseuse Parisienne," says a Paris correspondence of the New York World. She carries her basket on her arm or her bundle swung over her shoulder in the airiest way as she trips along, and to see her one would never associate her with soap and suds. She is always fair-headed, but with her hair done up and befrizzled in the most bewitching modish fashion, and nearly always she wears a "smart," cheap little costume in good taste and very becoming, with a ribbon or a bit of tulle stuck somewhere as a finishing attraction.

She may wash out or burn out one's clothes in a trice, but she is the airiest, most obliging little person in her talk imaginable. She knows how to explain away all missing articles or to account in the most plausible, polite fashion for one's not having received clothes on the day asked for.

In the ironing room she looks as fresh as a rose. She bends over the ironing board with a little song on her lips, and keeps half an eye on the street door for a passing flirtation. In the window there is always a bouquet of flowers, and frequently a sleek cat curled up. On the wall hangs some very gay little illustrated calendar. Sometimes a plaster Punchinello sits upon the shelf. Very often a canary hangs in the front shop window and chirps while the little washerwoman sings to the brisk movement of her iron.

It is easy enough to associate the Parisian washerwoman with a romance. There is no hint of soapy red elbows about her. The washing all appears to be done sub rosa, and she looks as if she were always on dress parade. In fact, there is no end of small Paris amourets in which the washerwoman plays one of the principal parts. In the Latin quarter it frequently happens that a passerby in the street sees a student of the Sorbonne flirting over his linen with the washer of it in the little laundries that abound in the quarter.

As a rule the blanchisseuse does not envy the sewing girl her lot. She is much more care free, sings more, and has a greater number of opportunities to trot the street basket on arm, flinging bright, malicious glances or bons mots at her male acquaintances as she trips along in her high-heeled shoes. The Parisian washerwoman is one of the distinctive types of the city, understanding perfectly what it is to be "chic" and gay on a few sous.

PRETTY SMART DOG.

That Is, If He Did What His Owner Claimed for Him, and No Mistake.

"You can talk about intelligent animals," said Hon. J. Cheerful Layer, of Punto Perdido county, although the conversation had never touched upon anything less than man, relates the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "but my dog Mex was probably the most sagacious brute that ever caused a human being to grow doubts regarding his superiority. Mex was half-wolf, and very foxy. I bought him from the same Mexican who was hanged three times without success owing to the extraordinary conformation of the 'Adam's apple' in his throat, which he could inflate when the rope was placed around it and reduce when the drop occurred, at which time he would be dangling by the chin instead of the backbone. A more beautiful creature than Mex—I mean the dog—could scarcely be imagined. His tail, for instance, was three feet long, and bushier than that of a stall-fed pony. And, as I've stated, he had more sense than any justice of the peace.

"Volume after volume would not be equal to complete the biography of the dog. I shall content myself with relating a single, absolutely unvarnished anecdote of Mex's puppyhood. Understand this occurrence took place between the third and fifth month of his existence.

"When I had first adopted him I allowed Mex to sleep on my bed. But he grew rapidly, and I had no desire to spoil him, and so consigned him to a mat on the floor.

"The softness of my couch suited him better, however, and I was obliged to chastise him to keep him from it. Yet, when I came home next night I found a warm place, slightly hollow, on the blanket, while Mex, from his mat under the bed, greeted me by pounding the floor with his tail in a suspiciously enthusiastic manner. Wherefore I whipped him again, soundly.

"From that time on, to my great satisfaction, my bed did not show any further signs of canine occupancy. My confidence in Mex's honesty grew to beautiful proportions until—

"One night I came home 15 minutes earlier than my usual hour, which was half-past 11. As it had been raining, and my boots were muddy, I took them off at the outer door, entered the house on my stocking feet, opened the door of my room, and found:

"Mex standing on my bed, smoothing out the hollow and wrinkles of the blanket, where he had been reclining, with all four of his paws—(it was a regular treadmill effect!)—and at the same time fanning the place still warm from the contact of his body with his great bushy tail so as to cool it off against his master's arrival!"

The Making of Them.

"The rising young actor reminds me of a persimmon," observed the hash-fed philosopher.

"Come on with the diagram," said the landlady, as she poured another quart of hot water into the coffee pot.

"One or two hard frosts are the making of him," answered the wise one.—Kennebec Journal.

ANCIENT SUN CHARIOT

An Odd Discovery in the Danish Island of Seeland.

It Is Some Three Thousand Years Old and Recalls the Sun-Worship Once Diffused Among the Germanic Race.

In a peat moor of Trundholm, in the Danish island of Seeland, a remarkable discovery has been made in connection with that sun-worship which once was widely diffused among the whole Germanic race—Teutons, hence, also Anglo-Saxons, Danes, Swedes and Norwegians. Six inches under the decayed vegetable growth was found a bronze sun-chariot, partly broken, which represents the disc of the heavenly orb, drawn on three pairs of wheels by a horse. This hieratic object was unearthed near Nykjobing, where, according to the distinguished archaeologist and director of the National Museum at Copenhagen, Dr. Sophus Muller, many objects of a similar style have been discovered before.

Danish writers conclude that this sun-chariot must be about 3,000 years old. Yet it is of no mean artistic merit. The sun-disc is covered with a circular and spiral ornamentation, different on its two sides. The design was evidently first worked in with a graver; and then a thin plate of gold was pressed in. The horse, rather archaically shaped, was connected with the disc by loopholes on his neck for slipping reins through. His tail was not docked; for the animal, cast hollow, shows an opening at the tail where of old probably a horsehair appendage was put in.

The elaborate involutions in the designs on the sun-disc remind us to some extent of the ornamentation found at Mykene, Tiryns and Troy. These were, in most ancient times, not Hellenic, but Thrakian (Thracian) settlements and strongholds. Now, the Thrakians—red or golden haired, tall, martial, musical, much addicted to the cup, as they are described by classic writers—were kindred of the Germanic, Getic, or Gothic stock. The line of their tribal connections can be traced from southeastern Europe and Asia Minor up to the High North. It is recorded also that since olden times there was a "sacred road," or trade route, from a northern Scythian region down to the Adriatic gulf, on which road amber was carried from the Baltic and the German ocean to the south. All this might make us ask whether there has been, perhaps, some early artistic intercourse even between the south and the north.

On the other hand, the place where this sun-chariot was embedded seems to point to a time when—at least, so far as we know—there was not yet any such communication. Herodotus, in the fifth century before our era, would not even believe in the existence of a sea in the north. He was not aware of the Baltic. Pytheas, the Hellenic mathematician and astronomer, who went from Massilia (Marseilles) to Britain, through the German ocean, into the Baltic, where he found Teutons and Goths, and then up, in all probability, to Shetland and the Orkneys, if not even near Iceland, was the first Greek who saw those northern seas in the third century before our era.

Dr. Sophus Muller believes that the work discovered in the Trundholm moor "had probably been made in the country where it has been found, or, at any rate, in that region where there was once a population of the same common culture and mode of life—namely, in southern Scandinavia and in the most northern German lands." For my part, I am prepared to show that the beautiful Hellenic myth of the Helliades, or Sun-Daughters—who, when weeping for the death of their brother, Phaethon, were changed into trees, their tears becoming amber—is evidently a tale originally brought southward from the north in the course of trade.

The Radanos, or Eridanos river, at which the Greek myth was localized, was already declared by Pliny to be quite at variance with geography and with the places where amber is really found. But there was a river Radan, a confluent of the Vistula, near the Baltic, from which the Greeks obtained amber. Now, this Radan was, as usual, provided with the Hellenic ending "os," and afterwards erroneously mixed up with the Eridanos, or Po.

Sun-worship, as Pytheas already stated, existed in the north. It was a cult widely prevailing among the Germanic race—even more so than in the south; for in the north the sun is essentially a beneficent star; while in the south it is often a bringer of death, of plague, and of agricultural distress. In the Edda we repeatedly meet with a sun-chariot, nay, even a Sun-Daughter. In the old German poetry, tales, and folk-lore there is an overwhelming mass of evidence for the same cult. The passages in the poetical and the prose Edda, or Norse scripture, amply testify to a belief in a sun drawn by a steed.

BRIDGING AN INLAND SEA.

Stupendous Engineering.

We have in times past been told much of wonderful feats in railroad building, and much has been written of the engineering skill and daring that directed the course of the iron horse across the plains and mountains that lie between the Missouri river and the Pacific Ocean. "In the grandeur and magnitude of the undertaking, the Union Pacific—Central Pacific has never been equaled. The energy and perseverance with which the work was urged forward, and the rapidity with which it was executed, are without a parallel in history," were the statements of the special government commissioners to the Secretary of the Interior.

Thirty-five years ago there was no time to spend on work similar to that which has just been completed. Then the world was watching while the builders of the Union Pacific and Central Pacific raced for supremacy. It was a magnificent contest, but nowadays the owners of the road have been brought to consider other problems. One of these necessitated the solution of the grade question and the straightening of the track.

One of the most interesting and difficult feats of railroad engineering ever undertaken has just been completed by the owners of "The Overland Route," Union Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroad—the building of a bridge across the Great Salt Lake between Ogden, Utah, and Lucin, Nevada.

The work being practically completed, the new track was formally opened on Thanksgiving Day when Mr. E. H. Harriman, head of the Harriman Lines, and a big party of railroad magnates partook of Thanksgiving Day dinner in the middle of Great Salt Lake.

The Ogden-Lucin "Cut Off" is 102 miles in length, 72 miles on land and 30 miles on trestle work and fillins over the waters of Great Salt Lake. It presents a practically level track except for a short distance on the west end near Lucin, Nevada, where a slight grade is encountered.

The use of this cut off will throw out the trans-continental traffic over the old line from Ogden to Lucin, Nevada, around the Lake. This strip of track is one of the most expensive of the Harriman system, the maximum grade over the long Promontory hill is 104 feet to the mile and helper engines are always necessary. The elimination of the use of these engines will mean the saving of at least $1,500.00 a day in operating expenses and also a saving of several hours in running time.

Active work was commenced in 1902, and thus the almost impossible task was completed in about 22 months. The last pile was driven during the last week of October. This great work has cost over $4,200,000.00.

The cut off runs from Ogden west 15 miles over level country before reaching the lake proper, then across the east arm of the Lake 9 miles to Promontory. Then five miles of solid road bed and then 19 miles west over the west arm of the Lake toward Lucin and thence across the Great Salt Lake Desert to Lucin, Nevada. Across the east arm of the Lake, it will be almost a continuous fillin supported by trestle. Near the middle of this will be a gap of 600 feet of open trestle work left for the waters of the Bear river which flow into the arm of the Lake.

Across Promontory Point runs five miles of solid road bed and here difficult work was encountered. A cut of 3,000 feet long in sand and rock of barren bluff being necessary. At this point, the most beautiful on this inland sea, surveys have been made for an immense summer resort.

Across the west arm of the Lake is 11 miles of trestle work with a fillin approach at each end of four miles. In completing the work of spanning the Lake, one great difficulty was encountered across the east arm by the settling of fillins and trestle work. This was caused by the salt of the flow of the Bear river having collected for centuries over the bottom of the Lake and having formed a salt wall of 100 feet. It took 1,000 tons of rock in piles which appear to have reached the bottom of the Lake proper and which has resulted in a firm and splendid road bed.

In a speech which he made at the Alta Club, Salt Lake City, on the eve of the opening of the "Cut Off," Mr. Harriman said:

"The completion of this undertaking will reduce the distance between San Francisco and Salt Lake by 41 miles, and will eventually bring the time between the two cities down to 22 hours.

"It is intended to reduce the running time from Salt Lake to Chicago to 36 hours, and put passengers into New York in 56 hours from Salt Lake.

"These two railroads—Union Pacific and Southern Pacific—have spent in the last three years somewhere near $130,000,000.00 in repairs and improvements aside from the expenses of operation or maintenance."

MESSAGES AT HIGH SPEED.

Inventor of Multiplex System Devises an Instrument Sixty Times as Rapid as Ordinary Telegraphy.

Telegraph messages can be sent and received at a rate of from 1,000 to 3,000 words a minute. A newspaper representative recently saw and heard a message transmitted and delivered at these speeds. In the transmission of messages press wires can, by the use of the shortest code, with the most expert operators, carry only an average of 2,500 words an hour. The record is 3,300 at present.

The inventor, P. H. Dalaney, who devised the multiplex system, has been working on his device for ten years in South Orange. Stripped of all technicality, the new automatic telegraph system may be described as follows:

A typewriter keyboard, when manipulated, causes two rows of perforations to be made upon a narrow tape of paper which unwinds itself automatically over the type faces and rewinds after being perforated.

This contains the message in a Morse cipher, the dots being read when two holes are at a close angle or nearly in perpendicular alignment and the dashes when the angle is greater. This tape, reeled as it is finished, is put upon the transmitter which sends the same dashes and dots to the receiving office.

The perforator is an adjunct of the keyboard and is controlled by a powerful and very rapid electric motor.

MEDICAL EXAMINER

Of the United States Treasury Recommends Pe-ru-na.

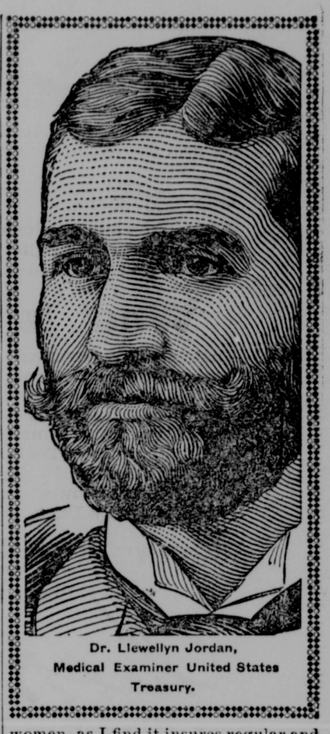
Other Prominent Physicians Use and Endorse Pe-ru-na.

DR. LLEWELLYN Jordan, Medical Examiner of the U. S. Treasury Department, graduate of Columbia College, and who served three years at West Point, has the following to say of Peruna:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from your wonderful remedy. One short month has brought forth a vast change and I now consider myself a well man after months of suffering. Fellow sufferers, Peruna will cure you."

A constantly increasing number of physicians prescribe Peruna in their practice. It has proven its merits so thoroughly that even the doctors have overcome their prejudice against so-called patent medicines and recommend it to their patients.

Peruna occupies a unique position in medical science. It is the only internal systemic catarrh remedy known to the medical profession to-day. Catarrh, as everyone will admit, is the cause of one-half the disease which afflicts mankind. Catarrh and catarrhal diseases afflict one-half of the people of United States.



Dr. Llewellyn Jordan, Medical Examiner United States Treasury.

Robert R. Roberts, M. D., Washington, D. C., writes:

"Through my own experience as well as that of many of my friends and acquaintances who have been cured or relieved of catarrh by the use of Hartman's Peruna, I can confidently recommend it to those suffering from such disorders, and have no hesitation in prescribing it to my patients."—Robert R. Roberts.

Dr. R. Robbins, Muskogee, I. T., writes:

"Peruna is the best medicine I know of for coughs and to strengthen a weak stomach and to give appetite. Besides prescribing it for catarrh, I have ordered it for weak and debilitated people, and have not had a patient but said it helped him. It is an excellent medicine and it fits so many cases.

"I have a large practice, and have a chance to prescribe your Peruna. I hope you may live long to do good to the sick and the suffering."

Dr. M. C. Gee, writes from 513 Jones St., San Francisco, Cal.:

"Peruna has performed so many wonderful cures in San Francisco that I am convinced that it is a valuable remedy. I have frequently advised its use for women, as I find it insures regular and painless menstruation, cures leucorrhœa and ovarian troubles, and builds up the entire system. I also consider it one of the finest catarrh remedies I know of."—M. C. Gee, M. D.

Catarrh is a systemic disease curable only by systemic treatment. A remedy that cures catarrh must aim directly at the depressed nerve centers. This is what Peruna does.

Peruna immediately invigorates the nerve-centers which give vitality to the mucous membranes. Then catarrh disappears. Then catarrh is permanently cured.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

A Sabbath in Capernaum

It was Sabbath in the city of Nahum (Capernaum), so famous in New Testament annals, exalted to heaven by Jesus' residence within its limits. The usual audience had gathered in the marble synagogue, which love had prompted a worthy centurion proselyte to build.

The glittering fragments of that house of prayer, with the conventional twisted foliage ornamentation, greet the eye of the modern traveler, and remind him of the doom which Jesus pronounced on account of the spiritual obtuseness of its population. Marks spirited narrative describes Jesus as going to the synagogue as soon as the doors were open. By common consent, he takes the speaker's stand, and utters words that have a principle of life in them.

The most eminent scribe that ever occupied that desk never approximated to the self assertiveness of the present speaker. Hear his "I say unto you!" "I am the way, the door, the vine, the shepherd truth, life, resurrection!" "Before Abraham was, I am!" No wonder that audience was dumbfounded. Moses and the prophets were not authorities to be appealed to, but servants to deck the speaker's brow with aureola of divinity. In the very midst of that fervid sermon, the breathless stillness of the auditorium is broken by the piercing cry of terror and astonishment with which the underworld recognizes its Sovereign Master: "Ah!" "Woe is me!" "Mine hour of doom is come." It was just such a cry as the condemned felon might rise at the sudden, unexpected appearance of his executioner. The seed of the serpent recognizes the seed of the woman. But even in his terror the unclean spirit sees an opportunity to damage his mighty opponent. He fails not to avail himself of it. He will patronizingly acknowledge the new Rabbi's exalted claims, so that there shall be the appearance of collusion. The venomous Jews shall be furnished with some color for their damaging accusation that Jesus is himself possessed, and by that means exercise the authority over demons. The master checkmates that devil in a single move. He silences him, and expels him. The demon gives an example of his malevolent ferocity by giving his unhappy victim "a last fling" before he leaves him. In that synagogue by the sea is witnessed a sharp encounter between the powers of light and darkness, and Heaven's final triumph is adumbrated. No wonder that the fame of it flew with winged feet. The scene of Jesus' tireless activity is at once transferred from the publicity of the synagogue to the sweet privacy of the home of the chiefest of his apostles. What Peter has just seen of the Master's power emboldens him to call his attention to an instance of sickness in his own house—a low, consuming, fatal fever. The domestic miracle will produce no such sensation as that wrought in the synagogue; but love for his disciple, and a desire to confirm his somewhat unstable character, as well as sympathy for the sufferer, leads Jesus to give the touch and word of power. "What God does is well done." No tedious convalescence succeeds the breaking of the fever. As a token of gratitude the sick woman instantly rises from her couch and prepares a savory meal. All unconsciously she gives evidence of the perfection of her cure; at the same time she refreshes the Master after the toils of the day, and fortifies him for the overwhelming exactions of the early evening. For scarcely was the meal finished before the street in front of Peter's house was converted into a hospital. That miracle in the synagogue had been a silver bell whose notes of hope had sounded in every shadowed home. In obedience to its encouraging call, when the setting sun had absolved the people from their overstrained notions of Sabbath observance, they came with confidence to Him whose sovereign power had had such a conspicuous exemplification. From one sufferer's mat to another He walked in that hastily extemporized lazar-house under the stars. Nor did he desist as long as there was a tiny sufferer left upon any mother's gentle bosom. Now we know how Capernium was lifted to heaven in point of privilege. No other city had such a perfect exhibition of Jesus' power. In a single night every malevolent demon was expelled, every diseased person was made every whit whole. The sun that went down upon a sick and suffering city rose upon one healed and happy. Yet see once more the inveterate power of sin. Those mighty works produced no general or lasting faith in Jesus as the Messiah. Capernaum's doom was deserved. One fairly hears the Master's stern words, still waking the echoes of her desolation: "Thou shalt be brought down to hell."

The Teacher's Lantern

Demoniac possession is confessedly a difficult problem. We do not undertake a solution. Here are some hints only. That it was merely a symbolical way of talking about the dominance of evil (Strauss), or that it was an accommodation on the part of Jesus to ideas then prevalent. Trench affirms that demoniacal possession was coincident only with Jesus' public ministry, a sort of dark background on which his power might be displayed to greatest advantage. Of this we can only say: "Not proven." The first Hebrew king seems to have been "possessed," and modern instances seem not to be altogether wanting.

* * * * *

Once more we have "a devil with a Bible under his arm, and quoting texts." The exalted title, "Holy One of God," is taken from the Messianic Psalm. (Psa. xvi, 10.

* * * * *

In the language of the New Testament there is a great gulf fixed between the kingdom of light and the kingdom of darkness. The former can accept or borrow nothing from the latter, not even words of commendation that will be of advantage.

* * * * *

There are some ministers who, if they can get an old infidel to "speak a good word" for them, are wonderfully elated thereat. They had better imitate their Master's example. All compliments from such sources are dubious, and have a decidedly sulphuric scent. They ought to be declined with thanks.

* * * * *

That Sabbath in Capernaum is Jesus' whole life in miniature—the attendance upon the synagogue service, his sermon, expulsion of the demon, his benificent deed in Peter's home, the healing of all the sick folk brought at sundown, all closing with hight vigil in the solitary place. What a tireless toiler! What human life was ever packed with greater industry, and all that he might minister and give himself for others!

Child-Study and Sunday-School Methods.

There is a fascinating witchery about the child mind, the spell and power of which is felt by every one to a greater of less degree: a certain audacity of thought, luxuriance of imagination, grotesqueness of language all quaint, artless, captivating to the last degree. Not to be sensitive and appreciative of the characteristic is the greatest possible disqualification for teaching. It puts one out of touch and tune with the child. Such a one is beyond the child's horizon and speaking in an unknown tongue.

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

THE MARYLAND GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

The Baltimore Catastrophe Uppermost In Minds of Legislators.

RAYNER'S VICTORY AND RESULTS

He Outgeneraled the Bosses and Put them to Rout—Is Not Puffed Up—Legislation Of Interest to Garrett Countians.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS, FEBRUARY 9, 1904.

Although, for the time being, the Baltimore fire has dwarfed every other topic of conversation into insignificance, and while such legislation as is transacted here, not bearing on the calamity, is done in a perfunctory way, the settling of the senatorial fight, and the opening of a new line of vision in politics opens also a vast field for speculation, which will not be touched in this letter however.

The election of Mr. Isador Rayner to succeed Senator McComas in Washington, by most political observers, was unexpected. It was by many considered impossible. Nevertheless it came to pass, and as it turns out, is probably the solution which leaves the fewest sores to heal. Mr. Rayner's selection has pleased a vast number of people who would otherwise have been dangerous and ugly at the next time of need. He himself bears his new honors modestly, and although he would be pardoned to some extent if he did not, when the nature of his wonderful fight is considered, nevertheless no such traits have been made manifest, or at least had not been prior to the fire, when the senatorial row was forgotten in the new interest.

Last night the first railroading work done this session was transacted in the general assembly, both houses and the governor taking part. This was in the creating of ten days of legal holiday in Maryland to give the business of Baltimore a chance to rally somewhat before claims or judgments could be forced. The mayor and city council will further be empowered by an enabling act, to be immediately introduced, to borrow money to meet this emergency, in addition to the sum of $250,000, which it is generally understood that the legislature will appropriate.

At the state house today discussion was general of a plan to widen all of the streets of Baltimore throughout the burned district. The most practical plan proposed was for the city to condemn frontages enough to make all of these streets from 100 to 150 feet wide. The idea that these thoroughfares should be wider anyhow, and at this juncture such a plan would be equivalent to placing the city's credit to a certain extent, at least, at the disposal of more or less ruined property holders, and by the money thus paid them for condemned frontages, assistance given to rebuild. New structures would be set further back in their lots. There would be less back yards and wider streets.

In the meantime the legislation asked for, for the improvement of Baltimore—a sewerage system, improved paving, etc., will not be pushed until later this session, or possibly until next session, although this is meeting with opposition, many holding that now is the best time to rush the bills through while the streets can be most advantageously torn up for the work.

The legislature took a recess from 9 o'clock today until 2, awaiting recommendations from Governor Warfield with reference to legislation authorizing the call for Federal troops. When the legislature is in session the General Assembly alone has the right to call for National troops, although at any other time the Governor has this power. Hence the arrival of over one thousand regulars this morning, before any legislative action had been taken, made them only visitors to the city and trespassers, liable to prosecution if they attempted to interfere with anyone.

The Governor, however, was not in Annapolis and communication with him could either not be obtained or was indefinite, for the house adjourned as soon as it reassembled without taking action. The troops were at once withdrawn from Baltimore.

This by some is regarded as a pity, since, with $200,000,000 in cash and securities lying in a single vault and with enormous sums in many others, the presence of regular soldiery is certainly an advantage, and during the work of the next ten days the greatest convenience and protection the city could have.

The General Assembly now, however, gives every evidence of being about to get down to hard work at last, after the various delays which have thus far in its session impeded it.

The following are items of interest to Garrett countians which have come up since the last letter:

The house bill, some time ago introduced, to prohibit the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors or lager beer at any place in Garrett county within three and a-half miles of Fairview Church, in election district No. 8, was read for the first time in the senate on Thursday and referred to Senators Palmer, Lewis and Betts.

On Friday Mr. Palmer from the select committee reported this bill favorably, after which it was read for the second time.

Delegate Howard will tomorrow introduce a bill to refund to Daniel S. Enlow $21.23 paid to the Commissioner of the land office for two military lots of land which had been previously granted to other parties.

Mr. Howard's two week's pay law bill has been reported favorably by the Committee on Corporations of the house.

PAUL WINCHESTER.

IN MEMORIAM.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting, of which society the deceased was a member, on last Sunday evening the president was authorized to draft resolutions on the death of Miss Chisholm to be sent to the family and for publication. They are as follows:

WHEREAS, God in His Wisdom and Love has called home from earth one of the brightest and best of our christian young people, whom we shall sadly miss and whom we all loved; therefore be it

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the Father of us all and though we cannot understand it, yet we know it is God's way and that is best. We believe He has called her to a brighter and better world and we are thankful that the Father has spared her to us so long as He has.

Resolved, That we would say with God's afflicted servant of old, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

Resolved, That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved parents and relatives and pray God's blessing upon them in their sorrow and great loss.

BALTIMORE'S AWFUL CONFLAGRATION.

Business Section of Maryland's Chief City Swept by Fire.

LOSS WILL FOOT UP $120,000,000

Fire Burned From Early Sunday Morning Until Late Monday Night—Territory Burned Over a Mile Long and Half as Wide.

Acres of buildings covering territory more than half a mile in length and from three to six blocks in width, were destroyed in Baltimore's great fire, which started Sunday morning. No one can tell the extent of the disaster, which now has reached proportions equal to the Chicago fire of 1871, hitherto the greatest fire in the United States. No one can be seen at present, and to hazard an estimate of the total loss is folly.

The wholesale dry goods, produce, lumber, shipping, railroad and financial districts have been destroyed, notwithstanding heroic efforts on the part of the fire department, reinforced by almost numberless firemen from Washington, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Newark, N. J., Harrisburg and New York city.

Starting in the wholesale section, the fire burned out every wholesale house of note in the city, swept along through the Baltimore and Fayette street retail sections, destroyed all the prominent office buildings, leveled banks and brokerage offices, as well as the chamber of commerce and stock exchange in the financial section, then sped on through the wholesale and export trade sections, centering about Exchange Place. It finally brought up about Jones' Falls, where it invaded the lumber district.

Monday morning the fire was burning fiercely along Pratt street. It had gutted the old and new buildings along that thoroughfare, and on the wharves, which housed goods of hundreds of firms doing business all over the world. It had swept away the bridges over Jones' Falls and burned into the great freight terminals of the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroads on President street.

Gratification is expressed that the city hall, the court house and post-office escaped the fury of the flames. Streams are still playing on some of the gutted buildings in the financial section but that quarter is almost deserted, the fire having passed far beyond that point.

Millions of feet of lumber have gone up in smoke. Baltimore's equipment of 25 engines was almost useless. Reinforced by four companies from Washington, as many more from Philadelphia, two more from Wilmington and another from Chester, Pa., it was still unable to check the fire in any way during the night,

Meantime half a dozen of New York city's most powerful steamers arrived by special train and their coming gave new impetus to the efforts to check the flames by putting fresh men into the fight, the Baltimore firemen, as well as the out-of-town men who arrived earlier, having been exhausted by their struggle against such terrific odds.

All electrical power has been destroyed, and no street cars are running.

Jacob Ilgenfritz, of the Laurie fire company or York, Pa., was injured at Baltimore and Frederick streets. He was terribly crushed by the falling walls of the Schuler Clothing company's building.

Firemen are dynamiting buildings in the burning area, and the intonations of the explosions and the shrill whistles of the fire engines add to the indescribable horror of the scene. Every few minutes the fall of walls or parts of walls can be heard.

The streets in the burned and burning district present a scene at once thrilling and pathetic. These districts present an area, two miles square, and utter ruin and desolation. Scores of what were palatial, modern and so-called fire-proof buildings yesterday are only piles of debris. The common remark of citizens is that Baltimore has received a blow from which it cannot recover for years. Mayor McLane is among those who are optimistic, and today while expressing his sorrow and horror over the calamity expressed the conviction that this city will quickly rise like a Phoenix from its ashes.

Much suffering and destitution may follow the fire, and Mayor McLane and other city officials are already discussing relief measures. It is estimated that as many as 20,000 persons will be thrown out of employment and many of these and their families will be without resources.

The monetary loss will probably reach $120,000,000. Acres of most valuable property in the dry goods, produce, lumber, shipping, railroad and financial district have been destroyed. the origin of the fire is said to have been from spontaneous combustion. but no evidence to this effect has thus far been secured. The area of the fire district extends from Liberty street on the west to Jones' Falls on the east, a distance of about three quarters of a mile, and from Fayette to Pratt streets, north and south, a distance of four city blocks.

Included in this territory were a number of financial establishments of national repute, including the buildings of Alexander Brown & Sons, the Continental Trust company, the Atlantic Trust company, the offices of the Baltimore & Ohio, the Pennsylvania Railroad company, the Maryland Southern and Chesapeak Railroad companies and a number of leading hatters, haberdashers, etc.

The main offices of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies were practically destroyed. Several tons of dynamite were used to blow up building in an effort to check the spread of the flames, but even this was unavailing, and the strong wind which blew the flying embers hither and thither soon ignited other buildings. All the buildings of the Baltimore newspapers, including the offices of Associated Press, were destroyed. Several of the publishers arranged immediately to have their editions printed on the presses of Washington papers. These editions, containing full and acurate accounts of the fire, arrived early and were delivered to their regular customers.

Up to this hour, approximately 35 persons have been injured, including one fireman seriously hurt. The city goverment has been entirely suspended and the city is under complete military control. The city officials adopted the most heroic measures to check the flames and Governor Warfield has telegraphed to the secretary of the navy a request to immediately dispatch here a dynamite expert to work on gutted buildings where bare walls are tottering at every shift of the wind and threaten to endanger life by a falling at any moment. This decision was reached at a meeting of the governor and the members of the supreme benches. It has well-nigh spent itself. The residence section of the city has not been affected.

The effect of the immense property loss on the insurance companies is a subject of speculation, and fears are expressed that some of the smaller enterprises may be forced to the wall.

Governor Warfield went before the legislature to ask that he be vested with power to suspend all business in Baltimore for ten days. He at first thought of declaring martial law, but after consultation with Attorney General Bryan it was decided this could not be done. This decision was reached after many conferences with business men. The Fifth Maryland regiment is in charge of the burnt ruins and will remain there indefinitely.

The progress of the fire has been checked, and it is burning itself out. The last places to go were the ice house and coal yard of the American Ice company. The coal yards, which spread out about 200 yards, was the means of staying the march of the flames on the south and Jones' Falls on the east. The Norfolk wharf of the Baltimore Steam Packet company, which was stocked with barrels of rosin and other miscellaneous merchandise, was destroyed before the fire had attacked the Merchandise company's property. It took 27 hours to stop the progress of the fire.

At the urgent request of Senator Gorman and that of the Governor of Maryland that the legislature of Maryland would pass a resolution calling upon the national government for military assistance, Lieutenant-general Chaffee, commanding the general staff, sent telegraph orders to Mayor General Corbin, commanding the department of the east at New York to proceed forthwith to Baltimore and take military command of the situation here. Nearly 1,000 soldiers have been ordered to serve under him.

The following includes a partial list of the individual losses of $100,000 and and over incident to the conflargation. The estimates cover buildings and contents.

Ask to See THE REAL Safety Razor.

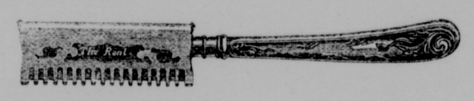
We Recommend It as the Only Good Thing in the Market.



NO REAL Safety Razor has been made heretofore. What have been sold as safeties, were either scraping machines, with a small piece of steel, hollow ground on a 7-inch stone, which you cannot strop without a stropping machine, nor hone without a honing machine; or else an ordinary razor with a guard, which the one who uses it cannot strop, because the blade is not stationary in his hand, and he usually dulls the razor when he attempts to take the guard off or put it on. The Real has the following advantages over all others: It is the simplest. It is a full-concaved razor, ground on a 1½-inch stone. It has a stationary handle, in proper position for stropping, honing and shaving. It does not break the hair off in a painful manner, as all scrapers do; it cuts with a draw cut, the same as any fine razor does. It is easily and quickly cleaned and stropped. The razor cannot close on your hand while stropping. It can be used right or left hand, and changed in a second. Last, but not least, of all, it is the very best quality razor that can be made—"THE REAL" thing.

Why not try it and be convinced?
The Real is absolutely guaranteed.

Sent by mail on receipt of price $1.75. Money refunded if not satisfactory.

LAND OF A DREAM.

Down where the river brawls through the green valley,
Down where the cat-tails stand by the swift stream,
Down where the wild winds are singing a rally,
And the cliffs are all scarred, is the land of a dream;
There where the skies in their color are vieing
With your eyes, as they looked in a day that I know,
There where the purple-topped clover lay dying,
And the breeze bore its last perfumed breath to and fro.

Oh, it's there where the reapers had finished their reaping,
There, there where the bees droned away the sweet day,
Till the night in cool dews o'er the fallen came weeping,
There, there, where the purple-topped sweet clover lay;
Oh, it's there that I see you ere night lamps are lighted,
While I'm sitting alone in the night's purple gloom,
Oh, it's there all the wrongs of the years have been righted,
And there's just you and me and the clover's perfume.

Oh, it's there, if the spirit may come back to hover
O'er scenes and o'er places the heart loved so well,
From the bourne the own soul shall win back of your lover
O'er the meadow we knew, where the sweet clover fell;
It shall range down the valley and search the abysses,
Beneath where the cliffs their deep damp shadows throw,
All the nooks known of old and enriched by your kisses,
And shall dwell midst the scenes we two loved long ago.

The Incognito of Helen

By EDWIN J. WEBSTER.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

HELEN ENDICOTT was standing at one of the windows of the big house which fronted the avenue, a decided look of discontent in her deep, brown eyes.

"It is so provoking," she exclaimed, almost petulantly. "People treat me as if I was an asset, or rather an appendage of the firm. I don't care if papa is one of the biggest men in the street. Last night, when that Englishman was introduced, he brightened up as he heard my name, and said, 'Ah, yes. Of Endicott, Lathrop & Co. I've ofter heard of your father.'

"But it would be very nice to have some one like me for myself, and not simply because papa finances trusts, and railroads, and all those things," and a pathetic little quiver mingled with the impatience in Helen's voice.

Violet Langdon looked calmly and with a little amusement at her friend Tall, graceful, clear profiled, yet sweet-faced, Helen could have withstood a far more critical inspection.

"Well," remarked Violet, coolly: "Without wishing to flatter you or raise false hopes, it seems to me within the bounds of possibility that a man might like you for your sweet self and not because of Endicott, Lathrop & Co. But unless you travel incognito I don't see how you can really experiment about the matter."

But Helen, who had been listening listlessly, gave a little start at her friend's last words. She thought hard for a moment. Then her eyes brightened.

"I THOUGHT YOU WERE AT NEWPORT."

"It could, it could be done," she murmured, half to herself. "There wouldn't be the least harm in the experiment. I might try it, anyway."

Those who best knew Mr. Endicott, Helen's father and the head of the great banking firm, said that one of the reason for his success in business and finance was that his mind once made up no obstacle could deter him from carrying out anything he planned. Perhaps brown-eyed Helen inherited this characteristic. At any rate, a few days later she was suddenly missed from the "smart set," of which she had been a member since her coming out. Her friends were vaguely told that she was "resting in the country," the exact place selected for her rest being something of a mystery. But about the time of the disappearance of Helen Endicott from society, a pretty, brown-eyed girl, who certainly bore a remarkable resemblance to her, registered under the name of Helen Morton at one of the hotels of a well known mountain resort.

It is one thing to be known as Miss Endicott, an heiress and a member of New York's most exclusive set. It is quite another to be an unknown Miss Morton at a summer resort where the few men in attendance are either married or engaged. Helen, a stranger to all at the hotel, found time hung rather heavily. Not only did she fail to receive the many small attentions so dear to the feminine heart, but she was the recipient of a few slight rebuffs, an experience quite new to Miss Endicott. Then Bobby Peyton came, saw and was instantly conquered.

Bobby was young, broad-shouldered, good to look upon, a perfect example of American manhood, able to take care of himself and those dependent upon him. After a year of hard work he was enjoying a vacation, made all the pleasanter by the fact that just before he left the city the head of the great banking house in which Bobby was employed had praised his work and promised him promotion to the head of his department. Bobby had fought a hard battle since his graduation from college. At last success seemed to loom distinctly before him.

From the first glance in Helen's eyes Bobby knew that he had met the one girl with whom it would mean long years of happiness to share life. And Helen? As she contrasted Bobby with the tired, blase sons of rich men who formed the majority of her acquaintances felt that he was a man of a different type, one whose love and respect was worthy, that any girl might be proud to win. Often she reproached herself for the false colors under which she was sailing. Of course, she, the daughter of a multimillionaire, a member of the smart set, the girl whose wealth and beauty were said hinted at as the reasons for the duke of Acton's visit to America, could not marry Bobby Peyton. But Bobby's sincere attention had grown so pleasant to her that she stilled her conscience by saying to herself that he would not really care. In her heart of hearts she knew better.

The end came one evening when Helen and Bobby were returning from a moonlight sail. As they drew near the hotel Bobby told her how dear she had become to him, what it meant if she would share his life. For a second Helen hesitated. They had almost reached the hotel piazza. Suddenly a man who had just dismounted from the newly arrived stage, started towards Helen with an exclamation of surprise. And Helen saw that it was her cousin, Howard Langdon.

"Well, Helen Endicott," exclaimed Langdon. "Who would have expected to see you here? I thought you were at Newport. Just stopped off here myself on my way north on a hunting trip. The duke is at Newport, you know," he added in lower tones.

But Bobby Peyton had heard Langdon's words as a man in the full of health hears a death sentence. His grip on the world and on all that made life worth living seemed to be slipping away. Helen Endicott. Too well he recognized the name as that of the head of Wall street's leading and wealthiest firm of bankers. Rumor said that Helen Endicott, if not formally engaged to the duke of Acton, was certain to make a great international match. There was no hope for him. In an instant all his hopes of a happy future, a home with the girl whom he loved with all his heart and soul vanished. A deeper pang was added by the thought that the girl whom he had loved with all his heart, whom in his day dreams he had called "his Helen" had only been playing with him. And Bobby slipped silently away.

At Langdon's greeting Helen felt a sudden thrill of longing for the fashionable life with its glitter and display, which she had been accustomed to from birth. To be duchess of Acton. What more could a girl desire? She could not give it up. Then she thought of Bobby. Yes, she had treated him shamefully, but it could not be helped. All that remained was to ask his forgiveness and say good-by.

Helen found Bobby seated in the darkness at the end of the hotel piazza, a picture of despairing unhappiness. But as Helen with faltering words began to acknowledge how she had deceived him, Bobby stopped her. He had lost all that his heart longed for, but he would allow no one, not even herself, to reproach "his Helen."

"Dearest, you were not to blame," he said softly. "For a time you made me the happiest man on the earth and I will always thank you in my heart for that glimpse of happiness. You cannot help yourself, for your father would not consent to our marriage You must return to your life and I to mine, but you must never blame yourself for this. You are and always will be my queen, and the queen can do no wrong."

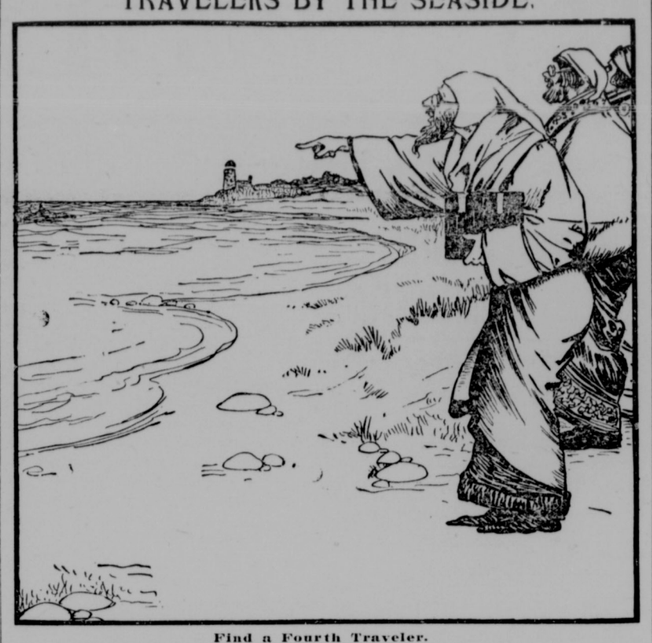
Helen had fully intended to say good-by, but as Bobby turned away she felt a sudden pang at the thought of losing him. To be duchess of Acton, the admired and envied of fashion's followers, what was that compared to a lifetime of Bobby and his love? Her father might object at first, but Helen was certain she could win his consent in the end. She stepped nearer to Bobby, a light in her deep brown eyes which he had never before seen.

"Papa will be surprised and may object at first," she murmured, almost timidly, "but all my life, when I have really wanted anything he has always let me have it in the end. And I want you, my Bobby, I want you more than I ever wanted anything else in my whole life.

Coating for Fence Posts.

Fence posts are a source of heavy expense on every farm and, being of short-lived timber as they usually are, the labor of replacing those which rot off is a considerable item. A barrel of coal tar will coat the ground end of several hundred posts and repay many times its cost in the increased duration of the posts. If the end to be pitched is smoothed with a drawer-knife and the coal tar applied hot (as it should be) a small quantity will coat a post.—Rural World.

TRAVELERS BY THE SEASIDE.



Find a Fourth Traveler.

A party of Travelers, who were journeying along by the side of the Sea, saw in the offing something that in the hazy atmosphere loomed large like a vessel. She appeared to be drifting towards the shore and they determined to wait until she could be stranded. After some time, when the object had come nearer in shore, they fancied that it looked more like a boat than a ship. They waited for some time longer and at last found, to their disappointment, that which they had at first taken for an abandoned vessel, and then for a boat, was nothing but a floating mass of planks and sea-weed.

Moral—Those who wait for fortune and opportunity to come to them usually reap but little in the end.

THE METROPOLIS OF EGYPT.

Cairo, the Ancient City, Is Full of Wonders to Interest the Traveler from Abroad.

Cairo reminds one of an impressionist picture. It is so unreal; the colors are so unnaturally bright, and the costumes and the manners of the people so different from what we are accustomed to. The scenery as well as the actors appears to belong to another world, writes William E. Curtis, in a special correspondence of the Chicago Record-Herald. For the first few days after your arrival you are satisfied to sit on the terrace of Shepheard's hotel and watch the noisy, restless, ever-changing crowd—half oriental, half European—that passes back and forth on foot, on horseback, in carriages, on camels and astride diminutive donkeys. Every nation of the earth seems to be represented, and the present touches fingers with the past wherever you may look. Under the glare of an electric light you see venerable Arab sheiks wearing the same robes and leaning upon the same sort of staff that was used when Abraham was a boy; and scribes with inkstands made from the horns of cattle and pens whittled from reeds sit at the street corners and at the threshold of the post office, writing letters at the dictation of patrons whose fingers have never been taught to frame their thought in words. Go a block from the most modern of modern hotels and clubs, and you will come face to face with stately patriarchal figures in ample turbans, long vests of Syrian silk and outer robes of cashmere that seem to have stepped out of an illustrated Bible, and as the sun goes down you hear the call of the muzzein from the balcony of the minarets, and devout Moslems drop down on the pavement to pray. Water carriers with the same sheepskin and pigskin bottles that were used by the patriarchs rub up against English grooms in top boots and silk hats; sherbet and licorice water and lemonade sellers, with tin cans and brass cups, which they clink like castanets, gossip with peddlers of post cards and wax matches. Merchants, bankers, lawyers, soldiers, beggars, guides, policemen meet and dodge each other. Officials from the foreign office and the treasury, conscious of their importance and responsibility, and dressed in the smartest of modern French tailoring, halt at the crossing to avoid an Egyptian lady riding astride upon a donkey, with her bare feet in velvet slippers and her face covered with a rusty black veil. Syrians in long, baggy trousers and braided jackets; Bedouins in flowing robes of brown and white stripes, whose turbans indicate the clan to which they belong; Persians with tall caps of brown camel's hair; Nubians with faces as black as coal; Egyptian fellaheen in ragged blue shirts and fezzes of red felt; Copt priests in long black gowns like those worn by our judiciary, and sharp-edged stovepipe hats; Englishmen in pith helmets and khaki suits; keen-eyed Algerians in white robes, and representatives of every other race and nation elbow each other as they pass along the sidewalk, talking with nervous gesticulations. There is nothing like it elsewhere in the world. It is new and novel to the oldest traveler, and one must have seen the strange picture for himself to appreciate how unique and how fascinating it is.

CONDENSED ORCHARDS.

How Fruit Trees Are Kept Dwarfed and Great Crops Produced from Them.

A certain boy with a famous appetite for fruit discovered early in his career that the trees with the best fruit were to be found in what was called the "hospital" of his grandfather's fruit nursery, a piece of ground devoted to refuse trees, which were too small for customers, and which were often taken up and replanted. Many a fine feast the boy enjoyed in the hospital, says a writer in Pearson's Magazine, but it was not until he came to a thinking age that he realized why these particular trees bore fine crops, although they never made a strong growth.

The reason was simply that they were often moved, and that the ground round about them was often dug over. Understanding this, he began to introduce a new system of fruit cultivation, that of making the trees fruitful and healthy by keeping their roots near the surface, pruning the trees frequently, and moving the trees if necessary once in about two years. In this way the trees are kept dwarfted, and great crops are produced.

In old-fashioned orchards trees are allowed to grow to whatever size and in whatever shape they will, and the grass is allowed to grow beneath, for food, it may be, for cattle. But now the orchards are orchards in miniature, condensed orchards, with trees only a few feet in height, and generally either pyramidal in shape or like little bushes, and the ground beneath them is carefully cultivated.

An apple orchard of one acre planted with dwarf trees will contain more than five hundred trees, shaped either as broad little bushes or as regular pyramids; and there will be space for some seven hundred smaller bush fruits between the trees. The effect on the fruit trade that has been wrought by such revolutionizing ideas cannot be calculated. The little bush or pyramidal trees make very fine ornaments for lawns or gardens.

Still more interesting is the method of growing fruit trees in pots as ornaments for conservatories. The trees, with their beautiful foilage and fruit, are as decorative as any exotic flower, and would be well worth growing for their beauty alone, even if their fruit were uneatable. In the gardens at Sawbridgeworth, in England, small orchards are grown in pots under glass—orchards of peaches, nectarines, cherries and plums, while pears are grown in pots in simple orchard houses, without artificial heat.

The "Dog Wagon" in London.

London by night is shortly to have a unique attraction in the shape of an elegant traveling restaurant, which with perambulate the streets for the benefit of those who desire refreshment better than that provided at the ordinary coffee stall. The traveling restaurant consists of a lavishly ornamented van, some 20 feet long by six in width, with a doorway at the side, to which the customer ascends from the street by a miniature flight of steps. Colored glass panels bearing allegorical designs from the windows round the sides, and the back of the car bears in large letters the announcement, "Night lunch," which gives sufficient indication of the American origin of the new departure. —London Mail.

Last Year's Hay Prices.

Of 49 states and territories, the highest average price per ton of hay produced in 1903 is shown in Rhode Island, almost $19, while the lowest price is reported from Nebraska, $4.48 per ton, the average for the whole country being $9.08. The figures for yield per acre put Arizona at the top of the list, with 3.46 tons per acre, while New Hampshire is low, with .92 ton per acre, and Maine next, with .98 ton per acre.

THE FARMING WORLD.

IDEAL POULTRY HOUSE.

Designed for the Comfortable Accommodation of a Flock of Three Hundred Fowls.

In reply to an interested subscriber who asked for an ideal house to provide for 300 fowls, Orange Judd Farmer submits the following plan: A house 15 feet wide and 150 feet long, divided into ten pens 10x12 feet each. A three-foot alley to extend along the back or north side to facilitate caring for the fowls. Each pen may have two windows placed 18 inches from the sill. The platform under the roosts should be raised three feet from the floor and be built of matched boards. Two roosts, six inches above the platform, will accommodate as many fowls as should be kept in each pen.

The partitions between the pens should be tight and of boards two and one-half feet high with wire netting above. A house of this length should be divided by two solid partitions to prevent drafts. These partitions should likewise extend through the alley, the doors being hung on double action hinges. Nests should be located under the platform and open into the pens and alley so that eggs can be gathered without going into each pen.

The house may be built in any way to suit the owner's fancy and pocketbook. The most durable house, of course, would be set on a brick or stone foundation, and be constructed of spruce timber and sheathed both inside and outside of studding. The front wall should be five or six feet between the studs and rear wall six feet to provide head room in the alley. The roof may be shingled or covered with any of the best grades of asphalt felt roofing. The floor may be of earth or earth raised several inches above the surrounding surface. The cost of a house of this kind will vary from $1.50 to $3 per running foot, depending upon manner of construction, cost of material and labor. Twenty hens or pullets are enough for each pen.

CAPITAL FOR POULTRY.

Some Reasons Why Beginners Should Start in a Small Way and Build Up Gradually.

When one has had no experience he should begin with the lowest expense and at the least risk. If the capital is small it is better to rent for a year or two rather than to buy, for the reason that if one buys he reduces his working capital, and should he be unsuccessful he must stay on the farm until he can sell it. If he rents he can return the farm to the owner and leave. It is claimed, however, that if one buys he can begin and get everything ready for a permanent stay, which is true, but that is just what an inexperienced person should not do. He should start in a small way and make his capital by increasing his flocks every year, and by the time he has a large number of fowls he will know much more than when he began. He can then take his fowls to a purchased farm and feel that he has made a good beginning. That is one point in favor of poultry—the making of capital. No one should expect too much for the first two years. Allow five years, begin with but little capital, let the fowls increase, and in five years one may not have made much money for his pocket, but if he will figure up what he has done he will find that he is considerably richer, and has saved his capital instead of taking the risk of losing it all at once. Nothing on a farm pays as much as poultry, if rightly managed, but there is no quicker way to lose money with poultry if one does not know what he is doing.—Rural World.

Dry Curing of Bacon.

Lay the side of bacon on a stone or cement floor in a cool, airy, dry apartment, out of the sunlight. Rub twice on both sides with common salt, skipping a day between. Mix one and one-half pounds each of bay or rock salt and brown sugar, four pounds common salt and three ounces saltpeter. Spread a thin layer of this on each side and leave it on for a month, turning every day, rubbing in the mixture at the same time. Add more as needed. Then hang up and smoke for a week. The saltpeter should be used with care, or the flavor will be injured. It helps to keep the meat and prevents loss of color; if used in too large quantities it will make the grain hard.—Farm and Home.

Good French Regulation.

In the market of France the name of each kind of meat is attached to that part of the carcass displayed for sale. A customer knows beyond doubt whether he is buying a portion of a cow or steer, a goat or sheep. If the meat is that of a donkey or horse, there is the label upon it to prevent any chance of deception. Labeling meats in the markets of the United States along with thorough inspection ought everywhere to be insisted upon.—Rural World.

FRAUDS IN A BALE OF HAY.

Frauds in Watch Cases.

According to an article in the Cincinnati Commercial, a fifty-one pound stone was recently found in that city secreted in a bale of hay of eighty pounds.

This is not as bad as finding a lump of lead of nearly one-half the weight of the solid gold watch case secreted in the center of the case.

Gold watch cases are sold by weight, and no one can see where this lead is secreted until the springs of the case are taken out and the lead will be found secreted behind them.

These cases are made by companies who profess to be honest but furnish the means to the dishonest to rob the public. It is not pleasant for anyone to find that he has lugged a lump of lead in his watch case.

Another trick the makers of spurious solid gold watch cases is to stamp the case "U. S. Assay." The United States does not stamp any article made out of gold and silver except coin, and the fakir, by using this stamp, wants to make the public believe that the government had something to do with the stamping or guaranteeing the fineness of watch cases.

Another trick of the watch fakir is to advertise a watch described as a solid gold filled watch with a twenty or twenty-five-year guarantee. These watches are generally sent C. O. D., and if the purchaser has paid for the watch, he finds that the Company which guaranteed the watch to wear is not in existence.

The Dueber-Hampden Watch Company of Canton, Ohio, who are constantly exposing these frauds, will furnish the names of the manufacturers who are in this questionable business.

Woman's Increased Financial Responsibility

By MRS. CHARLES HENROTIN,
President of the Woman's Club of Chicago.

FROM being a creator of almost everything used in the household, woman has become the spender of the family and a purely economic factor in its development. From a condition where her grandmother made her soap and candles and where no boy in the family up to the age of 15 years ever wore anything but home-spun clothes, she is forced to-day to go into the open market and buy everything of this character that she requires. The problems that confront women are in many respects the same as those that are confronting men. All women who have studied the question to any extent realize that they themselves are somewhat dazed by their present situation, and when you consider the enormous change that is going on, you cannot wonder that this feeling should exist.

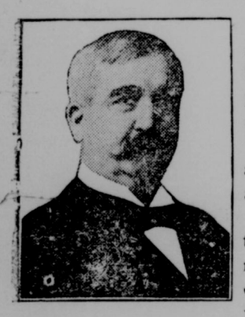
In 30 years the whole of the functions of the life of woman, as far as they have been connected with our economics, have been turned topsy-turvey. And, without past experience of financial matters, very often, in fact, having been ground down by entire lack of opportunity to handle any money at all, she now finds herself not only holding the purse string, but forced to sharpen and use her wits in order to keep her family above water by making her income or her husband's income satisfy all their needs.

Naturally enough in doing this, she has found herself gradually getting into a position where she feels her own power and realizes that there is no reason why she herself should not, when necessity arises, go out into the world and earn her own honorable living. The extent to which she is now doing this is little short of marvellous. Her success is not so much to be attributed to any increase in her own capacity as to the removal of the barriers that have always prevented her from showing this capacity.

The much discussed question as to whether the outside labor of a mother or wife disrupts or in any way harms home life is ridiculous on its face. The very fact that a man and woman find themselves able to work together in the same or in similar fields of intellectual effort must tend to give each a greater respect for the other. And in my opinion the sanctity of home life depends just as much on mutual respect as on any other sentiment.

Paternal Care for the Boys

By RICHARD S. TUTHILL,
Judge of the Juvenile Court, Chicago.



If one thing is more responsible than anything else for the number of boys brought into the juvenile court it is lack of paternal care and companionship between son and father. Nothing is more important to the mental, moral and physical growth and development of the boy than the advice and companionship of the father. Few get it.

The trouble with a great majority of the boys brought before me is that they have never had the care of a father. The mothers in many cases are apt to be weak, vacillating, overlenient and sympathetic. While making money the father neglects his boy. He leaves property behind him, but not character.

Men of high standing in the community and of great wealth ignore their boys, except to leave them fortunes, which, without character, will corrupt. They do not see much of their sons—they leave the early training to the mothers, and then see that they are placed in the hands of tutors and later sent away to college. There they think their duty towards the son is ended. Fashionable mothers also are to blame for leaving their children to the care of nurses and teachers.

That the father and mother should have greater influence over the son than anyone else is nature's law. The boy believes what the father says is just right. Every youngster as he passes through the different experiences of life looks back to his father and wonders what he would have done under similar conditions.

If you want to have good boys be good fathers and set them an example to follow which will mean their upliftment and proper development. If the father is absorbed in amusement the son cannot be expected to regard things seriously; if the father is intemperate, you cannot expect the son to find a good example in him unless it be of the "horrible example" sort.

Nothing of this is speculation. It is as true as the fact that two plus two make four—it is as invariable as the multiplication table. Whenever the father finds his boy is becoming a loafer or incorrigible he had better ask himself the question: "Have I done my duty?"

Doom of Western Races

By PROF. H. J. DAVENPORT, of the University of Chicago.

THE hordes of Asia threaten the extinction of western rac and western civilization.

With Russia's increase of 1,500,000 in numbers each year, with the spread of its population over Russian Asia and with its warlike and imperial traditions, one understands the reasons for the fear which rests over western Europe. When Russia has perfected its Siberian railway system and when it has established its back door basis of supplies in the civilization and workshops of America, its population may again bestir themselves and roll westward just as they did 2,000 years ago.

The contest of civilization against the Asiatic hordes will hardly be one of arms, but a struggle for the survival of the business of living. Western gunboats have foolishly broken down the barriers about the Chinese and have forced western civilizatoin on Asia.

The present fear of a general war in which all European countries and the United States will be entangled indicates that the Caucasian will find himself engaged in an industrial death struggle with a people of marvelous industrial efficiency, of swarming productive fertility and of ability, through centuries of poverty, to thrive upon the minimum of existence.

The west has but small reason to disturb the Asiatic hive. The marvelous reproductive powers of the Chinese will threaten the very existence of occidental races. When the Chinese swarm over the world western civilization may endure, but western races will hardly be able to do so.

THE SIGN BOARD EVIL.

Governor of New Jersey Says Beauties of State Are Hidden Completely by Advertisements.

New Jersey is to be made beautiful if Gov. Murphy can have his way. It is his hope to disentangle the scenery of the state from the mass of advertising signs which now hide it from the view of the public.

The govenor considers the evil of sufficient enormity to demand special attention in his message to the legislature. He makes the following statement regarding the signs of the times:

"I venture with some diffidence to call the attention of the legislature to the increasing number of advertising signs located on various lines of railway throughout the state, and I hope some means may be devised not only to prevent their increase but to remove those already in existence.

"New Jersey is a beautiful state, with an attractive and varied landscape. This gradually is being shut out from the view of the traveler. On the leading line of railway between Jersey City and Trenton there were in the early part of December, by actual count, 1,601 signs.

"They are of all kinds and sizes. They are disfigured by all sorts of effigies of impossible men and women; they advertise remedies for all ills that human flesh is heir to, as well as all sorts of foods, drinks and various contrivances born of human ingenuity.

"If they continue to increase it is not difficult to imagine the day near at hand when the traveler will have the beautiful hills, vales, trees and flowers shut completely from view, and will pass through a continuous and unbroken lane of signboards that will trouble his nights and his days with suggestions of things that are disagreeable.

"I am told by lawyers the problem is difficult, but perhaps the solution might be through taxation, made so high as to be effective.

"In the interest of the suffering and indignant public I present the subject to the legislature in the hope it may be able to find a remedy."

ROYAL FIRE FIGHTER.

By That Title the Crown Prince of Denmark Is Known by the People of Copenhagen.

The crown prince of Denmark, Christian Frederick Charles, is one of the most popular members of the various royal families of Europe. He is liked even by the enemies of monarchical institutions, and the people of Denmark, who have never adored the venerable King Christian IX., will be glad to see him succeed to the throne. The crown prince was born in 1843. In 1869 he married Princess Louise of Sweden. They have four sons and four daughters. In

CROWN PRINCE OF DENMARK.
(Known in Copenhagen as "The Royal Fire Fighter.")

Copenhagen his highness is known as the royal fire fighter, because on two occasions he commanded a bucket brigade when flames threatened the Auralienborg palace. When fire started in the apartments of the crown princess recently he summoned the servants and organized a bucket brigade, standing himself in the blazing room and throwing water on the flames. He is going about with his right hand bandaged as the result of slight burns, but his injuries are trivial.

Frescoes in German Schools.

The committee of the Berlin town council in charge of the primary schools have taken a novel decision with regard to school decoration. The proposal is to spend 10,000 marks every year for eight years, with the object of painting frescoes on the walls of classrooms and corridors. These pictures will be simple in character, and will represent for the most part scenes in German history. Before, however, the plan can be carried out, experiments will be made in three selected schools.

SALOON FIENDS.

Drunkenness Responsible for Most of the Crimes of Lynching Occurring Throughout Country.

And now it is discovered that drunkenness is responsible for most of the crimes of lynching. Whisky fires ignite the fires at the stake. Leslie's Weekly expressed the belief that "investigation would establish the fact that no lynching affair was ever led by sober men, or in a community where no saloons were allowed to exist." In every case where a lynching has occurred the authorities have at once found it necessary to order the saloons closed until peace and order were restored. Where saloons abound there can be no permanent peace and order, and when men of evil passions are full of whisky they are ready for any offense against order. No doubt most of the southern negroes who commit heinous crimes are drunken negroes, just as the white men of the north who commit such crimes are generally drunken. Drunkenness makes brutes and fiends out of bad-tempered men, no matter what their color. Keep whisky out of bad men and you will keep most bad men out of hideous crimes. Sober men in lust and greed and frenzy may sometimes break the laws, shed blood and do nameless wrong, but these are the exceptions. Write it down that as a rule the colored fiend is a drunkard, and the fiends that lynch the fiend are drunkards also.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

Striking Change of Sentiment.

Among the papers of a prominent citizen recently deceased there was found an itemized bill for a supper served on a notable occasion in a Massachusetts village in the year 1795. The provision of food was lavish, and the turkey and roast pig were washed down with 20 bottles of wine, a quart of brandy, four bowls of "sling," 18 large glasses of punch and 24 glasses of bitters. Twenty-three clergymen drank the liquor, and the supper followed a minister's ordination. It is well to recall such things in days of discouragement, and to measure social progress by the fact that drinking men no longer find countenance in the example of moral leaders.—Youth's Companion.

The Making of a Safe Railroad.

With a highly moral force of employes, not a man of whom drinks intoxicants, smokes cigarettes or is addicted to other vices that impair his reliability, the Rock Island road hopes to reduce the percentage of disasters due to human fallibility and to secure a higher standard of efficiency. An order which makes the use of cigarettes or liquor equivalent to discharge from the service has just gone into effect. The Rock Island's order is very sweeping and applies without distinction to all men in the service of that system.

The national prohibition convention will be held in Kansas City, Mo., June 29, 1904.

INJURIOUS TO HEALTH.

The Effects of Alcoholism in France Should Be Solemn Warning to People of This Country.

So serious have become the evils resulting from the use of alcohol by the people of France that the physicians and surgons of the hospitals have issued a public warning, which is placarded over the country in the hope that it may help to reduce the evils of alcoholism. The placard is distributed by the public powers and posted conspicuously in the public hospitals. It reads as follows:

"The majority of maladies treated in the hospitals are caused, or aggravated, by the abuse, and even by the simple use, of liquids containing alcohol; all of these liquids, however denominated, are dangerous. We direct especial attention to the so-called aperitifs, such as absinthe and bitters.

"The brandies and liquors are also very destructive and, likewise, wine in large quantities. More than one litre per day of wine represents a dangerous quantity. Taken before eating, the liquids depress the appetite, whatever advertisers may say to the contrary; they burn the stomach, the liver and the arteries. After eating, alcohol, in whatever form served, troubles the digestion and at the end of some time it is impossible to do without drinking and from this moment the victim is alcoholic.

"It is possible to become alcoholic in drinking regularly the liquids indicated above, and that also without entering into a state of intoxication.

"The working classes labor under the greatest error in believing that alcohol gives strength. Those who are addicted to its use realize merely an artificial excitement which last but a short time and leaves them soon more fatigued than before. They then desire to cure this fatigue in again consuming alcohol, and they thus become alcoholic.

"Alcoholics become insane easily and are liable to very painful forms of paralysis. We often treat workingmen who have been very robust and who have become rapidly consumptive because they have regularly taken before each meal their aperitifs.

"The children of alcoholic parents are almost always badly formed, weak-minded, insane, scrofulous or epileptic. They die often in convulsions.

"Criminals are in large part alcoholics or the children of alcoholics."

France was at one time considered the most sober nation of Europe. It is now the most drunken. This is due to the efforts made to popularize the use of wines, especially the so-called light wines. The habit of wine-drinking has become so strong that the people feel unable to do without some alcoholic drink and, whenever for any reason the price of wine is advanced, the people resort to the so-called aperitifs. The cheapness of these destructive drinks has increased their use and the habit once formed is rarely broken.

Efforts are being made by American brewers, distillers and dealers in alcoholic drinks to increase their sale and consumption in this country. There has been during the past two years a special effort made by dealers in whisky to increase the sale of certain brands by advertising and their advertisements appear in only the better class of daily and weekly papers. These drinks are, therefore, virtually, thrust before the eyes of young people as well as of the more mature in all homes. Dealers are also advertising their goods by circulars as never before in this country.

This greater activity is in part a tribute to the growth of the temperance sentiment and of consequent total abstinence and indicates that manufacturers of and dealers in alcoholic liquors realize that they must make greater efforts to increase the sale of their commodities if they are not finally to be driven out of their infamous business. The experience of France, however, should teach the American people the necessity of greater effort to reduce the consumption of alcoholic liquors, and, if possible, bring about its total disappearance. We are now, as a people, the most temperate, but we may, like France, become the most drunken, and the only way to prevent such a moral disaster to the nation is for the people to abstain totally from the use of alcoholic liquors of any kind. The warning of the physicians and surgeons of the hospitals of France should be posted in all American public schools, in libraries, factories and other public places, and be printed in all papers.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

POINTED AND SUGGESTIVE.

The Danish government, in filling positions on state railways, will henceforth prefer men who can prove by documentary evidence that they have been total abstainers for at least one year past.

Dr. Willard Parker, who for many years stood at the head of the medical profession in New York city, says: "One-third of all deaths in New York City are caused by alcoholic drinks."

It is worse than irony to be praying "Thy kingdom come," while in the nation we are turning out annually 37,500,000 barrels of liquors, supporting 200,000 prostitutes and 300,000 saloons.—National Advocate.

In Russia the minister of finance has issued an order that hats must be doffed to bartenders in whisky shops, as they are government officials. This is an honor that the American bartender does not receive.

By request of the world's fair management St. Louis has fixed October 7, 1904, for anti-cigarette day. An effort will be made to have smoking on the grounds that day made punishable by arrest.

The need of mining towns for religious and temperance work is very great. Within 200 miles of Chicago is a mining town of 1,000 people without a church or any kind of religious service. Another town nearby has 1,200 people, 37 saloons, but not a church.

Salzer's Earliest Cane.

Another new thing. Can be cut six times during a season and sprouts again with lightning rapidity. Next to Salzer's Teosinte it will make more green fodder than anything else, cheap as dirt and grows everywhere.

Of Salzer's Renovator Grass Mixture just the thing for pastures and meadows, Mr. E. Rappold, East Park, Ga., writes, "I sowed Salzer's Grass Mixture on soil so poor two men could not raise a fuss on it,' and in forty-one days after sowing I had the grandest stand of grass in the County. Salzer's Grass Mixtures sprout quickly and produce enormously." 100,000 barrels choice Seed Potatoes.

SALZER'S NEW NATIONAL OATS.

Here is a winner, a prodigy, a marvel, enormously prolific, strong, healthy, vigorous, producing in thirty States from 150 to 300 bu. per acre. You had best sow a lot of it, Mr. Farmer, in 1904, and in the fall sell it to your neighbors at $1 a bu. for seed.

A Remarkable Discovery.

A German chemist has discovered a healing agent in coal oil which has created quite a sensation amongst sufferers wherever it has been tested, on account of the wonderful cures accomplished by its use. A few applications are sufficient to cure muscular Rheumatism, Neuralgia, headache, tooth, ear or backache, lameness, sprains, chilblains, in fact every severe pain. It is sold in drug stores as Dr. Bayer's Penetrating Oil in 25c. and 50c. bottles and warranted to cure or money refunded.

Mrs. Haskell, Worthy Vice-Templar, Independent Order Good Templars, of Silver Lake, Mass., tells of her cure by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Four years ago I was nearly dead with inflammation and ulceration. I endured daily untold agony, and life was a burden to me. I had used medicines and washes internally and externally until I made up my mind that there was no relief for me. Calling at the home of a friend, I noticed a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My friend endorsed it highly, and I decided to give it a trial to see if it would help me. It took patience and perseverence for I was in bad condition, and I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nearly five months before I was cured, but what a change, from despair to happiness, from misery to the delightful exhilarating feeling health always brings. I would not change back for a thousand dollars, and your Vegetable Compound is a grand medicine.

"I wish every sick woman would try it and be convinced."—MRS. IDA HASKELL, Silver Lake, Mass. Worthy Vice Templar, Independent Order of Good Templars.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

BALTIMORE'S AWFUL CALAMITY.

Although the financial loss may not be quite so great as at first estimated yet the actual extent and horror of the catastrophe otherwise has really been underestimated. This is simply because it is beyond the power of the average mind to realize its extent and the vast amount of individual suffering and loss entailed. The single fact that over fifty thousand breadwinners are suddenly thrown out of employment and rendered without resources, if not absolutely destitute, will furnish an idea of the vast amount of suffering. These people have no hope of a resumption of the old employment may be for years, if ever, unless secured in some distant city in competition with the ever crowded rank of the army of the unemployed.

So great is the disaster and so widespread the necessity of immediate relief that it is probably as well that the national government has undertaken the work with its ample means and well organized forces—a bill having been introduced appropriating $1,000,0000 for the purpose. In this way the entire nation will contribute to the relief of what is really a national calamity.

RAYNER SENATOR.

Democratic bosses have received their first drubbing within the party in many years. The Senatorial deadlock was ended Wednesday night, when in the party caucus Isidor Rayner received 50 votes, John Walter Smith 29 votes and Bernard Carner 10 votes. In joint convention on Thursday Mr. Rayner was elected, receiving 86 votes. Senator McComas received 36 votes. From the outset Senator Gorman, Mr. Rasin, Mr. Vandiver and other prominent party leaders were lined up solidly against Rayner. Ex-Governor Smith was said to have been promised the Senatorship in return for his services in calling the Extra Session and helping to put through the ballot law disfranchising the illiterate voter. But public sentiment was aginst Smith, and manifested itself so strongly that the bosses took up Mr. Carter, whom they thought could defeat Rayner. Mr. Rayner, however, proved himself to be both astute and resourceful. Befor the election last fall he forced the machine to permit the City Delegates to pledge themselves to him. Mr. Rasin saw that unless this was done that a formidable movement in the City against the bosses would follow. Armed with this advantage and with the powerful aid of the Baltimore Sun, Mr. Rayner went into the counties and stirred up the Democratic rank and file. The Sun, day after day, poured hot shot into Gorman, Rasin, et al., and told the people how despotic were these rulers and how the people's wishes were being ruthlessly disregarded. These interesting chapters on the terrible blight of bossism ought to be remembered, as they doubtless will be by the voter, for if half that was said of these men was true, the sooner they are retired to private life the better. The better and ignominious defeat of the Democratic State Bosses is indeed a most hopeful indication of a more independent spirit among the rank and file in that party.

A BOY'S RULES OF CITIZENSHIP.

An Italian boy of thirteen has written an essay on citizenship for the City History Club of New York. It is made up of ideas gathered from association with the club, which is an organization related to settlement work. These are a few of the principles set forth by the little Italian:

If I want to be a good citizen I must be true to my country, true to my State and true to my city.

If I do not vote I will not be doing my duty. I must have my own judgment to vote for the man I think is best qualified for the office which he has been nominated for. If I don't I won't be doing my duty. I must not let anybody bribe me to vote for a man I think not fitted for an office.

It will also be my dutyto be industrious and self supporting,so as not to be a burden and a nuisance to the public.

I must pay taxes, so that the goverment can be maintained and the officers of the goverment paid because the government is for my good.

When it is necessary I must help to maintain order and always be ready for public service, and in case of war serve my country.

I should know the history of my country and be an intelligent reader and close observer of current events.

HAUSER.

Sledding parties have been all the go in this neighborhood for the past two months.

Our splendid sleighing snow left us Saturday and Sunday last.

Miss Nellie Fowler has been confined to the house for the last two weeks. Her sister, Miss Merle, is teaching her school at Redoak.

Mrs. Almedia Shaffer was a pleasant caller at M. F. C. Fowler's Sunday.

Mr. Charles Haas, of Eglon, W.Va., was seen in our vicinity last week.

Mr. Peter Speicher has moved his saw mill to the farm of Mr. Geo. H. Gauer, where he expects to cut lumber on a large scale.

Mr. Robert Shaffer, one of our rising young men, expects to visit his uncle in the near future.

Sabbath School every Sunday at 2 o'clock p. m. The school is progressing nicely under the skillful management of Mr. Somers Mosser.

Mr. Daniel Gnegy expects to build a residence in the spring.

Mr. Will Janoske is working for the Preston Lumber and Coal Company.

The Preston Lumber and Coal Co. has about 2,000,000 feet of logs in the head waters of the Youghiogheny awaiting the spring floods, when they will be floated to their large mill at Crellin.

Mr. and Mrs. Whorton, of Oakland, are visiting Mrs. Whorton's mother at this place.

Accept my good wishes for the success of your most excellent paper.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Spring has apparently made its appearance again.

Some of our school teachers were seen on our steets Saturday.

Many people of our town and the surrounding country are attending auction which is being held here.

H. M. Speicher, of Accident, spent a day or two in Cumberland last week.

Mr. Duncan, of Indiana, Pa., was here visiting his son, B. F. Duncan, the past few days.

Dr. Straup, the dentist, has been away for the past week.

R. C. McCandlish, cashier, recently made a business trip to the Smoky City.

H. J. Black, our most accommodating B. & O. agent spends a few days with his parents in Confluence.

J. W. McCullough, together with a party of other prominent business men, are on a business trip to Mexico. Before returning they expect to visit the City of Mexico. They will also make a tour of the Siera Madra mountains in quest of bear and other game.

Mrs. John T. Geary at this writing is quite ill.

Mrs. J. W. McCullough is called away to the bedside of her sick mother.

Protracted meeting is in progress at the Disciple church.

Rev. D. A. Friend has been conducting a series of meetings here for the past two weeks. No accessions to the church were made, although the minister and his fellow-workers labored hard for the salvation of souls.

The principal and his assistants deserve praise for the very excellent way the school is being conducted at this place. The attendance is good and satisfactory progress is being made in the studies pursued. The teachers are now arranging a program for a local institute to be held in the near future. It is to be hoped that teachers and all who are interested in education will be in attendance. Our examiner will, no doubt, be present.

Ex-Commissioner John T. Garey has purchased one of the finest residences in town and expects to become an occupant of same about the first of April.

A. L. Donachy, who recently opened a new grocery and confectionary store is doing a thriving business.

A normal school here will be much appreciated.

Why not have our town incorporated?

HOYES AND VICINITY.

We were visited by one of the most severe wind storms of the winter on Sunday morning last. It demolished an aer motor for William Callis, also did other damage to fences, etc., in this section.

Mr. Sampson Custer returned to his home at Connellsville one day last week. His daughter Alice will remain for a short time.

Miss Sadie Friend, of Mountain Lake Park, spent the past week with relatives and friends in this section.

Mr, Robert Craver and Mr Pool, of Blaine, W. Va., spent several days last week with Mr. M. Mattingly's.

The Literary Society was considered quite a success and will meet soon again.

Miss Olive Thayer, of Thayerville, was a guest of her cousin Auburn Smith Saturday evening and Sunday.

Miss Clara Bishoff returned home Monday of this week from an extended visit to her sister, Mrs. Kemp, of Harnedsville.

Miss Alice Custer was a guest of Mrs. W. A. Smith last Sunday.

Miss Sadie DeWitt spent Tuesday of this week with Miss Mae DeWitt.

Willie Mattingly made a business trip to Meyersdale last week.

JOHNSONS.

The thermometer has been giving various stunts the past few days.

Mrs. Samuel Wetmiller, of Salisbury, Pa., is visiting Adam Rosenberger's.

A party of Grantsville society people visited Jacob Steinla's last Sunday. Among the number we note Mr. and Miss Bevans, Llewelyn Blocher, Samuel Otto and sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira V. McKenzie, of Sand Patch, Pa., and Miss Lizzie McKenzie, of Cresaptown, spent last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. William Warner.

William Finzel resigned his position as manager of Finzel store and Joseph Finzel has secured the position.

Dr. and Mrs. Briscoe have rented rooms of Elbridge Crowe.

Miss Lizzie McDonald, of Corry, Pa., and Margaret Finzel, of Frostburg, Md., spent Sunday at Henry Finzel's.

F. A. Warner spent Saturday at Cumberland, where he went to consult an eye specialist.

Robert, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Finzel, is ill at this writing.

Zachariah McKenzie has secured a position at Barton, Md.

Clarence Raley, wife and mother, all of Bittinger, spent Sunday with friends.

Henry Blocher, we understand, is soon to secure a position with one of our local telegraph companies. Henry is a good workman.

A little son of Conrad Stentz was bitten by a mad dog last week. He was taken to Pasteur's Institute at Baltimore for treatment.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Miss Mollie Hays, who for the past two seasons had charge of one of best boarding houses, was married on the 4th inst. to Mr. Oscar Fout, of near Keyser, W. Va. They will reside on Mr. Fout's father's farm in Mineral county, W. Va.

Mr. Albert Schrock, one of our enterprising young men, has purchased a Remington improved typewriter.

Mr. Chas. Dibb, of Cumberland, Md., was a visitor at this place last week, trying to prove that the Oliver typewriter was the best writing machine on the face of the earth.

After consultation, I find that there is not a case of sickness in the Park.

The business of the Hustling Store for the year 1903 amounted to $49,000. To do this our friend Mr. Layton kept things hustling.

Mr. F. Clair and family, and Mrs. Baldwin and daughters are now living in West Virginia.

Manager Rudisill had an enquiry from Indiana from a gentleman who wants to make a home for self and family in Garrett county.

Robin Red Breast has made his appearance. A number have been seen in this vicinity the past few days.

The Mountain Chautauqua has been mailed to its subscribers. From it we learn that the Camp meeting dates are July 1-11. Call at Messrs. Davis and Sons and get a copy.

John D. Hayden has been appointed agent for the Oliver typewriter at this place.

No 55 was detained at this station Saturday for an hour, something wrong with the engine. Monday morning the engine pulling a wreck train became disabled at the depot and had to be pushed onto a side track. A freight engine took the train west.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

The thrifty farmers in this section are preparing for Spring seeding, as three car loads of lime were unloaded at this place during the past week

Mr. H. T. Doolittle went over into Somerset County, Pa., more than two weeks ago, to purchase a pair of horses, and as nothing has been heard of him since his friends are much concerned about him, as no reason for his failing to have returned is obtainable.

Miss Laura Facenbaker, who has had charge of the Laughlin school, has resigned her position, owing to a disinclination to teach.

Mr. Mahlon Brenneman was visiting friends near Hoyes last week.

Miss Dorthy Durst, of New Germany, is visiting Miss Amanda Elithorpe for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Bittinger, and Mrs. Stroup, were visiting near Avilton last Sunday.

Miss Lizzie Orndorf spent a few days with relatives in Pennsylvania, last week.

Daniel Knox spent two or three days among old associates here recently.

Mrs. Brennenger, of Gortner, this county, was visiting her daughter, Mrs. Jefferson Lohr, last week.

Messrs. Bruce Durst and George Brenneman, were on our streets Sunday.

A severe blizzard was felt in this section the first three or four days of the month, which was closely followed by a rapid change to warmer, and a genuine break in the winter's icy grasp.

Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

DEATH OF ISAIAH BOUCHER.

Was Nearly Eighty Years Old—Leaves Five Sons.

Isaiah Boucher died at his home, about three miles south of Grantsville, in Garrett county, on the 31st of January, 1904, of an illness of several weeks. He would have reached his 80th year in this month had he been allowed to live a few days longer. He had been slightly afflicted with a mild case of paralysis for several years, but it did not disable him seriously in his active agricultural pursuits in which he had been engaged on the old Bruce-Boucher farm since about the year 1858. At that time he became a citizen of Allegany, now Garrett county. He came from Somerset county, Pa. He was appropriately interred by the side of his wife in a cemetery in Salisbury, Pa., on the 2nd day of February, in the presence of a large assemblage of people containing many of his life long friends.

He was born in Milford township, Somerset county, Pa., of very respectable parentage, on a farm. In his early years he learned the tinner and gunsmith trades with Mr. Phineas Compton in Salisbury, Pa. He followed these avocations for several years. He then entered upon an agricultural life in which he died.

In 1848 he married the admired Lucretia Compton. The union was in every way a suitable one, accompanied with happiness and affection for forty-one years. The death of this much esteemed lady came distressingly on the last day of the year 1889, and was a sorrowful event, not only to the home circle but long ways outside of it.

The deceased left five living children, all sons in full manhood: Henry S., a merchant at Centerville, Somerset county, Pa.; Phineas C., a farmer and lumber manufacturer on the old home farm; Samuel A., a prominent physician at Barton, Md.; Charles W., a very successful dentist at New Kensington, Pa., and Arthur M., a successful farmer at Barton, all hapily married and well situated.

Isaiah Boucher, although of decided political convictions, had no desire for office. The people of the county elected him commissioner in 1875 and he was true to his trust.

There can be none who cannot say, Garrett county has lost one of its most prominent, useful and respectable citizens in the death of Isaiah Boucher. He was honest, upright, fair and reliable in all his dealings; a faithful and helping friend wherever friendship was needed or deserved. He had a smooth and consistent life, entirely free from enmities, contentions or strifes. Hence his friends were many and his enemies rare—none, it might be said; certainly none that ought to be in that attitude. He possessed a genial, friendly and open manner or nature; warm and kindly in his manners and greetings, with a dislike for rudeness and ill-behavour. Hence his many warm friends. He had a bright and perceptive mind, with a sound judgment; quite intelligent, especially on practical questions. Something of a reader—a patron and reader of the Baltimore American over forty years.

He felt a just pride in his five respectable and prosperous sons.

Finally, he was the last survivor of the early associates of the author of of this poor tribute to the memory of a life-long friend—with sorrows that cannot cease. J. B.

Returned From the South.

Mr. Clark DeBerry arrived in Oakland last Friday night, after spending two weeks at Southern Pines, N. C., where three of his daughters are sojourning for the winter. He informs us that Miss Emma is quite unwell and little hope is entertained of her recovery. Miss Alice is improving, and Anna is well. Mr. BeBerry was well pleased with the town. Southern Pines is 345 miles from Washington, on the Seaboard Air Line Railroad, in the sand-hill region of North Carolina. It has two large hotels and several smaller establishments, where board may be had at moderate prices. Electric lights, good supply of pure water, wide avenues and streets, and well-built residences and cottages, all supplemented by the presence of a kind and hospitable people, conspire to make the place very comfortable for the visitor. In the neighborhood are many vinyards and fruit farms. Delaware and Niagara grapes are grown largely and are of the finest quality. Early varieties of peaches ripen in May. Sweet potatoes, tomatoes, and a great variety of berries and small fruits are said to succeed admirably if well cultivated. Naturally the soil is sterile in appearance—almost pure sand—but is responsive to the application of fertilizers. Yellow pine timber predominates and good lumber can be had at moderate prices. Land may be bought at from $1 to $10 per acre. Iron ore may be seen in many places, but building stone and clay are rarely seen in the sand-hill region. Quail and rabbits are plentiful, and wild-turkeys and deer are at no great distance in the forest. Carthage is the county-seat of Moore county and it is said the jail and alms-house are without an occupant.

TO DISFRANCHISE THE NEGRO.

Bill Looking To That End Introduced In Legislature.

Maryland intends to change its election laws to disfranchise the negro by means of grandfather clause. A bill to accomplish this has been introduced in the Senate.

The bill provides for the submission to popular vote of a constitutional amendment which limits the right of suffrage to adult male citizens of the state who belong to one of three defined classes and the registers of voters are directed to refuse to registration of all others. These classes are:

First.—Those who can read a section of the Constitution of the state which the registers shall submit to them and give a reasonable explanation of it.

Second.—Those who were prior to January 1, 1869, competent to register under the laws of this state or any other state; and Third.—Lineal descendants of those qualified to register and vote under the preceding section.

The bill was referred to the Committee on Constitutional Amendment.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

Calvert Coal and Iron Company, et. al.,
vs.
Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines, et. al.

No. 1252 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree annulling, cancelling and setting aside a pretended deed from the Calvert Coal and Iron Company to one Charles O. Beaumont, Trustee, dated 10th day of May, 1902, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 597, one of the Land records of Garrett county, Maryland.

The bill states that a certain Robert A. Parrish, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was, in his lifetime, the owner of 2955 shares of the capital stock of the plaintiff Calvert Coal and Iron Company, which whole capital stock contisted of 3000 shares and that Calvert Coal and Iron Company is the owner in fee of a tract of land in Garrett county, Maryland, known as Lot No. 3 of the sub-division of "Beatty's Plains," containing 900 acres, more or less, and is in possession thereof and has been in exclusive and continuous possession of the same for a long term of years under a deed from Joseph T. Thornton, trustee, duly recorded in Liber W. H. T. No. 11, folio 51, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, a copy of said deed being filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit A;" that on the 22nd of February, 1901, the said Robert A. Parish, being owner of the aforesaid shares of stock made and executed his last will and testament; on or about the 20th day of March, 1901, died without having revoked the same and said will was duly admitted to probate by the Register of Wills of the City and County of Philadelphia, Penn., and is now of record of record in the office of said Register of Wills in Will Book No. 224, page 581, and that Letters Testamentary were granted thereon unto the plaintiff, Marie Gaul, the executrix therein named, and duly certified copies of said will and a certificate of the grant of said letters are filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibits B and C" respectively. The bill further charges that the said defendants, Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines, Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, and the other defendents whose names to the complainants are unknown have conspired together with the intent and purpose to fraudulently, illegally and unlawfully deprive the complainants of their right and title to the aforesaid tract of land and charge that the said defendants above named and the other defendants whose names to the plaintiffs are unknown have assumed to act as the officers, stockholders, directors and agents of the plaintiff Calvert Coal and Iron Company and have attempted to exercise the rights conferred by law upon said plaintiff and have assumed to exercise the franchises thereof, all of which acts on the part of the said defendants above named are illegal and void, they the said defendants having no interest whatever in said property, stock, franchises and rights of Calvert Coal and Iron Company, and that the deed to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, dated the 10th day of May, 1902, purporting to have been executed by Winslow Mason fraudulently representing himself to be the President and Charles F. Haines, fraudulently representing himself and pretending to be the duly constituted attorney and agent of Calvert Coal and Iron Company, whereby they undertook to convey the aforesaid tract of land to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, and which deed is recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 597, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and a copy of which is filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit D." is a fraud and constitutes a cloud upon the title of Calvert Coal and Iron Company to said land, the stock of which corporation with the exception of twenty-five shares belongs to and is the sole property of the said plaintiff Marie Gaul, executrix and sole devisee under the will of said Robert A. Parrish, deceased, and that the said pretended deed, unless set aside and canceled by the Court of Equity, will deprive the complainants of all their rights and interests of every kind to which they are entitled in said property and will strip the complainants of all said property and will bestow the same upon the said defendants above named and their co-conspirators, whose names are to the complainants unknown and who have assumed the power and undertaken to exercise the franchises of Calvert Coal and Iron Company and who have no right and title to the same.

That the pretended deed to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, is wholly without legal consideration, is fraudulent and void and should be set aside, cancelled and annulled by this Court.

The bill then prays that the said pretended deed purporting to have been made and executed on the 10th day of May, 1902, by said Calvert Coal and Iron Company, through its pretended president, Winslow Mason, and Charles F. Haines, its pretended attorney in fact and agent, to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, may be annulled, cancelled and set aside by the decree of this Court, for general relief and for an order of publication against the said Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines and Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, who are non-residents of this State, and also an order of publication according to law, requiring the unknown persons and parties who have assumed to act in connection with the above named defendants as officers, stockholders, directors and agents of said Calvert Coal and Iron Company, of the object and substance of this bill and warning them to be and appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor on or before a certain day to be named therein to show cause, if any, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

It is thereupon, this 11th day of February, 1904, ordered, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 12th day of March, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 29th day of March next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

FOR STATE GAME WARDEN.

Capt. Peter A. Chisholm, of Oakland, Is Being Boomed for the Place.

From a recent issue of the Grafton Sentinel, edited by Mr. G. A. Bolden, formerly of Oakland, the following editorial relative to the application of Capt. Peter A. Chisholm, for appointment to the position of State Game Warden by the Governor, is taken and reproduced here:

"Maryland is about to appoint a State Game Warden, and we notice that our old friend, Capt. Peter A. Chisholm of Oakland, is an applicant for the position. While this section of West Virginia is somewhat remote to Western Maryland, at the same time the county just east of us, Preston, borders on Garrett county, Maryland, and as the game laws of West Virginia and Maryland are quite similar, it strikes us that a State Game Warden of our sister State who is familiar with the laws of adjoining states would be the proper thing for Maryland, as well as for all adjoining states having this appointive office. Capt. Chisholm is as familiar with game birds and animals of West Virginia as he is with those of Maryland; he knows every foot of Maryland and of West Virginia alike, and is as familiar with the game gardens of the two states as he is most probably with the four corners of his own cabbage-patch; his entire life has been spent in studying the habits of game birds, and, although he is one of the most successful hunters of the two states, and one of the most famous marksmen, he has never been known to have ruthlessly destroyed game birds of any kind, and he is one of the few sportsmen who don't grow "bristles." If Governor Warfield of Maryland, would like to please the people of West Virginia in any manner whatsoever, he could not find a better way to do it than by appointing Capt. Chisholm State Game Warden. While we realize that this comes rather in the nature of a "cheeky" proposal, or may we call it a humble request? we nevertheless pay our tribute to Capt. Chisholm with a clean conscience and with a desire to set forth his high popularity among the sportsmen of West Virginia as well as of his own state. We have known him all our life, have admired his true sportsmanlike spirit, and as a citizen we also know him to be substantial, upright, sterling—and we most certainly hope he will get the appointment which he seeks, and of which he is eminently deserving."

Messrs. E. W. Kelso and D. M. Dixon, who spent a week or two in Florida, returned to Oakland last Saturday evening. They were delighted with their trip South.

Col. A. G. Sturgiss arrived here from Morgantown yesterday and will remain a week or two. During his visit to Oakland his son William will visit at Morgantown, going over this evening.

OPERA HOUSE IN NEW HANDS.

A Joint Stock Company Now Has the Building In Charge.

IMPROVEMENTS WILL BE MADE

To the Building and the Lower Floor Remodeled for Mercantile Purposes in Which a Large General Store will be Opened.

On Tuesday a deal in Oakland real estate, which has been pending for some weeks, was consummated, whereby the large four-story structure on Second street, known as the Opera House, passed into the possession of a joint stock company composed of several business men of Oakland, among whom we are at liberty to name Messrs. D. E. Bolden and Austin Brown, for whom the negotiations for the purchase of the property were ostensibly carried on.

The purchasers contemplate making extensive improvements to the property and the conversion of the entire ground floor into one large room in which a general store will be opened.

The theatre will be given a general overhauling and cleaning up. New furniture will be installed and when all the improvements are completed the interior will present an altogether changed appearance.

Letter to Helbig Bros.

Dear Sir: The way to reckon the cost of paint is to put both costs together: the cost of the putting it on.

It would save this country hundreds of millions of dollars a year; it would save you alone if you happen to be a victim) several dollars a year.

See how it works. It costs as much to put-on one paint as another, don't it?

Yes, if you use the same number of gallons.

Well, don't I?

No, you'll use twice as many gallons of adulterated paint as of Devoe; and you've got to pay twice as much for putting it on.

Mr N Averv, Delhi, N Y, has two houses alike and in same condition. Painted one house with Devoe; 6 gallons. Painted the other house with a paint that was half adulteration: 12 gallons. Same painter, Geo. Gilbert, did both jobs. One cost $27; the other $54.

Better go by the name.

Yours truly
F. W. Devoe & Co

Died on the Train

Joseph Kepner, who for some time past has been employed by the Otter Creek Lumber Company, at Hambleton, died very suddenly Wednesday morning while enroute to Elkins over the W. Va. Central. Mr. Kepner had been sufferer of heart trouble for some time and had boarded the southbound train for Elkins where he intended entering the hospital for treatment. He had ridden but a short distance—as far as the water tank about a mile and a half north of here—when death came without a moment's warning. The train was ran back to Hambleton and his remains were taken charge by an undertaker. Mr. Kepner was aged about forty years, was well and favorably known throughout this section, and his many friends were greatly shocked to hear of his sudden end. To the the bereaved relatives and friends who are left to mourn their sad loss, the Republican wishes to join the public in expressing its sincere sympathy.—Parsons Republican.

Funeral of Miss Chisholm.

Brief funeral services over the remains of Miss Madge Chisholm took place Monday evening at 7 o'clock from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Chisholm on Church street, in charge of Rev. Dr. H. C. Bird and the remains were taken on the 7.25 B. & O. train to Oakland, Md., being accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Mason, uncle and aunt of the deceased, who live in Oakland. The pall-bearers were D. W. Henderson, Homer Hess, J. Searight Marshall, Dr. A. C. Howard and Edward Weltner. Interment at Oakland Thursday at 2 p. m.—Uniontown Standard.

ALLEGED HORSETHIEF CAPTURED.

Arthur Mauck, Wanted in Oakland, Caught In Preston County.

Arthur Mauck, who has been wanted in Oakland several months for the alleged theft of a horse, the property of Andrew Helbig, was captured on Monday night by Sheriff Edward J. Frantz at a house near Rodamers, in West Virginia, and brought here the same night, where he was lodged in jail and will be tried upon the charge at the March term of court.

Sheriff Frantz also arrested, on last Wednesday, at Piedmont, George W. Lower, who is charged with having passed a raised check. Lower was given a hearing and remanded for trial next month.

POSSE CHASES ELOPERS

Father Of The Girl Goes Along And Heads Couple Off.

A dispatch to the Baltimore Sun from Cumberland under date of the 5th inst. says:

"Jefferson Green with Bailiff Kirk Blue and a posse of 10 from Lonaconing, intercepted Mr. Green's pretty daughter, Maude, aged about 16 years, who was fleeing through Garrett county last night with Edward Crowe, aged 19 years, and prevented their marriage.

"The couple were bound for Oakland, and were walking through a mountain fastness near Jennings when the posse came upon them. Crowe protested on the ground that the girl was accompanying him of her own free will, but in vain. He was hustled off by the officers to answer a charge of abduction and the girl was taken home, much against her will."

Sues for Divorce.

Mrs. Samul Reinheimer of Fairmont has sued her husband for divorce on the grounds of general cussedness. Sam will be remembered as the young man who went to Wheeling on a wedding trip and was put in jail for not having the money to pay his board at the McLure where he had put up with his bride. This occurred a month or so ago.

The women in the case hails from Oakland and Mr. Rineheimer makes his home with his father in Fairmont. It is said that the reason she consented to marry him was that he promised her a trip to St. Louis.—Morgantown Dominion.

HIS PHILOSOPHY.

Wish I had nothin' else to do but set around
an' laugh at things!
The whole world's funny through an' through, from you an' me clear up to kings.
You think that I am gay an' glad with not a thing to worry me;
I think the outlook's pretty bad, but your good fortune I can see.
Each woman sees a hat or dress that she thinks should ha' been for her—
An', take it by an' large, I guess this world keeps gettin' funnier.

Each town is full o' candidates that thinks they are the people's choice,
All over these United States they're harkin' for the callin' voice;
An' each one wishes he'd the chance the other fellow has to win,
But, after all, it's just a dance—some goin' out, some comin' in.
We know the office seeks the man, an' that is why we never fail
To try to hit upon a plan to leave a mighty well-made trail.

You worry when the agent calls to get his little monthly rent,
His heart with disappointment falls if he finds you without a cent;
We read about some millionaire who sings the joy of bein' poor,
An' know of poor men everywhere who scheme to make their fortunes sure.
The man who has an appetite must be content plain things to eat;
The rich man's in a sorry plight—his appetite he must entreat.

Wish I had nothin' else to do but set around
an' laugh at things!
I'd chuckle for awhile at you, an' then I'd snicker at the kings.
You think it would be very fine to loll around an' wear a crown;
The king is anxious to resign an' lay the heavy headgear down.
I'd laugh at them that wants to walk; I'd laugh at them that wants to ride,
At them that talks, or doesn't talk—if I was only satisfied.

The Salvation of Daniel

By WINIFRED DOLAN

MRS. TRAPAUD was in high good feather; the bay mare and foal had fetched 130 goden sovereigns between them. Moreover, she had only given 80 guineas for the mare. Who will be astonished, therefore, that she found the news of her bargain quite an agreeable adjunct to her breakfast that morning?

Mrs. Trapaud was a woman of some humor; when her husband died she met a friend—a man also of some humor—who knew as all the world knew and as Mrs. Trapaud had never pretended to hide, that the marriage had been the reverse of happy. He looked at her weeds with a comprehending smile.

"Got your divorce at last?" he said.

"Yes, and in the higher courts, too," she replied.

Mrs. Trapaud was always equal to any occasion.

When Trapaud died his widow carried on the work of his life; she continued to breed his horses. Not so much, be it understood, from any touching sympathy with the dear departed as from a sound conviction that it was in her to make the thing pay. And she did.

It was a strange household composed of antiquated serving men and women who had been begotten and born on the estate and in whom the last expiring breath of feudalism lingered as though dying hard. Trapaud left no heir, and these farm and stable hands, these domestic serving maids, were Mrs. Trapaud's children. She dosed and physicked them when they required it, she rubbed their backs when the rheumatism got importunate; she scolded, she praised, rewarded and blamed—and they loved her.

But as in every fold there is one black sheep, so in this patriarchal family there was one strangeling. Daniel—he had no other name—had not been born and bred on the estate; he had not even first seen light in the village; no, not within ten leagues of it, the gossips said He came from practically nowhere; it was so very far away. On winter nights, when the evenings were long and dull, the younger ones—for age was a mere matter of comparison in the Trapaud household—would coax old Mrs. Goodheart to tell again the story of how Daniel first came to the hall.

"It was a wild, black night, jest sich a one as this,'" the old housekeeper would begin.

'And the wind were howling in the chimbley, we knows," would interpolate an irresponsible voice.

"Will ye niver lear to hould yer tongue then and not interrupt the story?" a chorus of voices would protest, and then, Mrs. Goodheart having duly allowed herself to be appeased, the story would drag out its slow, familiar existence, punctuated with "ohs" and "ahs" and "theer nows" that had become sanctified by custom into a sort of rite. But the reader who does not know what 365 days spent on a midland horse farm situated a good 20 miles from anywhere on the map can be like would hardly appreciate the art with which Daniel's history was told, so we will offer a brief and more modern up to day sketch that shall state the plain matter in a nutshell.

One Christmas eve a quarter of a century ago the hospitable glare of a fire that not only could roast an ox, but was actually doing so, attracted a little ragged fellow who was tramping along the high road in search of a night's lodging. One of the keepers found him in the fir plantation and dragged him after him till they stood in the glare of the firelight before Trapaud, his wife, and the assembled household. Questioned, the little fellow said his name was Daniel: he was a foundling and had been put out to service with a drunken carpenter, from whom he had run away. He had got as far north as this in a barge along the canals and had worked at whatever came to his hand for all the food and lodging that charity had not given him. Trapaud liked the lad's face and took him into his service. He was honest and industrious, he had risen by slow degrees, and now for seven years he had been butler at the hall. Daniel took a pathetic pleasure in hearing his own story recited, it made him feel a kind of hero, but there was always the ever-present ache at his heart that he bought his proud position at the cost of love and fear. He was never quite one of them, but a thing apart as a man who does not know his own surname must ever be.

Mrs. Trapaud was habitually careful about money, never leaving carelessly about any sums however small. She never distrusted any of her people, but she knew the value of the axiom concerning the open door. On this particular morning, however, she rang the bell for breakfast to be cleared while the 130 sovereigns were still lying glistening in the sun upon the table.

Daniel answered the summons as usual and began to clear away. As he did so his eye fell on the money and he gave a little quick, sharp gasp. Mrs. Trapaud heard it and turned to look at him.

"Yes," she said, "it's a lot of money, isn't it, Daniel? One hundred and thirty pounds. The bay mare and her foal fetched it."

Daniel murmured some reply, and went on removing the breakfast things. Mrs. Trapaud rose, folded her napkin leisurely, and gathering up the gold pieces, crossed to the fireplace and put them in a tidy little heap on the mantelpiece Then she walked into the conservatory that opened out of the room to see how her pointsettia was coming on. Suddenly her pulses stopped and her heart stood still to listen. She heard a voice distinctly speaking in a weird, mad whisper from the breakfast room behind.

"Make a man rich for life," it said, and repeated the phrase like a litany.

She turned.

Daniel was standing near the mantelpiece, his face white as death, great drops of sweat standing out upon his brow. His fingers twitched nervously, his eyeballs were painfully distended. Covetousness, avarice, greed, were writ large upon his countenance. He looked horrible. Instinctively Mrs. Trapaud shrank back among the greenery to watch.

"Make a man rich for life!" reiterated Daniel with a curious sibilant sound. "Make a man rich for life—rich for life!" With one swift look in the direction of the conservatory he put out his hand, and with stealthy touch noiselessly took the gold. You could have heard a pin drop. Mrs. Trapaud stepped quickly forward.

"Daniel, what are you doing? Put that money down."

She spoke sharply—peremptorily. Daniel turned. An ugly look came over his face; he was dangerous.

"Put it down this minute," she said.

"Make a man rich for life," he muttered, backing to the door.

"Daniel, are you mad? Put it down at once, I say."

She had reentered the room now and her hand was on the bell. With a quick movement Daniel reached out to the sideboard and seized a knife; in his other fist he still clutched the gold.

"I see," she said quietly. "Then we have been housing a thief and a murderer for five and 20 years.'"

The knife dropped from his hand. A violent trembling shook him in every limb, the wild, weird look died out of his eyes, and he stood for a moment gazing dazedly at the money in his clinched palm.

"Daniel, put it down!"

He crossed to the mantelpiece as though in a dream and put the money back where he had found it in the spirit of a little child. Then he stood there silent, his head bowed upon his breast.

"It is the first time I have ever known you drunk, Daniel," said Mrs. Trapaud, slowly. "Do not ever let me see you drunk again or I shall have to dismiss you. Now you may go."

He turned and walked slowly to the door. He had his back to her, but she could see his shoulders heave. Presently he turned again, his face still bowed upon his breast.

"God bless 'ee, mistress," he said brokenly and went out.—The Tattler.

BEAUTIFYING A STATE.

One Californian Bought Beautiful Birds and Let Them Loose in Country Around Pasadena.

Whenever I see any of these propagandas for beautifying a city," said Senator Perkins, of California, the other night, according to the New York Times, "I always think of the work done to beautify the state of California by a citizen of Altadena, which is hard by Pasadena. The man's name is Andrew McNally, and when he came to California there were few birds at Altadena, and those few were hardly what we would call beautiful. McNally made up his mind that the land needed birds, so he built him an aviary and imported many hundreds of his feathered friends. Once a year he would open the doors of his aviary and let the young birds fly whithersoever they would, and in a short time, the whole country was populated with feathered creatures of every variety of hue and song. His example was followed by Joseph Grinnell and Mrs. Grinnell, both of whom are ardent ornithologists, so that now the country around Pasadena is a garden spot for birds of beautiful plumage. Many of the birds that were imported came from Japan and China. So you see there are more ways than one of beautifying a city or a state."

Too Much Indeed.

"What's the trouble, Harker?"

"Too much raising."

"How's that?"

"Why, I raised the car window for a very pretty young lady and then she raised her eyes."

"That was nice."

"Then I raised my hat and her father came in and raised cane."—Chicago Daily News.

The Real Danger.

If Russia fights Japan and they get the names of the generals snarled up, says the Washington Times, it will take a patent Edison disentangler to get rid of the results.

PRINCESS MARIE DEL PILAR OF BAVARIA.

According to Spanish newspapers a project is on foot for the marriage of King Alfonso to his cousin, Princess Marie del Pilar of Bavaria. The princess, who is 13 years old, is the only daughter of Prince and Princess Louis Ferdinand of Bavaria. Her mother was the Infanta Marie de la Paz of Spain, sister of King Alfonso's father. King Alfonso is himself but 17 years and eight months old. Under the laws of his country he attained his majority on his sixteenth birthday, and has consequently been the actual head of the Spanish government for more than a year and a half. The people of Spain are pleased with the proposed alliance.

PERSIAN GEMS MORE COSTLY.

Fine Turquoise Stones from the Mines of Nishapoor Are Becoming Scarcer and Dearer.

The turquoise gems, the finest examples of which are produced from the mines of Nishapoor, are, probably from some change in the fashion of the west, becoming dearer in price and, in Teheran and neighborhood, more difficult to find. According to Vice Consul General Tyler, at Teheran, says the Washington Star, much of the value of the stone depends on its shape, the oblong being considered the most appropriate; on its freedom from spots or discoloration, however small in size; on its age, when the color has settled down into its final hue (not the superficial variations or sympathetic changes, but its really permanent shade); but more than all on its actual color, whether fresh from the hands of the lapidary or sedate from long wear. Choice, taste and fashion largely determine the preference of one shade or another, but the lapis lazuli, or the cloudless sapphire of its native skies, is the highest quality of the turquoise.

The pearls of the Persian gulf, which have formed for a long time past an important branch of the export trade, have likewise, within the last few years, risen greatly in price. Mr. Tyler says he does not think that this means that the supply has seriously diminished, but rather that the demand has increased out of proportion. Ten thousand dollars for a rosary of faultless pearls is not at the present time considered at all excessive, although formerly the same might be bought for a tithe of that amount.

Useless Fire Extinguishers.

Scores of costly fire extinguishers and hundreds of fire buckets are picked up and destroyed every year by the agents of the insurance patrol. They are all rendered worthless by neglect. Acids which enter into the formulae of most patent extinguishers eat away the tin coverings, and there is nothing to be done except to destroy the apparatus, because it becomes a peril in itself. The water buckets, which should be emptied and refilled at least once a week, simply rust out and become useless.—Philadelphia Press.

Pipe Smoking in Cold Weather.

There is more smoking of pipes done in cold weather than at any other time, and, excluding the vacation season, there are more pipes and smoking tobacco sold during the cold weather than during the temperate and heated spells. —Tobacco Trade Review.

Earthquakes in Britain.

About one in every twenty-eight earthquakes recorded in the world is felt in the British Isles.

COLONIZING CANADA.

What Persistent Advertising Has Done for the Northwest—Growing Flax on a Large Scale.

Some five years ago the Canadian government did strenuous advertising throughout the cities of the United States with a view of disabusing the people's minds of the idea that western Canada was a waste of frost and snow. The government caused free lectures to be given, established bureaus from which large quantities of literature about Canadian possibilities in the way of farming and home making were issued and gave exhibitions of agricultural products at state and county fairs.

The farmers of the middle west in particular emigrated in large numbers, with the result that an American invasion of Canada began, and continued so steadily as to produce what a recent writer has called the "Americanization of Canada."

One of the most noticeable results of the invasion is shown in the introduction of flax growing on a large scale. The Canadians thought it unwise to attempt the cultivation of that grain, as they believed it hard on the land and a great protector of weeds. But the Americans have proved to the contrary, and with land selling at $12 an acre and yielding an average of 15 bushels to the acre of flax the newly-bought farms have paid for themselves during the very first year.

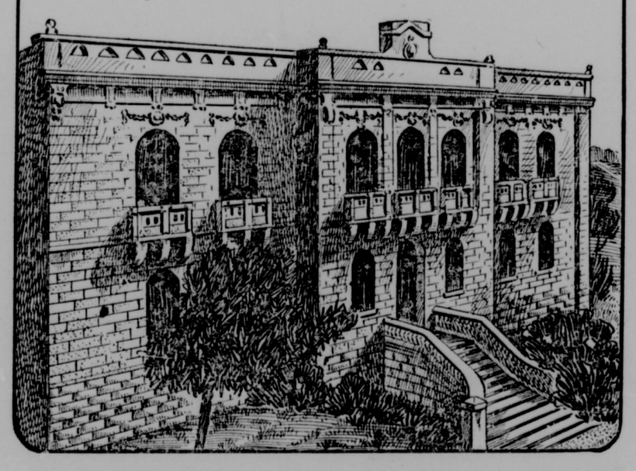
Booming Books.

Some time ago a rumor went round that astute publishers had in their pay a large number of the most attractive diners-out. Your neighbor at table would lead the conversation to the latest novel—quite the easiest of conversational openings between strangers who lay their heads together over the menu and have to entertain each other for an hour. You are interested in the description of the book of the hour, you are a little ashamed of not having read it, and going home you sit down and order the book—from the circulating library. Every publisher, every theater manager, every deviser of a patent medicine knows that the advice of a friend is a more concentrated and personal pull than the opinion of a critic from the empyrean. And if the idea was ever carried out, it deserved to succeed but no one ever spotted the paid diner-out. There was the artistry of the thing —London Chronicle.

Smallpox as "the Good Wife."

To this day smallpox is alluded to in the outer islands of the Hebrides as "bhean mhath" ("the good wife"), a form of euphemism, the idea of which is that, in order to escape the ban of the disease, it should be spoken of respectfully.—Caledonian Medical Journal.

ABYSSINIAN PALACE AT JERUSALEM.



A palatial building has just been completed at Jerusalem for the accommodation of the empress of Abyssinia, Taitou, and her retinue, for the visit planned to the Holy City next Easter. The building cost about $20,000, and the furniture, which has been ordered in England, France and Germany, will cost over $15,000. The empress is expected to bring with her a large retinue and will stay in Jerusalem three months. During that time she will visit Bethlehem, Gethsemane, Hebron, Jericho and the Jordan valley. The empress is reported to have expressed a wish to end her days in Jerusalem or its vicinity.

WOMAN AND HOME

HINDOO CHILD WIVES.

Their Existence, from Cradle to Grave, Is One of Unspeakable Horror and Degradation.

A Hindoo grandmother, with a red sahree drawn close around her, told her life's story recently to 100 Chicago mothers who had gathered in a little room in Handell hall to hear it.

It was a story that might have been told in Nero's court while Christians, burning like candles in their jackets of tar, were illuminating the gardens—it might have been told then because the flames would have made a perfect setting for the story of Sukhiva Vannerjee. This Hindoo grandmother's hair was as black as ebony and her eyes were the eyes of youth with the fire of a hope burned out. The mothers who heard her story were white-haired, many of them.

Twenty-one years ago Sukhiva Vannerjee was married. She is now 27 years old. The man who took as his bride a girl of six was over 30, was prosperous, and belonged to India's high caste, as did the child wife.

The woman told her story in broken English. Now and then she was prompted by Miss Josephine Holmes, a Los Angeles woman who brought her to this country to arouse sympathy in America in the movement to abolish the child wife practice in India.

Here is the story that Sukhiva Vannerjee told:

She was six years old when her parents announced that a husband had been selected for her. She did not see her husband until the day preceding the day set for the marriage. Then she was taken to his house and he asked her many questions. She suited him, so they were married and went to live at the home of her husband's mother. The young wife became the slave of her mother-in-law, as is the custom in India, and did the menial work about the house.

When she was 11 years and 11 months old a daughter was born to her. The mother-in-law flew into a rage when the sex of the first child was announced —girls are a disgrace in India.

Two years passed and a second daughter was born. This time the mother-in-law was inconsolable. She ordered the husband to turn the wife out of the house. The husband obeyed. Husbands have to obey their mothers in India.

Banished from home at the age of 14, the child wife was led blindfolded into the jungles to satisfy the hunger of tigers. For two days and as many nights she roamed through the forest. The incessant roar of wild animals drove her out of her mind. While in this condition she was rescued from the forest by agents of a concern which traffic in outcast wives. By these agents she was taken back to Bengali, her native town.

After two nights in the resort to which she was taken Sukhiva Vannerjee escaped and made her way to the home of her own parents. Her mother and father dared not take her in, so they handed her some bread through a window. For this act of charity they had their heads shaved the next day and were ostracised.

Then it was that the girl was picked up by the agents of the Christian refuge in Bengali. She became a worker in the mission and in a short time had rescued 50 other wife outcasts. Until Miss Holmes asked her to come to America to study medicine the girl remained in the mission.

Cleaning Curtains at Home.

A professional cleaner says that the best method of cleaning lace curtains at home is to make a suds of warm water, white castile soap and a little borax. If the curtains are very dirty scrub them gently with a soft scrubbing brush. Lace curtains should never be rubbed between the hands. This stretches the mesh and is very likely to tear holes in it. When quite clean rinse in clear water to which a little borax has been added, squeeze between the hands, but do not wring, and dry in a sheet.

Egg Stains on Napery.

In washing tabel linen, or any cloth stained with egg, avoid putting it in boiling water, which will set the stain. Put the cloth in cold water, and the stain can be very easily removed. The same rule applies to eggcups and any dishes stained with egg. If they are set with the other china into hot dish water, the stain will harden, and it requires considerable patience to remove it. Egg stains come out easily in cold water.

PRETTY DUTCH DESIGNS.

In High Favor Just Now for the Decoration of Lamp Shades, Boxes and Cushion Friezes.

Those well known Dutch designs (representing sturdy little Hollanders, animals, geese, et cetera) are so striking as freizes upon cushions and decorative boxes that it is pleasant to find them in still another form.

From France comes the suggestion of using them upon lamp and candle shades. Not until the results of the plan are seen does one realize just how clever a choice it is.

Of course the material used in the shades must be of a character appropriate to such treatment. Heavy carbon paper or cardboard without a glaze is a good choice. So are denim and other heavy fabrics.

Some women will be able to do original work in applying the design. Those who have no gift in this line can transfer the colors with transferring fluid.

A very postery decoration is obtained by the new application method of fancy work. Here, the rough sketch or outline of the picture is drawn in with a soft pencil, the various divisions being afterwards cut out of cloth, cardboard, et cetera, and pasted on.

In this way, if the Dutch gamin is wearing a dark blue blouse, a traced pattern made over the sketch is cut out of dark blue flannel or carbon paper. This fits exactly into the sketch. It is neatly pasted in with gum arabic. Sabots can be shaped from heavy yellow paper or cardboard, and any other portions of dress or figure added until the picture is complete.—St. Paul Globe.

A HANDY BOOK RACK.

It Solves the Problem of How to Dispose of the Magazines Which Come in the Household.

What to do with the magazines and illustrated papers that find their way in increasing numbers into nearly every household these days is considerable of a problem, particularly if space is at a premium and the ruler of the home does not approve of having the tables littered with reading matter. In order to meet the demand for convenient, handy receptacles newspaper and book racks of all sorts and sizes are brought out every season by enterprising and ingenious manufacturers and many of the new contrivances are very satisfactory and oftentimes decidedly ingenious. One of the latest productions in this line is here pictured. It serves the double purpose of use and ornament, for an article of furniture such as this of polished mahogany, handsomely inlaid, is a welcome addition to the sitting room, library or den. A special feature is the divided compartment underneath for illustrated papers which are usualy too large to fit conveniently on the same shelf with the monthly magazines. For one's favorite volumes of prose and poetry, as well as the periodicals that one likes to have at hand such a rack especially commends itself.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Opals Now in High Favor.

In spite of the old-time superstition there seems to be a grave doubt about the ill-luck attaching to opals in the minds of the girls of to-day, for opals are very much worn. There is hardly a more beautiful stone than the opal, and jewelers say that if they continue to win their way in popular favor they will become more costly. Hitherto they have been cheaper than their beauty led one to expect they would be, but that was because the superstitution about their ill-luck bringing powers made people fear to own them, and thus the demand for them was comparatively small. An opal surrounded by smaller brilliants makes a charming setting for a ring. The diamonds reflect the rainbow tints of the opal, and the combination of stones is one which shows the beauties of both to best advantage.—Chicago News.

To Put Out Burning Oil.

Burning oil cannot be extinguished by water. The water only serves to spread the flames. The right thing to do is to throw down flour, sand or earth. Thus the area of conflagration is limited, and the fire extinguished.

An Egg Poaching Hint.

Add a little vinegar to the water in which you poach eggs, to prevent the whites from spreading. Breaking each into a cup about a quarter of an hour before it is to be used will also help.

THE SHORT MADE TALL.

English Professor Adds Inches to Stature of Men by a Unique Process of Stretching.

The attention of the English people was called to the fact not long ago that the stature of English soldiers gradually was decreasing. The house of lords immediately appointed a commission to inquire into the facts in the case, but even the house did not expect to be able to remedy it if it should prove to be so.

If some member of the house should arise and announce there was a great scarcity of sunshine in the British isles the house would immediately appoint a commission to inquire into the matter.

That's because it's customary. In the stature proposition the commission did not expect to accomplish much, for has not Solomon said that man cannot by taking thought add one cubit to his stature?

However, Solomon was talking without reckoning on a certain Prof. Atkinson who was to come after him. The professor also discovered that the British soldier was falling off in point of inches and decided that he should be stretched and pulled out to the necessary height.

When the Boer war fell upon England it became fashionable to enlist and fight and bleed for the country's sake. Unfortunately for a number of young fashionables anxious to bleed they did not come up to the standard of inches prescribed by the British recruiting officers.

These unfortunate fashionables could not obtain commissions because they were not tall enough. That is where Prof. Atkinson stepped in.

It is said that 400 cadets passed through his pulling process and that 150 feet were added to the English army by the method. It is said that he charges $100 an inch, and that clients as a rule pay about $500, having five inches added to their height.

Most of his clients have been cadets from Sandhurst and Woolwich. Many of these cadets on entering the academies, which they do at ages varying from 16 to 18, are undersized. They trust to Providence to bring them to the necessary feet before they go up for examination into the army.

When nature fails Mr. Atkinson steps in.

During the lengthening process the patient is placed in a seat that looks like a cross between a bathtub and a barber's chair, and an airproof mackintosh which fits tightly around the throat and is fastened about him. After sitting in a high temperature for some time the patient is given a massage, and then the "lengthening professor" begins the manipulations of the cervical bones. The same process is repeated with the spine and the joints of the knees, ankles and wrists, each joint being rubbed three minutes. After this the patient is subjected to a hot air and electrical bath. Then he has ten minutes of physical exercise.

Two hours of this treatment every day for three months is said to increase the height from three to eight inches.

Signaling Beneath the Waves.

There has recently been put in operation at Boston a system of signaling beneath the waves to vessels approaching dangerous shores during foggy weather. The apparatus consists of two receivers, located on either side of the ship below the water line, and connected by wires to the wheelhouse, where a telephone box is placed. The signals from shore are given by striking a submerged bell at regular intervals. When the observer wishes to ascertain his location he takes the ear piece, and by moving the switch either to the right or left soon ascertains upon which side the bell will be found. The value of a system of this nature is at once apparent when it is borne in mind that fogs frequently obscure the most powerful lights, and that certain atmospheric conditions during stormy weather render fog horns almost, if not quite, valueless.

Great Aid to Agriculture.

The chemists of the agricultural department have shown that ability to fix the nitrogen, which is infinitely abundant in the air, and apply it to the worn-out fields of the world will enable mankind to cultivate what is practically virgin soil forever. A plant at Niagara Falls is taking nitrogen from the air by electrolysis, but not yet in commercial quantity.

UMBRELLA-SHAPED SAIL.

Experts Are of the Opinion That Practically It Does Away with All Danger of Capsizing.

A sail that practically does away with all danger of capsizing, since increased wind pressure upon it does not tend to tip the boat, has been invented in England. The desired results are attained by making the sail like a flat umbrella—a shape whose advantages have long been recognized by yachtsmen, although until the past summer all attempts to realize them practically have been failures. Says Popular Mechanics:

"At last the umbrella, or cyclone, sail is a reality. Time and again attempts have been made to construct a sail of this kind, but not until the past summer have the efforts been satisfactory. The umbrella sail, which is an English invention, is attracting attention of yachtsmen in all parts of the world. With this type of sail, a small boat, which could not safely carry to exceed 200 square feet of canvas with an ordinary rig, can carry 360 square feet without danger. In fact, the risk of being capsized is practically removed, while the increased speed of the boat is nearly in proportion to the increase in her canvas. . . . The original boat put in service this year at Cowes, England, is only 17 feet on the water line, but carries an umbrella sail which measures 30 feet horizontally, and 16 feet up and down. The sail also serves as an immense awning. The American Shipbuilder says the chief feature of the cyclone sail, which is practically a large umbrella, is that the wind pressure on it has no effect whatever to incline the boat. Roughly speaking, the pull of the sail is at right angles to its mean surface—that is to say, in the direction of the mast.

"In other words, it may be described as a kite held by a rigid string. If the mast were stepped quite on the lee side of the boat, it is evident that the sail would lift the lee side and so list the boat to windward; and if the mast were stepped on the weather side, lifting the weather side of the boat, it would necessarily list the boat to leeward. It follows then that there is some certain point which happens to be slightly on the lee side of the center line, at which, if the mast is stepped, there will be no tendency for the wind to careen the boat at all. When actually sailing in the boat, the only way in which one is aware of a puff of wind is by noticing that the boat travels faster, and experiencing a slight sensation similar to that coming from the acceleration of the engines in a steamer. For sailing with the wind in different directions to the boat the whole mast and sail are rotated by means of a turn-table, to which the mast is attached, and the mast is elevated and lowered by means of two tackles. There is also a balance weight, which helps to elevate the mast and balance its dead weight.

"The Thornycrofts, the great English boat builders, are experimenting in the expectation that the umbrella sail can be adapted to rowboats, canoes and other small craft."

LESSON FROM SUNBEAMS.

The Microscope Far Outdone by an Instrument Invented by Two German Professors.

The sunbeam's visible dust particles have taught a lesson to scientists, and the result is an instrument far beyond the microscope in power. What this will mean in the study of germs of disease and as an aid to the medical world can hardly be calculated.

Profs. Siedentopf and Zsigmondy, of Jena university are the discoverers of the new method of microscopic observation whereby ultramicroscopic particles are not only made visible but can also be studied with a view of determining their size.

The method consists mainly in a powerful artificial illumination of the particles to be observed. These particles, because of their minuteness, exert no material influence upon the vibratory period of the light waves, and hence appear to the observer as self-illuminating, or luminous objects, by virtue of their reflected light. Since, however, the reflected light is weaker than the original illuminating beam, it is necessary, in order to secure the advantages of an intensified illumination of the particles, to employ the principle of dark field illumination.

The principle involved in this new method is well illustrated by the common phenomena of the "visible sunbeam" in a darkened room which is penetrated by a ray of light. Dust particles in the path of the ray, hitherto invisible, become visible when the eye of the observer is at right angles to the direction of the penetrating ray.

Helmholtz, the greatest physicist living at the time of the microscope now in use was perfected, declared the limit of microscopic perception to be 1-25,000 of an inch. This new instrument will make possible the study of bodies seven to ten times smaller.

HIS FATHER'S TIN LARK.

It Had a Cover and a Handle and His Father Got Beer in It.

One day Miss Bailey brought her Shelley down, relates a writer in McClure's, and read his "Ode to the Skylark."

"Now, don't you think that's a pretty thing?" she asked. "Did you hear how the lark went singing, bright and clear, up and up and up into the blue sky?"

The children were carefully attentive, as ever, but not responsive. Morris Mogilewsky felt that he alone understood the nature of this story. It was meant to amuse; therefore it was polite that one should be amused.

"Teacher fools," he chuckled. "Larks ain't singin' in skies."

"How do you know?" asked Miss Bailey.

"'Cause we got a lark by our house. It's a from tin lark mit a cover."

"A tin lark! With a cover!" Miss Bailey exclaimed. "Are you sure, dear, that you know what you are talking about?"

"Teacher, yiss ma'am, I know," Morris began, deliberately. "My papa, he has a lark. It's a from tin lark mit a cover. Und it's got a handle, too. Und my papa he takes it all times on the store for buy a lark of beer."

"Lager beer! O, shade of Shelley!" groaned Miss Bailey's spirit, but aloud she only said: "No, my dear, I wasn't reading about lager beer. A lark is a little bird."

BRIDEGROOM WAS NERVOUS.

He Thought the Parson Was in Too Big a Hurry for the Wedding Fee.

Rt. Rev. Dr. Leighton Coleman, bishop of Delaware, told the following story, says the Philadelphia Telegraph, to some friends in town whom he was visiting recently:

"A young man came up to me one day with the remark: 'Bishop, I want you to marry me on next Wednesday.'

"'All right; I'll marry you.'

"'Well, I want the church bell to ring.'

"'Yes, you can have the bell rung.'

"'Well, I want the organ to play.'

"'All right, you can have the organ.'

"'And I want everything else anybody ever had at a church wedding.'

"'You shall have it.'

"Well, the night came, the bell rang, the organ played, the church was crowded, and everything went off as the young man wanted it. When the ceremony was over the young couple waited, instead of leaving the chancel. So I held out my hand, shook hands with the bride, and then held out my hand to the bridegroom. He had his hand deep in his trousers pocket, and as I stood with my hand out, he said, somewhat impatiently, and in a tone that could be heard all over the church:

"'I'm getting the money out just as fast as I can.'

"Then everybody in the church giggled."

A Late Business Call.

"Curious what men do when they're drinking," said Representative "Tim" Sullivan. "When I was in New York I heard a story about a man I know who had been out nearly all night, and was considerably the worse for wear.

"He came along a street and saw an undertaker's sign, with a night bell, just over a speaking tube. He rang the bell fiercely.

"'What is it?' yelled the undertaker down the tube. 'What do you want?'

"'Nothing in particular,' the chap replied; 'only I want to say to you that you're the last man I'll do business with.'"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Best in the World.

Estherville, Ia., Feb. 1st.—Mr. George J. Barber, of this place, says:—"Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best medicine in the world. There is nothing as good. I had been sick for over 15 years with Kidney Disease, which finally turned into Bright's Disease. I was treated by Doctors in Chicago, but they didn't do me any good. The best Doctor in Estherville treated me for five years with no better success. I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and made up my mind to give them a trial.

"I am very thankful to be able to say that they cured me completely, and I think they are the best medicine in the world."

The honest, earnest, straightforward experiences of real living men and women are the only material used in advertising Dodd's Kidney Pills. One such testimony is worth more than a thousand unsupported claims. The people who have used Dodd's Kidney Pills are those whose evidence is worth consideration, and surely nothing can be more convincing than a statement like Mr. Barber's. There are thousands of others just as strong.

Proof Positive.

WOMEN ARE ESPECIALLY LIABLE TO COLDS

Colds Invariably Result in Catarrh, Which Sets Up a Host of Distressing Diseases.

PE-RU-NA Both Protects and Cures a Cold—Read Proof.

Miss Rose Gordon, 2,102 Oakland av., Oakland Heights, Madison, Wis., writes:—

"A few years ago I caught a severe cold, which resulted in chronic bronchitis and catarrh. Our family physician prescribed medicines which gave temporary relief only. I began taking Peruna and improved at once. Two bottles cured me. I recommend Peruna to all sufferers, and am most grateful to you for your valuable medicine."—Miss Rose Gordon.

Washington, D.C., 609 H street, N. W. Dear Dr. Hartman:—"I used to think that the doctors knew all about our aches and pains and were the proper ones to consult when sick, but since I have been sick myself I certainly had good reason to change my mind. During the winter I caught a heavy cold, which developed into catarrh of the bronchial tubes and an inflamed condition of the respiratory organs. The doctors were afraid that pneumonia would set in and prescribed pills, powders and packs until I sickened of the whole thing, as I did not improve. One of the ladies in the home had a bottle of Peruna and she advised me to try that. Shortly after I began using it I felt that I had found the right medicine. I used two bottles and they restored me easily and pleasantly to perfect health. While my stomach was very delicate, Peruna did not nauseate me in the least, but gave me a good appetite, and I wish to express my gratitude to you for restored health."—Miss Rosalie Von Struenning

CATCHING COLD

Is the Beginning of Most Winter Ailments—Pe-ru-na Protects Against and Cures Colds.

There is no fact of medical science better established than that a teaspoonful of Peruna before each meal during the winter season will absolutely protect a person from catching cold. Now, if this is true (and there is no doubt of it), thousands of lives would be saved, and tens of thousands of cases of chronic catarrh prevented, by this simple precaution within reach of every one.

After a cold has been contracted a teaspoonful of Peruna every hour will shortly cure it, leaving no trace of it behind. After chronic catarrh has become established, or the first stages of chronic bronchitis or consumption have been reached, it will take much longer to effect a cure.

It seems strange that as well known and well established as these facts are any one should neglect to profit by them, and yet no doubt there are many who pay little or no attention to them and go on catching cold, acquiring chronic catarrh, bronchitis and consumption.

Catarrh May Permeate the Whole System.

Mrs. Mary E. Sampson, West Derry, Rockingham county, N. H., writes:—"I had terrible headaches, both ears run and I was nervous all the time, also had trouble each month; was deaf in one ear for thirty years. I took six bottles of Peruna and one of Manalin and am happy to say that it is the best medicine that I ever used. I am not so nervous, my appetite is good, everything I eat agrees with me, and I am feeling better in every way. I think Peruna is a Godsend to women and a blessing to suffering humanity."—Mary E. Sampson.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

FOR WOMEN

A Boston physician's discovery which cleanses and heals all inflammation of the mucous membrane wherever located.

In local treatment of female ills Paxtine is invaluable. Used as a douche it is a revelation in cleansing and healing power; it kills all disease germs which cause inflammation and discharges.

Thousands of letters from women prove that it is the greatest cure for leucorrhœa ever discovered.

Paxtine never fails to cure pelvic catarrh, nasal catarrh, sore throat, sore mouth and sore eyes, because these diseases are all caused by inflammation of the mucous membrane.

For cleansing, whitening and preserving the teeth we challenge the world to produce its equal.

Physicians and specialists everywhere prescribe and endorse Paxtine, and thousands of testimonial letters prove its value.

"Wine of Cardui is indeed a blessing to tired women. Having suffered for seven years with weakness and bearing-down pains, and having tried several doctors and different remedies with no success, your Wine of Cardui was the only thing which helped me, and eventually cured me It seemed to build up the weak parts, strengthen the system and correct irregularities."

By "tired women" Mrs. Adams means nervous women who have disordered menses, falling of the womb, ovarian troubles or any of these ailments that women have. You can cure yourself at home with this great women's remedy, Wine of Cardui. Wine of Cardui has cured thousands of cases which doctors have failed to benefit. Why not begin to get well today? JESUS FORGIVES SINS.

Capernaum was by adoption Jesus' own city. He made it the center of his missionary tour. He wrought more miracles, preached more sermons there than in any other one place. He recognized it as his residence by paying his tax there—"using," as a quaint writer says, "a fish's mouth as the purse from which he took the coin for the tax-gatherer." It was no matter of caprice that Jesus went there. It was the center of population. There were nine large cities in immediate proximity. And the combined population of the district approximated three million souls. Comparatively remote from the ecclesiastical center of Palestine the prejudice to the new Teacher and his doctrine was correspondingly less. There Jesus "reached the masses." There was an irresistible attractiveness in Jesus. People flew to him like ironfilings to a magnet. He drew men to himself. He could not be hid. He is still the most attractive and conspicuous personage of all history, and, having been lifted up, is drawing an ever-increasing multitude to himself. But each must determine for himself whether this attraction shall result in a permanent to the Master. Alas for Capernaum! it was for the most part curiosity, or mere bodily healing, or loaves and fishes, that brought the populace to Jesus; and so a city exalted to heaven is brought down to hell. It is an utter desolation, as indeed is the whole region. One little, leaky boat floats on Galilee, where once a goodly fleet rode at anchor. Jesus' words, "Woe unto thee, Capernaum!" seem to wake the echoes of a complete desolation. Once when Jesus, in the very house where he was seeking repose, was besieged by an audience that completely choked up the courtyard and the very approach to it, a stirring incident occurred. Four men, one or more of whom may have had a personal and happy experience of Jesus' power to heal, picked up an afflicted friend as he lay upon his mat, and brought him joyously and confidently to the great Healer. They were not dashed when they found the ordinary approach hopelessly blocked. They did not lay the sufferer down in the street, or even return with him to his dwelling. They were the kind who takes the kingdom of heaven by storm. They carried the paralytic up the outside staircase to the flat roof. They dug up the hard, sun-dried earthen roof, enough to admit of their lowering their friend into the room below. There were helping hands reached up from the astonished auditors below, and the sufferer was gently and safely landed at Jesus' feet. A mute, but powerful appeal, that! Jesus' first words were indescribably comforting: "Son, be of good cheer." But there is a surprising change in the formula. It is not a rebuke to disease. It is a categorical, authoritative remission of sin. The starting words could not escape the notice of the inquisitorial coterie of scribes and Pharisees. It was not intended they should. It was Jesus' gauntlet at their feet. They picked it up, but not in audible words of dissent. Omniscience unveiled their unspoken words as Jesus said: "Omnipotence knows nothing of degrees. One thing is not easier or harder to it than another. It is equally as easy to forgive as to heal, and vice versa. But that you may know that I have authority and power to do both, I will also say to this utterly powerless person, 'Arise.'" He spake, and it was done. No wonder the people said, as the audience dispersed: "We have seen strange things to-day." "Our eyes never beheld anything to match this scene." "We never saw it on this fashion."

The Teacher's Lantern

An admirable example, this strong and practical human sympathy.

This gathering up of those who have been felled to earth by adversity, disease, and sin: this carrying them in the arms of a strong faith to Him who is mighty to save—it is angelic work!

* * * * *

Power of combination,—see that, too, in this stirring word picture. No one of these four believrs could alone have carried his friends to Jesus. The four together did it with ease. The children of this world are wiser in this respect. It is the age of cobination in every sphere. Much spiritual force is frittered away in sporadic effort. Let Christians "get together" for the accomplishment of definite ends.

* * * * *

Persistence is finely illustrated here. No one of the four got weary in well-doing, or let go his corner of the mattress. Faint hearts would have failed at sight of such obstacle. But these believers were not made of such stuff. They did not once look back. They ran their furrow to the end of the field. This is the quality that wins in every sphere; in religion no less than in art, literature, commerce, exploration, and all.

* * * * *

Conventional rules were broken and set at naught that day. The sermon was interrupted. Plaster came rattling down on the heads of the auditors. Property was injured. But what of that so a sinner was saved? Welcome any mode that really brings the unsaved to the golden mercy-seat. Public worship is a means to an end, not an end in itself. It is a ladder to convey us to the treasury of grace. Bare ritualism grows very dextrous in gliding up and down the ladder; but it never takes one anywhere.

What God does is well done. The healing was complete. There was no tedious convalescence. The man hitherto so powerless sprang to his feet. The hands that the moment before were shaking like aspen-leaves now rolled the mattress into the smallest possible compass. The man who was himself a burden now carries a burden. And this was in the sight of all.

* * * * *

The transforming power of grace is just as conspicuous to-day. Judged by its effects upon individuals, communities, and nations, it must be confessed Divine. As the walls of that Capernaum home echoed to shouts of glory to God, so shall the whole earth be finally filled with praise.

* * * * *

Jesus saw faith in the four carriers and the sufferer carried. So also he saw the malicious thoughts of his enemies.

Child-Study and Sunday-School Methods.

Plato somewhere says that wonder is an essential condition to knowing. Attention is arrested and interest stimulated by the description of the unusual. Phillips Brooks once came to the defense of the average Sunday-school book. He said you must indulge children in their ideals and even their dreams and fancies. It is by that very means you lead them on to the real. The childmind fairly feeds and thrives upon the wonderful. And there is no richer repository of this than the Bible. For variety, picturesqueness, quickness and intensity of movement, the Scripture stories are unsurpassed. They are old, but perennial. Many of them are golden hooks on which ethical lessons of first importance can be hung.

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

FREIGHT TRAIN'S WILD PLUNGE.

Goes Down the Mountainside Near Everett Tunnel.

FIREMAN KILLED: ENGINEER HURT

The Accident Occurred on the Seventeen-Mile Grade Yesterday Morning—The Brakes Would not Work and Train Ran Away.

About 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning a wreck occured near the Everett tunnel, on the Seventeen-Mile grade, in which Fireman Francis P. Egan, of Westernport was killed and Porter Kenney, the engineer, of South Cumberland, had a leg broken.

The wreck occured near the place where the December wreck happened and was from the same cause—a runaway train.

The engine and 18 cars went down over the high embankment, over 40 feet, leaving only the caboose standing on the track.

The tracks were torn up for a long distance and no trains were able to pass for six hours.

Engineer Kenney jumped from the train at No. 36 Water Station. He was taken to the Keyser hospital, where it was found that his leg was broken and he was cut and bruised in many places.

Fireman Egan's body was taken to the depot at Piedmont. He was a new fireman, this being his third trip out.

While the track men were removing the coal of the December wreck yesterday they found part of the body and a limb of a man killed in that disaster. The remains were taken to Fredlock's for interment.

A SYSTEM OF WATERWORKS

Assured For Oakland Within the Present Year.

WORK ON PLANT TO BEGIN IN MAY

Mr. Fred. T. Martin, Who Secured the Franchise, Has Succeeded in Interesting Outside Capital in the Enterprise.

The citizens of Oakland are congratulating themselves upon the fact that within the next few months a complete system of waterworks will be enjoyed by them as Mr. Fred T. Martin, of Fairmont, who secured from the Mayor and Town Council some time ago the franchise to install the same, has succeeded in interesting capital in the enterprise and he informs us that May 15th, or sooner if weather conditions permit, work will be commenced and that by August 15th the entire system will be in working order.

The plan as outlined will be to lay an eight inch main under all the principal streets which will be sufficient to supply water for domestic purposes as well as for use in cases of fire. The supply will be drawn from the large spring on the Bradley farm and pumped into a standpipe on the hill north of town which is at considerable elevation above the town thus ensuring a good pressure at all times and under all ordinary circumstances.

As soon as all the details have been arranged the same will be published in full in these columns.

B & O Service Uninjured.

It is a fortunate circumstance for Baltimore that the great fire has not in any way injured the extensive terminals of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and the management of the company have arranged to give quick dispatch movement and prompt delivery of all traffic for Baltimore.

OBITUARY.

As soon as we begin to live we all begin to die, was vividly examplified last Thursday night when it was announced that Mrs. Sarah Lipscomb, wife of A. G. Lipscomb, of Deer Park, had quietly and peacefully passed away at her residence at above named place. Mrs. Lipscombhad been a great sufferer with that dread disease consumption for some two years and every attention and medical aid was given by a devoted and loving husband, but the grim monster claimed this young wife who leaves besides her stricken husband four young children the oldest only ten years old. The funeral took place at the U. B. Church near Armstead at 11 o'clock Sunday, Feb, 14th, 1904. An impressive sermon was preached by her uncle, Rev. Taylor Sines, of near Sines, this county, after which all that was mortal of the loving wife and mother was laid to rest in the Rhodeheaver cemetery near Sand Flat, followed by a large number of relatives and friends, many of whom had went from this place to pay the last tribute of respect to this kind neighbor and friend. To the bereaved husband and motherless children we extend our heartfelt sympathy in this sad hour of earthly sorrow which is but feeble, from a human standpoint and we can only commend them to that fount that can heal all sorrow and there you will meet wife, mother and friends in a fairer clime than this in that city whose maker and builder is God. REACTION.

She is sitting listless
Looking over sea
Waiting for a lover,
But she don't see me;
Waiting for a warrior bold,
Armor-clad and spurred with gold
Like a knight in days of old,
Proud as he can be.

I, who seek to woo her,
Find her sitting there;
Mystery is in her eyes,
Breezes kiss her hair.
I would die for her did she
Voice the wish—right merrily—
But she gives no thought to me,
Jove, but she is fair!

Shall I wear my life out
'Gainst her cold disdain?
He who wooes and goes away
Lives to woo again.
I will woo another maid,
I will hie me to a glade
Far from this. All undismayed
Bid adieu to pain.

What! She deigns to see me
As I move away!
Is that sudden downcast look
Bid for me to stay?
Nay, it cannot be, I'm wrong!
I have wooed her over-long—
I will not! I will be strong!
I will go away!

What? I think she's calling!
Says she loves me true!
Says she's just discovered it!
Following me, too!
Strange how I am growing cold—
Seek your lover spurred with gold!
Maiden, you are over-bold!
Maid, I love not you!

Helen's Engagement Rings

By STANNARD JOHNSON

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

THE second day out from Southampton Miss Helen Baker decided that ocean travel was not so bad after all. She sat placidly in her steamer chair and watched with considerable interest the rest of the passengers as they took their morning walk or stood about in groups. Until now her sole acquaintances had been the ship's doctor and the room stewardess.

There was a heavy first cabin list and the decks were crowded. The greater part were Americans homeward bound, but there were a few who were undeniably foreign in appearance. One of these Helen decided must be a count at the very least. He was tall and slender, with a decidedly military air, which was accentuated by the immense mustachios as black as the neatly fitting frock coat he affected. Helen had never met a count and she watched him intently as he passed among the crowd on the deck, with a pleasant word and a smile for every one.

Her interest was not lost upon the count. Presently he dropped into the chair beside her with a remark about the weather. Now Helen had been cautioned by her aunt not to make the acquaintance of strange men on the boat. It was upon her promise not to, that she had been permitted to undertake the voyage alone. This was forgotten in a moment now. Surely, she argued, there could be no harm in talking to a count. Before the lunch bugle was blown they were fast friends, and the count knew more about her than she realized that she had told. He carried her rug inside the salon for her and she promised that she would try and take a little walk after lunch.

The count was a most agreeable talker and that night for the first time she did not open the little leather case with Robert Arthur's picture inside before she crept into her berth. All that night the count pervaded her dreams and there was not a thought for the man to whom she had given her love. It was on his account that she was hurrying back home, and here, with the steamer heading for New York harbor, she was forgetting him.

In the days that followed there were occasional twinges of remorse for her broken faith, but the glamor of a title was upon her. The count was an Italian he said, and the glowing pictures he drew of his home in northern Italy were veritable castles in Spain. He was working to clear the estate he told her. This object had been nearly accomplished. In another year he should marry an American girl and take her home to be his countess. Without speaking he gave her a pretty good idea as to the identity of the American girl he had in mind.

It was the last night aboard that he spoke his love. They had come up from the captain's dinner and were leaning over the side near the bow, watching the faint gleam of light reflected by the low hanging clouds from the city. In burning sentences he told her how completely she had won his heart; how implicitly he had given her his faith. Out from the black sea the reproachful face of Robert Arthur stared up at her, but she resolutely thrust his memory aside and with trembling lips pronounced the "yes" which drove the count to an ectasy of bliss. He covered her hands with kisses and drawing from his hip pocket a little morocco case placed upon her fingers half a dozen rings. Even in the faint light the fire of the perfect stones was apparent and she started at the dazzling display.

"I can't wear these," she protested feebly. "I could never think of accepting such a gift."

His hand closed caressingly upon hers. "They are your engagement rings, Caro mio," he said softly. "They were my mother's. It is a little custom we have with those we love. Pray take them."

She made as though she would remove them, but in the end his will prevailed and she kept them on.

That night she was in a curious mixed state of exultation and fear. She was to be a countess and have all sorts of rich things, but on the other hand there were moments of passionate remorse when she thought of what Robert would say. Somehow she felt that she loved him dearly, and yet she had promised to marry the count. It was nearly morning when she finally dropped off to sleep, and the boat was already under way up the harbor when she emerged from the stateroom.

The count was waiting for her outside of the door. "It is better," he said softly, "that we should not be seen together. You will have your friends and it would be well to announce our engagement quietly at your home. I will call this evening." He made certain that he had the address right and hurried off. Helen shuddered. Robert would be certain to be at the dock. She was rather glad. It would be easier that way.

Then came the bustle and confusion of having the baggage passed and she was whisked off in a cab by Arthur. As soon as they were alone he caught her in his arms and covered her face with kisses. Even as she struggled against him she realized that the kisses were very sweet to her; not at all like the count's. She could not bear to have him kiss her lips. It was not a very determined resistance she made, but finally she pushed him from her. "You mustn't do that, Bob," she said, with burning cheeks. "You see I'm engaged."

"That's just why," he explained. "You don't suppose I would kiss you like that if we wern't."

Her face grew red. "I'm engaged to some one else," she said simply. "I—I—Oh, Bob, I'm so sorry." Then she burst into tears and sobbing on his shoulder told the whole story in disjointed sentences.

His face grew very white, and there were lines of pain about the mouth and eyes, but he did not scold as she had hoped he would. Instead he sought to comfort her, putting aside his own great sorrow to put her at her ease.

It was good to have some one to confide in and long before the drive was ended she was heartily ashamed of herself. Somehow the count seemed but a memory. She did not love him in the least and his title did not seem so desirable with Bob's broad shoulder to lean against. Even at the risk of seeming flighty she would break the engagement. Now she knew that it was Bob she had loved all along. She told him so and he promised to see the count and explain.

His face grew black when he saw the rings. That was something he could not understand, but he put them away in his office safe and they let the matter drop.

Nothing was said to Mr. Baker, but all through dinner she listened in agony of apprehension for the ring of the doorbell that would announce the approach of the count. Finally at dessert, the bell did ring, but it was only John Carter, from the custom house, dropping in for an evening chat with her father. He fairly glowed.

"We had great good luck to-day," he announced when he had been provided with a cigar and a cup of coffee. "Caught one of your fellow passengers, Miss Helen. 'Dago Dan' they call, but he was on the passenger list as the Count of Montevecchio. Meet him?"

Helen nodded. She dared not trust her voice to speak. Only Bob's firm hand under the table gave her the courage to stay.

"He's a slick scamp," went on Carter. "Makes a practice of getting engaged to a girl and loading her hands with diamond rings. She gets them through the customs, he has a lover's quarrel with her, she gives him back her presents and he saves the import duty."

Helen laughed hysterically. "Why I was his dupe this trip," she cried, nervously. "Show him the rings, Bob." The strain was too much for her and she broke down. It was Robert who told the story, while her mother comforted her. "—and now," he concluded, "what shall I do with the stones?"

"Well," said Carter, reflectively, "I don't think I would do anything. Miss Helen has not smuggled them as they were a gift and therefore her personal property. The 'Count' won't be in a position to claim them for some years on account of a little matter of some watches in a false tray of his trunk. I think I would suggest that she accept them as he said for engagement rings."

No More Students Wanted.

An order has been issued to the Siberian railroad agents to discharge all the students employes in the capacity of machinists and assistant machinists on the locomotives of the railroad. This order affects the employment of nearly 100 persons and is brought about by the wrecking of a butter train near Cheliabinsk. The machinist on the wrecked train was a student of the Tomsk Technological institute.

THE ASS LADEN WITH SALT AND WITH SPONGE

Find the Man's Wife.

A Man drove his Ass to the seaside, and, having purchased there a load of Salt, proceeded on his way home. In crossing a stream the Ass stumbled and fell. It was some time before he regained his feet; and by that time the Salt had all melted away, and he was delighted to find that he had lost his burden. A little while after that the Ass, when laden with Sponges, had occasion to cross the same stream. Remembering his former good luck, he stumbled this time on purpose, and was surprised to find that his load, so far from disappearing, became many times heavier than before.

LIGHT OF THE GLOW-WORM.

That It Has Its Uses Appears from Various Observations to Be a Fact.

Not only the origin of the glow worm's light, but the use to which it is put, deserves study. There are several theories of the purpose for which certain organisms have evolved a light-producing power in the mysterious history of life. In some cases it may serve to attract prey, which comes up to inquire into the unusual phenomenon, and remains to furnish dinner; in others it acts as a protective, frightening away the assailant, much as a burglar may be driven out of the house by judicious handling of a two-way switch. A more simple reason for its existence, writes W. E. Garrett Fisher, in the London Mail, is that it serves like the cyclist's lamp, to illuminate a dark road, or enable its possessor who lives in the unlighted depths of the sea to find the way about. The old fashioned advocate of "final causes," who argued that snuff was the real cause of the human nose, would have added that the firefly was endowed with light-giving powers in order to decorate the hair of South American beauties, or to help the heroes of Capt. Mayne Reid to read secret missives.

The light of the glow worm comes under yet another classification. The best opinion seems to be that it is one of the numerous and fantastic match-making contrivances with which so many of the lower creation are endowed by nature, happier therein than "man, proud man," who has to trust his tailor. In Goldsmith's delightful account of "Animated Nature," the suggestion was hazarded—probably out of Goldsmith's own poetic head—that the light of the female glow worm was "an emanation which she sent forth to allure the male to her company." Naturalists of the time laughed at Goldsmith, but he was quite right. The glow worm's light, whether hoisted by male or female, is as much a sign of pairing time as the song of the nightingale, the gaudy plumage of the cock pheasant, or the court dress of the debutante. Prof. Emery's observations in the pleasant meadows that encircle Bologna show conclusively that the light of the glow worm is used as a love signal. The female glow worm, in a marriageable mood, lights up her lamp like Hero of Abydos, and keeps it burning until all the suitors within sight have formed a circle around her for her to choose from. There are worse ways of courtship.

If we are to believe a Japanese investigator who published his results six or seven years ago, the glow worm can give our own maidens hints in the useful art of choosing a mate. He professed to have ascertained that the light of the glow worm, when filtered through a suitable medium, showed the characteristic properties of the rays then just discovered by Prof. Roentgen, rays which we can only use through the medium of a fluorescent screen.

In that case, it is clear enough why the light is always displayed at mating time. Appearances are deceptive in all ranks of life, and the power of literally "searching the heart," which the Roentgen rays bestow upon their lucky possessor, must be simply invaluable to those about to marry. Solomon long ago pointed out the value of the ant as a pattern to humanity. Our Japanese friend will be immortal if his discovery teaches the marriageable maiden to imitate the glow worm, and insist that her rival swains shall satisfactorily pass the searching test of the X-rays.

What He Needed.

Ascum—Doctor, I heard you tell Mr. Layzee to take a ride in his automobile for an hour each day.

Dr. Shrude—Yes.

"Do you really think the riding will do him any good?"

"Certainly not; but the three or four hours of work repairing the thing that he's bound to have will help him."—Philadelphia Press.

PLANT CAUSE OF CANCER.

The Oleander Said to Be a Prolific Breeder of the Flesh-Devouring Disease.

When I was a child a neighbor rode to our door on horseback. While he was talking with my father his horse crowded close to the porch and attempted to bite some twigs of an oleander. The man was greatly alarmed when he saw that the animal had broken a stalk, asked for water and washed the horse's mouth thoroughly, says a New York Sun writer.

My father asked the reason of his anxiety. He said a mouthful of the twigs would kill the horse almost instantly and told of a horse that died in severe tremors a few minutes after eating a few shoots of the plant; also of a neighbor who pruned her oleander plants and threw the branches into a little pond in the barnyard. The cattle drank the water and died.

Some year later a playmate was under medical treatment for an enlargement of the throat which seemed to threaten goitre. Her house was an oleander bower and the blossoms were her favorite decoration. She sometimes bit off the stems if they were too long. After months of the most thorough treatment the swelling disappeared.

A young woman who was extremely fond of oleander plants kept a very large tree in her room. One day in midwinter she dug out a portion of the earth and filled in the space with fresh earth from the florist's in order that her favorite might throw out a new crop of blossoms. That night she complained of serious irritation of her throat. A few days later the glands below the ear enlarged until they were on a line with her cheek. For nearly a year every remedy known to medical science was tried. The swelling at last yielded to treatment and she permanently recovered.

Another woman transplanted and repotted a large number of oleanders, becoming wearied with her task. She complained that night of a curious irritation in her throat. A swelling came in the glands below her ear. All remedies failed. It became malignant and caused her death about six months afterward.

Within the past year a death from cancer of the face or mouth has occurred in a household where are the largest and most beautiful oleanders I have ever seen. Yet another case is that of a woman of middle age whose favorite flower was the oleander. She kept all varieties, collecting them from various places as she found new ones. She had a clearly developed cancer, the doctors assured her, entirely cured, took treatment for years and was, so Whether any symptoms of the disease have developed within the last eight or ten years I am unable to say.

I might give other instances, but these are to my mind sufficient ground for belief that there is some connection between the oleander and glandular affections of a more or less malignant character.

Coffee Plantations.

There are 49,000 coffee plantations in the world. The total annual production of coffee amounts to 21,500,000 bags, of an average weight of 134 pounds each, or 2,881,000,000 pounds. This production represents a total value of more than $225,000,000 annually from more than 1,800,000,000 coffee trees in full bearing. The land used exceeds 3,600,000 acres. The value of the property is more than $1,350,000,000. The industry gives employment to 2,220,000 men, women and children.

Ahead of the Game.

"They may abuse Wall street all they please," said the Philadelphia man, "but I came out $700 ahead the last time I was there."

"How did you do it?" asked his friend.

"Left the money at home," replied the wise Quaker.—Chicago Daily News.

HOUSEHOLD

SURE OF POPULARITY.

No Matter Where She May Be Placed, the "Friendly Girl" Invariably Wins Out.

The friendly girl makes friends wherever she goes, and retains them. She is bright and cheerful, and enters a room like a sea breeze, fresh, laughing, nodding right and left with happy impartiality. The "blues" and the "doldrums" fly out of the window when she comes in. They simply can't endure her sunny presence.

She is ready for everything. She never throws cold water on your plans. She claps her hands and says they are splendid, and suggests a way to make them even more delightful, so sweetly and modestly that you think it is your own suggestion.

Wherever she goes she sees the droll side of things. And she has such a funny, whole-hearted way of describing them that it is as good to hear her as to have been there yourself—even better, for she has the humorous eye, which is a great gift.

She doesn't abuse it, though. You needn't expect to be regaled with bitter sarcasm and spiteful exaggerations. She can be clever and comical without being unkind, or untruthful, or coarse. And this is also a great gift.

She is receptive and responsive. She likes everybody, not considering it her dpty to suspect anyone of evil until positive proof has been presented. She prefers to consider all the world honest and glad until it proves itself otherwise.

The friendly girl always gets along. She has friends everywhere. For people who have met her never forget her, and she has room in her own heart for everybody.

The girl who has friends—who makes friends and keeps friends—bless her!

It does not matter whether she is rich and good looking, or poor and plain. Her faculty for friendship makes up for everything else, and there isn't anybody we'd rather have around.—N. Y. Weekly.

Making Work Less Tiresome.

Though never grudging a hard day's work where duty demands it, there are many ways by which we can lighten labor, and make our work less tiresome. For instance, when a big ironing has got to be done what a comfort and relief it is to the feet to use a cushion to stand on during the doing of it. It can be made up from an old quilt folded and covered by a piece of carpet. Until it has been tried no one can believe the rest it is to tired feet.—Chicago News.

BRIDE MEASURING DAY.

Queer Holiday Observed Once a Year in Kincardineshire, a Quaint Scottish Village.

Measuring brides for legacies is the remarkable ceremony which annually takes place in St. Cyrus, a quaint little village in Kincardineshire, Scotland, on the brink of the German ocean; and here is a picture of the primitive measuring machine which has decided the fortunes of scores of matrimonial candidates.

More than 50 years ago a native of the village, who had been paymaster general of the Indian army, bequeathed a sum of money the interest of which was, for all time coming, to be disbursed in five equal parts every year. One part was for the purchase of meal for the poor, while the remainder was set aside to be divided among each year's four conspicuous brides—the oldest, the youngest, the tallest and the shortest—who were married in St. Cyrus Parish church.

The administration of the fund is in the hands of the parish minister, and unhappy at times is his task, such are the jealousies which arise among the competitors, for there is keen rivalry for these legacies, which amount to hardly more than $30 each; but that is quite an important sum in so remote and simple a village. All St. Cyrus turns out on "Bride Measuring Day," and the occasion is made a holiday.

Helen Gould's Charities.

WHO is the most famous woman in this country? You will not have to think before you answer.

"Helen Miller Gould."

Born less than 35 years ago, very quiet in her manner, devoted to no fad, taking up no special profession, Miss Gould is still the most prominent American woman of her day, and probably the most prominent young woman in the world.

From her earliest childhood Helen Gould has been called "little" Helen. As a small girl she was tiny, and even now she is only five feet six. When her father died 12 years ago she was very slight and, it seemed to her friends, shorter than she is now. She was dark, very silent, very undemonstrative, not dressy, and in no way obtrusive. No one thought that, at that age, she would ever become a great philanthropic figure in the world's work.

One of the first deeds was the erection of a beautiful memorial chapel to her father. She spent thousands upon it and, in so doing, she gave the workmen of that little New England village such a boom of prosperity that her bounty is talked about to this day, says a writer in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Detroit Free Press says Miss Gould believes in charity. She does not care whether it is organized or not. Nor does she care whether the recipients are old enough to advertise her good deeds or not.

Near her lovely home on the Hudson she has built a home for little crippled boys. She calls it Woody Crest. She built the house, filled it with little cripples, hired the best teachers for them and now supports them in comfort.

These little boys are taught the useful crafts, and, when they leave Woody Crest they are expert wood carvers, expert leather burners, experts in many things which crippled boys can do.

Woody Crest is known far and wide and the neighbors seeing the boys out for an airing of an afternoon say: "Here come Helen's babies." Her latest charity is to give $100,000 for the building of another big home for girls and boys.

"I like Helen Gould," said a member of a political club, "because she does not put on airs."

"I like her because she does not argue," said another.

"I like her because she does not try to outdress us," said a third. And so each one had a word of commendation.

Miss Gould is far from aggressive. She allows her dear friend, Mrs. Russell Sage, to go ahead and she follows. "We are making up bags for the soldiers in the Philippines," Mrs. Sage will announce, "and I put a jacknife in each."

One by one the different members present will tell what they will place in the bags, one a sewing companion, one a book, another a calendar. And so on.

When all have finished Mrs. Sage will say: "And Miss Helen Gould commissions me to say that she will place a purse in each bag, containing a gold piece."

And, later in the Philippines, each soldier of the hundred or more who receive those bags will be gladdened by a purse and a gold piece.

"That is Helen Gould's way," the ladies will whisper.

Just where Miss Gould's benefactions have taken her no one knows. She loves to present large and valuable articles to the government and, during the Spanish war she attempted to give a warship. And the government has, in all possible cases, accepted these gifts, declining certain ones when it was unconstitutional to accept.

Helen Gould's smallest charity is a flower charity. She owns an immense hothouse at Tarrytown and the flowers from this great glass series of structures are sent to the poor. "Do you give those to the poor of your neighborhood?" asked a visiting stranger.

"No," said Miss Gould, smiling, "but to those who are in need. And all of my friends are in need—of my good wishes, daily," she added with that curious look which her friends call "the Jay Gould expression."

Is Helen Gould pretty or is she not? This is a question which is often asked. In reply it can be said that Helen Gould has a very sweet face. It is a good, pleasant face, rather serious but very nice. She is good looking distinctly and might be called pretty. Her dress, while costly, is rather plain, though she wears the finest of gowns.

A National Duty

By DR. ANDREW WILSON.

It is the least cheering sign of the times that earnest men and women who have regard to the serious side of life are beginning to evince an active interest in the physical welfare of children. There can be no better wish expressed for the race than that inquiry into the best means of arresting and averting human deterioration may not only be increased in extent but be productive of immense good.

The deterioration in physique, especially of the children of the masses, may be taken to be a real matter. There is no questioning that the evil, and a serious one it is, exists in full force. The testimony of teachers and doctors alike is unanimous in its strong protestation of the reality of the degeneration, and of the need for its betterment. The complaints are not lacking in definite character. There is first the widespread charge, only too easily proved true, of parental neglect.

May we not equally learn the all-important lesson that it is possible for any nation, by attention to its physique generation after generation, to work, through natural laws, ways and means, such results that, as an authority once remarked, might seem nothing short of miraculous? The agencies to be adopted in order to awaken the national "health conscience" need not be specifically detailed by me. What is wanted is widespread national instruction in hygiene; the exposition by tongue and pen of the laws of health, and the state's recognition of the fact that this last is part and parcel of the only home policy which can ever be expected to produce a healthy people.

It would be highly beneficial to our race if at large we resolved to see what each of us, as individuals, might do by way of example, if by no other means, of improving our physique. Suppose we thought a little more seriously of the simpler life, of the repression of wholesale luxury and of needless extravagance; suppose we encouraged agencies for the diffusion of health knowledge with at least as much enthusiasm as we rush into battle or command more warships, we should attain a victory of peace the magnificence of which not one of us can figure forth to-day. Best of all, the example would form the best object lesson, and the race of the future would be such as could hold up its head unabashed in the foremost files of time.

Suicide as a Lunacy Cure

By DR. ROBERT REID RENTOUL,
Member of Royal College of Surgeons.

AT THE present time we are engaged in the apparently pleasant pastime of manufacturing lunatics and others of this class, as the following startling figures will prove:

In England and Wales one person in every 301 is an officially notified lunatic.

In Scotland, one in every 247, and in Ireland, one in every 206, is an officially notified lunatic.

There are 50,000 children in London alone who are physically inferior.

The report of the army medical department for 1901 states that 21,522 recruits out of 76,750 inspected were rejected as physically unfit for service, while 1,014 more were discharged from the army within three months after their enlistment.

Nature should be allowed to eliminate lunacy in her own way. In our efforts to check suicides by protecting and controlling would-be suicides; in permitting many to beget a tainted offispring; in spending immense sums of money on the up-keep of the unfit, do we not really actively support the survival of the unfit?

Think how nature would reduce the number of lunatics to the smallest proportion were she not so persistently and deliberately thwarted. Among a very large portion of the insane there is a marked suicidal tendency—some call it a "mania."

We do all in our power to prevent suicide. Years ago suicides were buried at the public cross-roads, a stake being driven through the body. Fortunately, this has not acted as a deterrent. To-day we build palatial residences and appoint immense staffs to protect lunatics from their mental impulses. Again, our legislature attempts to make the obtaining of poisons as difficult as possible.

Yet, although thousands of pounds are expended yearly upon the care of lunatics, nature's method—that of suicide—goes on, as it must and will go on. Not only so, but fortunately it increases.

Are we justified in endeavoring to prevent lunatics and other degenerates from committing suicide?

Real Americanism

By WOODROW WILSON,
President of Princeton University.

IT IS hard to analyze the national character, for when we conceive of the American, we think in terms suitable to that part of the country in which we ourselves live. We are to be congratulated on our national sentiment, for we have every little sectionalism. In spite of this we do not try to be conventional, and that is what makes us what we are. Nobody but Americans can understand what American character is, and yet can we really understand ourselves?

It took us one century to settle and colonize this country, the next century was spent in getting rid of the Dutch and French, the third in establishing the nation and settling the difficulties between the north and the south, and we now have things on a national basis which does not seem at present to be threatened by any catastrophe. It is true we have anarchy and socialism to deal with, but this is no evil peculiar to us, for all nations have to deal with them. We are still in the flush of manhood and we have a future ahead of us.

We have entered the fourth century of our existence with a big question mark staring us in the face. We pride ourselves on our political liberty, but if what we call political liberty is found in the cities, it is a peculiar liberty. We have now arrived at a time when we must correct the evils that have arisen in our governments, and there are many of them, if only in our city governments. It is doubtful if the makers of the constitution would recognize it if they were to see it now, for it certainly has been stretched. We cannot say that the stretching has been harmful, for it is better that it be stretched than that it should break.

We should keep high ideals, whether new or old; if we don't, we will decline. We ought not to put men at the head of the nation's affairs whose honor can in any way be questioned.

Hand-To-Hand Fighting

CIVIL WAR BATTLES THAT WERE DECIDED BY PHYSICAL SUPERIORITY OF THE MEN

"I notice that a good many men are still in doubt as to the utility of the bayonet and seem reluctant to believe there were any hand-to-hand conflicts during the war. There was one at Jonesboro, in which one bayonet was used effectively. Our brigade had charged a battery and the men were among the guns when one of the confederate gunners running back to his gun was just in the act of firing it when a man of the Seventy-eighth Illinois took in the situation. There was a cluster of 20 men directly in front of that gun and a pull of the string meant death to most of them. The confederate had been ordered to surrender and the men near the gun supposed he had surrendered, when he changed his mind and decided to give us one more shot for luck.

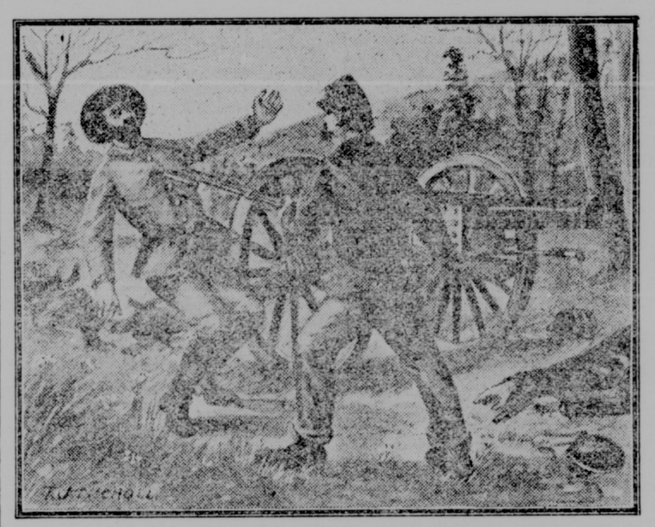
"It was a brave thing to do, but it was a terrible thing for us and required quick action. My comrade of the Seventy-eighth Illinois was as quick as a flash of lightning, it seemed to me. He thrust at the man in a way to push him back from the gun, and his bayonet went clear through the confederate's body. We left him, as we supposed, dead, but at a later date I found him in one of our hospitals at Atlanta, by the side of one of our own men wounded the same day. He got well, and if living to-day knows that bayonets were used during the war in a very reckless way."

"There was another hand-to-hand tussle in the fight on the Sand Town road in the Atlanta campaign. We charged the confederate works and climbed on top just as the confederates fired a volley. The bullets went over our heads and the next minute we looked down on the Louisiana Tigers with empty guns in their hands. All our men had held their fire and we thrust the muzzles of our rifles in the very faces of the men below us and demanded them to surrender. Some few attempting to push the guns away were shot, but the most of them surrendered without ceremony. As one of them said, they knew their time had come and that the question of surrendering was not open to debate."

"I had some doubts," said the sergeant, "about hand-to-hand struggles during the first year of the war. Our regiment did good work at Shiloh, but didn't come to close quarters with the enemy. We made our mark at Perryville, but not at close range, and I wondered if any battle was fought in which men strove against each other within reach of bayonet or sword. At Stone river we charged at a run against a confederate line. I expected the old thing to happen and the enemy to break. I shook from head to foot as I saw the confederates start on a run and at a charge bayonets to meet us. I could see the hair and eyes and facial expression of the confederates as they came steadily and swiftly toward us. I remember one fellow wore a red comfort around his neck and that the ends were flapping in a very ridiculous way as he ran.

"I could see a short man making his legs do their best, and a long-legged fellow in advance. I felt this thing couldn't go on without bayonet striking bayonet and without the lines crashing together. The crash came sooner than I expected, and not quite in the way I expected. About half of our men went through or over the confederate line, some of us coming down on our heads and others on our feet. It was undignified and confusing, and when we turned we found men in gray standing back to back fighting both ways. There was little or no shooting, but a giving and taking of hard blows, and a good deal of rough-and-tumble scrapping. Finally one of the confederates shouted: 'What's the use? Why in thunder don't somebody ask us to surrender?' Thereupon all our fellows shouted 'Surrender!' and down went the muskets of the confederates caught between our lines.

"There wasn't an unbruised man in our company, but we felt like birds when the confederates threw down their guns and shed their cartridge boxes and belts. They went to the rear, and we went slam-bang into another confederate line, which, yielding at first, rallied and drove us back. Then we rushed them and broke their line, and I never felt happier in my life when I saw the men in gray scamper away into the cedars. At Chickamauga we waited for the confederates to charge, and the broke us all up. Some of our boys were so completely knocked out that they ran a mile like scared horses, in the belief that the whole army had been routed and that the only thing to do was to get off the field. Then they slowed up, came to their senses, turned and ran the other way, and, falling in anywhere, fought like wildcats to the end, crashing at odd times into the confederate lines with the devil-may-care insolence of football players in a tussle."



"HIS BAYONET WENT CLEAR THROUGH THE CONFEDERATE'S BODY."

VETERANS NEVER AT WAR.

Soldiers Who Did Not Reach the Front in the Civil War, Drawing Pensions.

The apotheosis of the pension business was reached recently in Washington with an award to a member of the Metropolitan rifles, who was never a member of the army or navy of the United States, regular or volunteer, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

There has never been a question as to the title of veterans of actual war, civil, Mexican or Spanish-American who were at the front and in actual battle, wounded and rendered helpless and dependent, to receive the bounty of the government. These conditions have been broadened of late years. Men who guarded prisoners in the safe seclusion of Johnson's island, men who served bravely in the home guards, men who made the railway trip to the capital and loitered behind the fortifications for 30 or 60 days to relieve soldiers who were needed at the firing line, all these have been granted pensions to a greater or less extent on the general ground that they are now old men, many of them helpless, and that having shown their willingness to do something in the business of the civil war they are entitled to some gratitude in dollars and cents. Even young men who spent their summer vacation in the quite seclusion of Chickamauga park at government expense in 1898 and who never saw anything more hostile than a mosquito have been given money on one pretext or another from the pension fund after some principle not generally understood, but for which the taxpayers are apparently willing to stand.

But when all is said and done the Metropolitan rifles of Washington appear to constitute the limit. In 1861 there was unrest in Washington while the city was waiting for the advent of real troops who had been called out to defend it. There was an independent military company or so about, composed of citizens who were, like most of the people here, southern in sympathy. But it was at last decided advisable for the internal quite of the capital to put one or two of these independent companies under arms for the moral effect it might have on the more unpleasant elements of the population. Moreover, such a step would free the few regulars present for more important outpost duty.

The Metropolitan rifles were ordered under arms, as the sheriff of any county in Ohio might order an independent military company under arms as a posse for the temporary emergency. It was not expected that any rebels would stray across Long bridge that early in the day. Had they done so the police force would undoubtedly have placed them under arrest for carry concealed weapons or for disorderly conduct.

But the Metropolitan rifles paraded. They were never mustered into the service of the government that any record notes. They did the work that Sousa's band did when it escorted volunteer troops to the Cleveland depot in 1898. But a member of this organization has proved his claim to the title of "union veteran" with all the privileges and rights specific legislation grants to such. The decision was based on the fact that he was "at the front" because there were no union troops between his station and that of the enemy and that he was under arms.

FARM AND GARDEN

PROPAGATION OF TREES.

Process of Root Grafting Explained Step by Step, in Language That All Can Understand.

Root grafting and such work is done by nurserymen in winter when little outdoor work can be done. Root grafting is largely practiced in growing apple trees. If skillfully done in the early winter so that the stock and scion may become more or less united before planting in the spring, trees grown by this method will be as valuable as those grown by budding and are grown much more cheaply.

The farmer or orchardist who is planning for future planting may, if skillful with knife, by securing apple seedlings, root-graft them during the leisure hours of February, and by planting in a rich soil produce trees that are more valuable than he can buy, because they are so near the place of planting that they can be transplanted without much exposure to sunlight and drying winds.

No. 1 seedling apple stocks, Fig. 1, may be purchased at $6 to $10 per 1,000. All dirt should be washed from them, so that the knife will not be dulled when cutting them. If not ready to use them at once they should be kept in moss or sawdust in a moist place at a temperature as near 32 degrees as possible.

Scions should be cut and stored in the same way. The scions should be the last season's growth from the outside shoots of trees that are producing large crops of desirable fruit.

Get twine or coarse, strong thread saturated by drawing it through hot grafting wax, and strips of cloth or cheap tape one-half inch wide waxed in the same way for tying and covering the grafted surface. Use a thin sharp knife, ground with the bevel on one side, as shown by section in Fig. 2. A common shoe knife is generally most satisfactory. After grinding, the edge should be made fine and keen upon a hone or oil stone, so as to make a clean cut, as success depends more upon the condition of the knife than any other one thing.

When all is ready with roots, scions, knife, string and waxed cloth or on a bench and seated in a chair of just the right height, a root is taken in hand and a cut made at the collar, a, Fig. 1, as shown in Fig. 3, the point a showing the tongue that is cut next. A scion is then taken up and a similar cut and tongue made, Fig. 4 a, when the root and scion are placed together and the two tongues pressed firmly as in Fig. 5.

The next step is tying the grafts with the waxed thread, Fig. 6, and covering the whole with the strips of waxed cloth or tape, Fig. 7. When a large number of grafts are to be made, 15 to 25 roots are cut at once, after which the scions are cut and fitted to them. Tying is often done after several hundred grafts have been made.

After the grafts are all made and waxed, they are packed in sand, in boxes, so that they shall stand upright until planting time. The box, a little deeper than the length of the grafts, is placed on the end or side and a thin layer of moist sand or soil spread over it. Then a layer of grafts is put on this, then more sand, pressing it very firmly about the grafts, especially when the cuts come together, and so on until the box is full or all the grafts packed, when it should be placed in an upright position.

The grafts keep and make the best union if kept at about 33 degrees, and should not be allowed to get too dry or be wet too much.—Farm and Home.

HINTS FOR COWKEEPERS.

The cow, as well as any other farm stock, will pay a better profit if treated kindly.

The best cream raising can only be secured by keeping the milk sweet as long as possible.

Loss of flesh and shrinkage of milk follows neglect, and starvation follows rations of improper food.

A combination of bran, oil meal and corn meal makes one of the best rations for dairy cows in winter.

Garget most often sets in after calving, and this is nearly always due to a failure to get the udder dry.

Milk regularly twice a day. If a cow does not give a sufficient amount of milk to warrant this, let her go dry.

Many of the cows kept on the farm cannot, either by feed or care, be induced to yield a profitable amount of milk. The sooner this class is fattened and marketed, the better for the profits of the farm.

The best foods to make blood are the best for milk production, and the cow to make good milk needs good blood. That can best and cheapest be made by generous, comfortable treatment comfortable quarters, pure air, pure water and wholesome, nutritious food.—Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

GROWING ASPARAGUS.

Time to Start a Patch Is in the Early Days of Spring When Growth First Starts.

A grower of asparagus writes: First of all, I have to say that if I had a piece of warm, sandy, well-drained loam available for the purpose I would think the best time to start an aspargus patch is at once, without more delay than necessary to secure a lot of good plants, after the spring growth starts. Usually I would prefer to grow my own plants, and grow them in good, rich loam, and properly pushed and thinned in order to get good, large, one-year-old plants, which I think are far better than the average run of two-year old plants that one can buy.

I make the ground very rich; in fact, it cannot be made too rich. I give each plant plenty of room, not less than a dozen square feet. I plant them deep, so that a shallow running plow will not injure the crown.

To renew an old plantation, plow it over shallow, applying manure or any good commercial vegetable or potato manure containing a good percentage of potash. Any of our standard varieties may be used.

Palmetto seems more liable than others to resist the rust attacks. Columbian Mammoth white is good.

If you wish to raise your own plants next year, sow the seed thinly in drills, the drills being a foot or 14 inches apart, by hand or with a garden drill. Do this early in the spring, while the ground is yet quite moist. The seeds are large and hard and require a good deal of moisture to germinate.

In a dry time the seed may be soaked for a few hours in hot water. It will then sprout much more promptly. Clipping a corner of the hard shell off each seed will serve to hasten the process of germination.—N. Y. Farmer.

UNIQUE TREE TRIPLETS.

One Is a Shell-Bark Hickory, the Second a White Oak and the Third a Sugar Tree.

Mr. G. W. Hatten, of Egypt, W. Va., sends a pencil sketch of three trees growing as if from the same root. He saw the account of the twin trees near Philadelphia, mentioned in the New Curiosity Shop two or three weeks ago. In his letter he says:

"These trees are found on the farm of Strother Hatten, on Elijah's creek, in Wayne county, W. Va. There are three distinct trees of differen varieties. The one on the left is a shell bark hickory, that in the center is a white oak and the one on the left is a sugar tree. The trunks are joined firmly for a distance of about three feet from the ground, where they fork in three distinct trees. Near the ground they present a flat trunk about three feet broad and about 12 or 14 inches thick.

The hickory and sugar trees are in a thrifty condition and are gradually pressing the oak so firmly that at some future day the oak will surely die between the grip of its rivals for existence. The curiosity of the combination is that the hickory is bearing the choicest nuts, the oak the acorn and the sugar yields its sweetness.

REGARDING PEAR BLIGHT.

Eradicate the Germs by Cutting and Burning All Infected Twigs and Branches.

The New Jersey state horticultural report gives hints in regard to pear blight, which those who are intending to plant out pear orchards, or who have them, will do well to bear in mind. The first caution is to manure and cultivate the tree so that it will not grow too rapidly. Trees that are highly fertilized with nitrogenous manures are especially liable to blight. This would bar out heavy manuring with horse, sheep or hen manure, and the plowing under of clover, cow peas, rape or almost any green crop. Manure only sufficiently to secure a good crop and no more.

Exterminate the blight germs by cutting and burning all infected twigs and branches as soon as seen. Do the same by any blight seen on apple, quince, crab, mountain ash, service berry and hawthorn, as it is the same disease and will spread to nearby trees, and sometimes a quarter of a mile at least in favorable winds. Cut them out when seen, and make thorough inspection and clean up before spring. Then keep a sharp outlook when the leaves start for any place missed or where cutting was not deep enough. Then cut two or three inches below any wood that seems diseased, and keep the knife sterilized by dipping in a diluted solution of carbolic acid.—Midland Farmer.

A cow is profitable just as long as she gives a profitable return for the food she consumes.

MARCUS ALONZO HANNA.

The soul of Marcus A. Hanna has winged its flight across life's narrow vale into the limitless expanse of celestial glory. Valiant was the struggle, fought with characteristic courage that acknowledge defeat only when every resource of science had been exhausted, and life's flame had dwindled to a fitful spark. Marcus A. Hanna died as he had lived. His marvelous courage, springing from a consciousness of virtue which had rendered him superior to the fear of reproach, contempt or opposition, when in pursuit or defense of the right, became the more pronounced with the hour of passing. Death presented no terrors to the dying statesman. It seemed "but as the passage out of prison into a palace; out of sea of troubles into a heaven of rest." Dissolution merely pressaged the eternal reward which his earthly work and sacrifices for the betterment of humanity had won.

The prominence with which the dead statesman has been identified with the commercial and national progress of the American republic is known throughout the world. Nor was it a greatness thrust upon him but the grand achievement of great ability, unswerving fidelity and tireless energy. Our nation is vastly better for his having lived.

MR. RUDISILL'S RESIGNATION.

In printing the resolutions passed by the Park Association upon the resignation of Mr. Rudisill as manager, the editor of the Mountain Chautauqua, Dr. W. L. Davidson, supplements the action of the Park Board in the following manner:

The editor desires to add a word in appreciation of Mr. Rudisill. He was a painstaking, conscientious, indefatigable worker. In recent years too many burdens were laid upon him. He was made responsible for too many things. No man could have hoped to carry steadily all he undertook. His position was a difficult one. Many conflicting interests had to be harmonized; law had to be enforced, and he was made responsible for it. If you think that an easy thing to do in a place like Mountain Lake Park and keep everybody sweet, try it. Yet he did it faithfully without fear or favor. Things grew under his hand, and he has the satisfaction of looking back and seeing much which has been accomplished where his work helped to make possible the glad results. Those who know him best were conscious of the heart and high purpose he put into his work. He tried to do what he felt to be right let come what would.

Rev. Thomas S. Long, a well-known minister of the Baltimore Conference, who has had a career marked with success, has been chosen Manager as Mr. Rudisill's successor. There is high hope that he will be the right man in the right place. We wish for him a happy time among us and great success in his work. He is to be simply and only the Superintendent of the Mountain Lake Park Association. That is much the better plan.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

A series of fair and bracing winter days were given us last week, and with the coming of last Sabbath evening the mercury rose and brought a slight shower of rain, which rapidly turned to snow, and today there is a white covering over all the earth.

S. O. Wiley, who went to Baltimore some weeks ago, came home again last Saturday evening.

Miss Mary Wiley returned to Moscow today, after a visit of two weeks with her parents.

Grand-mother Metts, aged 86 years, died at her home near this place on last Friday evening after a very brief illness. The remains were interred in the cemetery at this place on Monday afternoon, after ceremonies conducted by Rev. Stroup.

Mr. Simon Orndorf had a horse badly injured by falling on the ice one day last week.

The excitement over the Baltimore fire was felt in our midst, owing to the fact that one of our most respected citizens is employed in the smitten portion of the city.

Mr. C. E. Ellithrope was on a business trip to Oakland last Saturday.

Mr. Jacob Fazenbaker, was removed from his home near here, to an institution, where he will be treated for an affection of the mind.

The Literary society at this place doing good work, and the influence of such societies is always good, if held under judicious management.

PASSED TO THE GREAT BEYOND.

Senator Hanna Has Responded to the Call of the Divine Being.

END CAME MONDAY EVENING AT 6.

His Was a Life of Absolute Devotion to Home, Country and Fellowmen —Sketch of His Life—He Was 68 Years Old.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 15.—Hon. Marcus A. Hanna, United States Senator from Ohio, died tonight at 6:40 o'clock, in his apartments in the Hotel Arlington, after a fortnight's illness from typhoid fever. At his bedside were the members of his family, except his wife, who, prostrated with grief, was compelled to retire by order of her physician.

Comparatively few of the politicians, Senators, Representatives and friends of Senator Hanna who crowded the hallways about the suite and Secretary Dover's room were on the second floor of the house when Mr. Dover announced the end at 6.40 p. m. Senator Kettredge, Congressman Dick and Captain J. C. Donnelson were in Mr. Dover's office. They received the long expected information quietly, being informed by several reporters, to whom Mr. Dover signaled the news by the wave of his hand and the words: "It's all over at 20 minutes of seven."

Marcus Alonzo Hanna was born in New Lisbon, Columbiana county, O., September 24th, 1837. Dr. Leonard Hanna, father of Marcus, was a physician, and one of the prominent citizens of New Lisbon. Young Hanna spent his boyhood days in that place. In 1852 Dr. Hanna moved with his family to Cleveland, Ohio., and there founded a wholesale grocery firm of Hanna, Garrettson & Co. Marcus attended the common schools in Cleveland and the Western Reserve College at Hudson, Ohio. After graduating there, at the age of 20, in 1857, he began his business career, taking a clerkship in his father's grocery firm. It was a strange coincidence that at this time the Hanna firm was having extensive dealings with the firm of Joseph H Watson & Co., of Massillon, O., in whose employ was Thomas C. Platt, now United States Senator from New York. Mr. Platt was bookkeeper for the Watson firm, and young Hanna and Platt wrote many business letters to each other for their firms, but were both unknown to each other.

The Hanna family traces its origin back to the thirteenth century, when Patrich Hannay, a resident of the southwest coast of Scotland, built a castle since known in history as Castle Sorby. The family came into prominence about the time of the War of the Rosos, and members of the Hannay family wielded a commanding influence in the affairs of England. The Hannays occupied Castle Sorby until the close of the seventeenth century. When land was offered in Ireland free to all Scotchmen who would come over and settle upon it the Hannays were in the front rank, and one branch of the family became Scotch-Irish. It was this branch of the family that afterwards came to this country.

In the fall of 1764 Thomas Hanna, the great, great grandfather of Marcus A. Hanna, came to America and arrived in Philadelphia. He settled in Southern Pennsylvania and began the work of felling the forests. He lived only a year after his arrival, leaving two sons, Robert and Thomas, the former the great grandfather of Marcus. According to the customs of the day these two boys were bound out until of age, and Robert became a member of a family belonging to the Society of Friends. Robert married and moved from Pennsylvania to Lynchburg, Va., where he resided during the revolutionary war. As he was a Quaker he took no part in the hostilities, but this did not prevent him from dispensing charity to the soldiers of the Continental Army. One day the old Quaker went into the field where there was a skirmish, and, finding four wounded men, brought them to his house and nursed them until they were strong enough to rejoin their regiments.

Benjamin Hanna, the grandfather of Marcus, was born in Lynchburg, and removed in 1802 to Columbiana county, O. Here he cleared a farm of 80 acres and built a house. In 1803 he married Rachel Rickson, and continued farming until his health failed. Seeing the great need of a store in the neighborhood, together with some neighbors, combined their capital and established a country store at Salem, where he remained for two years, and then moved to New Lisbon, where he opened a store of his own. Leonard Hanna, the father of Marcus, was born in Columbiana county in 1806. He studied and practiced medicine for a number of years until his health failed, and then he moved to Cleveland, where, as stated, he established the wholesale grocery firm.

Marcus Alonzo Hanna was the second of seven children. He was 15 years of age when his father moved to Cleveland and was 25 years old when his father died, and the entire management of the affairs of the grocery business fell upon his shoulders. He represented that interest in the firm until 1877, when the business was closed up. He then became a member of the firm of Rhodes and Company, the head of the firm being his father-in-law and engaged in the iron and coal business for 10 years, when the firm was changed to M. A. Hanna and Company, Marcus becoming the head of firm, which still exists. He has been identified with the lake carrying business, been interested in vessels on the lakes and dealers in coal, iron ore and pig iron, ever since that time.

His firm employed from 6,000 to 8,000 men, and it was always a pleasure to Mr. Hanna to point to the fact that those interested under his control had never been disturbed by labor troubles. In fact, he was idolized by his men, and always maintained the most friendly relations with his employes.

In 1864 he married Miss C. Augusta Rhodes, daughter of Daniel P. Rhodes, of Cleveland. Mr. Hanna was president of the Union National Bank of Cleveland, president of the Cleveland City Railway Company, and the only federal appointment he ever accepted was that of director of the Union Pacific Railway Company in 1885, to which he was appointed by President Cleveland.

It is not generally known that Mr. Hanna had a military record, for although his family were Quakers, when Abraham Lincoln issued his call for troops Marcus Alonzo Hanna enlisted and served four months in Washington.

Mr. Hanna took an interest in local politics for sometime, and in 1884, as well as 1888 and 1886, he was a delegate from Ohio to the National Republican convention, and from 1884 was a member of the Republican state executive committee of Ohio.

In 1896 he was elected chairman of the Republican National committee, a position which he held until his death, during which time he managed both of the campaigns which resulted in the election of President McKinley in 1896 and 1900. On March 5, 1897, he was appointed United States Senator by Governor Bushnell, of Ohio, to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of John Sherman from the Senate, who resigned to accept the position of secretary of state in President McKinley's first cabinet. He took his seat in the Senate on March 5, 1897, and in January, 1898, he was elected by the Ohio legislature for the short term, ending March 3, 1899, and also for the succeeding full term, which will expire on March 3, 1905. He was reelected last January by the Ohio legislature for another term of six years, receiving the highest vote ever given a Senatorial candidate.

Mr. Hanna first met William McKinley in 1870. The meeting was peculiar. It was in a little courthouse in Masilden, when William McKinley, as a pale, slender young lawyer, appeared before the court to argue the cases of 23 men arrested as incendiaries, Marcus A. Hanna was one of the prosecuting witnesses, and so the two men first met as opponents. The eloquence and energy of the young lawyer made a deep impression upon Mr. Hanna, but they did not become close friends until 1876, when Major McKinley was nominated by the Republicans of his district for Congress. The Republicans were having a hard fight and were not well provided with campaign funds. Mr. Hanna came to McKinley's assistance, and greatly through his aid McKinley's canvass was promoted, and Mr. Hanna had the pleasure of seeing his friend go to Congress. There was only three years difference between the ages of Senator Hanna and President McKinley, and they did not become intimate and close friends until Major McKinley went to congress.

An old negro in a neighborhood town arose in prayer meeting and said: "Bredderin and sisterin, I been a mighty mean nigger in my time. I had a heaper ups and downs—'specially downs—since I jined the church. I stold chickens and water millins. I cussed. I got druuk. I shot craps. I slashed udder coons wid a razir, and I done er sight er udder things, but, thank the good Lawd, bredderin and sisterin, I never yet lost my religion."

A TRAGIC DEATH.

Eliza Harvey Killed on the Plane at Barnum, W. Va.

It is seldom that a sadder death than that of Eliza Harvey, daughter of Ellen B. and Gus. B. Harvey, of Walnut Bottom is recorded. On Saturday morning this little girl, beautiful in appearance, of most attractive manners and in the spring time of life, left her home for Barnum, W Va., a little town at a distance of three miles, where she went to make a few necessary purchases and was on her way home when death claimed her as its victim. She was ascending the incline above Barnum plane and was struck by a run-a-way coal car that was descending the incline which killed her instantly. Her sister Florence, who accompanied her, escaped with a few painful bruises, which she received in trying to save the precious life of her beloved sister. It seemed she had been conversing with the angels the night before and was unusually happy that morning before leaving home, but instead of returning to her earthly home she returned to her heavenly home, free from all sorrow and pain and joined her happy little brother who had crossed over the river a few months before, and together they joined in the heavenly chorus, and are now watching and beckoning for their loved ones on earth to meet them in their happy home.

Funeral services were held at Walnut Bottom Monday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, Rev. Yost officiating. Interment was made in the family graveyard. Among the many relatives of the deceased present were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Louis Yeager, Davis, W. Va., Mrs. G. B. Sapp, Thomas, W. Va., Mr. Joseph Barricks, Weaver, W. Va., and Mr. G. L. Harvey, Mt. Savage, Md.

Eliza was aged 11 years, 6 months and 24 days and was a most ambitious child at her age. She will not only be missed by her loved ones at home and at school but by all who knew her. She leaves a mother, father, three sisters and three brothers to mourn their loss. The bereaved family have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community.

How sweet are the prospects of home,
Where my loved ones again I shall see:
There in sorrow no longer to roam,
They are watching and waiting for me.
Dearest friends that I love in regions above,
Are now beckoning and waiting for me.

R. C. McCandish and his little daughter, will spend Sunday and Monday with their friends in Piedmont.

Jasper Fike, teacher of the Frazee Ridge school, was in town Saturday.

H. H. Flick, principal of the Selbysport school, is in town quite often.

Miss Blanche Frantz of Oakland, is here visiting friends.

Rev. D. H. Friend, of Sang Run, spent a few days with his daughter, Mrs. D. S. Custer.

Geo. D. Browning who was here several days the past week on business, has returned to his home at Swallow Falls.

Misses Ida and Agnes Mason, of our town, are visiting friends in Frostburg at this writing.

L. E. Friend is suffering from an attack of rheumatism.

Mrs. John T. Garey is, we are glad to say improving from an attack of fever.

The band mill which has been idle for the past two months, will soon resume work again.

It was noticed that the attendance at the Sunday school last Sunday was much larger than usual. It is to be hoped that the people of this town will become more interested in the work of the Sabbath school and that the attendance will continue to increase.

The teachers of this school have introduced a new feature known as the "School City." Generally speaking it is new except in city schools, but thus far it seems to have worked admirably.

Valentine Day has come and gone. Some of our young people were delighted to be remembered while others would rather have been forgotten.

Our town was much excited on Sunday morning last by a mad dog passing through it. Unfortunately a little boy of Marshall Fike's was bitten before the ferocious raby could be killed. The child has been sent to Baltimore for treatment.

Incorporation is a question that is being much agitated.

Ask to See THE REAL Safety Razor.

We Recommend It as the Only Good Thing in the Market.

NO REAL Safety Razor has been made heretofore. What have been sold as safeties, were either scraping machines, with a small piece of steel, hollow ground on a 7-inch stone, which you cannot strop without a stropping machine, nor hone without a honing machine; or else an ordinary razor with a guard, which the one who uses it cannot strop, because the blade is not stationary in his hand, and he usually dulls the razor when he attempts to take the guard off or put it on. The Real has the following advantages over all others: It is the simplest. It is a full-concaved razor, ground on a 1½-inch stone. It has a stationary handle, in proper position for stropping, honing and shaving. It does not break the hair off in a painful manner, as all scrapers do; it cuts with a draw cut, the same as any fine razor does. It is easily and quickly cleaned and stropped. The razor cannot close on your hand while stropping. It can be used right or left hand, and changed in a second. Last, but not leact, of all, it is the very best quality razor that can be made—"THE REAL" thing.

Why not try it and be convinced?
The Real is absolutely guaranteed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

Calvert Coal and Iron Company, et. al.,
vs.
Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines, et. al.
No. 1252 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree annulling, cancelling and setting aside a pretended deed from the Calvert Coal and Iron Company to one Charles O. Beaumont, Trustee, dated 10th day of May, 1902, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 597, one of the Land records of Garrett county, Maryland.

The bill states that a certain Robert A Parrish, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was, in his lifetime, the owner of 575 shares of the capital stock of the plaintiff Calvert Coal and Iron Company, which whole capital stock contisted of 5000 shares and that Calvert Coal and Iron Company is the owner in fee of a tract of land in Garrett county, Maryland, known as Lot No. 3 of the sub-division of "Beatty's Plains," containing 900 acres more or less, and is in possession thereof and has been in exclusive and continuous possession of the same for a long term of years under a deed from Joseph T. Thornton, trustee, duly recorded in Liber W. H. T. No. 11, folio 51, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, a copy of said deed being filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit A;" that on the 22nd of February, 1901, the said Robert A. Parish, being owner of the aforesaid shares of stock made and executed his last will and testament; on or about the 20th day of March, 1901, died without having revoked the same and said will was duly admitted to probate by the Register of Wills of the City and County of Philadelphia, Penna., and is now of record of record in the office of said Register of Wills in Will Book No. 224, page 581, and that Letters Testamentary were granted thereon unto the plaintiff, Marie Gaul, the executrix therein named, and duly certified copies of said will and a certificate of the grant of said letters are filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibits B and C," respectively. The bill further charges that the said defendants, Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines, Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, and the other defendents whose names to the complainants are unknown have conspired together with the intent and purpose to fraudulently, illegally and unlawfully deprive the complainants of their right and title to the aforesaid tract of land and charge that the said defendants above named and the other defendans whose names to the plaintiffs are unknown have assumed to act as the officers, stockholders, directors and agents of the plaintiff Calvert Coal and Iron Company and have attempted to exercise the rights conferred by law upon said plaintiff and have assumed to exercise the franchises thereof, all of which acts on the part of the said defendants above named are illegal and void, they the said defendants having no interest whatever in said property, stock, franchises and rights of Calvert Coal and Iron Company, and that the deed to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, dated the 10th day of May, 1902, purporting to have been executed by Winslow Mason fraudulently representing himself to be the President and Charles F. Haines, fraudulently representing himself and pretending to be the duly constituted attorney and agent of Calvert Coal and Iron Company, whereby they undertook to convey the aforesaid tract of land to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, and which deed is recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 597, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and a copy of which is filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit D," is a fraud and constitutes a cloud upon the title of Calvert Coal and Iron Company to said land, the stock of which corporation with the exception of twenty-five shares belongs to and is the sole property of the said plaintiff Marie Gaul, executrix and sole devisee under the will of said Robert A. Parrish, deceased, and that the said pretended deed, unless set aside and canceled by the Court of Equity, will deprive the complainants of all their rights and interests of every kind to which they are entitled in said property and will strip the complainants of all said property and will bestow the same upon the said defendants above named and their co-conspirators, whose names are to the complainants unknown and who have assumed the power and undertaken to exercise the franchises of Calvert Coal and Iron Company and who have no right and title to the same.

That the pretended deed to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, is wholly without legal consideration, is fraudulent and void and should be set aside, cancelled and annulled by this Court.

The bill then prays that the said pretended deed purporting to have been made and executed on the 10th day of May, 1902, by said Calvert Coal and Iron Company, through its pretended president, Winslow Mason, and Charles F. Haines, its pretended attorney in fact and agent, to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, may be annulled, cancelled and set aside by the decree of this Court, for general relief and for an order of publication against the said Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines and Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, who are non-residents of this State, and also an order of publication according to law, requiring the unknown persons and parties who have assumed to act in connection with the above named defendants as officers, stockholders, directors and agents of said Calvert Coal and Iron Company, of the object and substance of this bill and warning them to be and appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor on or before a certain day to be named therein to show cause, if any, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

It is thereupon, this 11th day of February, 1904, ordered, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 12th day of March, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 29th day of March next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Messrs. Isaac Thompson and Chas. E. Hilleary, of District No. 8, were visitors to Oakland yesterday.

Services at St. Mark's Lutheran church next Sabbath as follows: Sunday School at 9.30 a. m.; Preaching at 10.40 p. m.; Preaching at 7.30 p. m.; Christian Endeavor at 6.30 p. m.; m. Prayer service on Wednesday at 7.30 p. m.

The bi-anual Convention of the Epworth League of the Fourth General Conference District, embodying delegates from five or six States, will be held at Mountain Lake Park the last week in June. A great company of earnest young people are expected.

Rev. Thomas Long, the recently elected superintendent of the Park, and Rev. T. D. Richards, of Germantown, Md., were in Oakland yesterday attending a meeting of the Park Directors. Both gentlemen paid this office a brief visit during their stay in Oakland.

Mr. J. Arthur White, son of James W. White, Esq., of Oakland, has embarked in the insurance business at Keyser, West Va., having associated with him a young man of Grafton. Mr. White's many friends in Oakland trust that he will make a success of the business.

Dr. W. E. Getty, who is also a telegraph operator, has been appointed by the Western Union as their representative here. He has moved his office to the second floor of the Citizens National Bank building, where he will look after the wants of his dental patrons and the telegraph company as well.—Myersdale Republican.

There are now two cases of small pox in Piedmont, the one mentioned last week, John Gavin and Miss Boyles, both in the same building. Another case of varaloid is reported at the east end of town, better known as "Rat Tail." This case is one of the Hileman girls, which is a very mild case, so we are told by Dr. D. J. Long, who is the attending physician of all three cases.—Piedmont Independent.

By the first of June next, the Park Association will have completed a two story building at the railroad station. The main building will be 25x50 feet. The first story will have a nine foot ceiling; and the second story a 12 foot ceiling. These two floors will be used for store-rooms. On the west side of this building will be a story L. The first story will be arranged for a restaurant; and the second story for the post office. The second story will have an entrance from the railroad platform, with large show windows. The old building now used by the post office and H. N. Cuppett's store will be torn down.

Mrs. Jeffreys Dead,

Baltimore and Ohio Agent T. N. Jeffreys, of Grafton, received the intelligence of the death of his aged mother, which occured at the home place near Tunnelton. Mrs. Jeffreys was 77 years of age and was the mother of Messrs. J. P. and Thomas Jeffreys, of Grafton; Alfred Jeffreys, a Baltimore and Ohio telegrapher at Altamont, and M. M. Jeffreys, superintendent of the national cemetery at Philadelphia.

KILLED AT HUTTON.

Joseph Henry Wilt Met Instant Death Thursday Evening.

Last Thursday evening about five o'clock the life of Joseph Henry Wilt, brother of George W. and Jesse Wilt, of near Oakland, was snuffed out in an insnant and in a most horrible manner.

The unfortunate man was employed by the Pretson Lumber and Coal Company as brakesman on its train. At Hutton he attempted to jump from the car to throw a switch when he fell to the rails in front of the wheels which passed over his prostrate body, killing him almost instantly. His brother, Andrew J. Wilt, was the engineer in charge of the train and this sad circumstance made it all the more painful for him.

The deceased leaves six brothers and two sisters.

His remains were interred in the Oakland cemetery Sunday morning after services in the M. E. church at Crellin, where the deceased resided.

DIED.

NEWMAN—At her home one mile south of Oakland, after a short illness of pneumonia, Mrs. Hattie L, wife of Mr. Charles J. Newman, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William White. The deceased was born three miles south of Oakland Oct. 6th, 1868, and died on the 15th inst., being 35 years 4 months and 9 days old. Mrs. Newman was converted when about 16 years of age and joined the M. E. church of which she remained a consistent member until her death. Besides her husband she leaves six children, of whom the youngest is but a week or two old, mother, father, two brothers, and one sister, many relatives and numberless friends. She was married about twelve years ago, her husband being at that time in employ of this office. Mrs. Newman was an energetic Christian lady. At all times she was bright and cheerful and spread happiness all about her. To know her was to like and respect her for her many noble qualities. Her funeral took place yesterday morning from St. Paul's M. E. church, the interment being made in the Oakland cemetery after services conducted by Revs. Miller, of the Presbyterian church and Davis, of the M.E. church. To the bereaved husband and orphaned children as well as the sorrow stricken father and mother of the deceased the sympathy of the entire community is extended.

HOYE—Just as we go to press we are informed of the death of Mrs. Hoye, widow of the late Edward Hoye, at her late residence in Oakland, at 1.30 o'clock today, in the 80th year of her age. The deceased has been an invalid for many years. We will give a more extended notice in a future issue.

HAUSER.

Valentine Day has passed and everybody seems to have gotten a good supply.

Frank Chase has been ill for the past week but is now slowly recovering.

Charley Best was visiting Miss Flora Mosser Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Reed were visiting Mrs. F. C. Fowler Sunday.

Charles Haas was visiting Guy Paugh Saturday and Sundav.

Joseph Rembold, of near here, has completed moving his new mill from Oakland. Mr. R's old mill was burned last spring.

Mr. Ernest Hauser was calling on Miss Merle Fowler one day last week.

Preaching at Red House next Sunday at 2.30 p. m., by Rev. Manges of Oakland. After preaching a collection will be taken for foreign missions.

Miss Dessa Mosser was visiting Miss Ethel Gnagy the past week.

David Roth is hauling logs to Peter Speicher's mill.

Master Russell Roth is very ill. We hope for his recovery.

Robert Shaffer has returned from George Mosser's where he had been visiting last week.

Big Lumber Operations.

At Wildell, a station on the Coal & Coke Railroad, 32 miles south of Elkins, West Va., extensive preparations are being made for the development of a 12,0000-acre tract of the finest timber land along the line of the railroad. The property is owned by Messrs. Merritt and M. N. Wilson, of this county and as soon as the nequisite buildings and mills are erected several hundred men will be put to work.

Dead From Smallpox.

Miss Nettie Whetsell, daughter of Isaac Whetsell, died at Rowlesburg, W. Va., from smallpox. While delirious she jumped out of an upstairs window and having nothing on but her night clothes was exposed to the cold, she took cold with the disease, causing her death after about ten days illness.

Masonic Notice.

All members of Oakland Lodge No. 192, A., F. & A. Masons, are requested and urged to attend the next regular communication to be held on Thursday evening, Feb. 25th.

BECKMAN.

Please allow us space in your valuable paper for a few items.

Mrs. Theo. Beckman, who fell on the ice and broke her arm, is getting along very nicely under the skillful treatment of Dr. C. J. Fazenbaker.

Mr. A. R. Barnard met with a very painful accident one day last week by splitting his knee with an axe.

We are sorry to learn of the illness of Mrs. J. E. Barnard and also of the illness of her daughter, Mrs. Daniel O'Brien.

Mr. John I. O'Brien was visiting at Mr. Elijah Howell's Sunday.

Mr. P. F. Mellinger's sawyer, whose name we have not learned, was sawing for A. W. Murray a part of last week.

John, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Mellinger, who has been quite ill with pneumonia, we are glad to say is better.

Misses Mattie Garlitz and Jennie Beckman attended the meeting at Swanton Saturday evening, returning with their gentlemen friends Sunday just in time for dinner.

Mrs. J. L. Fitzwater was on the sick list last week.

The play party at Mr. Aaron Pritts' Saturday evening was quite a success.

The Masond rm are running their saw mill at full blast. Nothing like having the right boys in the right place.

Mr. C. T. Knox and Misses Ada and Elsie Howell were visiting at J. L. Fitzwater's one evening last week.

Our school is progressing nicely under the able management of Miss Margaret Kerens. The first term was taught by Miss Pearl George, who thought the school was too large and has taken up another with only one scholar enrolled.

Mr. Luther Winters and his best girl were making good use of the fine sleighing snow Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bailev returned from their honeymoon last Saturday.

Miss Cordelia Broadwater, of New Germany, is visiting friends and relatives in our vicinity.

Miss Grace Walters, of Deer Park, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. O. T. Rhodes.

Mr. John Howell was visiting his sister, Mrs. Etta Brenneman, of Bittinger, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Rhodes signed a pledge one day last week that they would not drink coffee for two weeks, but the smell of the coffee the following morning was too tempting for Mrs. Rhodes, who yowed that hot water was too thin for her, and had her cup filled with coffee as before. Mr. Rhodes is still faithful to his pledge.

Walter Beckman was visiting in our quiet little burg last Sunday.

William Mowery took a flying trip to Oakland Saturday

We close with best wishes for THE REPUBLICAN.

"God lead thee, dear!" The sunrise light
  Steals softly through the gray,
The dream and darkness of the night
  Are lost in perfect day.
I smile, and whisper tenderly:
  "God lead thee, dear, alway!"

"God help thee, dear!" The noontide hour
  Is golden, glad, and gay;
The world smiles upward like a flower
  To meet the sun's warm ray.
I pause and whisper earnestly:
  "God help thee, dear, alway!"

"God keep thee, dear!" The sunset flush
  Kisses the dreaming day,
And in the wondrous holy hush
  The whole world seems to pray.
I kneel and whisper lovingly:
  "God keep thee, dear, alway!"

Woman Disposes

By JOHN C. FISCHBECK

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

THIS happened 20 years ago, when good Mr. Spotswood was governor of this fair province of Virginia. I was a young gallant then, and not a somewhat sluggish dullard, as I have become. And Mme. Clarendon, whom you may see knitting placidly by the window yonder, was neither elderly nor gray-haired. She was as lissome a young lass as one might wish to see, and when I saw her first, riding along a country lane on her palfrey, I felt that Cupid's arrows had wounded me once for all.

Now, this is a bit of personal history, and refers to Christmas time and stormy weather, such as sometimes happens, though but rarely, in our Virginia. There were many merry-makings in the country in those days, when the example of a pleasure-loving monarch, howbeit he dwelt across the seas, encouraged his people in all such harmless indulgences. It was at a neighbor's place, where we were enjoying a dance, not long before the beginning of the holiday season, that I made my bow to sweet Mistress Prudence Haywood. But she would have none of me, tossing her pretty head and bustling off on the arm of one of her other suitors.

I thought this a bad beginning, but reminded me of the proverb about the brave and the fair, and determined to press my suit. It chanced that her father had been an old comrade of mine in the Indian wars, and I soon found means to visit him. The old man received me cordially, and as we sat over our mugs in the comfortable wainscotted hall of his fine old dwelling, he rehearsed to me the eventful story of his campaigns. I listened with outward respect, but, as I confess with some shame, with small attention; because Mistress Prudence served us from time to time, as the mugs ran dry—talking being thirsty work—as my eyes and ears were for her alone.

I need not say that once established in the good man's graces, I was assiduous in my wooing. But Prudence put me off with the art of which every maid, however country bred, is mistress. At the end of the twelvemonth I knew no better how I stood in her estimation than I did at the beginning.

Christmas eve was approaching, and with the decline of the year came frequent storms and tremendous snows, such as the people of the vicinage had not seen for a time longer than compassed by the memory of the oldest man amongst us. Travel was not only difficult, but perilous, and hardly a morning passed but brought tidings of distress, not rarely coupled with the news that some daring equestrian had succumbed to the cold, or been whelmed in a treacherous creek. I could not leave my lonely hall in such weather without a decent excuse, and for a week searched in vain for a reasonable pretext to dare the dangerous roads and see Prudence again. I was very much in love, and it seemed at length as though I would risk any danger, just to see her sweet face again.

At last I could no longer deny the gratification of my desire. So, saddling my horse, Dobbin, I pushed through the heavy drifts and on to Holloway hall, passing over the great stone bridge across the river which separates the two estates. I noted that the ice had accumulated perilously against the central arch of the bridge, and remarked to myself that there would be risk, an' the weather moderated not, of the ancient structure collapsing before the tremendous pressure. At another time or on another mission, I might have dismounted and made an examination of the masonry, but I pushed on, assuring myself that there was no immediate peril, and that the stonework had stood 50 winters, even if none so severe as this, and would doubtless survive a few brief days of stress.

As I brushed the snow from my cloak in the porch of Holloway, I could not but feel a sense of foolishness, for having ventured on a visit at a time so evidently unpropitious. Old Master Haywood was absent, but Prudence met me at the door.

"Why, Master Clarendon," she said, saucily, "'tis a rough wind that blows you hither. Shall I bid you welcome, or no?"

"As you prefer," I answered, somewhat stiffly, for I was nettled at the mockery in her eyes. "But since I come so far and by such dangerous roads, I may tell you that I have an object in doing so."

A sudden color flamed into her cheeks, and she drew back with a little exclamation, partly surprise and partly coquetry—for such is the manner of girls.

"Fear not," I cried, the sight of her dear face putting to flight all the timidity of the previous moment, "all I have to say may be put in three words: "I love you, Prudence!'"

I paused for an answer. But never a word said she. She stood there smiling.

"Marry me, my dear," I began again. "I have loved you ever since I saw you first;" and then I went on to tell her how I had seen her riding on a day near 18 months before, and then of the dance where I had first addressed her, and then of her father's long stories of old campaigns, and my inattention when she was within sight. But she interrupted me not at all; merely smiled as she listened. And when I made an end, there fell a silence between us.

"Will make no answer to my suit?" I said, finally. "Well, be it so. But I will ask again, and again, and yet again, till you tell me what I wish to hear. Sweet Mistress Clarendon that is to be, I salute you!"

"You have impudence, sir," she cried, "to take possession of me so cavalierly! I will marry whom I please, and when I please, an' it will not be you. I care not at all for you!"

It was warm and snug within doors, but as I swung to saddle again, the cold struck into my bones, and the growing storm made all about black and strange. The wind had sprung up within the hour, and now whirled the snow into blinding clouds, so that my faithful horse picked his way slowly and still more slowly through the increasing drifts. My own mind was full of sad thoughts. Though I was resolved to win Prudence in the end, this did not prevent me from yielding to the deep depression of my mood. I cast the reins on Dobbin's neck and let the good beast proceed at his own sweet will.

I know not how long I had been riding, nor how far I had got on my way homeward, when my melancholy meditations were interrupted by the sound of something following me. In the noise of the wind it was impossible to distinguish clearly the direction from which these sounds proceeded; moreover, the footsteps—for such they seemed—were muffled by the snow. Nowadays I think it strange that I should have heard anything at all. But, my friends, there is a clairvoyance of the heart by means of which we have an instinctive knowledge of many things too subtle to be heard or seen with the gross bodily organs. And so it seems to me in the case I speak of; for, obeying an impulse, the cause of which I cannot even now describe to you, I suddely caught up the reins and turned Dobbin's head against the wind.

And well it was that I did so. For in a few moments I heard a voice cry out in distress, and, by my faith, it was not the hoarse shout of a man, but the shrill treble of a frightened woman. With that, I clapped spurs sharply down and hastened with all speed possible to give what help I could; for under such circumstances it is not well to delay.

And whom do you think I found there, stalled in the snow, half fainting in her saddle from the cold and the bewilderment of the night?

Prudence!

My arms were about her in an instant. As I bore her from her horse, wrapping my cloak about her trembling figure, she put her dear head against my shoulder and began to sob. To my eager question, what had sent her forth on such a night, she made no answer for a long time, and I availed myself of the opportunity to turn in the direction of Holloway hall, leading her palfrey by the bridle. At length, as Prudence regained her composure, I learned why she had followed me.

"A moment after you left," she whispered, hiding her face in my breast, my father rode up, having been out on business at the village. He was full of concern, for, he said, the bridge over the river between your house and ours had gone down during the evening, the weight of the ice piled against it. What time did it go, father?' I asked, filled with a sudden apprehension. 'Scarce an hour since,' he answered; 'I heard it as I was leaving the village.' At once I thought of you riding home in the night, unable to see what lay before you, blinded perchance, by the snow, and with that broken bridge in your path. Without a word to any, I snatched my hood and cloak, fled to the stable, and, saddling my palfrey, started in pursuit. But though I know the road so well, the snow proved too much for us, my horse and I, and had Providence not watched over us, I fear we would have perished. A silly fool am I! I might have sent my father, or one of the men. But, no! I did not stop to think! I—"

"Glad am I you did not," I said, "for now, Mistress Prudence, you shall deny me no more. A woman takes no such risks for a man she loves not. Said I not truly you would marry me, after all?"

She answered not. In a few minutes we met Master Haywood, and a troop of his men searching for the missing maid.

"Sir," said I, as we drew rein before the hall, "I crave your hospitality for the night, for my own home is far, and the weather unpropitious. And to-morrow I shall ask you yet another favor still."

"Harry," replied the old gentleman, clapping me on the back, "it hath already been asked and granted. The wench told me months ago she loved thee and would marry thee. 'Twas only a matter of waiting till she was ready. And as for thee—boy, dost think an old Indian fighter hath failed to see through thy pretense of interest in his tales of forgotten battles? Ha!" and his cheerful laugh rang out right merrily. And as we stood in the great hall, he took our hands in his, and joined them together, and with the tear drops glistening in his eyes, added: "Take her, Harry, and be happy."

And that, my friends, is how Prudence Haywood made up her mind to become Mme. Clarendon!

Audience to Be Feared.

"He's a great public speaker, isn't he He's invincible before a vast audience, and—"

"Yes; but you ought to have seen him quail the other day when I was there and his wife asked him to go in the kitchen and give the cook a lecture."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

It requires a good deal of nerve to continue to do one thing well all the time.

THE PRICE OF A DRINK.

"Five cents a drink!" Does anyone think
That that is really the price of a drink?
"Five cents a glass!" I hear you say,
"Why, that isn't very much to pay."
Ah, no, indeed, 'tis a very small sum.
You are passing it over 'twixt finger and thumb,
And if that were all you gave away
It wouldn't be very much to pay.
The price of a drink? Let that one tell
Who sleeps to-night in a prisoner's cell.
Honor and virtue, love and truth,
All the glory and pride of youth,
Hope of manhood, the wealth of fame,
High endeavor, and noble aim—
These are the treasures thrown away
For the price of a drink from day to day.
"Five cents a glass!" How Satan laughs
As over the bar the young man quaffed
The beaded liquor; for the demon knew
The terrible work that drink would do.
The price, if you want to know
What some are willing to pay for it, go
Through the wretched home, where,
With dingy windows and broken stair,
Where foul disease like a vampire crawls
With outstretched wings o'er the moldy walls,
Where the innocent ones are there accurst
To pay the price of another's thirst.
"Five cents a glass!" O, if that were all
The sacrifice would indeed be small;
But the money's worth is the least amount
We pay, and whosoever will keep account
Will learn the terrible waste and blight
That follows the ruinous appetite.
"Five cents a glass!" Does anyone think
That that is really the price of a drink?
—L. I. Wolfe, in National Advocate.

FINDS MANY WOMEN DRUNK.

Rockefeller's Cleveland Pastor Preaches Against Liquor Habit Among the Fair Sex.

"I tell you this question of drunkenness among women that confronts this country is a serious problem," declared Rev. Charles A. Eaton in his sermon at the Euclid Avenue Baptist church, Cleveland, O., on a recent Sunday night. Dr. Eaton is John D. Rockefeller's pastor. "The other night when I was in the grillroom of the leading hotel of the city," he continued, "I saw more women there than men, and every woman was drunk. There was not a sober woman in the place.

"And there were some girls and men of good families there. There was one pure, beautiful girl with a woman companion who was saturated with sin. Somehow or other this young girl had come to that grillroom just for that once. And she was intoxicated.

"EVERY WOMAN WAS DRUNK."

"We are dead morally. The country is paralyzed in a struggle for money. It is bad enough for men to go too far in this direction, but when even women step over the line and go toward the king of death they strike a blow at the race as deadly as has ever been dealt it.

"It's bad enough when a man gets drunk. He is often half a brute, but in a woman we look for something better, and it is a sorry day for the country when the women begin this thing.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

If every person would be half as good as he expects his neighbor to be, what a heaven this world would be!—National Advocate.

Sometimes the very dust of our hurrying feet rises up and blinds us to the great ends that we must constantly keep in view.—Lady Henry Somerset.

Treating, "sociable" drinks and "friendly glasses" were named as most potent factors in the filling of inebriates' homes at the fortieth anniversary of the Washingtonian home.

The papers of Clearfield, Pa., report that a decided temperance movement is sweeping over the entire county. Remonstrances against liquor license applicants will be pushed with unusual vigor.

For every 566 ministers that die there are 163 deaths among farmers, 820 among carpenters, 890 among coal miners, 1,202 among plumbers, 1,361 among brewers, 1,521 among inkeepers and 2,205 among bartenders.

A license fee of $200 a year will have to be paid hereafter in Chicago for moving picture machines and mutoscopes in saloons and dance halls. This is calculated to do away with machines containing immoral pictures.

Vermont passed a license law in 1848 by a majority of only 13 votes in the state, but after a year of the licensed saloon voted it out by a majority of 13,000 votes. From the rapid change in public sentiment it begins to look as if history might repeat itself.—The American Issue.

Demands Temperate Employes.

In line with the movement to enforce stricter regulations against intoxicating liquors, the Northern Pacific will practically demand teetotalism on the part of its employes. The Northern Pacific will be doing only what all great systems regard as a necessary guarantee that the services of their employes shall be up to the standard.

MISTAKEN CALCULATION.

Shown That America's Per Capita Consumption of Liquors Is More Than Fifteen Dollars.

BY GEORGE MAY POWELL.

A recent issue of a prominent temperance paper gave the per capita of annual liquor consumption at $15 in the United States of America and $35 per capita in the German empire. The latter figure is probably not far from being right. That of our country is not half high enough. It is evidently based on the $900,000,000 of liquor consumption so generally, and erroneously accepted by prohibitionists and disputed as too high by the liquor dealers. The $900,000,000 can be shown to be about right, by analysis of the United States government customs and internal revenue returns on malt, fermented and distilled liquors. But this represents only the approximately pure liquors. This is less than one-third the manufactured and the adulterated liquors retailed at the bars of our country. The extent of this has been emphasized in the recent prosecutions for adulterations of liquors on a gigantic scale. Add to this the vast amount of illicit distillation, and we have a startling grand total of not less than 3½ billion dollars. Divide this by the total of our population, as shown by the last census and it will be seen that the $15 per capita falls far astern. The view of this huge consumption—which the liquor ring dreads to have presented to the business men of the land—shows what a tremendous sponge it is to annually suck up the money that our merchants, manufacturers and farmers should get for honest work. When our commercial captains do get this into their heads, liquor makers and sellers will be driven from chambers of commerce and boards of trade, as Jesus drove the money changers from the temple.

Home market is incomparably the best market in any land. This market, the pirating liquor trade has so utterly in its possession, that it gets more of the actual cash of our people than all the legitimate trade and industries of our people put together. Thus "hard times" and money panics come to us from this hellish Box of Pandora. Then, after this wholesale robbery, the exasperation of this mischief is intensified, by millions of dollars being rolled in on the tax payers for crime, insanity, pauperism, etc., created by this trade in intoxicants. It is also the compound lever of the devil, in debauching our politics, so that franchises which should be worth millions to our citizens and their children, are stolen from them in creating "Trusts," that crush by cornering food and fuel, no matter, who starves, or freezes, and that sell out the nation to aliens, at home and abroad.

Good citizens of all parties should see in all this a peril to the national life, financially, and otherwise, of ominous proportions.

POSSIBLE RESULTS OF DRINK.

The Diseases That Are Attributable to the Excessive Use of Alcohol.

As the drinking season is now on, it is well to reflect that the following diseases may be directly or indirectly caused by some form of alcoholism: Acute gastric catarrh, chronic gastric catarrh, gastric dilation, intestinal indigestion, constipation, gout, cholera morbus, chronic peritonitis, dropsy of the abdomen, catarrhal jaundice, congestion of the liver, cirrhosis (hob-nail liver), chronic tubal nephritis (chronic Bright's disease), diabetes, mellitus, chronic bronchitis, congestion of the lungs, oedema of the lungs, lobor pneumonia, fibroid phthisis (interstitial pneumonia), chronic valvular disease of the heart, dilatation of the heart, chronic fibroid heart, fatty degeneration of the heart, palpitation of the heart, arterio sebrosis, aneurism of the aorta, meningitis, brain fever, apoplexy, congestion of the brain, brain thrombosis and embolism (in youth), nervous vertigo, tomulentia (a plain drunkard), mania a potu, delirium tremens, dipsomania (alcoholic insanity, imbecility and dementia often result from dipsomania).

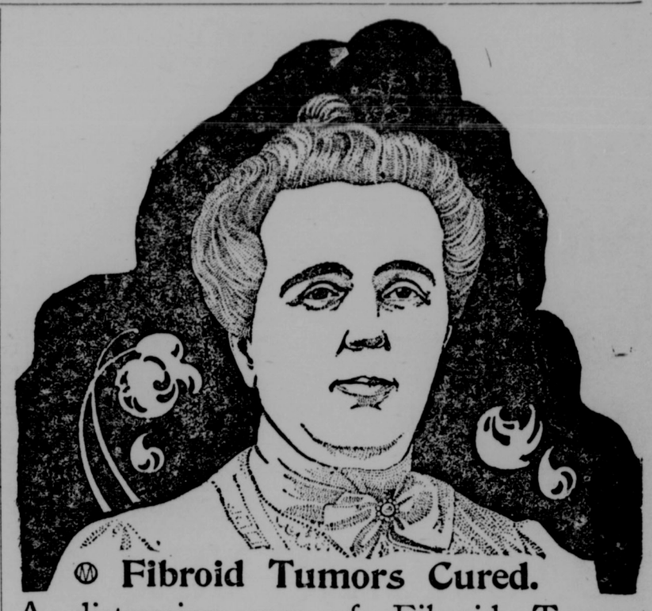
Alcoholism predisposes to sunstroke, chronic pleurisy, inflammation of the nerve trunks, spinal congestion, spinal meningitis, spinal sclerosis (four forms, one of which locomotor ataxia), disseminated neuritis, melancholia, mania (insanity), delusional insanity, phagedenic ulcer, various inflammations, a delirium that sometimes occurs after injuries and surgical operations (if an old drunkard sustains a fracture of a bone he is liable to go into delirium tremens; he may in this state attempt to destroy himself or those around him), erysipelas, blood tumor, fatty tumor, urinary calculus (from excessive use of malt liquors), monomania, general paralysis (paretic dementia), acquired feeblemindedness, acne rosacea (whisky nose and cheeks), trifacial neuralgia.—Medical Student, in Washington Star.

Bureau of Temperance Research.

The Bureau of Temperance Research is a new organization established in Boston. Its object as explained by its secretary, F. W. Clark, is to furnish to all inquirers any information, especially of a statistical nature, which may be sought. It will endeavor to arrange and correlate all figures pertaining to both sides of the liquor question. The bureau will aim to keep in touch with the sales of liquor in the United States and other countries, and to keep temperance workers informed of all the movements of organization of both liquor dealers and employes. Mr. Clark is just the man to fill such an office.

A Village Turned Teetotal.

A Somersetshire innkeeper, who had become bankrupt, gave as the reason for his insolvency at his public examination the statement that "the whole of the village had turned teetotal."



℠ Fibroid Tumors Cured.

A distressing case of Fibroid Tumor, which baffled the skill of Boston doctors. Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, Mass., in the following letter tells how she was cured, after everything else failed, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Hayes' First Letter Appealing to Mrs. Pinkham for Help:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been under Boston doctors' treatment for a long time without any relief. They tell me I have a fibroid tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends up my spine. I have bearing-down pains both back and front. My abdomen is swollen, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time.

"The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor given in your little book accurately describe my case, so I write to you for advice."—(Signed) Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice—although she advised Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, to take her medicine—which she knew would help her—her letter contained a mass of additional instructions as to treatment, all of which helped to bring about the happy result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Sometime ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and to-day I am a well woman.

"The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony—or take the place of the health and happiness which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought to Mrs. Hayes.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women; all ovarian troubles; tumors; inflammations; ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb; backache; irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation. Surely the volume and character of the testimonial letters we are daily printing in the newspapers can leave no room for doubt.

Mrs. Hayes at her above address will gladly answer any letters which sick women may write for fuller information about her illness. Her gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so genuine and heartfelt that she thinks no trouble is too great for her to take in return for her health and happiness.

Truly is it said that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing so many women, and no other medicine; don't forget this when some druggist wants to sell you something else.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Gratitude Well Expressed.

Sault St., Marie, Mich., Feb. 6th.—Mr. C. L. Smith, painter and decorator, whose home is at 309 Anne street, this city, makes the following statement:

"I was laid up with some kind of pains. Some said it was Lumbago, others Sciatica, and others again Rheumatism. A few of my friends suggested that it was lead poison, but whatever it was it gave me a great deal of pain, in fact, almost completely crippled me. I had to use two canes to walk about and even then it was a very painful task.

"A friend advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and I began the treatment. After I had used the first box I was able to throw away one of the canes and was considerably improved. The second box straightened me up so that I could go about free from pain without any assistance and very soon after I was completely cured, well and happy, without a pain or an ache. Dodd's Kidney Pills seemed to go right to the spot in my case and they will always have my greatest praise."

PILL TRADE MARK IMITATED.

Druggist and Clerk Are Held in Bail for Court.

Charged with infringing upon the trademark of Carter's Little Liver Pill Company, Joseph T. Griffith, a druggist at the southeast corner of Eleventh and Vine streets, was held in $500 bail for Court this afternoon by Magistrate Jermon, and at the same time Griffith's clerk, Joseph C. Fore, was held in $800 bail for Court on the same charge, and also for selling certain articles the sale of which is prohibited by law.

The men were arrested this morning upon warrants issued by Magistrate Jermon at the instance of Brent Good, No. 130 West Fifty-seventh Street, New York, and Charles C. Orcutt, No. 12 Jumel Terrace, New York, representatives of the Carter Company. They stated that the latter had spent $3,000,000 in advertising and getting their label known, and did not purpose to permit others to reap the benefits.

The label in question is a small one containing a large letter L, and the one used by Griffith is an exact copy, except that it does not contain Carter's name.

The prosecution showed how easily the imitation product could be palmed off on the would-be purchaser of Carter's pills, owing to the similarity of the labels, and held that it was evidence of a deliberate attempt to deceive.—Philadelphia Telegraph, Jan. 27, 1904.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP. RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

"The world of medicine recognizes Grip as epidemic catarrh."—Medical Talk.

LA GRIPPE is epidemic catarrh. It spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper, the masses and the classes are alike subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip got you? Grip is well named. The original French term, la grippe, has been shortened by the busy American to read "grip." Without intending to do so a new word has been coined that exactly describes the case. As if some hideous giant with awful GRIP had clutched us in its fatal clasp. Men, women, and children, whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of a terrible monster.

The following letters speak for themselves as to the efficacy of Peruna in cases of la grippe or its after effects.

After Effects of La Grippe Eradicated by Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. Fred Weinberger, Westerlo, Albany County, N. Y., writes:

"Several years ago I had an attack of la grippe which left my nerves in a prostrated condition. Then I had another attack of la grippe which left me worse. I had tried three good physicians but all in vain. I gave Peruna a trial. In a short time I was feeling better and now I am as well as anyone."—Mrs. Fred Weinberger.

Hon. James R. Guill of Omaha.

Hon. James R. Guill is one of the oldest and most esteemed men of Omaha, Neb. He has done much to make it what it is, serving on public boards a number of times. He endorses Peruna in the following words:

"I am 68 years old, am hale and hearty, and Peruna has helped me attain it. Two years ago I had la grippe—my life was despaired of. Peruna saved me."—J. R. Guill.

A Relative of Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Silas S. Lincoln, who resides at 913 I. Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., has the honor of being third cousin to Abraham Lincoln. He writes:

"I had la grippe five times before using your medicine. Four years ago I began the use of Peruna, since which time I have not been troubled with that disease. I can now do as much work at my desk as I ever could in my life. I have gained more than ten pounds in weight."—S. S. Lincoln.

Pe-ru-na Not Only Cured La Grippe but Benefited the Whole System.

Miss Alice M. Dressler, 1313 N. Bryant Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"Last spring I suffered from la grippe and was partially cured, but the bad after effects remained through the summer and somehow I did not get strong as I was before. One of my college friends who was visiting me asked me to try Peruna and I did so and found it all and more than I had expected. It not only cured me of the catarrh but restored me to perfect health, built up the entire system and brought a happy feeling of buoyancy which I had not known for years." —Alice M. Dressler.

An Actress' Testimonial.

Miss Jean Cowgill, Griswold Opera House, Troy, N. Y., is the leading lady with the Aubrey Stock Co. She writes the following:

"During the past winter of 1901, I suffered for several weeks from a severe attack of grippe, which left a serious catarrhal condition of the throat and head.

"Some one suggested Peruna. As a last resort, after wasting much time and money on physicians, I tried the remedy faithfully, and in a few weeks was as well as ever."—Jean Cowgill.

A Southern Judge Cured.

Judge Horatio J. Goss, Hartwell, Ga., writes:

"Some five or six years ago I had a very severe spell of grippe, which left me with systemic catarrh. A friend advised me to try your Peruna which I did, and was immediately benefited and cured. The third bottle completed the cure."—H. J. Goss.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

A WOMAN'S MISERY.

Mrs. John La Rue, of 115 Paterson Ave., Paterson, N. J., says: "I was troubled for about nine years, and what I suffered no one will ever know. I used about every known remedy that is said to be good for kidney complaint, but without deriving permanent relief. Often when alone in the house the backache has been so bad that it brought tears to my eyes. The pain at times was so intense that I was compelled to give up my household duties and lie down. There were headaches, dizziness and blood rushing to my head to cause bleeding at the nose. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills benefited me so much that I continued the treatment. The stinging pain in the small of my back, the rushes of blood to the head, and other symptoms disappeared."

Jesus and the Sabbath

The Sabbath was the "bloody angle" in the contest between the Pharisees and Jesus. They had idolized the Sabbath—had converted it into a veritable Juggernaut, whose ponderous weight they were rolling over men's hearts and homes. Their micrology would have been ludicrous if it had not been exercised upon some thing so sacred.

With this spirit-destroying literalism, Jesus took strongest issue. Of set purpose he broke the tradition, while he yet kept the Sabbath. He wrought seven conspicuous cures upon as many Sabbaths, as if to show the merciful character and uses of the day. But he could not expect to lay his hand thus rudely upon this Pharisaic fetich without raising a din and cry, and being branded as a sacrilegious person.

On this occasion the Pharisaic espionage followed him in hopes that it would discover that he took one step more than the two thousand cubits allowed for a Sabbath-day's journey. It congratulated itself upon a still greater "find." It threw up its hands in well-feigned horror at the dreadful infraction: for were not the disciples reaping and thrashing on the Sabbath? According to the refinements of their traditions, plucking the ripe wheatears was a kind of harvesting, and rubbing them between the hands and blowing the chaff away was a kind of winnowing. What a sin!

The reply of Jesus is a master-stroke "David is your hero-king. It is not possible you are ignorant of what he did in an emergency; how, flying from Saul and famishing, he took, not standing corn in the field, like my disciples have, but the shewbread from the golden table before the very presence of the Lord; and that, too when it had been freshly laid there, and there was none to replace it. David did this! How is it that you find no fault with him?" The law of mercy in this instance supplanted the law of sacrifice.

The scene shifts now from the wheat-fields to the synagogue, but the issue remains the same. The cripple is used as a bait to catch Jesus with. Jesus called the unfortunate man to a conspicous position.

The alternative which he proposed put them to confusion. Which accorded better with the spirit of the Sabbath law—to do good, as he proposed, by setting this unfortunate free from his malady, or to do evil, as they were doing when they entertained a jealous and inhuman spirit; to save life, as he soon would (making the poor man's life worth living), or to kill, as they were now (cherishing the spirit of murder in their hearts)? No wonder they were silent. Jesus was unanswerable.

The Teacher's Lantern

The technism of piety reached its completest development under the hair-splitting genius of the Pharisees

* * * * *

They enumerated 365 prohibitions, 248 commands (equal to the number of body), 613 precepts (number of letters in the Decalogue).

* * * * *

Their dialectical skill especially busy in framing the casuistry of the Sabbath: determining whether it was right to eat an egg laid on Sabbath, etc.

* * * * *

There was a serious side as well as ludicrous in this excessive legalism. Hebrew pilots dropped the helm on approach of Sabbath. Hebrew soldiers allowed themselves to be butchered rather than fight on the Sabbath.

* * * * *

Jesus crushed these hollow traditions, showed how intent of the Sabbath was perverted by them.

* * * * *

He did not abolish the Sabbath. "Lord of the Sabbath" would have been no honorable title if it was a repealed institution. He was Lord of the day in the sense of ridding it of the barnacles of tradition, elevating it and filling it with life and sanctity.

Child-Study and Sunday-School Methods

A little girl when asked what made it rain, disclosed the fact that she believed that rainy days were "washdays" in heaven, and that rain was caused by the throwing out of the water, and thunder by the rolling around of the empty tubs. A five-year-old said, "Mamma, where does God live?" The conventional answer was, "everywhere." Quickly as a flash, but devoid of irreverance, came the response. "Why don't he build a house and stay at home!" The inadequacy of our traditional terms as vehicles of truth to the child-mind is apparent. It is a question whether they do not often fall short of conveying anything except a sound of words, or else a positively false notion. The teacher who is fit will find what the child's idea is, will enlarge or reduce it, or substitute another, as the case requires.

THE MARYLAND GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Interest Centering On the Executive Appointments.

THOSE FOR GARRETT CONFIRMED

After Appointing D. M. Mason, of Oakland, as One of the Election Supervisors, His Name was Withdrawn and Edmund Jamison Given the Place.

From our Special Correspondent.
STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS, February 24th., 1904.

Speculation and gossip over the Governor's appointments is the chief occupation of the local law makers and what few of the more distant politicians as have assembled here thus far, after the adjournment last Friday. The House and Senate last week were both flooded with bills and by Friday the members were pretty well tired out by the long week, the long sessions and the remainder of the long days spent in the committee rooms, for the pressure on the members of the more important committees, at any rate, was heavy indeed.

The Governor's appointments, however, were the fruitful theme with the gossips. Politicians, as a rule, are the only people interested in who the Governor appoints to the various offices, except, of course, the men who aspire to fill them, and except in the case of where the Executive appoints an obviously unfit man for the position. The average taxpayer, not an office seeker and not a politician, does not care who fills the places, and so long as he is courteously treated on the few occasions that he comes in contact with the officials, it matters little one way or another to him, whether the man be endorsed by any one or not.

But there is a broader consideration than that for the Governor and for his administration as a whole, and for the dignity and credit of this administration, good men must fill the places; and thus far there is no gainsaying the fact that the Executive is sending down good men. True, they are not pleasing the politicians, and true the applicants for the positions, many of them at least, are grumbling over their various appointments, for the lightning thus far has been striking with great frequency in unsolicited spots, but the great mass of the public is pleased with the appointments thus far, and even his former newspaper enemies have complimented Governor Warfield on the names which he has sent in, and have evinced in the most marked degree their delight over the ignoring of Mr. Rasin.

While this is unquestionably deserved and while the Governor's friends are glad to read this praise, the fact remains that it is very, very cheap, the ones doing the most of it, doing everything in their power to encompass his defeat, or doing nothing to further his chances of election, at the critical time when this same Mr. Rasin was conducting a very important part of his campaign, which, with the work of others, resulted in victory. This fact makes thoughtful men, not blinded by their hatred of a name, the owner of which most of them have never even seen, a little sorry that the good Governor does not at least recognize Mr. Rasin, if, indeed, he is really not going to eventually do so.

The Governor, in making his selections, does not seem to have been moved to any extent by anyone's influence, but the personel of the Police Board for Baltimore city, in spite of that fact, is beyond all question not hostile to Mr. Rasin. Both of the democratic members, James H. Preston and George R. Willis, are men of the highest type, as is Gen. Shyrock, the minority member, but both have always been friendly to Rasin; but, and here is the point with "The Old Man," this fact had nothing to do whatever with their selection. The only thing that he can console himself with is the thought that although they were friendly to him that did not prevent their appointment.

Overy man to his own opinion, of course, but the preponderence of opinion here, even among the most conservative, seems to be that courtesy might move the handsome Governor, if nothing else would, to consult the one man to whom, more than anyone else he owes the position which he now occupies, when making his selections for important party appointments.

Among the Governor's closest friends who wish him to show up with all classes in as fine a light as possible, this feeling is even more pronounced, due to the fact that Rasin has not intruded in any way, shape or form, leaving to the Governor's own sense of fairness to see the wisdom of consulting him on some of the matters in which he is most vitally concerned. The Governor's friends are anxious that there may be no question of his good taste.

The following appointments for Garrett county were sent in last night by the Governor:

Justices of the Peace.—First District—John L. Sharpless and Wade H. Lohr.

Second District—Leon Hardie and James Guard.

Third District—Peter Nathan and Daniel W. Dorsey.

Fourth District—Marcus M. Fazenbaker.

Fifth District—Henry Kahl.

Sixth District—R. M. Alexander and David H. Friend.

Seventh District—John R. Kerfoot.

Eighth District—William A. Harvey and George Mason.

Ninth District—Charles A. Murphy.

Tenth District—William D. Hoye.

Twelfth District—George Ralston.

Fourteensh District—Andrew B. Gonder.

Notaries Public—George A. Fraley, John Felty, Jr., and Charles Deffenbaugh, of Oakland; Edward M. Liston, of Selbysport; H. L. Bevans, of Grantsville; H. C. Grusendorf, of Hutton; Edward Schlossnagle, of Friendsville, and Edward J. Hamill, of Blaine.

School Commissioner—George E. Bishoff.

Supervisors of Election—Charles M. Miller and D. M. Mason, to represent the democratic party, and Edward E. Sollers, to represent the republican party.

Before confirmation of the above by the Senate the Governor withdrew the name of D. M. Mason and substituted it by that of Edmund Jamison, when the appointments as a whole were confirmed.

Senator Betts, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, on Thursday reported favorably the two Western Maryland Railroad bills, upon which a hearing was given on Monday. One gives the company authority to continue the construction of the bridge across the Patapsco River, near the iron plant of Lauer & Harper, and the other gives it the privilege of laying its tracks along the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal and the Potomac River from Big Pool, in Washington county, to Cumberland. For fourteen miles the Western Maryland will either be exclusively or partially on the land owned by the canal, and adjacent to it on the side of the waterway opposite the towpath. The Western Maryland demands possession of this, after instituting condemnation proceedings and settling the award. It is charged by Mr. Hugh L. Bond, Jr., when he appeared before the committee, that the construction of the railroad would do great damage to the canal.

Some unimportant amendments were offered with the bills by the Finance Committee. No trouble is anticipated with the Western Maryland legislation in the Senate.

On last Wednesday the Committee on Federal Relations in the House reported favorably Mr. Howard's resolutions directing the attention of the Federal government to Garrett county as a site for an army encampment.

On the same day in the Senate the bill some time ago introduced by Mr. Palmer to prohibit the sale of liquor in election district No. 3, outside the corporate limits of Grantsville, was passed.

The joint resolutions relating to an army camp were also passed in the Senate.

The bill which was introduced in the Senate on last Wednesday, having passed the House, to require certain corporations in Garrett county to pay off semi-monthly, passed the Senate on Friday.

The bill introduced earlier in the session and passed in the House, to reimburse the school commissioners of Garrett county a sum of $2,112.99, has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Palmer.

On Thursday Governor Warfield signed the bill to prohibit the sale of liquor within three miles of Fairview church in Garrett county.

Mr. Harvey, during the brief session on Friday morning introduced a bill prohibiting the carrying of fire arms by persons under sixteen years of age in Garrett county.

PAUL WINCHESTER.

STORY OF THE GREAT BALTIMORE FIRE.

Scenes and Incidents During its Progress Graphically Depicted.

ITS PATH RESEMBLES A CRESENT

The Finest Buildings and All Supposed to be Absolutely Firepaoof, Burned With Greater Rapidity than Those Otherwise Constructed.

Last Sunday morning, about half-past 10 o'clock, while half of Baltimore was on its way to church, fire broke out in the large wholesale dry goods house of John E. Hurst & Co., at the corner of Liberty and German streets. From this point it raged until 5:45 o'clock Monday afternoon, when the exhausted firemen finally succeeded in bringing its destructive course to a halt among the lumber yards on nuion dock, at the foot of Falls avenue, more than a mile from where it had started.

Its path, which today resembles nothing so much as a huge crescent, embraces eighty blocks in the heart of the business section; more than 2,500 buildings are in ashes, including the Chamber of Commerce, Merchants and Manufacturers' Association's headquarters; the Stock Exchange; more than half the banks and financial houses in the city, and practically the whole of the dry goods district, and the retail clothing district along Baltimore street, from Liberty street to the Baltimore street bridge over Jones' Falls, over a mile in length

Conservative insurance agents have placed the loss at $80,000,000, of which it is stated that about 75 per cent, is covered by insurance.

As yet, the exact cause of the fire has not been ascertained. Certain it is that shortly after the Hurst Building was discovered to be in flames there were heard several tremendous explosions, which tore the great establishment to fragments, and sent bricks, mortar, and blazing cinders scattering over the neighborhood, and spreading the blaze.

The whole fire department was soon on hand, a general alarm having been turned in by Captain Jordan, of the Salvage Corps, whose company was the first on the scene. Their efforts, however, seemed fruitless, and the hungry blaze spread into the adjoining buildings, most of which were occupied by large wholesale dry goods companies, and by noon, a little less than two hours after it had started, it had crept through the block to Baltimore street, destroying the Roxbury Rye Distilling Company's establishment, near the corner of Sharp street.

Appeals for help were at once sent to other cities—New York, Washington, Philadelphia, and Wilmington.

The fire had by this time covered eight city blocks, and was rapidly eating its way toward the corner of Baltimore and Charles street, a high wind from the southwest directing the course of the destructive blaze. At this juncture dynamite was restored to, but without avail. Several buildings—among them that of Armstrong, Cator & Co., on Baltimore street, near Charles—were destroyed in this manner, but nothing seemed to stop the spread of the fire. It was then about 6 o'clock in the afternoon, and business men and dealers of all sorts were hurriedly removing their movable property from the establishments in the path of the flames.

On they swept, taking a northeasterly direction destroying the buildings north of Baltimore street on Liberty for half a square. The block bounded by McClellan's alley, Baltimore street, Charles street and Fayette street was soon in ruins, and up Charles street the fire spread to O'Neills, at the corner of Lexington. This marked its farthest point north on Charles street. Sweeping across Charles, the Union Trust Company's Building, corner of Charles and Fayette streets, shortly after 9 o'clock at night, caught, and was soon destroyed as were all the buildings in this block between Fayette and Lexington, except the Central Savings Bank Building, at the corner of Lexington and Charles. The militia had by this time been ordered out, and a cordon was formed about the burned district by Brigadier General Riggs, who was in command.

The flames were defeated in their effort to consume the Courthouse, but the sky-scrapers along Fayette street and Baltimore street were soon in ruins. After leaving them nothing but smoking and blackened walls, the flames swept on to the Falls, wrecking everything on East Baltimore street to Front on the north side. Here the wind changed to the north, and the fire took a southerly course down to the waterfront burning everything on the south side of Baltimore street to the Falls, including the Maryland Institute over Marsh Market space and everything between Light street and the Falls, and Baltimore street and the waterfront. At 5:20 o'clock Monday afternoon the flames were among the lumber yards along Union dock, and, Acting Chief McAfee appreciating that the key of the situation was being contested, and that if the flames reached beyond the Falls nothing could keep them from continuing their destructive course through East Baltimore, concentrated his efforts at this point. Engine after engine was rushed to the scene, and with the gallant assistance of the fire boat Cataract, under Captain German, the great fire was at last conquered and became history.

The militia immediately stretched their cordon about the burned district, which, roughly speaking, today covers all that part of Baltimore between Liberty street on the west, Jones' Falls on the east, Lexington steeet on the north, and the waterfront and Pratt street on the south, and the work of razing the walls and clearing the streets was immediately begun by a force of several thousand city workmen. After six days, many of the streets through the ruins have been stripped of all debris, and the work of counting the cost and adjusting insurance has begun with a will. Baltimoreans are taking an optimistic view of the situation, and more than 200 firms have already announced their intention of rebuilding, either on their old sites or on new ones, and in the meantime temporary quarters have been secured elsewhere. All the newspapers lost their plants in the flames, but all have been publishing daily editions of their journals in Washington, on the plants of their Washington contemporaries.

From a spectacular standpoint, the fire was one of the most magnificent in history, particularly when the flames were raging among the great sky-scrapers in the financial district. Great tongues of fire leaped into the air for hundreds of feet, and were distinctly seen at points more than 100 miles from Baltimore in Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Some idea of the size of the district which has been swept may be gathered when it is stated that it includes more than 175 acres of ground—all of it in the heart of the buisiness section.

ARMY CAMP IN GARRETT COUNTY.

Resolutions in State Senate Requests The Government to Locate It Here.

Senator Palmer, of Garrett, presented the following joint resolution in the Senate Friday, and it was referred to the committee on federal relations:

"Whereas it has been provided by an act of Congress of the United States that four army camps shall be selected in the several sections of the United States for the rendezvous of national guardsmen from the several States and the United States troops, and

Whereas Garrett county, Maryland, near Oakland, has offered a site to the government on the most reasonable terms, with an abundance of cheap land, drained by beautiful streams of water, and a climate that cannot be surpassed in the United States, of sufficient distance from the large cities, located on the one of the finest trunk lines of railroad and with in direct communication with the city of Washington, it is deemed eminently fitted for the holding of such encampment, and especially for the health and discipline of the troops.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved by the General Assembly of Maryland, That the Senators and Representative from Maryland in Congress be, and they are hereby urgently requested to use their best efforts to make known to the proper authorities at Washington the advantages offered by the site in Garrett county for one of the army camps provided for the aforesaid act of Congress and to use all possible efforts to secure the location of said encampment in said Garrett county:

And be it further resolved, That the Governor of this State be, and he is hereby respectfully requested to send a copy of these resolutions, properly engrossed, attested with the great seal of the State, to each of the Senators and also a copy to the chief of staff of the United States army and a copy to the chairman of the committee on military affairs of the United States House of Representatives.

THE PASSING OF JOSHUA JOHNSON

A Prominent Native of Garrett County Answers Final Summons.

Monday afternoon about 5 o'clock Mr. Joshua Johnson one of the best known business men of Frostburg died at his home on Bowery-st. Mr. Johnson was about 66 years of age. He was one of the firm of Johnson Bros., lumber merchants, and lately purchased the controlling interest in the building and contracting part of the work in Frostburg, and has since traded under the firm name of Johnson & Son, having his son, Samuel, with him in the business. He has been a sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble for several years and on Friday of last week Dr. T. F. DeNauley performed an operation that was expected to alleviate the trouble. He gradually became weaker until death came to relieve his sufferings.

He is survived by his two children, Mr. Samuel and Miss Flossie Johnson. Also by the following brothers and sister: Messrs. Thomas, Charles and Samuel Johnson and Mrs. Carrie Coulehan.

Track Gang to be Increased.

Following a custom that has been in vogue for a number of years, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company in November last cut down the force employed in the maintenance of tracks. This has been done at the beginning of winter for two reasons, first because less progress can be made by trackmen in winter than in mild weather, and secondly because the company endeavors to cut down expenses in all departments toward the close of the year. The heavy freight traffic of the past few years has worn heavily upon the tracks and as a consequence spreading of rails have grown common. The tracks in many places are in bad condition. It has therefore been decided to increase the track force at once. A greater number of men will be engaged for track gangs during the coming month. During the coming spring and summer a greater number of men may be employed than usual.

THE river is deep at Shell Bend and the hills are high on either side of the narrow valley, and when rains are heavy to the northward trouble comes there in floods.

The Big Eastern Railway company had surveyed its line through the valley instead of cutting through the hill a mile above, and a difference of opinion existed as to the wisdom of the course. Certain it is that in a few years of heavy rains the damage from high water at Shell Bend amounted to a sum not lightly to be considered.

Jim nodded, his eyes twinkling.

"Well then, I—I—" Tim's usually ready tongue refused to perform its office. "I—well then—'twas good bread, Jim, and that's the truth!"

Then, laughing, the two men shook hands cordially.

The story of the fight chanced to travel far. An assistant roadmaster of the Great Eastern, walking over the track from Shell Bend station that morning, arrived in season to witness the somewhat extraordinary spectacle and to join in the shout that went up when Tim told the joke to the gang as being something altogether too good to keep. And the assistant roadmaster told the roadmaster of it, and the roadmaster told a conductor, and the conductor told a friend in the general offices, and so it went on until it came to the ears of the general manager himself. It was a division superintendent who told the general manager, and he coupled the recountal with references to the trouble that always came to Shell Bend when the wa- ter was right-

EDUCATING THE FAMILY.

Pupils at School Are Not the Only Ones Who Have to Get the Lessons.

Nowadays, when there are several children in the household, the task of aiding all of them with their lessons becomes rather a serious problem, says Youth's Companion. One overburdened mother, who was obliged to decline an invitation to pay a visit went on to give her reasons.

"No," she said, "I can't possibly leave home for a whole half day. You see, I'm obliged to spend all my time helping the children with their lessons, their teachers give them all so much outside work to do. It takes me from seven to ten every night to solve Harold's problems in algebra, from four to six every afternoon I have to look up the historical topics at the library for Isabel while she is struggling with her Latin, and from one until four I am either looking for pieces for little Henry to speak in the fifth grade or pressing Isabel's botanical specimens or translating Nellie's French the poor child's not very strong, you know, and I don't like to have her sit up too late at night."

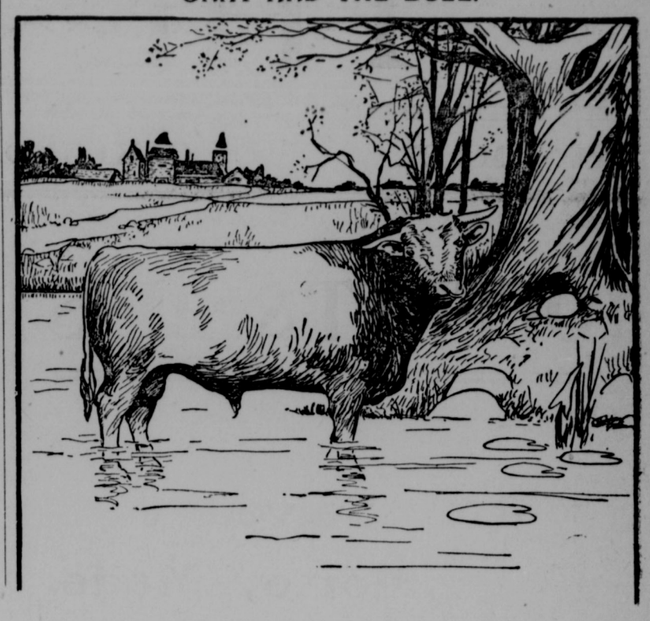
Masculine Half of the Race Hates Old Age Much More Than Do the Women.

The man was about 55, says the Philadelphia Record. He was rather bald. His wrinkles were many. His mustache was gray. The flesh of his cheeks and neck hung rather soft and flabby. Nevertheless, he looked vigorous and intelligent—he was handsomer take him altogether than he had been at 40. But he brought out a photograph of himself at 40 which hardly resembled him, so much had he changed, and, "if you want to print my picture, use this," he said to the reporter; "but don't lose it, for it's the only one I've got of myself at that age and I'd like to keep it, for, you know, I don't grow any younger." "I'd rather have your picture as you are to-day," said the reporter; "for you are handsomer now than you were at 40." "Oh, no; I am too old and wrinkled and bald now," said the man. "Use the 40-year-old picture." The reporter exclaimed with a puzzled laugh: "So many men are like you. Though they are old they insist on having young pictures printed. They fail to realize how much

GNAT AND THE BULL.



WHEN SHALL WE WIN?

When shall we win? Why, when we fire
Straight to the mark, and never tire;
When we hold fast, as we've begun,
And still work on, till all is done.

When shall we win? When, filled with zeal,
We face the foe of common weal,
And flinging to the wind each fear,
God's trumpet call alone we hear!

When shall we win? When we're content
To die, nor to retreat consent;
Resolved to shun the recreant's shame;
And rather choose a martyr's name.

When shall we win? 'Tis best to say—
"What can we do from day to day?"
With truth, and faith in truth, we dare
Not faint, or falter, or despair.

The cause of Right is charged to win—
Omnipotence is not with sin—
Since God is King, His cause will see
The light and crown of victory.

Be this our cause: that we endure:
'Tis this will keep our conscience pure,
And when the righteous cause has won,
We, too, shall hear the words, "Well done."

A THRILLING SCENE.

One of the Many Incidents of the Pledge Signing Crusade Being Waged.

Among the many hopeful signs indicating temperance progress none are more encouraging than the interest everywhere taken in the twentieth century pledge-signing crusade inaugurated by the National Temperance society November 23, 1902. Since that time nearly 3,000,000 pledges have been sent out free by the society in response to applications, and these applications have come from churches and Sabbath schools of all denominations and from all temperance organizations. Now the Epworth league plans a similar pledge-signing crusade.

Many of the reports that are being received by the society are deeply interesting. Some of them describe thrilling scenes as witnessed at public meetings. Take the following instance:

"THERE, I HAVE SIGNED."

It was a mixed audience that gathered in the hall; among them was one poor woman who had stolen away from her poverty-stricken ruined home, where she had left her babes, who, weak with hunger, had wept themselves to sleep. With borrowed cloak to hide her destitution this sorrowing woman had found a place among the crowd who had gathered to hear from a stranger how the victims of rum could be saved and their darkened homes made bright.

With intense interest she listened to the speaker, who, in the tale he recited, was describing her own case. He tells of hope; but no—that never can be hers. If he, her husband, was here, perhaps—and then a deep, deep sigh bursts from her lips; but she listens still, and more intently, to the speaker's moving words, until her heart is full, and looks around to see what effect the words of the speaker has upon her neighbors.

What ails the woman? Whom has she seen among the crowd? Her cheeks are flushed with burning crimson and her eyes are bright with living fire. It is—it must be he! She cannot be mistaken in him. Yes, 'tis her husband. Far back amongst the crowd he stands with folded arms, his gaze intent upon the speaker's face; deep earnestness is stamped on every feature as he gazes on.

See, he dashes a tear-drop from his eye. What has moved? The simple story of a woman's faith—a wounding patience. The wife watches him. She sees him dash away the tear-drop. A gathering mist is in her own eyes, but she forgets it all; forgets all but her other self. Now the speaker closes and there is a stirring among the crowd. Stepping down from the platform the speaker takes his place by the table on which is an open book, and in kindly, persuasive tones invites the audience to sign the pledge.

Make way! The figure of a man advances down the aisle. Steadily he presses his way to the table. Behind that figure is a female form—a shadow, a pale, faded thing, so feeble that she cannot stand, but leans upon his shoulder with one hand clasping his arm.

"There, I have signed!" exclaims the man, "and now, my wife, come home and let us pray to-night." Stop one moment. What a hand is hers? So thin, so trembling; yet she grasps as if it were a rod of iron to inscribe deep words of mercy on the rock forever.

They pass out together—that penniless and friendless pair, strong in each other's truth, rich in each other's love.

Weeks glide away—months—and today they are now so happy; blest with a beautiful home and rosy children.

Such are the scenes which cheer on every hand the laborers in this pledge-signing crusade.—National Advocate.

EYE STRAIN AND DRINKING.

The Intimate Relation Between the Two—Excessive Drinking Injures the Eyesight.

Dr. Gould, of Philadelphia, whose excellent papers on eye strain in literature and among literary men has opened a new field for the study of causes and conditions which influence civilization, has mentioned a most practical fact which can be confirmed in every study of inebriety. He says, in his Cleveland lecture, "that the enormous waste for alcoholic drinks during the past year can be traced in at least one-tenth of the actual loss to the evil effects of eye strain on the nervous system and digestive organs. The sleeplessness and the irritation with disturbed digestion, described by the term nervousness, headache, biliousness, is traceable to eye strains." One can readily see how these conditions would call for the narcotism of alcohol. Recently a number of studies have been made of the eyes of inebriates, and the injury found is very extensive and widespread. Whatever the condition of the eye may have been before alcohol was used, the eye more than all the other senses suffers from the continuous or periodic use of spirits. Dr. Gould's most suggestive statement is a fact which every student of inebriety can understand and confirm in many ways.

Even the severe arraignment of alcoholic teaching in public schools is replete with facts showing the value of the work and the accuracy of the books which are condemed. Altogether this report is a most powerful argument sustaining the experience of railroad companies, corporations, and all employers of labor. The critics who declare that alcohol has a food and stimulant value are theorists. If their contention is true, why should corporations regard the moderate use of alcohol with fear and alarm among their employes? Why should railroads discharge moderate drinkers and insist on total abstinence in all persons in their employ? In reality all directors and managers of railroads and corporations are becoming more and more insistent that their employes should be temperate. The mercantile agencies rate very low, as to responsibility, all persons who drink to excess or even to moderation.

Hhis is the teaching of experience, and is growing very rapidly in all business circles. Recent scientific experiments show that the moderate as well as the immoderate use dulls the senses and diminishes the capacity to reason clearly, and altogether enfeebles the brain in its activities. This explains why persons using spirits have less capacity and control of themselves and are weaker than total abstainers. The theory that alcohol has value as a food or stimulant dies hard. But every year experience hastens its certain death.—Journal of Inebriety.

CAUSES CANCER.

Research Proves That Alcohol Is a Potent Factor in This Dread Disease.

The statement of Dr. Wolfe on the increase of cancer, in the Nineteenth Century, showing a very close connection between inebriety and this disease, has attracted a great deal of attention and received striking confirmation from many sources. Dr. Wolfe was led to this belief by noticing a very high rate of mortality from cancer in districts where spirits was largely used. Wherever the amount of spirits consumed was increased the prevalence of cancer was most noted. Other observers have observed this connection, but have not been able to find other reasonable causes. One fact is very well understood, that the high consumption of spirits lowers the vitality and encourages toxaemic conditions which are favorable to the growth of cancer or other obscure germ disease. One author has traced the prevalence of cancer in persons with an inebriate ancestry. In a case under my care of four children born of inebriate parents two died from cancer, one was an epileptic, and the third, after a short period of drinking, died from pneumonia. It is very evident that further researches and studies in this direction will show some relations as to cause and effect that are not now suspected.

NEWS AND COMMENT.

The vote of the American citizen is one of the greatest moral levers, or one of the greatest crime forces in our civilization.—National Advocate.

We license men to sell drink. The drink sold makes men drunk. The drunkard commits murder. The murderer is hanged. Who is responsible?—National Advocate.

Last month Stoddard county, Mo., voted 2,176 for no license, 1,094 for license. The people were jubilant on learning the result. Over 300 children marched through the streets with banners and singing temperance songs.

Alderman White, of Birmingham, speaking at Cardiff, said: "I could give you 100 cases, and 100 after that, and 100 after that, of men who have come under my notice who have become trophies of Divine grace through the simple act of signing the pledge and keeping it."

A Filthy Record.

A man died in the city hospital of St. Louis the other week who had made a unique record for himself in the matter of whisky drinking and chewing tobacco. According to his own ante-mortem statement, in 13 years he took 4,725 drinks and chewed 12,045 plugs of tobacco. A pastor writes: "Here is a study of misplaced energy. To deliberately set out as a life task to chew that much tobacco and expectorate enough to float a battleship, and then to soak in addition so much whisky—could any punishment be more terrible—any record more foully useless?"

UNNOTICED BATTLE

How the Civil War Began at Monroe City in Missouri

It is customary for the teacher of United States history to inform her pupils that the first battle of the civil war occurred at Bull Run on the 1st of July, 1861, and it seems strange that in all these years no Missouri voice has been raised in protest against this false dictum, writes Emile Ruck de Schell, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

At Fort Sumter much good ammunition was shot away; but it seems that Maj. Anderson finally surrendered because he was not fond of a diet of pork. At Monroe City, almost two weeks before the battle of Bull Run, there was a bona fide battle which lasted two whole days and one man was killed!

At the spring convention the union vote had outweighed the secessionist, and a compromise on a so-called neutrality was effected; but there was no neutrality in the heart of the governor; and the thorn in his side, the menace to his peace and to his plans, was the Hannibal & St. Joseph railroad, the road that had been built with Boston capital and was operated almost wholly by Germans, all of whom were loyal to the union. When word reached John W. Brooks, the president of the road, that Caleb Jackson was going to tear up the Yankee railroad, he appealed to President Lincoln for military protection. In response to this appeal the president ordered Col. R. F. Smith, with the Sixteenth Illinois infantry, to cross the river and do sentinel duty along the railroad.

The strategic point for northern

AN UNSEEN FOE OPENED FIRE.

Missouri was an almost impregnable position between the forks of Salt river, and here Col. Tom Harris had been mustering his recruits, and his camp was already about 600 strong. On the 7th of July Gen. Lyon ordered Col. Smith to march upon Harris and break up the camp.

The plans of the campaign were faultless, with one exception. The colonel neglected to order fair weather, and it rained. The soldiers did not mind the booming of the cloud guns. That seemed quite appropriate. It was the drenching rain that rendered their spanking new uniforms all soggy that somehow took the romance out of the situation and made them wish, as they crawled out of the box cars at Monroe, that they had remained at home.

Next morning the sun shone out clear and hot, and as soon as breakfast was over the momentous march was begun. As the soldiers were making their way through a narrow defile in the Swinkey hills an unseen foe opened fire on them at short range. A few took down their muskets and fired a counter salute into the ambuscade of thick timber and underbrush. There was a scurrying among the bushes, and Capt. Grigsby's force of 50 guerrillas fled through the woods like a herd of frightened deer, for one of their number had been mortally wounded.

This little adventure served to warn Col. Smith that he was marching into what he termed a "veritable death trap," and he determined to get out before more damage was done. It was already almost four o'clock, so it was deemed best to go into camp for the night. Not until then did it dawn upon the commander that he had left his train load of supplies and ammunition at Monroe, with not so much as a policeman to guard it. And the cloud of smoke that presently enveloped the heavens made plain the fact that there was something doing at Monroe. The loss to the federal cause through the destruction of the station, train and supplies was about $40,000; but the loss was really much greater than this, a loss that was not to be estimated in cold figures, the loss of pride, prestige and—dinner. Col. Smith had in him the making of a successful commander, and it required just such an experience as this to put him on his mettle.

As soon as the scene of the recent "conflagration," as he fondly termed it, was reached, he set his men to work picking up bolt pins and nuts from among the smoldering ruins of the train. This helped them to realize that they had "burned their fingers," and the scraps of metal could be used instead of orthodox artillery ammunition. Then he took possession of the seminary building and put himself in position to endure a siege.

Soon the news was carried over the country that 600 Yanks were "treed" up at Monroe, and every able-bodied man, woman and child within a radius of a dozen miles turned out to see the fun. Col. Harris, finding that Col. Smith's little visit had been deferred, determined that the proposed meeting should take place, even if he had to change his role from host to guest. Accordingly, he summoned all his men and marched to Monroe, where he sat down in front of the seminary and waited for the union commander to come out and "shake hands." By noon of Wednesday, the 9th of July, there were more than 1,000 rebels on the prairie around the town, all eager to help poke the game out of the hole. Finally it was decided that a cannon would be required to compel the federals to surrender, and there were those among the besiegers who knew where one could be found. A fine nine-pounder, together with five balls, had been hidden under a haystack on Blair Todd's farm near Palmyra, and under a sham woodpile near by was a six-pounder, with about 40 balls. The smaller cannon, however, was not mounted, and hence unfit for use. Cannon and balls had to be hauled 20 miles in a wagon, so it was one o'clock Thursday before the bombardment began.

Never had there been such a jubilee in that section of the country. Ladies and children drove up in their carriages. Rustic lovers held parasols over their sweethearts while they watched a sure-enough war battle. But the show was not without its drawbacks. There is an art in gunning as there is in most things, and the man who operated the rebel cannon was a sort of caricature artist. Only three out of the 34 balls struck anywhere near the seminary building. Indeed, some of the spectators asserted that the seminary was the only safe place for miles around. Yet the gunner was not wholly to blame. He was firing six-pound balls from a nine-pound cannon! It was fortunate that the size of cannon and balls was not reversed, or the soldiers might have been set to work with their jack knives to whittle the balls down to fit the gun. Meanwhile the federal soldiers inside the building sent out an occasional volley of bolts and screws; but their position was anything but agreeable.

At half-past four, when Col. Smith was considering the advisability of a surrender, there was a sudden commotion outside. A snorting engine came puffing down the track, bearing the troops that had been left at Hannibal, and as soon as it came within range a brass cannon on one of the flat cars opened its ominous mouth and saluted the picnickers. Language is inadequate to describe the effect of this untimely interference. In an instant the prairie was a chaos of flying horses and flying men. Soldiers threw away their guns and took refuge in the carriages with the ladies. Erstwhile constant lovers forsook their sweethearts and fled in dismay. To use the old Greek military term, Col. Harris and his men "skedaddled."

That night word reached Washington that a desperate battle was in progress at Monroe, and that the union forces were being annihilated. Col. John M. Palmer, Col. U. S. Grant and a few other men of subsequent military celebrity were ordered to the rescue, and by Friday morning more than 2,000 troops were on their way to the seat of hostilities.

And yet the seminary fight at Monroe City is not given so much as a mention among the decisive battles of the civil war.

An Invitation to Prayer.

Gen. Gordon says that, on one occasion during the civil war, a threatened attack of federal troops brought together a number of confederate officers from several commands. After a conference as to the proper disposition of troops for resisting the expected assault, the southern officers withdrew into a small log hut standing near, and united in prayer to Almighty God for His guidance. As they assembled, one of the generals was riding within hailing distance, and Gen. Harry Heth, of Hill's corps, stepped to the door of the log cabin and called to him to come and unite with his fellow officers in prayer. The mounted general did not understand the nature of Gen. Heth's invitation, and replied: "No, thank you, general; no more at present; I've just had some."

Many women are denied the happiness of children through derangement of the generative organs. Mrs. Beyer advises women to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I suffered with stomach complaint for years. I got so bad that I could not carry my children but five months, then would have a miscarriage. The last time I became pregnant, my husband got me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the first bottle I was relieved of the sickness of stomach, and began to feel better in every way. I continued its use and was enabled to carry my baby to maturity. I now have a nice baby girl, and can work better than I ever could before. I am like a new woman."—Mrs. Frank Beyer, 22 S. Second St., Meriden, Conn.

Another case which proves that no other medicine in the world accomplishes the same results as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I was married for five years and gave birth to two premature children. After that I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it changed me from a weak, nervous woman to a strong, happy and healthy wife within seven months. Within two years a lovely little girl was born, who is the pride and joy of my household. If every woman who is cured feels as grateful and happy as I do, you must have a host of friends, for every day I bless you for the light, health and happiness Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought to my home. Sincerely yours, Mrs. Mae P. Wharry, Flat 31, The Norman, Milwaukee, Wis."

MINIMIZING THE PAIN.

He Wanted the Best Watch, But Didn't Like to Pay the Price All at One Time.

"What's that watch worth?" asked Mr. Kloce, pointing to one in the show-case. "Ten dollars," replied the jeweler. "I'll take it," said the customer, and after paying for it he went out, relates Youth's Companion.

The next day he came round again.

"This watch doesn't exactly suit me," he said. "What's that one worth?" pointing to another.

"Fifteen dollars."

"I'll take that instead of this one, if you don't mind."

"Certainly."

A day or two later he came again.

"How good a watch have you got for $25?" he inquired.

"Well, $25 will get a pretty good timepiece," said the jeweler, handing one out. "Here's one with a gold-filled case, and jewelled. The movement is warranted."

"I'll take it."

He paid the difference, took the watch and went away.

After the lapse of a few days he made his appearance once more.

"Have you got a first-class watch with a solid gold case that you can sell for $50?" he said.

"Yes. Here it is."

"Well, I'll take it," said Mr. Kloce. "Here's the other watch and $25. That's the one I really wanted at first, but I hated to pay out all that money at once."

Capitalization has proved to be a somewhat unsatisfactory substitute for capital.—Puck.

Safe.

With the cares of business behind him, and thoughts of wife and baby in his suburban home occupying his mind to the exclusion of everything else, Hilltop hurried down Chambers street to the ferry. He paused for a moment at a busy crossing just as a truck laden with kegs of fresh Vermont maple sirup backed heavily against the curb. Down came a tub from the top-most tier and broke with a dull, sickening thud at Hilltop's feet. He looked in dismay at his sirup-covered feet and trousers and exclaimed:

"Here's a pretty mess!"

"Well," responded the driver, "it's not on me."—N. Y. Times.

Public Schools.

A big effort is being made to have the present Legislature do something substantial for the public schools of the State. The committee appointed by the various educational bodies to revise the school laws of the State has made its report to the Legislature and is now endeavoring to have the report favorably considered. The most important parts of this report are the recommendations for an increase in the State tax for the public schools and a guaranteed minimum salary of not less than $350 for any teacher. The committee hopes and expects to see these recommendations adopted by the Legislature. The committee has arranged to meet the Finance and Ways and Means Committees on Thursday, March 3rd, to urge these and other recommendations. Public school officials, teachers and all friends of the public schools are requested and urged to be at Annapolis on that day and join with the committee in presenting the claims of the public schools for more and greater consideration at the hands of the Legislature which recognizes the needs of the school and both the political parties are pledged to their improvement. United effort on the part of the friends of the public schools is all that is needed to secure some measure of relief for them.

MEADOW MOUNTAIN.

The prospect of a telephone line in this vicinity appears very bright at this wrigting. We hope the time will speedly come when we can enjoy some of the modern conveniences.

Mr. A. R. Bernard has moved his saw mill on Salem Lee's land and expects to have it in operation in the near future.

Mr. James B. O'Brien is preparing to erect a very substantial barn.

Mr. Aaron Pritts and son Arthur were up at Oakland last Saturday on business

Mr. William Bailey has procured employment at A. W. Murray's.

Preaching next Sunday at 2.30 o'clock p. m.

Mr. Columbus Mason made a flying trip to Beckman last Monday.

Mrs. Caroline Colmer and son Clarence are visiting at Barton at this writing.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

J. M. Winters will have charge of Senator Ravenscroft's farm, west of the Park.

James Jarboe, who has been in the U. S. service in the Philippines, has reached San Francisco, en route home,

L. E. Hanson has completed his job of plumbing at Blaine, W. Va, and is at home, getting ready for another job at Elkins.

Jacob Cuppett, a student at the Seminary at Buckhannon, W. Va., with his wife, spent the Sabbath with Merchant Cuppett and family.

Sol. B. Harvey has purchaed the Edward O'Donnel farm, south east of the Park. Consideration $2350.

The appointment of Mr. J. R. Kerfoot, as justice of the peace, by the Governor, gives general satisfaction.

Rev Dr. Ward preached an exellent sermon last Sabbath evening, in the Methodist church of this place.

By the retirement of Mr. Chas. Martin, the firm of hammond & Martin has been dissolved.

The Virginia Home will be under the management of Mrs. Laughlin, who ran the Mount Washington Home the past summer.

Mrs. Winchell, of Ohio, has rented the cottage she occupied last season, and will come to the Park at an early date.

The boys no longer ask "who struck Billy Patterson?

We hear a rumor that Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dunn will not return to the Hicks House this spring, but remain in Moundsville. We are sorry for this. They knew how to keep hotel. This community will suffer a loss in not having the Hicks House open to the public.

Mr. P. B. Gough, at the present, is in the employ of Mr. C. Hammond.

BECKMAN.

Again our young folks are saddened as they see the good sleighing disappear. Instead of jingling of bells it is rain, rain, rain.

Messrs. A. S. Walters and O. C. Thompson took a flying trip to Oakland Saturday.

Our community was shocked to learn of the death of Mr. Otho Paugh, who died Sunday morning at 6,50 o'clock of pneumonia.

Mr. C. T. Raley is quite proud over the arrival of twin boys at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Rhodes and family were calling on Mrs. Rhode's sister, Mrs. Frak McRobie, Sunday.

Mr. Hammill Murray, of Reynoldsville, Pa., arrived at his brother's Mr. A. W. Murray's one day last week.

Mr. S. O. Wiley and sisters whose names we haye not learned, called at P. F. Mellinger's one day last week.

Viola, little daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Beckman, who was on the sick list, is better at this writing.

Mr. Charles Sechler, of Bittinger, was in our quiet little burg Saturday.

Miss Mollie Rhodes was a pleasant guest of Miss Blanche O'Brien, Saturday and Sunday.

A merry sleighing party of Meadow Mountain folks spent an enjoyable time at Theo. Beckman's Saturday evening.

SNOW BIRD.

SUNNYSIDE.

Mine-tie making is the chief pursuit of our people at this time. Making money through tie making and tie hauling is the leading thought among our people.

Messrs. Weymer & Ridder are moving their saw mill, planer and shingle mill near this place for the purpose of manufacturing lumber and shingles, and will soon be able to accommodate the public.

We believe this to be a good time for the leading church people of our community to press to a finish the union church building that has so long been talked of. Some of our churches have been without pastors for quite a while, which is very discouraging to many of us. However, that difficulty might be overcome and spiritual advisers would rally to our rescue if we could only have a building for a united people to worship in.

We are glad to notice through one of the leading newspapers of West Virginia, that L. M. Barnard is meeting with much success in ministerial work at Clarksburg W. Va., His sermons are reported strong and helpful. Large audiences listen with deep interest to his preaching, and as a revivalist he is very fine.

We are sorry to learn of the continued illness of Miss Emma DeBerry. Her many friends here were hopeful that a change of climate might prove beneficial to her health and we are sorry to learn that such has not been realized.

George Stahl who has for several years been afflicted with articular rheumatism, is very poorly.

Several cases of scarlet fever are reported in the Red House community.

Several cases of heart trouble have recently been cured among our young people by the affected ones employing the process prescribed by the law of our State. Others similarly affected should do likewise and be happy.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

The thrifty manufacturers of maple sweets are daily expecting the busy sugar season to open and doubtless the first favorable day will witness busy scenes among huge stacks of keelers and steam filled camps.

The last meeting of the interesting Literary Society at this place will be held on next Saturday evening. This society has held many interesting and helpful meetings during the winter season, and much of its success was due to the energetic and capable management of Mr. E. S. Brenneman, who is charge of the public school here.

Mr. Mahlon Brenneman, in company with Dennis Brenneman, went to Petersburg, Pa., last Saturday for a short visit to old friends at that place.

A mad dog went out from this community a few days ago and covered a large territory in his wild career. Two persons were bitten, according to report, one at Grantsville, and another at Friendsville, at which place the brute was killed.

Mr. G. W. Engle, of Baltimore, spent Sunday with his family at this place.

Miss Malinda Orendorf, who has been ill for a few days, is improving.

J. L. Beechy and Brothers, have purchased some coal land on Cherry Creek, and will operate a mine there to supply local consumers.

Miss Laura Facenbaker has secured the place of domestic in the home of T. J. Lohr, recently vacated by Miss Clara Beechy. Miss Beechy will return to Elizabeth, Pa. where her sister is ill.

Mr. Lawrence Bittinger, of Grantsville, was seen here on Sunday last.

Mr. Amos Reckner was elected elder in the Lutheran church here last Sunday morning.

Miss Malinda Orendorf entertained a number of her young friends Sunday afternoon.

Resolutions of Respect.

The following resolutions of respect passed by Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias, of Oakland, upon the death of Mrs. Chas. J. Newman, are published in these columns by request of the lodge:

Funeral of Mrs. Hoye.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Hoye, widow of the late Edward Hoye, of Oakland, took place from the Garrett Memorial church Saturday afternoon at two o'clock the services being conducted by Rev. S. M. Miller, the pastor, after which interment was made in the Oakland cemetery. A large number of relatives and friends attended the funeral. Mrs. Hoye was a member of the Presbyterian church and was held in high esteem by all who knew her. She leaves surviving her a daughter, Miss Marion, who will continue to reside in the home on Liberty street. Mr. Hoye died several years ago and an only son, Adolphus, preceded him to the grave some eight or ten years.

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

$24,000,000 FOR WAGON ROADS.

Appropriation of $8,000,000 a Year But States must Contribute Like Amount.

There is pending in Congress a bill called the Brownlow Bill, introduced by Hon. Walter P. Brownlow, of Tennessee, which appropriates $24,000,000 as national aid for the building of Wagon roads. This sum is to be available at the rate of $8,000,000 a year; is to be divided according to the population of the different States, but no State is to receive less than $250,000. Every State receiving National aid must appropriate and spend a like amount.

The asserted growth of sentiment in favor of the measure has been chiefly due to the institution and extension of the rural free mail delivery system, which has brought the disadvantages of poor roads home to the farmers and other country dwellers. Applications for the extension of the free rural delivery system are being refused by the Post Office authorities on account of the roads, and the disappointed communities demand their improvement. These demands are so in excess of the ability of the local boards to respond to that for a year past Highway Commissioners all over the country have been putting themselves on record in favor of National aid.

It is claimed on behalf of the bill that the plan of distribution is more equitable than the distribution of some $32,200,000 a year under the Rivers and Harbors Bill, which goes principally to the seaboard States and to the Mississippi delta.

In support of the Brownlow Bill as a general measure, attention is called to the fact that France has 23,603 miles of wagon road, which are built and maintained by the nation, and Italy about 5,000 miles, while many of the States of the Union spend hundreds of thousands of dollars annually in aid of highway improvement.

Attacked By a Vicious Dog.

From the Grantsville correspondence of the Meyersdale Commercial the following item of interest is gleaned:

While on his way home on Saturday night Jesse Slick was attacked by a large strange dog and had rather a rough experience with the vicious animal. The dog succeeded in slightly lacerating Jessie's face before he was beaten off. The dog then came on up the street and attacked Irving Broadwater who luckily escaped with a loss of a small part of his trousers. The animal is not thought to have been rabid, but simply very vicious.

Child-Study and Sunday-School Methods

A series of questions were propounded to the children of the primary grdes in the public schools of Boston sometime since. The question related to the commonest things of nature, changes of seasons, day and night, rain, ice, snow, light, lightning, and thunder. The answers to these questions are a study in psychology. They illustrate the crudity of the mental conceptions of little children and the oddity of their use of language Successful teaching absolutely require that the teacher shall find the children where they are; shall get into the same world with them, and use terms and symbols that are intelligible to them. And this is to be done without affectation, which children are quick to detect and resent.

PERFECT

Poultry and Garden Fence.

For some time we have been arranging with the factory to manufacture a SPECIAL POULTRY FENCE, one that could be used for fencing gardens, and strong enough, if necessary, to keep out horses, cattle and hogs.

After a careful study as to the requirements, they have designed and built a close enough to turn little chickens. It is not a netting, understand, but a good, substantial fence, and made of galvanized steel wire the smallest of which are heavier than the wire used by most fence builders for a regular fence. It is made after the style of our electrically welded field fencing, put up in 10 rod rolls, 3, 4 and 5 feet high, and can be sold at a small advance over the ordinary poultry netting.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

Calvert Coal and Iron Company, et. al., vs.
Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines, et. al.
No. 1252 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree annulling, cancelling and setting aside a pretended deed from the Calvert Coal and Iron Company to one Charles O. Beaumont, Trustee, dated 10th day of May, 1902, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 597, one of the Land records of Garrett county, Maryland.

The bill states that a certain Robert A. Parrish, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was, in his lifetime, the owner of 2975 shares of the capital stock of the plaintiff Calvert Coal and Iron Company, which whole capital stock contisted of 3000 shares and that Calvert Coal and Iron Company is the owner in fee of a tract of land in Garrett county, Maryland, known as Lot No. 3 of the sub-division of "Beatty's Plains," containing 900 acres, more or less, and is in possession thereof and has been in exclusive and continuous possession of the same for a long term of years under a deed from Joseph T. Thornton, trustee, duly recorded in Liber W. H. T. No. 11, folio 51, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, a copy of said deed being filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit A;" that on the 22nd of February, 1901, the said Robert A. Parish, being owner of the aforesaid shares of stock made and executed his last will and testament; on or about the 20th day of March, 1901, died without having revoked the same and said will was duly admitted to probate by the Register of Wills of the City and County of Philadelphia, Penn., and is now of record of record in the office of said Register of Wills in Will Book No. 224, page 581, and that Letters Testamentary were granted thereon unto the plaintiff, Marie Gaul, the executrix therein named, and duly certified copies of said will and a certificate of the grant of said letters are filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibits B and C," respectively. The bill further charges that the said defendants, Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines, Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, and the other defendents whose names to the complainants are unknown have conspired together with the intent and purpose to fraudulently, illegally and unlawfully deprive the complainants of their right and title to the aforesaid tract of land and charge that the said defendants above named and the other defendants whose names to the plaintiffs are unknown have assumed to act as the officers, stockholders, directors and agents of the plaintiff Calvert Coal and Iron Company and have attempted to exercise the rights conferred by law upon said plaintiff and have assumed to exercise the franchises thereof, all of which acts on the part of the said defendants above named are illegal and void, they the said defendants having no interest whatever in said property, stock, franchises and rights of Calvert Coal and Iron Company, and that the deed to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, dated the 10th day of May, 1902, purporting to have been executed by Winslow Mason fraudulently representing himself to be the President and Charles F. Haines, fraudulently representing himself and pretending to be the duly constituted attorney and agent of Calvert Coal and Iron Company, whereby they undertook to convey the aforesaid tract of land to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, and which deed is recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 597, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and a copy of which is filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit D," is a fraud and constitutes a cloud upon the title of Calvert Coal and Iron Company to said land, the stock of which corporation with the exception of twenty-five shares belongs to and is the sole property of the said plaintiff Marie Gaul, executrix and sole devisee under the will of said Robert A. Parrish, deceased, and that the said pretended deed, unless set aside and canceled by the Court of Equity, will deprive the complainants of all their rights and interests of every kind to which they are entitled in said property and will strip the complainants of all said property and will bestow the same upon the said defendants above named and their co-conspirators, whose names are to the complainants unknown and who have assumed the power and undertaken to exercise the franchises of Calvert Coal and Iron Company and who have no right and title to the same.

That the pretended deed to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, is wholly without legal consideration, is fraudulent and void and should be set aside, cancelled and annulled by this Court.

The bill then prays that the said pretended deed purporting to have been made and executed on the 10th day of May, 1902, by said Calvert Coal and Iron Company, through its pretended president, Winslow Mason, and Charles F. Haines, its pretended attorney in fact and agent, to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, may be annulled, cancelled and set aside by the decree of this Court, for general relief and for an order of publication against the said Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines and Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, who are non-residents of this State, and also an order of publication according to law, requiring the unknown persons and parties who have assumed to act in connection with the above named defendants as officers, stockholders, directors and agents of said Calvert Coal and Iron Company, of the object and substance of this bill and warning them to be and appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor on or before a certain day to be named therein to show cause, if any, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

It is thereupon, this 11th day of February, 1904, ordered, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 12th day of March, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 29th day of March next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Money to loan.——J. C. Renninger attorney, Oakland.

Mr. John F. Browning, of Thayerville, was in Oakland Tuesday for a few hours on business.

Mr. Elwood Offutt made a business, and pleasure trip to New York recently, returning to Oakland Sunday night.

Mr. Eugene Baumgartner, who was in Baltimore several days last week on business and also visiting relatives, returned to Oakland Tuesday morning.

Messrs. William Hinebaugh and Thomas Kimmell, who spent several days last week at Cameron, W. Va., returned to Oakland on Friday evening.

Harry White is moving his barber shop from the opera house to the Ravenscroft building on Second street this morning. The location is an excellent one.

Dr. E. H. Bartlett accompanied Senator Palmer to Annapolis Monday night where the former was accorded an audience by Governor Warfield concerning the civil appointments for Garrett county. Dr. Bartlett returned to Oakland yesterday.

Dr. J. Lee McComas left Oakland this morning for Baltimore where he will remain indefinitely as the guest of relatives and friends.

Mrs. William Weber went to Milwaukee, Wis., on last Wednesday evening where she will visit her father and other relatives a few weeks.

Mrs. K. R. Rasche and son Leo who went to Pittsburg a week or two ago to attend the funeral of Mr. Thomas Rowan, Mrs. Rasche's father, have returned home.

Rev. F. M. Glenn, of Belington, W. Va., a former minister of the Loch Lynn U. B. church, is in Oakland today seeing some of his old friends. Mr. Glenn may move back to this section in the fall.

Several Oakland ladies and gentlemen are already making preparations to go to St. Louis during the coming summer to attend the great fair which will be opened sometime during the month of May.

The Bar Association of Garrett count whose library has since its orgnization has been located in rooms in the McComas building on Second street, was moved on Thursday to a room in the First National bank building.

Mr. S. T. Wilson, who left this county a year or two ago and settled on the Eastern Shore near Pocomoke City, arrived in Oakland last Friday and went from here the same afternoon to Wilson where he visited his mother for a few days, returning home yesterday.

Mr. Bayard T. Frantz, of Crellin, was in Oakland Tuesday afternoon from which point he departed the same evening for Gypsy, W. Va., where he expects to enter the employment of the Fairmont Coal and Coke Company as a salesman in one of the stores controlled by that corporation.

Editor Litzinger, of Oakland and Grafton, spent a few days here last and this week. His troubles with his Grafton plant are not yet at an end. On Saturday his entire force of compositors walked out to take positions with a new newspaper to be launched in that town this week. No one but those acquainted with the workings of a newspaper office can appreciate the position of an employing printer or publisher under these circumstances.

LOST HIS LEG.

F. H. Tibbets, of Bloomington, Injured at the Station in Oakland.

Mr. Freely H. Tibbets, who resided with his family at Loch Lynn Heights until recently and then moved to his old home at Bloomington, met with a very serious accident at the Baltimore and Ohio station in Oakland yesterday afternoon whereby he lost his leg and was otherwise injured.

Mr. Tibbets attempted to get on the eastbound accommodation after it had started but missing his hold he was dragged some distance and then thrown between the rails and the elevated platform alongside the track. The entire train with the exception of the rear truck of the last car had passed the point where he was lying when he threw his leg in front of the wheels which passed over it, severing it just above the ankle. He was taken to the McComas Sanitarium immediately after the accident occurred and there the mangled portion of his leg was amputated by Drs. McComas and Hinebaugh.

Mr. Tibbets friends will be sorry to learn of his misfortune.

Mr. Grant Lipscomb, of Deer Park, was a visitor to Oakland Saturday.

Mrs. Margaret Lawton has been quite ill several days recently with an attack of pleurisy.

Merchants S. P. Specht and W. C. Jones, of Deer Park, were in Oakland last Saturday on business.

Collector of the Port Ravenscroft came up to Oakland last Friday evening and spent Saturday in town on business.

State's Attorney Thayer and Mr. E. H. Sincell were at Cumberland last Friday evening on professional business.

Mrs. Leah F. Sincell went down to Keyser Saturday afternoon where she will visit her son John T. Sincell a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. James A Delawder, who spent a week with Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Delawder down at McHenry, returned to Oakland on Saturday.

Monday being a legal holiday the banks in Oakland as well as those located at Grantsville and Friendsville were closed. The postoffice in Oakland observed Sunday hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Little went to Baltimore last Thursday night where the latter will remain several weeks visiting her mother. Mr. Little returned home Monday.

Hon. R. T. Browning, of Thayerville, William Miller, of Accident, Edward I. West and Editor James D. Hamill, who were at Annapolis and Baltimore several days last week, returned to Oakland Saturday night.

Mr. M. H. McKenzie yesterday removed his family to the farm he purchased near Finzel, Garrett county, Md. "Mose" as the boys call him, had an extra cold day for his flitten. We hope he will be successful and prosperous in his new calling.—Meyersdale Republican.

In St. Marks Ev. Lutheran church on next Sunday night Rev. E. Manges, the pastor, will preach upon the Russion-Japanese war and the cause which led to it. Mr. Manges being an old soldier his talk will be more than ordinarily interesting. All are invited to attend.

Baltimore and Ohio Detective Jerry O. Browning, of Pittsburg, who was on duty in Baltimore a few days succeeding the great fire in that city, arrived in Oakland Saturday morning and remained here a day or two visiting his parents. Mr. and Mrs. John T. Browning.

Owing to the illness of Rev. Dr. Scott, who was suffering with a light attack of pneumonia, no preaching services was held on Sunday in St. Paul's M. E. church. We are pleased to state that the gentleman has about recovered and that in all probability services will be resumed on next Sunday.

Mr. E. A. Weimer, County Treasurer-elect, was in Oakland yesterday for an hour or two and while here made arrangements to move his family to town some time next week. Rooms have been secured by Mr. Weimer in the Merrill property. He will assume the duties of his office about April 15th.

Messrs. J. M. Davis & Son, the Oakland hardware merchants, are doing some telling advertising in these columns just now. They have prevailed the manufacturers of a wire fence to place upon the market an article for poultry and garden enclosures and this indispensible commodity to the tidy farmer and townsman they advertise today. Read their announcement in another column.

Mr. William Weber, of the firm of H. Weber & Sons, and a former vice president of the American Carnation Society, will attend the meeting of that association to be held at Detroit. Mich., on March 3rd and 4th, upon which occasion he will exhibit some of the products of his firm and we predict will carry off all honors as usual. After the adjournment of the Society Mr. Weber will join his wife at Milwaukee where she is at present making a visit to relatives.

A BIG FIRE AVERTED.

The Glades Hotel Narroly Missed Being Burned Sunday.

Flames were discovered in one of the second floor bedrooms of the Glades Hotel Sunday afternoon, caused by an over heated stove setting fire to a pile of wood placed near it by the porter. A few buckets of of water quenched the flames but if the discovery had not been made when it was in all probability the entire building would have been consumed.

Mr. R. E. Sliger spent Sunday with relatives and friends at Piedmont, W. Va.

Attention is directed this week to the advertisment of W. H. Bartlett, the groceryman, which will be found elsewhere in this paper. Since embarking in buisness Mr. Bartlett has made many friends by his square dealing and by his efforts to please his rapidly growing trade. The line of goods carried by him cannot be duplicated in town for quality as nothing but the best at moderate prices can be had at his store.

The advertisement of the New York Life Insurance Company, McCandlish & Savage, agents, which will be found on the eighth page of this paper, represents one of the very best insurance companies in the world. The local agents have done a considerable amount of buisness in their immediate locality and are now preparing to branch out and cover new territory. They are energetic and any statement made by them concerning their business may be absolutely relied upon.

Mr. F. T. Martin, of Fairmont, who secured the franchise from the Mayor and Town Council to install a system of waterworks in Oakland, and who last week contracted with Dr. J. H. McCarty, of New York, to put in the plant, is very much gratified with the manner in which the citizens of Oakland are taking hold of the affairs nearly the entire population look upon the matter very favorably and express their intention of having water installed in their homes and places of business.

Mr. S. T. Jones, who purchased the property on Second street known as the old Commercial Hotel some month ago, is making extensive improvements to the building, both inside and outside. A hot water heating plant has been installed and the house given a general overhauling. As soon as all the repairs have been completed Mr. Jones will occupy the property. The upper story of the Garrett National bank which is now being occupied by Mr. Jones and his family will be converted into office rooms as soon as he vacates the same and they will be occupied by Mr. G. S. Hamill and the Preston Lumber Company.

The Masonic lodge of Oakland has rented one of the finely appointed rooms on the third floor of the First National bank building into which the furniture belonging to the fraternity was moved on Monday and where hereafter the communications of the lodge will be held. The room is heated with steam and lighted with electricity and adjoining it there are preparation and ante rooms likewise heated and lighted. Some additional furniture will be put in by the lodge at an early date and a handsome carpet will likely be placed on the floor. The lodge will meet in its new quarters tonight for the first time and all members are requested to be present if possible.

In the Dawn of the Day

By THOMAS P. MONTFORT.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

JOHN RANSOM was experiencing the bitter disappointment that too often comes with the realization of a long-cherished hope.

In his little cabin, far up the mountain side, he sat at a table counting a heap of gold. After long years of struggling in the mines of California he had at last struck a rich lead, and in one hour had bounded from poverty to wealth. During all the years of his striving his dreams had been of this hour, and now that it had come he was not happy.

Presently he pushed the gold from him and walked to the door, where he stood looking out into the night. Over the valleys and mountains the moonlight lay soft and warm, while all around there was silence, save for the soughing of the winds among the pines, and the subdued strains of a violin which floated up from the camp down in the gulch.

Upon a small cabin just below him Ransom fixed his gaze. It was a mean, unpretentious place, but for him it held a treasure greater than all the gold in the world.

Presently there floated up to him the faint whisper of a weary sigh, and looking more closely, he saw a woman standing near the cabin. He saw her indistinctly, but to him it was enough. He needed but a glance to recognize her.

That woman was the cause, innocent and unconscious, of all his bitter disappointment, and all day he had been cultivating a resolution never to see her again But in an instant his resolution was gone, and the next minute he was by her side. She was standing with her arms folded against a tree, and her head pillowed on them, weeping bitterly.

For a little while he gently stroked her hair in silence, then, bending his head close to hers, he said, in tender, pleading tones: "Don't, Clem. Please don't. It hurts me for you to weep like this."

She made no reply, nor did she look up, but she continued to weep. He longed to take her in his arms and hold her to him, and kiss away her tears and troubles. But he did not forget himself so far.

"What is it, Clem?" he spoke again presently. "Has your father been cruel to you again to-night?"

She shook her head, but remained silent. He waited a moment, stroking her hair softly, then went on, more gently still:

"Poor girl! I wish I could do something to make your life happier, for you deserve it. There is nothing I would not do for you, even to giving you my own life to shield you from hardship and sorrows. It kills me to see you suffer, and when you are cruelly treated it is all I can do to refrain from interfering where I have no right."

She raised her head and looked into his eyes, and in a broken voice said:

"You don't know what you are saying. You are crueler to me than anyone else has ever been."

He looked at her in astonishment.

"Clem!" he said. "What do you mean? I cruel to you! Why do you say such a thing as that?"

"It is true," she answered. "You are the only friend I have on earth, yet you have been crueler to me than all the world."

He looked at her intently for a moment, then slowly shook his head. In low, hurt tones he said:

"You have no right to say that, Clem, for God knows I would not injure you by so much as the weight of a finger or one harsh word."

"I know," she replied, "but there are things that hurt more than blows and words."

He came closer, and took her hands in his. She tried to draw them away, but he held them fast.

"I do not understand," he said. "If I have ever been cruel to you I did not know it. I want you to tell me what I have done."

She shook her head, and again attempted to draw away her hands.

"No," he said. "You shall not go. Not until you have told me."

"I cannot tell you," she answered, with her head bent low. "You have no right to ask."

"I have every right," he asserted. "Tell me, Clem, wherein I have been cruel."

"I can't."

"But you must. I will not let you go until you do."

"You"—she hesitated a moment—"have broken my heart. You are going away."

Her voice was scarcely more than a whisper, but he heard and slowly the truth dawned on him. For one moment he forgot himself, and, throwing his arms about her, drew her to him and kissed her. There was love, overpowering love, in his actions, and she understood.

Her tears gave place to a happy smile, and, turning a radiant face up to him, she placed her arms about his neck and drew his head down and returned his kiss.

"I thought you didn't love me," she whispered; "and I love you so much."

"Love you!" he repeated. "Oh, Clem, God alone knows how I love you. There is no language to describe it. I worship you, and everything you touch is sacred to me."

She drew closer to him, and laid her head on his breast. At that moment she tasted the sweetest bliss the human soul ever knows in this life. Looking up at him trustfully, she said:

"And you will never leave me, my darling, will you?"

Then it was he realized his situation. Quickly taking his arms from about her, he staggered back against the tree and covered his face with his hands.

"God forgive me," he said, hoarsely. "I forgot!"

She looked at him with wide eyes, her face turning deathly pale. She could not understand the change in him, but she knew there was something terrible back of it.

"John," she cried, "tell me what it is. I can bear anything so long as it does not part you and me. Nothing else matters."

"No," he replied, "nothing else would matter. But that is the cruel part of it. We must go our different ways, and after to-night we must never see each other again."

"John!" Her face was ghastly white. "Oh, God, what are you saying?"

"It is the bitter truth, Clem. We must walk our separate paths alone. We should never have met. I wish to Heaven we never had."

"Then you do not love me—not as I love you. Nothing on earth could make me regret our meeting, and nothing could make me give you up. Nothing on earth nor in Heaven."

"You think so now," he said, "but wait until you know the whole truth. Then you will despise me as I deserve, and never want to see me again. You will wish with all your heart that you never had seen me."

She shook her head slowly.

"I cannot believe that," she said. "I cannot believe that anything could cause me to regret our meeting, for it has brought me the only happiness I have ever known."

"It has brought me the greatest happiness of my life," he said; "but with that happiness has come my greatest sorrow. You, too, will find it so. I have quaffed the sweet and the bitter, while you have quaffed only the sweet. But the bitter is at your lips, and soon you must drain it, even to the very dregs."

"Then let me drink it, John, so that I may suffer as you have suffered. It is a Heavenly privilege to share your sorrows and pains. Tell me the truth—the whole bitter truth—and you shall see how I can bear it for your sake."

"May God forgive me, as I know you never can, Clem! I—I have a wife."

She did not faint. She did not cry out. For a moment she was like one dazed by a hard blow. Then, placing her hand over her heart, she gave a low moan of anguish, and cowered and shrank like a green plant under the heat of a scorching blaze. God alone knew how hard upon her that blow had fallen.

Ransom hastened to her, and would have put his arms about her to support her, but she held up her hand to stay him.

"No," she said; "never again."

There was no anger in her voice, and her tones were low and sad, but he knew that she was in earnest, and would never waver. He looked at her for a moment compassionately, then humbly and contritely said:

"I do not ask your forgiveness, Clem, for I know you can never grant it, but, as Heaven is my witness, I never meant to deceive you. I should have told you, but my wife is worse than dead to me, and I never speak of her if I can help it, and I never thought that you could care for me like this. You will despise and then forget me, and I can ask for nothing better; but of my life you will always remain the best part, for as long as I live I will remember and love you." He paused a moment, then added: "May God bless you, Clem. Good-by."

He waited awhile, but she made no reply, and then he started slowly away. But when he had gone a step or two he heard her softly speak his name, and he stopped, facing her.

"I cannot let you go like that," she said, "for I do forgive you with all my heart and soul."

He stepped quickly back to her and reached out his arms impulsively.

"Is it true, Clem?" he cried. "Can you forgive me, after all?"

"A woman," she answered, slowly, "can forgive anything in the man she loves."

There was a long silence, then she went on wearily and more slowly yet:

"We can say no more, and now we must part forever. We must each follow where our paths lead. Yours leads to your wife and your home. Go there, forget me, and be faithful and true in the discharge of your duty."

"And your path?" he said.

"My path—it leads where God wills. But you must go now. We have no right to be together here."

"Yes, I must go. Good-by, Clem."

"Good-by, John."

Far toward morning, Ransom, sitting in the door of his cabin, looking out on the still world, drew a deep sigh and murmured:

"Poor Clem! Motherless and friendless, and all alone in the world, except for a drunken father."

And Clem, sitting at a window down below, staring dry-eyed out into the night, thought of all the kindnesses John had shown her—the only kindnesses she had ever known—and, womanlike, all her pity was for him.

When the day came, Ransom went down to the camp to take the stage for his journey home, and while he was waiting there the postmaster came down to him with a letter. He took it and glanced at the postmark, and saw that it was from home. Then he tore it open and read it eagerly through.

"I thought you ought to have it before you went," the postmaster said. "I didn't know but that it might be important."

"It is," Ransom replied. "It is so important that it means the life happiness of two people."

"I'm glad I brought it, then. But there's the stage, and you'll have to be going."

"I have changed my mind. I am not going."

"But your wife will be expecting you."

"I have no wife. She has got a divorce and married another man."

PAWN SHOP COMEDY.

Thief Impersonates Otis Skinner and Sells Actor's Clothes.

Wearing Apparel Valued at $150 Disposed Of for $11—Garments Returned to Rightful Owner by St. Louis Police.

A man of medium build, well dressed, with hair a bit sandy, and smoth shaven, entered Ben Levy's pawnshop, adjoining Havlin's theater, at St. Louis, and told a story that touched the sympathetic spot in the pawnbroker's heart.

"Do you know me?" asked the stranger.

Being assured that he was not known, at least by Levy, the stranger continued:

"My good man, I am an actor. I am Otis Skinner, playing at the Olympic theater. As you probably know, actors sometimes get into hard lines, even the good ones, and you must know that I am a good one. Surely you have heard of Otis Skinner?"

"Yes," said the pawnbroker, "I have heard of you. Seen your name on the billboards, too."

"Yes; my name is on every billboard, in large type; I have no doubt that you have noticed my name. Well, don't believe all you see on the billboards. While to all appearances, I am making barrels of money, in reality, I am sorely in need of immediate funds. Now I have more clothes than I know what to do with and I thought we might be able to strike a bargain."

"Bring them down here," said the pawnbroker, "and I will make an offer to you."

The alleged Otis Skinner showed disappointment.

"You know," he said, "that it would be extremely humiliating for an actor of my high standing to be seen carting a load of old clothes to a pawnshop. I would rather that you visit me at my apartments in the Laclede hotel, where you can see the apparel and judge its worth."

Levy, however, refused to visit the Laclede, where the actor said that he had room No. 19, so the patron suffered the humiliation, and an hour later laid on the pawnbroker's counter a heavy overcoat, valued at $75; a suit of clothes,

OTIS SKINNER.
(Famous Actor Who Was Recently "Impersonated" by a Thief.)

valued at $50; a pair of trousers, valued at $15, and some minor apparel.

For these he asked $25, but the pawnbroker, being an obdurate man and a close trader, offered $11, which the supposed actor finally accepted.

It was Tuesday night, says the St. Louis Republic, that a thief visited Otis Skinner's apartments at the Planters and divested it of almost everything it held of value. Mr. Skinner placed his loss at $500. At that time, he had forgotten that the thief's booty included an unopened package which contained Christmas presents, sent to him by Mrs. Skinner, who is in Chicago. There was one piece of jewelry in the unopened package for which Mrs. Skinner paid $200.

Detectives, on visiting pawnshops, discovered part of the booty in Levy's place and upon questioning him, the detectives learned the story of the thief's duplicity. He had represented himself as Otis Skinner and the dealer, not being acquainted with the personal appearance of the actor, believed his story.

The goods were returned to Mr. Skinner and the overcoat, which was the only heavy one that he had in St. Louis, was greatly appreciated. The articles recovered, however, represent only about one-fourth of the theft.

The register at the Laclede hotel shows that No. 19 was occupied during the early part of the week by one who gave his name as Kerns. When the officers visited the room they found that Kerns had departed with bag and baggage. He had also forgotten to pay his hotel bill.

An Ursus in Nebraska.

Frank Vehling, a young man of Fremont, Neb., has equaled the feat performed by Ursus, as related in "Quo Vadis," and in doing so saved the lives of his sweetheart and himself. Young Vehling and his fiancee were crossing a pasture when they came upon a bull in the path. Vehling drove the bull along ahead for a short distance, when the animal suddenly turned and charged upon the couple. Vehling had no weapon, and there was no time to run. He grasped the bull by the horns, and an exciting struggle took place. The screams of the girl brought two men running from the road, and when they arrived on the scene they found that Vehling had succeeded in throwing the bull and was sitting on the neck of the prostrate animal awaiting their arrival.

Rural Free Mail Delivery.

Rural free delivery has advanced with marvelous rapidity from a service costing $20,000 a year at its inception in 1891 to one that will cost this fiscal year nearly $7,000,000.

STRAINER WITH HISTORY.

Made of the First Silver Dollar Ever Earned by Franklin, Author and Statesman.

When Benjamin Franklin was a lad he earned his first dollar by writing ballads, printing them on his brother's presses and selling them in the streets of Boston. Strange to say, the identical piece of money he first earned in this way has never been lost track of, and its succeeding history is well authenticated, coming straight as a die from those who know.

Changed to the form of a quaint little punch strainer, the bit of silver reposes at present in the rooms of the Historical society of Delaware, and is treasured as one of the oddest of its relics. It was presented to the society by Miss Henrietta Jane Bedford, a lady who died at a ripe old age in 1871, and whose grandfather was James Parker, who was contemporary with Franklin.

Franklin and Parker were chums when they were both poor printers' apprentices, and of the first silver dollar they each earned they made a good luck piece. Of these they made an exchange. Mr. Parker always kept the piece thus won, and in the course of time, as Franklin's fame grew, he had it melted and made into the strainer. When he died the strainer came into the possession of his daughter, Jane Ballaroux Parker, who married Gunning Bedford, of Delaware, and in time it descended to their daughter, Miss Henrietta Bedford, who gave it to the Historical society.

BASEBALL MAGNATE.

Harry C. Pulliam Reelected President of the National League for the Coming Year.

At the recent New York meeting of the National Baseball league Harry C. Pulliam was reelected president, a compliment which he deserved, for he has managed to jolly the crowd of faultfinders and looked out for the business of the organization in a way that has made him friends in all parts of the country. The reforms in baseball inaugurated by the American league were fully appreciated by Mr. Pulliam until he actually divided honors with Ban Johnson in the way the handled umpires and players. In this way he brought the old league back to its high standing, originally brought about by Hurlburt and Mills from 1876 to 1885.

Harry C. Pulliam was born in Scottsville, Ky., in 1869. He got his first insight into baseball politics while reading law in the office of Zach Phelps, of Louisville, who was president of the American association in 1871. As secretary of the Louisville club Mr. Pulliam became well known, and later as a clever writer on sports for the Louisville Commercial. From Louisville Pulliam went with Barney Dreyfuss to Pittsburg, and finally landed in Nick Young's old position at a time when the old National league was about ready to take the count. Mr. Pulliam is called the boy president, but he has the making of one of the best.

Jefferson as an Inventor.

Not many people know that Thomas Jefferson was a great inventor. His inventions were all of articles of every-day use. He devised a three-legged folding camp stool that is the basis of all camp stools of that kind to-day. The stool he had made for his own use was his constant companion on occasions of outings. The revolving chair was his invention. He designed a light wagon. A copying press was devised by him and came into general use. He also invented an instrument for measuring the distance he walked. A plow and a hemp cultivator showed that his thoughts were often on agricultural matters. His plow received a gold medal in France in 1790. Jefferson never benefited financially by his inventions, but believed they should be for the use of everyone without cost.

THREE DREAMS.

"I had the very strangest dream,"
Said Jasper John, "last night.
I dreamed the moon and all the stars
Were shining just as bright,
And yet the sun was shining, too,
And I was racing Ted,
While everybody else we knew
Was sound asleep in bed."
"I dreamed," said little Theodore,
"About a monstrous horse
With twenty legs and lots of tails
(He b'longed to me, of course).
His eyes were green; the rest of him
Was yellow streaked with black;
And nobody in all the world
But me could mount his back."
Their father, mother and their aunt
Agreed that these two dreams
Were very queer; but Bobby said:
"Tho one I had, it seems
To me, 's the queerest of them all.
I saw a boy who said
He hated football, and he wished
He'd been a girl instead!"
—Elizabeth Lincoln Gould, in Youth's Companion.

A WONDERFUL CADDY.

Sagacious Greyhound Trained to Carry Playing Sticks for a Young Woman Golfer.

Bob is the name of the intelligent greyhound that has been trained as a golf caddy by Miss Maud Pottle, of New York city. The dog is rapidly becoming the pride of the members of the Marine and Field club, and his picture will soon be framed and hung on the walls of the clubhouse. Miss Pottle has taken steps at Washington to patent the harness by which the animal is able to carry the clubs securely, for the plan is practical enough to be extensively copied.

Bob was entered in the Brooklyn dog show and bids fair to become one of the best known canines in the country. He is only 15 months old, and was brought from North Dakota when he was a puppy by Charles Pottle, a New York merchant. He is a handsome animal, buff colored, with large yellow optics, that recall the gem known as tiger eye. He is already as big as the majority of his breed. He was bought of Dakota rangers. Unfortunately his pedigree list has been lost by his new owner.

Bob is a peculiar dog. Except on warm nights he insists on sleeping on a big cushion, and also in being covered with a blanket. If this blanket slips off he cries until it is readjusted, and Miss Pottle has been known to get out of bed three times on a cold night to restore his equilibrium. He is jealous, too, of the small puppy and cat of the household, being careful to stop eating if they are given food afterward.

It was through an accident that Bob became a caddy. One hot day last summer Miss Pottle's red golf jacket became unendurable, and she tied it on Bob's back. He carried it so nicely that the notion of club bearing soon suggested itself to her, and a leather harness was speedily devised. The first few times on the golf links Bob was led by a string, but he stood so quietly that the cord was soon dispensed with. But a round once made he refuses to carry the clubs home under any inducements, balking like a horse as soon as the street is reached. The minute the tools are put away in the locker room Bob trots home contentedly behind Miss Pottle, whether she walks, cycles or drives.

The animal knows when she is ready to start golfing and backs up contentedly to have the harness put on him. He carries three clubs on each side. In a few days a leathern pouch will be made to strap around Bob's breast, so that he can carry several golf balls.

The Marine and Field club members think that Bob is more than the equal of Lillian Russell, the cat belonging to the neighboring Dyker Meadow Golf club. Lillian, recently the subject of a newspaper article, frequently dives into the pool near the clubhouse and catches fish for her kittens.—Washington Star.

Bum Is a Police Dog.

Bum may not have been a very nice name, but he is held in high esteem by the patrolmen attached to an uptown station house in Philadelphia. Bum is a police dog through and through. He begins work with the "first out" squad. When it lines up for roll call and inspection at midnight he inspects it as thoroughly as the sergeant or lieutenant. He walks up and down the rank, looks each man over, barks his satisfaction and then trots out with the first pair of marching patrolmen. Then he goes through the duties of a roundsman. He travels from beat to beat, waiting on corners until he finds each man. He barks a friendly greeting then and trots off. He won't recognize as a friend a policeman from another district, even though the man be only across the street from the dog's headquarters. Bum sleeps awhile after that, then goes out with the eight-o'clock squad and the four-o'clock squad. The dog can do all sorts of acrobatic tricks, too.

WHAT TOBY CAN DO.

Clever Canine in Sioux City, Iowa, Dives Fifty Feet and Walks the Tight Rope.

Toby, a little white fox and bull terrier belonging to J. M. Spencer, of Sioux City, Ia., is perhaps the most wonderful dog in the world. He performs daredevil tricks that astonish as well as please. One of the dog's most marvelous feats is that of climbing a ladder rung by rung to the height of 50 feet, and then diving headforemost into a net. The dog seems to be without fear and climbs the ladder easily and gracefully. Toby can walk the tight rope as well and walks on barrels, jumps the rope and does a great many other tricks. Mr. Spencer has spent much time with the animal and considers it the most versatile and the best trained dog in the world.

TRAPS BEATS TO SHOW.

Intrepid Men Make a Business of Catching Wild Animals for Zoos and Menageries.

Animal dealers keep expert animal catchers in all parts of the world. The Hagenbecks have established two collecting stations in charge of stationary representatives—one in Calcutta and the other at Aden. To these distributing points the traveling representatives ship their catches, and when a sufficient number of animals has been gathered they are transported to Hamburg, whence they are sent to all countries of the world. One firm has 22 representatives abroad, all of them experienced in trapping and shipping the wildest and most ferocious beasts.

Tigers and occasionally lions are caught in pits, and leopards, panthers, jaguars and the like in traps. Zebras are extraordinarily hard to secure, and are proportionately valuable. The emu is taken in Patagonia by the natives, who use the South American lariat. A hippopotamus, a crocodile or a rhinoceros is not caught by the agents of animal firms, but is usually found in the possession of the rajahs and other provincial rulers in Cochin China, Nera and Siam. They keep them just as people in this country keep a kennel, and they love to show them off to visitors.

All animals are cowards, according to the agents. Unless a tiger or a lion, or indeed any wild beast, has tasted human blood, he is quite ready to let you go your way if you will let him go his. In captivity, the agents say, you may enter any cage provided you have your whip with a lead bullet on the end in your hand, and provided also that you know how to use it effectively. But the least lack of vigilance means destruction. You might tend an animal for years and have him know you well, but that would not insure you against an attack from him the first chance that offered.—Chicago Tribune.

PARROT TALKED BASS.

Bird Resorted to Clever Ruse to Imitate His Master's Voice Almost to Perfection.

The Epworth Herald gives the following instance of the ingenuity of a parrot in mimicking its master's bass voice:

The parrot, it seems, began, as soon as it was bought, to learn to mimic the voices of the household of my friend. It mimicked the contralto voice of the mistress, the treble voice of the young son, the soprano voice of the daughter, and the Irish voice of the cook; but the heavy and deep bass voice of the master it was quite unable to cope with. It would practice for hours at a time, but it could not produce from its throat the deep, hoarse sounds that it desired.

Therefore, the family was astonished one day to hear the parrot mimicking the master's voice exactly. They sat in the dining-room. The bird was in the hall in its cage. Distinct and loud the sounds came from the hall to them, a thunderous and rolling bass voice, saying:

"Bring me the evening paper."

Some one went out and looked at the parrot. Its head was hidden in its seed cup, and it was making its voice resonant by speaking from within the seed cup's hollow. And always now, when it wants to speak in a bass voice, it puts its head in its seed cup. Isn't that a proof of the almost human intelligence of the bird?

This Dog Is Not for Sale.

If everybody had a dog like Jip, the fox terrier belonging to John Gould, of Shadyside, N. J., there would be a glut in the servant market. Jip can light fires, weed gardens and make himself generally useful. The other night, when Mr. Gould came home from work he started to weed his garden. Jip immediately joined him and helped pull up the weeds with his teeth. When he got a fairly good pile he carried them to a corner of the garden. Just then his master lit his pipe and threw away the match. And Jip picked it up with his teeth, ran to the pile of weeds and set fire to them, holding the match until it began to scorch his jowls. Mr. Gould says the dog is not for sale.

BED OF AN EMPRESS.

Empress Josephine Slept in It During Her Uncertain Reign at Fontainebleau.

Peculiar interest attaches to the luxurious and beautiful bed, a picture of which accompanies this story, and for the reason that Empress Josephine slept in it while she reigned at Fontainebleau.

The heavy curtains with their fringes and tassels, and the catafalque-like appearance of the whole arrangement are not to our taste to-day, but the interest of the piece is intensely human. Indeed, the bed, which is still at Fon-

Napoleon this was the imperial couch, but when misfortune crowded thick upon her it was deserted.—Detroit Free Press.

ENEMY OF GIRLHOOD.

It Ruins the Complexion and Digestion of Sweet Seventeen and Doctors Call It Anemia.

Health controls the complexion throughout the whole course of existence, but perhaps never more palpably than about the age of 17.

Anemia is the greatest enemy of a beautiful complexion that girlhood can encounter. It results in pallor, in blemishes, such as spots and blackheads, and in that general appearance of delicacy that should be a complete stranger to youth. Unfortunately just about the age now under consideration girls are so busy over their books and so eager to excel in their school examinations that instead of aiding and abetting their elders to improve their anemic state, and so to alter their muddy and unattractive complexions, they do all they can to further the inroads of weakness by working indoors too much and staying up too late at nights.

The anemic girl, whether she must work at her books or not, must be dosed with iron for months and months. It is the paucity of iron in her system that makes her lack of color in her cheeks. There are several well-known preparations of iron that will suit the sufferer, but it is always well, if possible, to consult a doctor as to the most efficacious one to be had in pills and in so- [illegible] in pills

Several Drinks of Whisky Raised the Man from Poverty to Affluence.

Representative Bartlett, of Georgia, was in one of the small towns in his district campaigning last fall, says the New York World, and heard a conversation between one of his friends who was about to move to Dallas county, Tex., and a native:

"Hear you-all going to Texas," said the native.

"Yes; going to Dallas county."

"Well, I wish you'd look up my brother down there and tell him I'm doing mighty poorly. The interest is coming due and I wish he would send me some money."

The native then went and had a couple of drinks of local whisky. Shortly afterward he met the man who was going to Texas.

"I hear you-all are going to Texas?"

"Yes."

"Well, if you-all run across my brother down there tell him I am fine and that everything is going along all right."

The man who was going to Texas promised and the native dropped into the saloon and had some more drinks. When he came out he again hailed the man who was going to Texas and said:

"Say, if you see my brother down there just tell him to send to me if he needs any money."

His cure is remarkable because of the length of time he had been suffering. Cases of 40 years' standing might be considered incurable, but the remedy that cured Mr. Gentry seems to know no limit to its curative power. Mr. Gentry says:

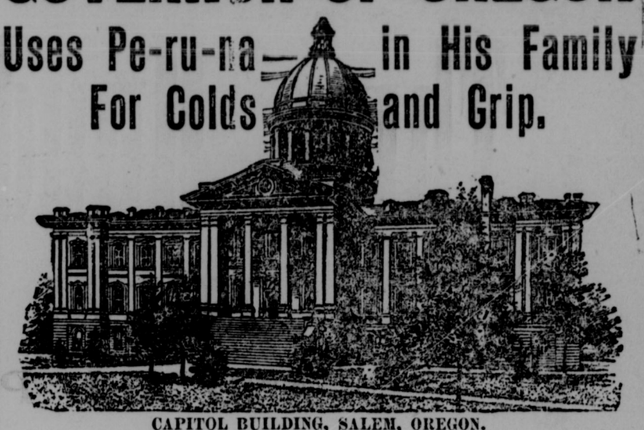
GOVERNOR OF OREGON

Uses Pe-ru-na in His Family For Colds and Grip.



CAPITOL BUILDING, SALEM, OREGON.

A Letter From The Governor of Oregon.

Peruna is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Letters of congratulation and commendation testifying to the merits of Peruna as a catarrh remedy are pouring in from every State in the Union. Dr. Hartman is receiving hundreds of such letters daily. All classes write these letters, from the highest to the lowest.

The outdoor laborer, the indoor artisan, the clerk, the editor, the statesman, the preacher—all agree that Peruna is the catarrh remedy of the age. The stage and rostrum, recognizing catarrh as their greatest enemy, are especially enthusiastic in their praise and testimony.

Any man who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Ca-[illegible] well nigh universal; almost om-[illegible] is the only absolute [illegible]

Dear Sirs—I have had occasion to use your Peruna medicine in my family for colds, and it proved to be an excellent remedy. I have not had occasion to use it for other ailments.

Yours very truly, W. M. Lord.

It will be noticed that the Governor says he has not had occasion to use Peruna for other ailments. The reason for this is, most other ailments begin with a cold. Using Peruna to promptly cure colds, he protects his family against other ailments. This is exactly what every other family in the United States should do. Keep Peruna in the house. Hearers and Doers of the Word

Macaulay says of Pitt that he could pour forth a long succession of stately period without premedition, in a voice of silvery clearness. Perhaps he reached the zenith of oratorical fame in his speech on the abolition of slave-trade. Fox, Gray, Windham, contemporaries and themselves adepts at the art of speaking, agreed that it was the most extraordinary display of eloquence ever heard. Where is that speech? A memory only!

We have an American analogue in Webster. There he stood before an entranced Congress, his very soul blazing in those deep caverns below his marble brow, as he poured forth his "Reply to Hayne." "His statement was argument, his inference was demonstration." Where is that speech? Just a memory, though only two generations have passed since its delivery.

Two millenniums ago a Galilean availed himself of one of nature's auditoriums, and when the unsynagogued congregation gathered, he opened his mouth and taught them. That assembly dissolved; but in each successive generation a new and ever increasing throng has came together. As from the sounding-board of the open heavens, the old sermon has struck the ear of each new congregation. The sermon Jesus preached is no dream of ideal eloquence. It lived in every dialect. It is the most potent composition in written speech. Millions knew it by heart; millinos live by it.

But some one will say, Jesus only borrowed the aphorisms of the rabbi, after all. They will put the Talmudic sayings in parallel column with these of the Messiah, and thus discount his originality. Put those rabbinical maxims back into their context howeyer, and you almost invariably find them on a lower plane, and often moving in a direction opposite to the teacher of Jesus. Again, if Jesus taught the same truth as the rabbis, why then were they offended with him? He may have used the modes of speech current in his day, but it must be admitted also that he made them the vehicle of a diviner meaning.

Miss Martineau, in her "Life in the East," a melange of happy descripton and unhappy theology dismisses Jesus as an Essene. But the merest tyro ought to know that the trend of Jesus' teaching is fundamentally opposed to that of the Essene. They were the most esoteric, unmissionary sect extant. How could he who said. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," be an Essene? On purfication, the Sabbath, the resurrection, Jesus who in diametric opposition to that strictest and tiniest of sects. To affirm identity on finding a point or two of similarity is unphilosophical in the extreme.

Apart from, infinitely above, the rabbi on the one hand and the Essene on the other, Jesus stands the original and unceasing Teacher of the race. He speaks with authority to the universal human heart, illuminating, inspirng, empowering it. He is not a channel through which truth flows perchance, and corrupted with human prejudice and error in its passage. So he could say not only, "I speak the truth," but, "I am Truth." He is the original source, not the transmitter; a fountain, not a conduit!

Again, he is not the institutor of a system of doctrine, not the formulator of a ritual. He comes to inspire a life in the soul, to set up a kingdom within, which consists not in the externalities and comparative trivialities of sacrifice and oblation, but in that indispensable righteousness whose concomitants are peace and joy. So he could say also, "The word that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.

The Teacher's Lantern

An all-night vigil of meditation and prayer was Jesus' preparation for two supremely important acts: First, the choice and ordination of his apostles; second, the delivery of his most extended discourse.

* * * * *

St. Augustine originated the theory of a twofold sermon: one on the mount, and the other on the plain; one to the Church, and the other to the masses. The theory is designed to reconcile the accounts of Luke and Matthew, and to cover what seems to some a premature enunciation of doctrine to the people at large.

* * * * *

The theory seems a supereogation. No part of the sermon is esoteric or confidential. It is the enunciation of a public program of doctrine and duty for the whole people. And there is a spiritually correct and true harmony between Luke and Matthew.

* * * * *

Edersheim's analysis is excellent. "Viewing it in the light of the time, we might mark in it alike advancement on the Old Testament (or rather, unfolding of its inmost yet hidden meaning) and contrast to contemporary Jewish teaching. And here we would regard it is presenting the full delineation of the ideal man of God, of prayer and of righteousness—in short, of the inward and outward manifestation of discipleship. (Edersheim. "Life of Jesus," Vol, I, p27.)

ELECTION LAW AS AMENDED.

Senate Adopted the Amendments Submitted by the Committee.

TEXT OF THE PROPOSED MEASURE

Second Reading of the Bill Was Made Tuesday When It Was Ordered Engrossed.

The official Constitutional amendment bill to restrict the suffrage, which was adopted by the Democratic caucus Thursday night, was brought up in the Senate Friday and the committee amendments adopted. These were comparatively unimportant. The second reading of the bill was then made the order of the day for Tuesday, March 1, at 12.30 p. m. The bill, as it now stands, and will probably be passed, is as follows:

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, three-fifths of all the members of each of the two houses concurring, That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Section 1 of Article 1 of the Constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, it shall supersede and stand in place and stead of Section 1 of said Article 1:

"Section 1. All elections by the people shall be by ballot. Every male citizen of the United States, whether native born or naturalized, of the age of 21 years or upward, who has resided in this State for one year and in the legislative district of Baltimore city or in the county in which he may offer to vote for six months next preceding the election, and who, moreover, is duly registered as a qualified voter, as provided in this article, shall be entitled to vote in the ward or election district in which he resides at the elections hereafter to be held in this State; and in case any county or city shall be so divided as to form portions of different electoral districts for the election of Representatives in Congress, Senators, Delegates or other officers, then to entitle a person to vote for such officer he must have been a resident of that part of the county or city which shall form a part of the electoral district in which he offers to vote for six months next preceding the election; but a person who shall have acquired a residence in such county or city entitling him to vote in the election district from which he removed until he shall have acquired a residence in the part of the county or city to which he has removed. Every such male citizen of the United States having the above prescribed qualifications of age and residence shall be entitled to be registered so as to become a qualified voter if he be:

"First—A person able to read any section of the Constitution of this State, submitted to him by the officers of registration, and to give a reasonble explanation of the same, or, if unable to read such section, is able to understand and give a reasonable explanation thereof when read to him by the registration officers; or,

"Second—A person who on January 1, 1869, or prior thereto, was entitled to vote under the laws of this State, or of any other State of the United States wherein he then resided; or,

"Third—Any male lineal descendant of such last-mentioned person who may be 21 years of age in the year 1906. No person not thus qualified by coming under some of the above descriptions shall be entitled to be registered as a qualified voter, nor be entitled to vote.

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the foregoing section hereby proposed as amendment to the Constitution of this State shall be at the next general election for members of the General Assembly to be held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the direction contained in Article 14 of the Constitution, and at said election the vote on said proposed amendment shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot shall be written or printed the words, 'For or Against the Constitutional amendment,' as the voters shall elect; and immediateiy after said election due returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote on said proposed amendment, as directed by the said Article 14 of the Constitution."

Baltimore's Leading Store. STEWART & CO., Lexington, Howard and Clay Streets., BALTIMORE.

RECEIVERS APPOINTED.

The Commonwealth Tanning Company Declared Bankrupt.

Frederick A. Thayer and Edward H. Sincell were appointed by United States Judge Morris receivers for the Commonwealth Tanning Company, of Garrett county, under a bond for $30,000. The same receivers for the company were appointed by the Circuit Court for Garrett county on October 7, 1903. The receivers were reappointed Tuesday after the company had been adjudicated bankrupt on a petition filed on January 12 last.

The liabilities of the company are placed at $133,000, the creditors being principally banks in different states. The claim of the First National Bank of Oakland we understand, is secured by collateral. It is thought that the concern will eventually pay out.

The receivers were authorized by the court to continue the business of the company.

TRAIN NO. 4 WRECKED

At Rowlesburg Last Night—Fireman And Engineer Both Dead.

Baltimore & Ohio express train No. 4, from St. Louis and Cincinnati to New York, was wrecked at Rowlesburg, W. Va., 25 miles west of Oakland late last night. The engine and tender overturned and two express cars, the mail car and the baggage car were derailed. Alden F. McKenzie, fireman, residing in South Cumberland, was killed and William H. Bowden, engineer, badly scalded, whose injuries proved fatal. No passengers were hurt.

It could not be stated how the accident occured, but it is thought there was something wrong with a switch, the accident occurring at a switch on a sharp curve in front of the depot.

Two Girls

By ELLIOT WALKER

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"LILLY doesn't seem as bright as usual, Louise. Been doing too much, I'm afraid."

Henry Felton pushed back his chair, adjusted his ample coatwaist with a series of little downward jerks, and settled his doubled chin in corpulent complacency, while mild interrogation was expressed behind his eyeglasses.

He had enjoyed a very satisfactory repast. It seemed good to get up from the city to the fresh mountain air and the attractions of Laughlin's table, for the modest summer hotel nestling among the hills boasted an appetizing menu.

Those trout. Ah-h! He could have eaten a couple more.

His wife, by his side, for the Laughlin house ranged its guests—not yet being given over to modern seating, and family tables—gave him a quietly indulgent glance.

"You are always imagining, my dear. Camilla is perfectly well, I am sure. Sally Terriss may tire her a trifle. I have never seen such spirits."

"How did Sally happen to come? Thought she always went to the shore."

"Oh, just a freak. She keeps Irving on the jump from morning until night. Half the time Camilla absolutely refuses to join them—they take such appalling trips. The idea of a girl fishing the Ravine."

"I presume Milly and Radway—I haven't got to calling him Irving yet—understand each other pretty well, eh?"

"Yes, I imagine that is settled between them, Henry, but they are keeping it quiet. I haven't interferred. Rather unexpected, his turning up here, but he is a queer fellow. It has been going on so long that no one will be surprised. Last year he followed us to Gloucester, hung around for a week and departed. Nothing came of it."

"Well, he is entirely worthy, I guess, and his income is all right. It won't be a bad match. Come on, they are waiting to clear the table. Let's go out to the piazza. I hear Sally carrying on."

Yes, Sally was "carrying on" as usual, and Irving Radway's eyes sparkled as the vivacious girl related to a smiling group her extrication from the perils of the Ravine. "It's a beastly place," cried Miss Terriss, "wildly exciting! I'm going again; Milly, you should have been there. Mr. Radway was actually obliged to carry me across. I was dreadfully afraid he would drop me. Imagine it!"

Camilla Felton smiled faintly. "He is strong and sure-footed," she returned. "You are safe enough, Sally."

"O-ho! you know, then. Perhaps my fisherman has lugged you over raging torrents, my lady." Her irresistible laugh pealed forth merrily. "Did he hold you so? Or so?" her round white arms explaining positions of close discomfort. "And when he set you down, did he—?"

"Ahem!" interrupted Radway, loudly. "I didn't intend to deposit my fair burden in quite so damp a spot. It was too bad that your feet should be wet after a dry passage, but you couldn't wait, you know."

His bantering voice held a note of warning. The girl caught the cue quickly. "Yes, you dumped me right down in that horrid puddle and never apologized. I might have been a bag of meal for all the sentiment you displayed, and the surroundings were so charmingly romantic, too. I hope he did better with you, Milly?"

"Mr. Radway has never had the opportunity," said Camilla, coldly, looking intently at both in the dimming light. Why did not Irving meet her eye? Sally, too, was suddenly quiet, gazing out at the near hills with an exclamation of interest as the edge of the moon tilted over the pine tops.

The others' chuckles died away in the consideration of fresh conversation. No one minded Sally Terriss, anyway.

No one? The young man shrinking into the shadow with a quick beating heart, wondering why he had been insane enough to give way to that impulsive caress. She had invited it—yes, that soft arm had clung lingeringly about his neck, the dancing eyes had beckoned, the sweet, parted lips were very near. And her lashes had drooped with a happy sigh before she laughed and chided. Oh, the witch! Her spell had been upon him all that day, drawing him nearer and nearer, away from himself, away from Milly—Milly, who was to give him her answer that very night—he so unworthy. Bah! it was nothing—Sally knew nothing of his attachment. She flirted with every man and meant no harm. It was only one of those little things that happen. He was fortunate to have checked that reckless tongue, though.

Thus he endeavored to make smooth his dereliction, glancing by degrees at the slender figure, standing now by the white pillar.

Miss Terriss suppressed a yawn. "I'm chilly," she observed, rising; "I have to write a letter. Good-by for an hour," and departed. Sally was always irrelevant.

Her going scattered the group. "I think your father and I will go in, too," observed Mrs. Felton. "Don't catch cold, Camilla."

Presently they were alone, the two, who, in three years, had, with no pledges, promised each other much. Both knew whither they were tending, half unconsciously forging a chain which needed but one riveting link for lasting union.

The pale, proud, thoughtful face in the moonlight. The man in the shadow. Only last night he had spoken lightly, but earnestly: "Milly, will you tell me to-morrow evening how it is to be? I have waited my year."

Others had been about. It was but a whisper, when he said "Good-night." She had smiled in his eyes and nodded, sending him from her happy and satisfied, confident and secure. He knew she would come to it in time, and it was such a sensible match.

Yet as he sat there, waiting, waiting, something seemed lacking. Nonsense—utter nonsense! But after all, a subtle, cooling change. Camilla would come to him in a few moments now—her pure lips his at last, her calm hands' gentle pressure, his arm about the slender waist. Surely, what more could be desired than this fulfillment of his long, long dream?

Overhead, from a chamber window, trilled a rich voice, a few vibrant, feeling notes breathing of love and warmth and longing.

To the man's cheeks the blood sprang hotly. So had she sung to him by the brook in the sunny day. Again he was lifting the light, nestling creature in his arms, the scent of her straying hair in his eager nostrils, the brilliance of her eyes glowing in him, her breath, that soft arm bare against his neck. Again his pulses racked with that quick, passionate kiss, and again he laughed hoarsely, even as upon the stream—for it was nothing.

He hardly saw the girl come toward him in the moonlight. Only when she stood before him and her sad, clear words fell upon his ears, did he remember, and he shuddered, trying to hate himself.

Camilla put her hand upon his head. "Irving," she said, and her voice was unlike Milly Felton's, "a year ago today you asked me to be your wife." Radway reached up for her fingers, and they closed firmly upon his own. "Last night you told me you had waited the 12 months I begged for, and now you are listening for my decision. Wait! do not interrupt me. In all this time I have prayed for and expected but one result. Last evening I felt there remained no obstacle—I let you see that. Since then, I have been thinking for both of us, Irving. I want you to help me. It is very hard."

He made no reply, save to stroke the soft hand.

"I believe we can be happy together," the girl continued with a little sob. "But are our feelings all that they should be? Do we mistake affection and admiration for something more? I am afraid for you, Irving—afraid for myself. How may we gauge what is called love? In you there lies a fire I have seen flame and sparkle. I do not call it forth. People say I am cold and reserved—perhaps I seem so, but underneath there is something which startles me. Alas! you do not kindle it. If you did, I would—I would—oh! I would not be satisfied with so little as to stand here with my hand in yours. Yet that is all I feel I want from you—you with so much to give. Cannot you understand?"

"Yes," answered Radway, quietly, "I do, dear. You do not love me, that is all."

"And you, Irving—am I not right? If you can honestly say you do, I will try again. It seems hopeless now, but I will try."

"No, Milly, it is useless. Yes, you are right. I thought I loved you. Let us endeavor to forget it all."

A great flood of relief surged through him, as he bent his lips to the cold, trembling fingers—free!

So they remained for a full minute, motionless, silent, thankful. Then the girl stooped and kissed him tenderly. "Good-night!" she whispered, and ran quickly in.

Irving Radway sat and looked at the stars. Truly, the hand of Fate was upon him. "It is all meant," he reflected. "I will not fight it." How natural the steps behind him seemed. He did not even start when Sally Terriss spoke. Her words, too, fell as if directed by his own over-powering wish.

"Come," she coaxed; "take me down by the little pond. It is lovely there, and not late."

Her touch upon his arm as they strolled down the path, her ripple of words like the song of the brook. Yes, he would tell her, there by the moonlit water, now so near—so near.

"I've been writing to Jack," rattled Sally. "He's the best old thing—never scolds. I told him all about this afternoon and that tender embrace."

"Your brother?" queried Radway.

"Brother! I like that. Jack is Mr. John Banning, and I am to be Mrs. John. We've only been engaged three months, so it isn't out yet. What's the matter? You made a noise like one of those bull frogs. Dizzy? Here, let me hold you, so. Better? That's right. What was I saying—oh, yes! You see, when you carried me across the brook I sort of shut my eyes and made believe it was Jack. I wrote him you were a staid creature, and an awfully poor substitute, so I guess he will forgive me. What, going back already? Why! we have just come out."

"Let's see, Louisa," remarked Mr. Felton three days later, "I came up on Tuesday, and young Radway left early Wednesday morning. Was that it? I hope I didn't frighten him off."

"Oh! no, Henry. Camilla told me they decided to be simply friends, and I suppose he felt it rather keenly. For my part, I'm quite disappointed."

Bacteria in the Bills.

Prof. Black, of Wisconsin, declares that there are 97,897,432 bacteria on a one dollar bill. We know the number was large, remarks the Washington Post, but could never keep the bill long enough to complete the count.

Excusable.

Mr. Joseph Gotobed resides in Kansas. A man with that name, remarks the Chicago Record-Herald, might almost be pardoned if he exhibited a disposition to lie around.

THE SOMETHING-WRONG PUZZLE

A GAME OF POLO.
What is wrong with the picture?

MACARONI FROM AMERICA.

Much of the Foodstuff Sold in Italy Is Prepared in This Country.

It will be a severe stab to the pride of Italy to learn that the Americans are now manufacturing macaroni, and are actually sending some abroad, says the New York Tribune. Factories for the making of macaroni are running in Philadelphia, and the owners are steadily encroaching on the business of the importers until it seems only a question of time when the macaroni used in this country will be made entirely of American wheat, in American factories by American workmen. It is all a question of wheat. At one time it was thought impossible to make good macaroni from any wheat other than that grown at Odessa and Taranog, but now Italy and Genoa have to share the profits of the business with the macaroni makers of Marseille, in France. With America cutting into the race for wealth by the macaroni route, the national industry of Italy will be still further encroached upon.

The process of manufacturing macaroni in the Quaker city is the same as that in Europe. Only the hard wheat, which contains a large percentage of gluten, is used. The wheat is first ground into a coarse meal, from which the bran is removed. Great care has to be exercised during the grinding to keep the temperature of the room at the right point, both heat and humidity being employed to insure the result being satisfactory. The substance formed by the grinding process, salled semola, is then worked up into a dough with water, and for macaroni and vermicelli is forced through gauges, with or without mandrels, as in wire and pipe drawing; or, if pastes are required, it is rolled out in very thin sheets, from which are stamped out the various forms of stars, rings, etc. There is little difference between macaroni and the fine, threadlike vermicelli and the infinite variety of curious and elegant little forms which, under the name of Italian pastes, are used for soups.

Macaroni cannot be made every day in the year, or month, or week. It must be a dry day, or the substance from which it is made will not bind properly. Good macaroni breaks with a brittle sound like glass. When boiled it swells with an even swell and does not come apart. The inferior kind will often break of its own weight and will burst in the boiling. A visit to a macaroni factory is of interest as disclosing an industry entirely novel to American eyes. The rooms through which the factory proper is reached are hung from floors to ceiling with festoons of the macaroni drying. It is everywhere, strung over parallel poles, hanging from every place on the wall where a peg can be placed, stretched in doorways so that it has to be brushed aside to allow the visitor to pass through, and frequently strung out to dry on the roof and in the yard for want of room elsewhere.

The process of its manufacture is worth watching. In a huge bowl in the center of the room, a bowl large enough for half a dozen men to coil up in, the dough is placed, a big stone coming down on this and flattening it to the desired consistency, when it is cut into strips like piecrust, doubled over, and the big stone crushes it again until the proper elasticity is produced. Then it is turned into the gauges and forced through the holes in the bottom, plungers coming down on it during the process, and so giving it the hollow form familiar to lovers of the delicacy. It reaches its final stage, ready for the drying, in the form of a hairpin, and in this shape is hung up. If it is good macaroni it will not break while drying, but will hang in the hairpin form suspended by the bent part until it is dry.

All varieties of macaroni are made in the same way, and, whether it is sold as vermicelli, spaghetti or just plain macaroni, it is manufactured from the same wheat, deprived of its starchiness and allowed to retain only its glutinous properties. In this form it has been called "one of the seven delicacies of the world," and in the estimation of the Italians at least, doubtless deserves that description.

Built in the Air.

Albinen, a village in Switzerland, is built on a precipice, and is only accessible by means of a succession of wooden ladders.

SNOWY CANDLEMAS.

Popular Superstitions Concerning the Day in This and Other Countries.

Forty days after Christmas comes Candlemas, when, according to popular superstition, the wolf, the badger and the bear ask no odds of the weather bureau, but come out of their holes to do a little prognosticating on their own account, says the New York Herald.

In Germany there are two proverbial expressions to convey the common idea, "The shepherd would rather see the wolf enter his stable an Candlemas Day than the sun" and "The badger peeps out of his hole on Candlemas Day, and when he finds snow he walks abroad; but if he sees the sun shining he draws back into his hole."

In this country the small boy, an apt student of local folk lore and tradition, adjusts his latest shoe string watch fob and remarks, oracularly: "Well, ef the woodchuck kin see his shadder today when he comes out'n his hole an' looks aroun' that means a long winter yet. Pa says so."

Nor is this belief that good weather on Candlemas Day is the index of a continuance of winter and of bad crops to follow, or that a stormy day is the harbinger of early spring, a matter of locality.

The same idea is expressed in a Latin distich given by Sir Thomas Brown in his "Vulgar Errors."

Si Sol splendescat Maria purificante,
Major erit glacies post festum quam fuit ante,

while the Scotch embody their conclusions in the following rhyme:

If Candlemas Day be dry and fair,
The half o' winter's to come and mair,
If Candlemas Day be wet and foul,
The half o' winter's gone at Yule.

Quite similar is the middle west's rhymed version of the popular belief:

As far as the sun shines out on Candlemas day,
So will the snow blow in before May;
As far as the snow blows on Candlemas Day,
So will the sun shine out before May.

The name Candlemas is supposed to be derived from the blessing of the candles by the Romish clergy and their distribution among the congregation, who afterward carry them in procession.

In England during Catholic times a special meaning was attached to the size of the candles and the manner in which they burned during the procession. If any fragment was left over it was believed to be possessed of strong supernatural virtues.

Scotland is especially rich in curious customs relative to Candlemas, which is also one of the four term days appointed for periodical annual payments of money, interest and taxes.

Huge Animals.

No extinct land animal of former ages had a bigger body than has the biggest African elephant of to-day, and not one, so far as is known, exceeded or even equaled, in total bulk the existing great whales, which sometimes are all of 100 feet long. As elephants, horses and similar animals are traced backward through the various strata they are found to get smaller and smaller. Some extinct elephants were no bigger than Shetland ponies, while the horses of prehistoric times were about the size of large dogs. In almost every group of hairy warm-blooded animals existing specimens are bigger than those of bygone times, and the notion that there is any tendency in animal life to dwindle in size is entirely without foundation. There are, of course, exceptions, for the extinct sloths, kangaroos, lizards and some others exceeded in bulk existing creatures of the same order.

Her Reproof.

Two mischievous boys in school were laughing uproariously over some slight mistake one of the pupils had made in transiation. The teacher looked at them resignedly for a few minutes, and then remarked quietly:

"If anything really funny should ever happen in this class, I fear that Mr. Smith and Mr. Jones would require the services of a physician."—N. Y. Times.

Inherited Characteristics.

It is often remarked that the children of a great genius seldom exhibit corresponding powers. Nevertheless, Prof. Karl Pearson, as the result of investigations made in England, avers that, as a general rule, ability, probity, geniality and other psychical characters are inherited from parents as truly as physical characters are.

The Red Cross and Russian-Japanese War

Something of the History of This Remarkable Organization Instituted During Our Civil War.

THE dogs of war have slipped their leashes, and Gen. Sherman's declaration that "war is hell," is again to spell its awful truth out before the world. The boom of cannon, the roar of musketry, the clashing of saber and bayonet, will be followed by the scenes of agony and death. The raging, merciless monster of war presses on in relentless pursuit of his human victims, and leaves behind the hundreds and thousands of wounded, and dying and dead, and then along this bloody path comes the gentle tread of the messengers of mercy, as they seek to undo as far as possible the awful destruction wrought, to alleviate the suffering, and to sweeten the dying moments of the fatally wounded. As modern invention and ingenuity have increased the terribleness of war there has been a corresponding advance made in the organization, equipment and drill of the hospital and ambulance corps of the armies of the various countries.

Japan, who has amazed the world in the last dozen years by her remarkable development and splendid advance along commercial, industrial, educational lines, has at the same time been perfecting her army and creating a navy that is her pride and boast, and the dread of her present foe. And perhaps the most striking feature and efficient branch of Japan's army organization, splendid as it is, is the hospital and medical service. Japan is credited with having the model field and military hospital service of all modern armies. At Tientsin and Peking in 1900 it is said that it proved its efficiency and practical superiority when working side by side with the same service of the American, English, French, Russian, German, Austrian and Italian forces. The American and English official reports of that campaign frankly concede this fact. And in the Japanese-Chinese war in 1894-95, it was almost as smooth working and efficient, and did not break down during the rapid marches up the Corean peninsula and across Manchuria to Port Arthur and Newchwang.

And an efficient auxiliary of the army hospital service is the Red Cross society. In every large city in Japan there are schools for training nurses. At Tokio the empress, who is the special patroness of the Red Cross hospital and school, always presides at the annual graduation exercises, and with her own hands distributes the diplomas to the white-capped graduates. The fact that one of the imperial princesses has taken the full course of training, and other of the court ladies have followed her example, has proved a power incentive to the young women of Japan to enter these training schools.

Every province in Japan has a branch of the Red Cross and each year a union meeting of all these branches is held at Tokio. Often as many as 10,000 members gather in the great outdoor session in Uyeno park. The insignia of the order is seen everywhere at this time, and there seems immediate prospect that this important auxiliary to the hospital and medical service will have plenty to do. Preparations for the war which was believed to be coming have been going on for months, and the local Red Cross societies are in shape to render even more efficient service than in the north China campaign of 1900. Every year has brought some flood, earthquake or other disaster which has called forth the efforts of the society, and the prompt relief which has always been extended is evidence of its preparedness for service at all times. Baron Hashinoko is at the head of the Red Cross in Japan.

It may not be generally known that a prominent physician of Chicago, Dr. Nicholas Senn, helped to organize the Japanese Red Cross society, and is also one of its directors. Dr. Senn has just returned home from Japan, and it is altogether likely that he will be summoned to go back.

Russia, as well as all the other principal powers of the world, has a Red Cross society, to supplement and strengthen the work of the hospital and medical service of the army, and while it is not as well organized and ready for work as the society of Japan, and those of other countries, still it is alive to the probable needs for active service on the battlefield and in the army hospitals. Count Von Ontsoff-dashkoff, who was one of the closest friends of Emperor Alexander III., the father of the present czar, is at the head of the Russian Red Cross and will work under the direct supervision and patronage of the empress dowager. The coffers of the society have been filled to carry on the work. To begin with it will have $5,000,000, of which St. Petersburg alone contributed $2,500,000. In addition to this work of the Red Cross society, Emperor Nicholas has accepted the offer of the knightly orders of Count and Livonia and Esthonia, to equip a medical corps for service at the front, and this is only the beginning of similar offers from other royal orders and Russian societies.

Russia was the last of the European powers to recognize the Red Cross movement and enter into the treaty known as the Geneva convention. The movement was the outgrowth of the experiences of a Swiss gentleman by the name of Henri Durant, who witnessed in 1859 the horrors of war on the battlefield of Solferino, and was aroused to the need of some organization which would have for its object the amelioration of the suffering of the soldiers on the battlefields and in the hospitals. As a result of his efforts an international convention was called to meet in Geneva in 1864, to which 16 governments responded. All the European nations of Europe were represented but Russia, and it was not until three years after this convention, in 1876, that she adopted the code of the society, providing for the protection of the hospitals and people bearing the insignia of the Red Cross and for a proper care of wounded enemies or prisoners.

The Geneva Red Cross treaty was not adopted by the United States until 1882, and it remained for this country to organize the civil branch of the society and have it adopted as the American amendment. This provides for the extending of relief in cases of disaster other than war, and of late years the American Red Cross society has taken the lead in work of this character, the most important instance being that in connection with the Martinique volcano horror. An entirely new development of the work of the American national society is in the industrial field, where organized effort is being made to provide efficient means of rendering instant emergency treatment in case of accident occurring in factories, mills, on the railroads, in stores, schools, homes and wherever accident is liable to occur.

Ever since Florence Nightingale rendered such noble and splendid services in the hospital at Scutari during the terrible Crimea war in 1854-56, the power and efficiency of women in time of war has been recognized. It is through the Red Cross society now mainly that they extend their services, but during the civil war in this country and when there was no Red Cross organization through which to work, the women came by hundreds and thousands offering their service, and rendering aid on the battle field and in the hospitals which brought many a poor fellow back to the land of the living when he was just about to respond to "taps" on the other side. The women did not have the uniform and the insignia of the Red Cross then, they did not have the splendid training and organization to help them in their work of mercy, but they did have the same heroic, tender, compassionate spirit which moves womanhood today to respond to the call of humanity and follow in gentle ministry in the wake of the warring armies. Then there were the individuals moved by one impulse of mercy and purpose of service searching the battlefields for the wounded and dying after the smoke of conflict had passed and the still dark night had settled down; to-day there is the organized effort, the uniformed corps, the systematic service, the perfect equipment. There can be no hope to improve over the noble spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion of the women of the days gone by, but with that same spirit moving womanhood to-day, how vastly more effective become her efforts through such an organization as the Red Cross society

INTERESTING TO AMERICANS.

Western Canada Will Soon Become the Supply Depot for Wheat for Great Britain.

During the past year about 50,000 Americans went from the United States to Canada. Most of these settled upon farm lands, and the writer is informed by agents of the Canadian Government that the greatest success has followed the efforts of nearly all. To their friends on this side of the boundary line the fullest assurance is given of the prosperity that is in store for them. There will always be a splendid market for all the grain, cattle and other produce that can be raised in Western Canada, and with the advantages offered of a free homestead of 160 acres of land, and other lands which may be bought cheaply, an excellent climate, splendid school system, educational advantages of the best, what more is required. The husbandman gets more return for his money than in any other country in the world.

On the occasion of Sir Wilfred Laurier's visit to the Corn Exchange, London, Eng., Colonel Montgomery, V. D., made several important statements. "The function (he said) which you have just been assisting in connection with a kindred association has doubtless shown you the importance of the provision trade of Liverpool in its relationship with the Dominion, and the enormous possibilities of the future development of that trade. Well, the grain trade of Liverpool has interests with Canada no less important than those of the provision trade. When it is borne in mind that 80 per cent. of the breadstuffs of this great country has to be brought from abroad, you will readily appreciate with what great satisfaction we view the large and steadily increasing supplies of grain which are annually available for export from Canada, and I challenge contradiction when I say that of the wheats we import from Russia, India, the Pacific, and the length and breadth of the United States, none gives more general satisfaction, none is more generally appreciated, than that raised in the Province of Manitoba. We cannot get enough of it, and it is no exaggeration to say that there are before us dozens of millers who hunger for it. This is not the time to enter into statistical questions, but we look forward with confidence to the time at which, with the present rate of progress, the Dominion of Canada will have a sufficient surplus of wheat to render this country independent of other sources of supply. I think I may, with justifiable pride, remind you that this is the chief grain market of the British Empire, and through its excellent geographical position, as well as through the enterprise of its millers it is now the second milling center in the world."

A Remarkable Discovery.

A German chemist has discovered a healing agent in coal oil which has created quite a sensation amongst sufferers wherever it has been tested, on account of the wonderful cures accomplished by its use. A few applications are sufficient to cure muscular Rheumatism, Neuralgia, headache, tooth, ear or backache, lameness, sprains, chilblains, in fact every severe pain. It is sold in drug stores as Dr. Bayer's Penetrating Oil in 25c. and 50c. bottles and warranted to cure or money refunded.

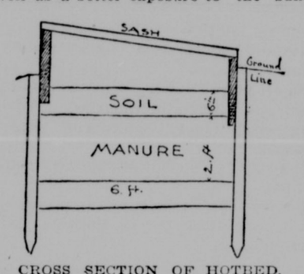
AGRICULTURAL HINTS

TALK ABOUT HOTBEDS.

They Enable Gardeners to Raise Earlier Vegetables at But Slightly Higher Cost.

Hotbeds are frames covered with glass and heated by some artificial means, usually by fermenting manure placed under the whole structure. They are used for several purposes, but mainly for the purpose of starting plants for transplanting earlier than they could be started out of doors, and for the forcing, on a small scale, of some of the more common and hardy vegetables, such as radishes. As a result, it is but natural that they should be made and used largely in the late winter and early spring months.

The frames may be made of various materials, but when they are to be used for several years, they should be made of two-inch stuff so fitted together as to be easily taken apart for convenient storage. These frames are commonly made 6 by 12 feet, so as to give room for four sash, each of which is 3 by 6 feet. The south side of the frame is usually made 4 to six inches lower than the north, thus giving drainage from rain water as well as a better exposure to the sun.



CROSS SECTION OF HOTBED.

Frames should be planned so that the glass is as close as possible to the plants, without crowding them—about a foot or a foot and a half above the soil on the average. The sash is so placed upon these frames that the lower end may be raised for ventilation and for whatever work and care may be necessary. They should also be so arranged that they can be completely removed in hot weather.

Having prepared the frames and the sash, the next thing is to find a location and to furnish the heat. Preferably hotbeds should be located in some place sheltered from winds and slightly sloping to the south, where they will receive the full benefit of the sun's rays. Convenience is another thing which should not be overlooked, for the beds require considerable care and so should be handy to the house and to the water supply. Having chosen our location we should dig the pit which is to contain the manure for heating. This should be done in the fall before freezing weather. By filling this pit with some manure or rubbish the ground may be kept from freezing, so that it is warmer and more easily worked when ready for use in the spring.

The best manure for heating is fresh horse manure containing about half straw or litter. This should be piled so as to allow heating for about two or three weeks before ready for use. At first the manure ferments unevenly, and so it must be piled several times, taking care to distribute the heating manure evenly throughout the pile. When it has heated evenly throughout it is ready for the hotbed. Care should be taken to have the manure firmly and evenly packed in the pit, and to get it in this condition it is best to put it in in layers and allow each to settle somewhat before the next is put in. When the manure is all in, level off the top and place about six inches of rich, light loamy soil, preferably with considerable humus, upon it.

After the manure has been placed in the bed the temperature will rise very rapidly for several days until it reaches a maximum temperature, after which the temperature gradually recedes. When it has fallen to about 80 or 90 degrees it is ready for the seed. The depth of manure depends upon the climate, purpose for which it is to be used, and the length of time heat is required. L. H. Bailey says: "Hot beds which are supposed to hold two months should have about 2½ feet of manure. For a light hotbed, to be used late in the season, 6 or 8 inches may be sufficient."

By bearing in mind these general directions and the cross-section shown here, one may easily construct a hotbed that will make possible earlier and better vegetables at but very slightly increased cost and trouble.—M. L. Merritt, in Prairie Farmer.

CARE OF DAIRY ANIMALS.

The milk of any animal suffering from disease should not be used for food in any form.

The milking stable should be as free from dust as possible at the time of milking. Feed dry fodders after the milk is removed from the stable.

Brush the udder and flanks with a stiff brush to remove the dirt and loose hairs. Sponge off the udder thoroughly with clean water, leaving it moist, but not dripping wet.

Ensilage, turnips, etc., should only be fed immediately after milking, so as to allow time for the elimination of the volatile products of ese feeds from the system of the animal.

Use only clean tin milk pails. Reject all rusty or patched tinware in the milk business. Unless seams and joints are extra well soldered, it will pay to have an extra coating over all the seams, and the joints well flushed.—Farm and Fireside.

GREAT SOCIAL PROBLEM.

Drift of Rural Population to the Cities, Its Cause and How It Might Be Prevented.

No tendency of modern times has caused so much uneasiness in the minds of social philosophers and reformers as the drift of population from the rural districts to the cities. That this tendency is deplorable is admitted on all hands, but there is no general agreement as to what should be done to discourage it. Recently, however, public speakers and writers have been insisting that the way to keep the bright young men and women on the farms is to ameliorate the conditions of country life. The extension of telephone lines into the country and the rural free mail delivery are steps in that direction. But the general improvement of the country roads would be a far more important step. Bad roads do more than anything else to promote ignorance, isolation, discouragement and disgust among the country people. Good roads promote attendance at school and the church; they make social gatherings, literary societies, dramatic entertainments and club and lodge meetings possible during the winter and spring. With bad roads the farmer is compelled to hibernate, socially, for three or four months in the year. With good roads, these months become the most pleasant and in some respects the most profitable in the year.

The improvement of the country roads is now recognized as one of the greatest questions before the American public; and it is coming to be recognized as a question which concerns not merely the rural population, but the whole people. Many public men have declared their conviction that road improvement is a proper subject for national as well as state legislation. Among the reasons offered in support of this view are the following:

First—The improvement of the highways is too great a burden for the rural population to bear alone. If left to them the problem will never be solved.

Second—The improvement of the roads would benefit all classes throughout the entire country; hence, the whole people should share in the necessary expense.

Third—The improvement of the roads is necessary to the extension of the rural free delivery system; and congress is authorized by the constitution to "establish post-roads."

Fourth—The improvement of the roads is certainly as fit a subject for national legislation as improvement of rivers and harbors.

Bills are now before both houses of congress providing for an appropriation of $24,000,000, to be used during the next three years as a fund for national aid to road improvement. The fate of these bills depends largely upon the attitude of the farmers on the question. If they would unite in a strong demand for national aid, it would speedily become an accomplished fact.

Remedies for Corn Pests.

Prof. J. W. Folsom discussed "Insects Injurious to the Corn Crop and How to Combat Them." There were over 200 insects, he said, which worked damage to growing corn, and of these 50 species worked extensive injury, their ravages causing enormous loss. He enumerated many of the varieties and told their habits and some methods of exterminating them. Of the chinch bug he said an effective way of keeping it out of a field was to make a dust furrow around the plant or surround it with a string of tar. An emulsion found effective by Prof. Forbes in destroying the pest is made of one pound of soap, one gallon of rain water and two gallons of kerosene. One quart of the mixture is stirred into 15 gallons of water and sprayed on the bugs.—Farmers' Voice.

Barley in This Country.

The production of barley in the United States has increased greatly within the past few years. It is estimated, in a general way, that about two-thirds of the product is good enough for malting purposes, the remainder being used for feeding. Only a small proportion of the crop is exported; in the record year 1898-99 the exports amounted to 23,661,662 bushels, but this was exceptional. The usual quantity of exports in late years is from 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 bushels.

The milk from fresh animals should be rejected until after the ninth milking.

SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH

RELY ON PE-RU-NA TO FIGHT

CATARRH, COUGHS, COLDS, GRIP

SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH

Use Pe-ru-na for La Grippe and Winter Catarrh.

IN EVERY country of the civilized world the Sisters of Charity are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs.

Whenever coughs or colds, la grippe or pneumonia make their appearance among the children these Sisters are not disconcerted, but know exactly the remedies to apply.

With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease these wise and prudent Sisters have found Peruna a never-failing safeguard.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters from all over the United States. A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio: Dear Sir:—"The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis, and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after farther use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured." Sisters of Charity.

This young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity and used Peruna for catarrh of the throat, with good results as the above letter testifies.

From a Catholic institution in Central Ohio comes the following recommend from the Sister Superior:

"Some years ago a friend of our institution recommended to us Dr. Hartman's Peruna as an excellent remedy for the influenza of which we then had several cases which threatened to be of a serious character.

"We began to use it and experienced such wonderful results that since then Peruna has become our favorite medicine for influenza, catarrh, cold, cough and bronchitis."

Another recommend from a Catholic institution of one of the Central States written by the Sister Superior reads as follows:

"A number of years ago our attention was called to Dr. Hartman's Peruna, and since then we have used it with wonderful results for grip, coughs, colds and catarrhal diseases of the head and stomach.

"For grip and winter catarrh especially it has been of great service to the inmates of this institution."

Sisters of St. Joseph, of the Deaf Mute Institute, 1849 Cass Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"We appreciate Peruna very much. It certainly does good work with catarrh and also with colds and la grippe. We have faith in Peruna and have inspired many others with same. We do not like to be without it. It has certainly kept us from being very sick. It did a world of good last winter for our little ones. Thanking you for your kindness to us and our afflicted ones, we remain, yours gratefully,

SISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH."

SISTERS OF CHARITY

All Over the United States Use Pe-ru-na for Catarrh.

A recommend recently received from a Catholic institution in the Southwest reads as follows:

A Prominent Mother Superior Says:

"I can testify from experience to the efficiency of Peruna as one of the very best medicines, and it gives me pleasure to add my praise to that of thousands who have used it. For years I suffered with catarrh of the stomach, all remedies proving valueless for relief. Last spring I went to Colorado, hoping to be benefited by a change of climate and while there a friend advised me to try Peruna. After using two bottles I found myself very much improved. The remains of my old disease being now so slight, I consider myself cured, yet for a while I intend to continue the use of Peruna. I am now treating another patient with your medicine. She has been sick with malaria and troubled with leucorrhœa. I have no doubt that a cure will be speedily effected."

These are samples of letters received by Dr. Hartman from the various orders of Catholic Sisters throughout the United States.

The names and addresses to these letters have been withheld from respect to the Sisters but will be furnished on request.

One-half of the diseases which afflict mankind are due to some catarrhal derangement of the mucous membrane lining some organ or passage of the body.

A remedy that would act immediately upon the congested mucous membrane restoring it to its normal state, would consequently cure all these diseases. Catarrh is catarrh wherever located, whether it be in the head, throat, lungs, stomach, kidneys or pelvic organs. A remedy that will cure it in one location will cure it in all locations. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THURSDAY, MARCH 3, 1904.

1900—1904.

What a difference there will be between the men and issues on the battle line the next national campaign and those who led in the contest four years ago! McKinley and Hanna gone! Republican policies, broader, stronger, more progressive than ever, will be the guage of battle, but the two men who so completely embodied those principles in 1896 and 1900, and around whose personality the whole country rallied with so much enthusiasm and confidence, will be missing. It is impossible to measure the loss of such men. In one of the editorial references to Senator Hanna he is referred to as a "useful man to his country." Perhaps that word characterized better than any other the kind of man he wanted to be to his country. He was no self seeker. He liked to be useful to others—to his friends, his party and his country. That is why he will be missed in this campaign. Such men are rare in every walk of life, but most of all in public life.

McKinley and Hanna, however, did not do their work for today. The principles for which they have stood have a stronger hold on the country at this time than ever before, and they will prevail in the national contest approaching. While the winning personality and forceful arguments of the two men will be lacking in the campaign, the achievements of Republican policies will stand as eloquent and convincing epitaphs written above the graves of the two leaders and inscribed in the public mind. They are the fruits of the labors for which McKinley and Hanna gave their lives, and though new men are to succeed to their leadership the work they inaugurated and broadened into world-wide significance are certain to have the enthusiastic indorsement of the people.

Goldsborough S. Griffith.

Mr. Goldsborough S. Griffith, who was as widely known in Maryland as any of her citizens, died suddenly at his home in Baltimore, on Wednesday, in his 90th year. Mr. Griffith was president of the Prisioners' Aid Society, and the State Sunday School Union. He was also connected with numerous other religious and reformatory institutions and for many years was active and earnest in seeking to promote the welfare of the unfortunate and to reclaim the erring. The amount of good he accomplished is beyond computation. He frequently visited the alms houses and jails throughout this State and did much for the comfort of the inmates of the former and to cultivate a better standard of morals in those charged with crime. He was for more than 60 years a member of the First Reformed Church, Baltimore, where his body has been lying in state since yesterday and where funeral services will be held this afternoon.

Death of Otho Paugh.

Otho Paugh, aged about eighty-five years, departed this life at the home of Francis M. McRobie, February 21, 1904, from la grippe and debility.

To him, after a long journey, it was farewell to the mountains and valleys. Worn with the emotions of his journey, he lived through the exciting scenes of many years, feeling the result in every nerve of his body. In the past few years it was a very arduous journey, driven up and down like St. Paul until shipwrecked upon the Mediterranean. But he will battle no more, and as we stand by the grave and reflect upon the dignity of this old man, we know that the last days of sadness and sorrow were not domestic.

He was a noble citizen and left many a worthy example, and in the last moment he could say with the poet:

Father, I stretch my hands to thee;
No other help I know.
If thou withdraw thyself from me,
Ah! whither shall I go?

But he has conquered the last enemy, Death. Whatever else he escaped the acid sponge in his old age was not pressed to his lips. It was not known what were his thoughts when he came to the Jordan, but he will awake in a realm of perpetual summer, where all is peace and joy.

Deceased leaves surviving two daughters, Mrs. Lydia Barnhouse, of Barnum, and Mrs. Mary Blocher, of Bayard.

Funeral services conducted by Mr. C. M. Miller.

PERMANENT ARMY CAMP SITE AGAIN.

Congressman Pearre Presented Oakland's Claims to the Committee.

HIS ARGUMENT BEFORE THAT BODY

Was Made Tuesday and the Facts Appertaining to the Natural Advantages Offered by Oakland Made Plain by the Speaker.

On last Tuesdsy Congressman Pearre appeared before the Congressional committee having in charge the selecton of the permanent army camp sites and submitted his argument in behalf of the Oakland site, as follows:

It is respectfully submitted, that in selecting the camp site the committee should first ascertain what the requisites are therefor In this matter the only available guide thereto is found in the "Memorandum on Camp Sites; their Requisites And their Uses," by Major J. Parker, U. S. Cavalry, Assistant Adjutant-General, to be found on page 824 of House Document 618, of the first session of the Fifty-seventh Congress. There Major Parker says, "The uses to which these camp sites will be applied are various." They are

"1. For the concentration of large bodies of regular troops for maneuvres and instruction"

"2. The concentration from the various States of their State National Guard for the same purpose."

"3. In war time, concentration of volunteer troops for muster, organization, and instruction."

"4. Concentration of armies in war times for offensive and defensive purposes, or for combined maneuvers on land and sea."

"5. Concentration of troops in time of civil disorder, to protect cities or Government property."

"6. As sites for permanent army posts, the troops of which shall form the nucleus to guard the storehouses needed to fulfill its functions as a camp site."

"To carry out these different purposes, is is evident that a camp site must have the following requisites:

"1 A large area. A tract of five to seven miles square of available ground is desirable.

"2 Cheapness. Land which is not valuable for agriculture may be entirely suitable for maneuvres. A camp site of valuable agricultural land in such large tracts costs more than is desirable."

"3 A diversified surface—not too flat, not too mountainous—affording cover and allowing free movement of all arms."

"4 A soil which will drain quickly after rains, making it possible to drill in all weather."

"5. Sufficient timber for fuel and to afford occasional cover, but no forests."

"7. Plenty of pure water. Facilities for a sewerage system and disposal of sewerage."

"8. Superior transportation facilities, making it possible to collect the troops or to send them to their homes quickly. Transportation by water is especially desirable, that being cheap. Access to the ocean facilitates combined maneuvers of the Army and Navy and practice in embarkation and disembarkation on a hostile shore."

"9 Strategic position in offensive operations with reference to the enemy's frontier, his lines of communication, and his great cities, and also with reference to the embarkation of an army to operate beyond the sea; as to defensive operations, with reference to the protection of our own great cities and depots of supplies, and our own lines of communications."

"10. Position, with reference to the bulk of the National Guard or of the Regular Army, in order that it may benefit the greatest number."

The next question for the Committee, in selecting a site, is to determine which of the offered sites most fully meets these clearly and concisely stated requisites. It is respectfully submitted that the Oakland site meets them all to a peculiar degree of fullness.

It meets the first requisite of a large area, by offering to the Government a tract of land containing twenty thousand, or if need be, thirty thousand acres, bounded on the North by Mason and Dixon's line, on the East by the Youghiogheny River, on the South by the main line of the Balto. & Ohio Railroad, and on the West by a range of mountains forming the division line between the States of West Virginia and Maryland.

The second, cheapness, it meets by an offer of land at not more than twenty-five dollars per acre.

The third, a diversified surface, it meets by providing a rolling surface with stretches of flat land, and is ideal in this respect.

The fourth, a quickly draining soil, it meets with a soil composed of the weathering and wearing of shales and sandstone, as stated in the "Report of the Maryland Geological Survey", already furnished to the Committee.

The fifth, a sufficient timber for fuel, etc., it fully meets by wooded hilllocks, ample for fuel with no forests.

The sixth, a cool climate in summer, it meets with the salubrious temperature of a Summer resort. The Oakland, Deer Park and the Loch Lynn hotels, and Mountain Lake Park, long famous as Summer resorts, are within a few miles of this site. The elevation above the sea level is about twenty-eight hundred feet, and the mean temperature during the Summer months sixty-eight degrees Fahrenheit. In this important requisite the Oakland site it is respectfully submitted, is incomparably superior to any other eastern site offered.

It fully meets the seventh requisite, viz: Plenty of pure water, the Youghiogheny River, a vigorous stream, rising in and flowing through the unpolluted valleys through the mountains of a thinly settled country, furnishes such a pure and sufficient water supply as is afforded by no other site offered the Committee. This river runs along the whole eastern border of the proposed camp site, from at the Pennsylvania line, to its junction with the main line of the Balto. & Ohio Railroad, which forms its southern boundary. This water supply is supplemented by numerous mountain streams, the chief of which are, Dunkard Lick Herrington Creek, Murley Run and Toliver Run, all of which rise in the Snaggy mountains on the western border of this camp site and run through the camp to the Youghiogheny River. The sources of these streams are the pellucid and unpolluted springs of the western mountain range. No camp site could be better watered nor afford greater and better facilities for bathing than are furnished by the Youghiogheny River and these mountain streams.

The latter portion of requisite No. seven, facilities for sewerage system and disposal of sewerage, is completely met by the topography of the land and by the Youghiogheny River, the eastern border of this camp site. It might be added in this connection that sanitary conditions in this location are perfect. Malaria and its kindred disease are unknown. The mosquito is a stranger in these parts.

It is confidently believed by the people of Maryland that no camp location can bs selected, which will meet the requirements of conditions Nos. eight, nine and ten for transportation facilities and the other requirements contained in these conditions, so completely as the Oakland site. Troops can here be collected and sent to their homes with the utmost possible dispatch to and from more States and cities, in a shorter time, than from any other proposed site.

TRANSPORTATION.

Within twelve hours the National Guard of the following States can be concentrated by rail at the Oakland camp site:

New York,	13,869
New Jersey,	4,651
Pennsylvania,	9,098
Delaware,	389
Maryland,	2,006
West Virginia,	1,140
Virginia,	2,271
Ohio,	5,677
Kentucky,	1,261
District of Columbia,	1,295
Michigan,	3,031

Making a total of eleven States with 44,660 National Guardsmen, more than one-third of the National Guardsmen of all the States and Territories.

Within twenty hours the National Guardsmen of the following additional States can be concentrated at this camp:

Massachusetts,	5,739
Connecticut,	2,572
Missouri,	3,078
Indiana,	2,234
Rhode Island,	1,025
Illinois,	6,669
Iowa,	2,364

Making a grand total of National Guardsmen, who can be concentrated at the Oakland camp site in twenty hours, 68,357, or more than one-half of the total National Guard strength of the United States.

Moreover, Major Parker in his report makes "The concentration of troops in time of civil disorder, to protect cities or government property," one of the uses of these camp sites. Within twelve hours by rail troops can be landed in the following great cities of the United States: New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Wilmington, Richmond, Harrisburg, Washington, D. C., Pittsburg, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, Toledo and Wheeling. Within twenty hours the following additional great cities can be reached: Boston, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Louisville, Hartford and Providence.

The Ohio River is within seven hours and the Mississippi within twenty hours by rail of this location.

This camp site is within six hours of the eastern seaboard at Baltimore, and within twelve hours of the port of New York and Newport News, Va., within ten hours of Philadelphia and Hampton Roads and within eleven hours of the great lakes.

The distance from this camp site to the eastern seaboard by the road is about 175 miles over the old National Pike, which is distant only about twenty miles from this proposed location.

CENTER OF POPULATION.

Major Parker in his report says: "Taking into consideration strategic position, it would appear that we needed one or more camp sites in the northeastern part of the United States, one of these to be near the Canadian border and one near deep water and near the center of population." The Oakland site is within six hours of deep water and nearer the center of population than any other site suggested. Indeed, it is immediately along the line which the center of population has pursued from the beginning of the nineteenth century, when it was at Baltimore, to the year 1900, when the center of population was at or near Columbus, Ohio. This line of the center of population between those years is almost coincident through its whole length with the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, which runs through this camp site.

If the uses to which these camp sites are to be put, as specified by Major Parker in his report above referred to, are correctly, intelligently and skillfully given, and the requisites for such camp sites, as laid down by him, constitutes the proper standard by which a selection should be made, then, it is confidently and respectfully submitted that the Oakland camp site meets more of these specified uses and requisites, and meets them more fully than any other eastern location suggested.

That the uses to which these camp sites are to be put and the requisites therefor are intelligently and skillfully given by Major Parker, it is hardly necessary to argue. At all events they constitute the only standard which the War Department has furnished for the guidance of this Committee in making its selection.

A most important requisite for these camp sites is generally but not specifically named in Major Parker's report. This is the requisite of ranges for artillery and small arms. The Oakland site completely meets this requirement. Innumerable ranges for small arms, of any length desired, can be secured, with mountains for backstops, and perfect safety in the use thereof. Ranges for artillery can be secured to the extent of five miles, with mountains several hundred feet high for back-stops, in the midst of a country very thinly settled, so as to secure the minimum of danger.

Another important consideration that should not be overlooked, and that is, the degrees of immunity of the respective camp sites from the temptation and contamination of larger cities. The environment of the Oakland camp is ideal in this respect. The nearest settlement is Oakland, a beautiful little mountain town of less than two thousand inhabitants, and Wheeling, W. Va., one hundred miles distant, is the nearest city.

It may be objected that the report of the Eastern Camp Site Committee, covering pages 11, 12 and 13 of House Document 618, first session of the fifty-seventh congress, is adverse to the Oakland site and favorable to that of Mt. Gretna in Pennsylvania.

Without animadversion or criticism upon any one, the attention of the committee is respectfully directed to the fact that this whole controversy between the three proposed camp sites in the east, involving a great variety of considerations, is summarily disposed of by this report in a little more than two pages.

Moreover, the advantages of one site over the other are not so clearly set out in the report as to adequately advise this honorable committee of the reasons for the committee's preference.

In the report of this camp site committee on page 13, only two objections are urged. The first is embodied in the following language: "It is found that the drainage, though excellent (natural drainage), would not be adapted to a comparatively inexpensive general sewerage system." This seems to contain a contradiction in terms. In the first place, if the natural drainage be "excellent," where is there a necessity for artificial drainage? If the natural drainage be "excellent" where is the difficulty in supplementing it along the same lines with artificial drainage?

The final disposal of all sewage would be made into the Youghiogheny River.

The second objection to this camp site is contained in the following language of said report on page 13: "I am of the opinion that none of these are suitable for a camp of instruction of the size contemplated, because of the difficulty which would be experienced in the matter of rapid concentration and equally rapid dispersion of troops." In view of the transportation facilities heretofore submitted, this objection would seem to indicate that the camp site Committees gave the transportation facilities of the Oakland site no dignified or serious consideration.

So imbued am I with the conviction that in point of healthfulness, comfort, transportation facilities, strategic location, and every other known and prescribed requisite for the camp site such as is contemplated, the Oakland camp site is superior to and suggested that I offer this as my apology to the Committee for the consumption of its valuable time and attention, and earnestly request that your Honorable Committee may give the facts and arguments herein submitted, the most careful and detailed consideration before making a final selection of the eastern camp site.

I beg, with the indulgence of the Committee, to file herewith certain maps and papers, as follows:

Map of the Balto. & Ohio Railroad system, showing the lines of the center of population, and the distance in miles and hours from the proposed camp site.

Small map showing the proposed camp site with its boundaries, inclucing land tracts, mountains and streams.

PERFECT

Poultry and Garden Fence.

For some time we have been arranging with the factory to manufacture a SPECIAL POULTRY FENCE, one that could be used for fencing gardens, and strong enough, if necessary, to keep out horses, cattle and hogs.

After a careful study as to the requirements, they have designed and built close enough to turn little chickens. It is not a netting, understand, but a good, substantial fence, and made of galvanized steel wire the smallest of which are heavier than the wire used by most fence builders for a regular fence. It is made after the style of our electrically welded field fencing, put up in 10 rod rolls, 3, 4 and 5 feet high, and can be sold at a small advance over the ordinary poultry netting.

Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Scott's Emulsion is simply a milk of pure cod liver oil with some hypophosphites especially prepared for delicate stomachs.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

For all weak and pale and thin children Scott's Emulsion is the most satisfactory treatment.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

Calvert Coal and Iron Company, et. al.,
vs.
Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines, et. al.
No. 1252 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree annulling, cancelling and setting aside a pretended deed from the Calvert Coal and Iron Company to one Charles O. Beaumont, Trustee, dated 10th day of May, 1902, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 597, one of the Land records of Garrett county, Maryland.

The bill states that a certain Robert A. Parrish, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was, in his lifetime, the owner of 2975 shares of the capital stock of the plaintiff Calvert Coal and Iron Company, which whole capital stock contisted of 3000 shares and that Calvert Coal and Iron Company is the owner in fee of a tract of land in Garrett county, Maryland, known as Lot No. 3 of the sub-division of "Beatty's Plains," containing 900 acres, more or less, and is in possession thereof and has been in exclusive and continuous possession of the same for a long term of years under a deed from Joseph T. Thornton, trustee, duly recorded in Liber W. H. T. No. 11, folio 51, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, a copy of said deed being filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit A;" that on the 22nd of February, 1901, the said Robert A. Parish, being owner of the aforesaid shares of stock made and executed his last will and testament; on or about the 20th day of March, 1901, died without having revoked the same and said will was duly admitted to probate by the Register of Wills of the City and County of Philadelphia, Penn., and is now of record of record in the office of said Register of Wills in Will Book No. 224, page 581, and that Letters Testamentary were granted thereon unto the plaintiff, Marie Gaul, the executrix therein named, and duly certified copies of said will and a certificate of the grant of said letters are filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibits B and C," respectively. The bill further charges that the said defendants, Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines, Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, and the other defendents whose names to the complainants are unknown have conspired together with the intent and purpose to fraudulently, illegally and unlawfully deprive the complainants of their right and title to the aforesaid tract of land and charge that the said defendants above named and the other defendants whose names to the plaintiffs are unknown have assumed to act as the officers, stockholders, directors and agents of the plaintiff Calvert Coal and Iron Company and have attempted to exercise the rights conferred by law upon said plaintiff and have assumed to exercise the franchises thereof, all of which acts on the part of the said defendants above named are illegal and void, they the said defendants having no interest whatever in said property, stock, franchises and rights of Calvert Coal and Iron Company, and that the deed to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, dated the 10th day of May, 1902, purporting to have been executed by Winslow Mason fraudulently representing himself to be the President and Charles F. Haines, fraudulently representing himself and pretending to be the duly constituted attorney and agent of Calvert Coal and Iron Company, whereby they undertook to convey the aforesaid tract of land to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, and which deed is recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 597, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and a copy of which is filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit D," is a fraud and constitutes a cloud upon the title of Calvert Coal and Iron Company to said land, the stock of which corporation with the exception of twenty-five shares belongs to and is the sole property of the said plaintiff Marie Gaul, executrix and sole devisee under the will of said Robert A. Parrish, deceased, and that the said pretended deed, unless set aside and canceled by the Court of Equity, will deprive the complainants of all their rights and interests of every kind to which they are entitled in said property and will strip the complainants of all said property and will bestow the same upon the said defendants above named and their co-conspirators, whose names are to the complainants unknown and who have assumed the power and undertaken to exercise the franchises of Calvert Coal and Iron Company and who have no right and title to the same.

That the pretended deed to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, is wholly without legal consideration, is fraudulent and void and should be set aside, cancelled and annulled by this Court.

The bill then prays that the said pretended deed purporting to have been made and executed on the 10th day of May, 1902, by said Calvert Coal and Iron Company, through its pretended president, Winslow Mason, and Charles F. Haines, its pretended attorney in fact and agent, to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, may be annulled, cancelled and set aside by the decree of this Court, for general relief and for an order of publication against the said Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines and Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, who are non-residents of this State, and also an order of publication according to law, requiring the unknown persons and parties who have assumed to act in connection with the above named defendants as officers, stockholders, directors and agents of said Calvert Coal and Iron Company, of the object and substance of this bill and warning them to be and appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor on or before a certain day to be named therein to show cause, if any, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

It is thereupon, this 11th day of February, 1904, ordered, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 12th day of March, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 29th day of March next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

RYANS GLADE.

I hope your many readers will not suppose that in the long and cold winter we have forgotten the outside world, neither do we wish to be forgotten; so we send a few items.

There is some sickness in this vicinity, but we are glad to note that there are no serious cases.

Rev. Westfall preached a very helpful sermon here on Sunday. He is deservedly popular here. He expects to reorganize our Sunday school in three weeks.

Our school at the Shook Shop has not been as large as heretofore, owing to a greater amount of sickness than usual. Howard Hutson, our teacher, is one of the best in the county.

Mr. Albert Steyer has ordered a set of blacksmithing tools. He already has his shop nearly completed.

Your Sunnyside correspondent noted the prevalence in that section of a peculiar type of heart disease. We are forced to the opinion that the disease is contagious, for since the arrival in our community of a certain young man from Sunnyside, a number of cases have developed here. The only sure cure seems to be a prescription from Clerk Tower.

It is eight years since we had a leap year and the young ladies are making most of their opportunities. Bashful old bachelors are quite nervous. They are afraid, and yet they are hoping the girls will not pass them by.

It begins to look like sugar making will soon be here. Then we can sweeten up.

BRIDGE BREAKS DOWN

And Precipitates Engine Into Bear Creek Near Friendsville.

Last Wednesday as engine No. 4, belonging to the Meadew Mountain Lumber Company, whose extensive mills are located at Friendsville was passing over one of the bridges spanning Bear Creek one side of the structure gave away which precipitated the engine on its side into the bed of the stream. The engineer, Mr. William Savage, was on the locomotive and went down with it but escaped with a few minor injuries. His fireman, fearing that the bridge was unsafe, dismounted and walked over the structnre ahead of the engine.

The locomotive was hauled out of the stream Monday and placed upon the tracks when it was taken to Friendsville where repairs will be made.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

Letter to T. J. Peddicord.

Dear Sir: Shuffert Hardware Co., Hickory, N, C, bought a car-load of paint; after selling it a few months, found-out it measured seven pints a "gallon."

Returned it to the maker and credited customers with what they had lost from short measure.

What do you think of a short-measure paint? Don't you think it half whitewash.

Go by the name; Devoe lead-and zinc. No whiting or clay in that; full-measure besides. A gallon Devoe is worth two of whitewash paint.

Yours truly
F. W. Devoe & Co

OAKLAND, : GARRETT CO., MD.

A Matter of Years

By H. L. MARRINER.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

HIS sister, who disliked Kate Murdock for reasons best known to herself, was continually saying spiteful little things about "girls who raised generations of young men," which is generally considered to be about as biting a thing as one young woman can say about another.

But this made no difference to poor Dick, except to make him rather more stubborn, and to make him more frequently dream of Kate's blue eyes and sweet face, and to make him try with greater diligence, but poorer success, to forget that she was 25 years of age while he was barely past 20, and that she had been in society before he had gone into long trousers.

He used to remember with a hot resentment how she had in reality literally trained him. How one night when they were in the garden together, and the moon was soft and bright, he had given her a white rose, and if she hadn't suggested the pretty speech that should have gone with it, she came so close to it it didn't make much difference.

Then when he was trying with all the awkwardness of an 18-year-old boy to learn to dance, it was Kate who had shown him the step when his sister and the others had given him up as a dress-destroying oaf. And when the other boys, who had paid more attention to dancing school and less to the making of a living, had openly sneered at the efforts of his spectacular feet.

He was grateful to Kate for all this, of course, but still, sweet as she had been, there was a natural air of the veteran about her which he resented, realizing with burning ears how raw by comparison had been the material she had to work upon.

These were the sort of things Dick thought upon as he sat alone in his rooms—one large and one small, over Burton's grocery store.

The family had left weeks before for Florida to spend the cold months, their household goods had been stored and only Dick was left. Left because he was trying with might and main to attain a better position upon the staff of the Argus-Leader.

There were no racks with guns in them, no tapestries in Dick's apartments. There was a pipe or so with a heap of old magazines on the littered table, a confused carpet of old newspapers on the floor, and on a mean little coal stove a battered coffee pot still sputtered. On a chair stood the dishes which represented a hurried meal, sent in by a nearby restaurant, and hurried because there was nothing to linger over.

In the stove soft coal smoked dismally or sputtered, according to the quality of the tiny lump it contained, sometimes sending out from a tarry bubble a thin, hissing jet of nauseous gas.

"WHERE DID YOU COME FROM?"

The bed was unmade and the sheets were yellowed from bad laundering. Dick, hunched in a deep chair, looked about at his surroundings with disgust. It seemed a shame that a man of 21, possessed of enough sense to hold a position worthy at corporation figures of $30 per week should live like a pig.

He slammed the jarring stove door on the smoke, took pu his hat, overcoat and pipe, and with a last look at the untidy room, went out. Anything, he felt, was better than this—even unneeded work at the office.

Call on Kate? Not much. Not when for two months he had tried to show her that he didn't really need another guardian.

Not a guardian two or three years older at that.

He clattered down the uncarpeted stairs, and at the snowy sidewalk, dazzled with the glare, almost collided with a young woman, apologizing blindly for his clumsiness.

"Why, Dick Wortham!" Dick pulled himself together and stared half understanding into a face he knew, a sweet face with laughing blue eyes, smiling on him over the furs, and before he knew it a little snugly-gloved hand was in his and he was wringing it hard.

"Kate Murdock!" he almost shouted. "Speaking of angels— Here, step under the awning out of the snow and let me look at you."

"Where did you come from?" demanded the girl, noting with observant eyes that Dick needed a shave badly.

"From upstairs," answered Dick, the light going out of his face. "It's an awful hole, Kate. Wish you could see it."

"Oh, let me see it!" she exclaimed, impulsively. The thought almost took her breath away. Dick stared at her. He bit his lip hard.

"See here, Kate," he said. "I don't mean to hurt you—you know, but—oh, pshaw—you know what I mean. I can't do it, that's all."

"Now, Dick," she said, coaxingly. "Nobody will ever know. I'll just peep in. Didn't we agree I was to be your mother?"

"Not this trip," said Dick, with cheerfulness rising at the sense of duty done, as it will in men at times. "Mother or not, you're going home, young lady, and I'm going to take you. Come on."

"I believe you're ashamed of your new home," railed the girl. "Anyway if you don't care to take me it don't make any difference." The furs were given a suggestive shrug. Dick had swung beside her and they were walking along the white sidewalk.

"Dick!"

"Well," answered Dick, briefly.

"It's awful, I know, but, Dick, I won't go in, truly I won't. Anyway, you're a newspaper man, and it's like an artist's studio."

"Yes," said Dick, "and living room and kitchen and bedroom. See here, Kate." He stopped and pawed the hard snow. "You know just as well as you're standing there I'd do anything on earth for you. You know it. But that— See here—I think too much of you to let you do it."

The girl drew her wrap about her and silently they resumed their trudging, Dick taking the rough snow and the girl daintily treading the beaten path. Suddenly she stopped again.

"Dick," she said, "if I get Walter to go with us will it be all right?" They had reached the house by this time. Dick considered.

"Well," he said, with a sigh, "I guess even a nine-year-old brother will do. Get him and come along. But I'll tell you now, Kate, you'll never speak to me again after you see that place."

"Walter didn't want to go much. It was cold; besides, wonderful to relate, he had his lessons to get. A quarter? Well, yes, he didn't mind going so very much."

"Dick Wortham!" exclaimed the girl. "Aren't you ashamed—to bribe him?"

"Well," said Dick, spreading his cold hands before the fire, "you wanted to go. And you can't go unless he does."

Even the chaperonage of Walter did not make Dick feel comfortable as they ascended the bleak stairs. He felt like a sneak and said as much—in a whisper.

"How dark it is," said Kate. "I can almost feel the bats and mice."

Dick, looking apprehensively at the bottom of the stairway, mentally blessed the janitor for forgetting to light the gas, and resolved to tip him. He did not breathe easy until the stout door had closed behind the three.

"Oh, Dick!" said the girl. That was all. Walter had discovered in the curtained alcove certain things of interest.

"Oh, you poor, poor boy," she said, softly, "How badly you do need a mother."

"I don't," said Dick, making a savage effort to keep his eyes dry in the face of the exposure. "I need you, Kate—you. Am I a baby, that I need—"

"Hush," said the girl, her eyes full of tears, pointing to the figure of Walter revealed in the swaying of the curtain, "After that?" And in a few minutes as they waited for a car Dick fancied he could still feel the swift touch of the warm fur on his face, as her head was pressed against his shoulder. He wanted to let loose the old college yell, and said so.

"Do it," said Kate, radiant, "I feel that way, too."

"Say, that was bully," commented Walter, approvingly.

The policeman on the opposite corner started, then he shrugged his fat shoulders. "Ev'rybody's looney 'bout Crismus time," he commented, sagely.

A Little Advice.

You may be extremely clever—
Educated, and all that,
But, remember, you should never
Need to buy a larger hat.
If you've made a class oration,
If in the debates you've led
With the greatest approbation,
Don't you let it swell your head.

If, in one thing or another,
You've achieved a great success,
Don't let your elation smother
All the sense that you possess.
Don't go walking with your nose up
And a proud and lofty tread
That is apt to trip your toes up.
Don't you let it swell your head.

If you've made a lot of money,
Hold yourself a trifle down
Fortune's smile is bright and sunny,
But she has been known to frown.
People are disposed to flatter,
But don't swallow all that's said,
If you've prospered, that's no matter,
Don't you let it swell your head.

The Chance.

No man is born too late
To turn his back to hate;
We may not all be great
Or rich or wise;
The chances may be few
For winning fame, but who Succeeds by gazing through
Ungrateful eyes?
Mankind has never had
Less cause for being sad
Nor more for being glad
Than we possess;
Ne'er has the world before
Encouraged kindness more
Or had such gifts in store
For cheerfulness.

THE KNITTING LESSON.

Grandmother knows how a stocking grows,
Ribbing and purling and heels and toes;
Now she is teaching our little Rose,
"Put in the needle,
Throw over the thread,
Out with the needle, and off it goes!"

Grandmother's mouth gives a little twitch,
Watching so slyly the eager witch,
Ready to help at the smallest hitch,
"Put in the needle,
Throw over the thread,
Out with the needle, and there's the stitch!"

Grandmother sees in a misty dream,
Her eyes still fixed on the needles' gleam,
Pastured flocks and a gurgling stream—
"Grandma! oh, we forgot the seam!"
"Bring the thread forward,
The needle this side,
Then over—off—and we've made the seam."

Grandmother knows how a stocking grows,
Ribbing and purling and heels and toes;
Now she is teaching our little Rose.

DOG TRAVELS ON PASS.

Clever Fox Terrier, Known as Dewey, Is Signally Favored by an Eastern Railroad.

"Dewey," a well-behaved fox terrier, whose home is in Rye, will be the first dog honored with a regular annual pass, says a New York dispatch to the Baltimore Sun. Dewey has been a traveler on the New York, New Haven & Hartford road for several years. Hitherto he has been "deadheaded," or supplied with only trip passes, but now trainmen along the line have made application to the passenger department for an annual. It will be put in a silver case, and Dewey will wear it about his neck whenever he wants to make a trip.

Every station agent and express messenger from New York to Springfield knows this dog. Never a week passes that he does not go on a trip of inspection on the line.

Dewey leaves home early in the morning on an express train going toward New Haven. He rides 40 or 50 miles in the baggage car, gets out, whisks about among the employes at a station, wagging his tail, then barks furiously at the door of an express car, jumps in when it is opened, and goes on a few stations farther.

When night comes the dog crosses the track, boards a train going toward home, curls up in a corner of the car, and is sure to awaken and get off at Rye station.

The Repainting of Liners.

The great Atlantic liners are, as a rule, repainted every trip. The sides of the average first-class liner from water-line to rail represent an area of about an acre. The outworks of decks and cabins amount to almost as much more, while the outside surface of the two great funnels and masts totals over half an acre. Thus there is an area of about two and a half acres to be covered on the big liners at the end of every voyage. The painting of the funnels is the most important and difficult of the whole undertaking, and the men carry on their work from swinging seats.

TWO TREES IN ONE.

Natural Graft Discovered by a Party of Children in a Tramp Through the Woods.

The children and their teacher were off for a tramp in the woods, where each brown tree trunk showed plainly against the background of snow. Suddenly Richard, who had gone ahead, shouted to the rest: "I have found the queerest tree with two trunks!" and the whole party hurried to the spot. Beside the path they found two small red oaks that after several feet of growth had united into one tree.

"It looks like a tree on stilts," declared Alice; "but how did it get two trunks?"

Alfred, who had been studying it carefully, said: "There were two trees, and that knot above the spot where they have joined shows that one top died after the trunks grew together."

TWO TREES GRAFTED INTO ONE.

"Both trunks are alive now," said Richard, who had been testing them with his pocket knife.

Then the teacher explained that originally one tree branched, and the other, leaning in that direction, rested in this crotch, and a small branch above this crotch held the trunk securely. That is to say, one trunk grew between two small branches of the other tree. As these branches increased in size they held the bark of one trunk against the other as firmly as if they were clamped in a vice, so that one tree grafted naturally into the other. In time the top of one trunk and the small branches died, leaving this odd and puzzling growth.—St. Nicholas.

Feasts Observed in Japan.

The Japanese festivals are easily remembered: First of first month, the New Year; third of third month, feast of dolls, for girls; fifth of fifth month, feast of flags, for boys; seventh of seventh month, the day for the god and goddess of love, Tonabota; ninth of ninth month, the "escape to the mountain," the feast of chrysanthemums. The latter is not now generally observed.

Trust Formed by Beggars.

The beggars of Barcelona, Spain, combined to withdraw from circulation all the two centesimo pieces they received from charitable public. The object was to compel people to give away the coin next and higher in value, namely, five centesimo pieces.

Truly Wonderful Table

Made Entirely of Relics from Many Historical Scenes and Composed of 3,430 Pieces.

A ROCKVILE (Conn.) man has completed a table that is remarkable. It is a round center table, and is constructed of 3,430 separate pieces of wood of historical interest. In the center of the table is a mariner's compass, with every point in it shaded, one of the hardest parts in the making of the table being the matching of the different shades of wood. Outside of the compass runs an intricate design made of diamond-shaped and triangular pieces of wood, light and dark alternating and arranged in such a way that there is an actual perspective, and in looking at the table the design appears to be of raised blocks instead of being entirely flat, as it is. The top of the table is remarkable in this particular and in the fact that it is made from wood from many parts of the world, each state and territory of this union being represented, and the entire work being done with a jackknife. The top of the table is 30 inches in diameter and is 16-sided. There are four concealed drawers under the top of the table. The outer rim is of rosewood and mahogany. On the ledge beneath the same idea of inlaid work is carried out in stars piled one above the other. The maker first began to gather wood for this table in 1876, and during all of the last 28 years he has been constantly on the hunt for pieces of historic bits for his table. After gathering the material it took three months to make the table, requiring unlimited patience to carve out each piece with a jackknife. The New York Tribune reports that the maker has pieces of wood from numerous places and things, including the following: Charter Oak, Hartford, Conn.; Washington Elm, Cambridge, Mass.; Washington's headquarters, Valley Forge; Dewey's flagship, Olympia; the Peel house, at Gomersal, England, A. D. 1640; the ship Endeavor, one of the first to circle the globe, 1768 (Capt. Cook); the Merrimac, the ship Minnesota, the railroad wreck at White River Junction, the great Chicago fire, the Hoboken wharf fire of 1900, house in Vernon, Conn., in which the first yard of satinet cloth was woven in the United States, 1812; the steamer Portland, foundered off Highland Light, Cape Cod, November 27, 1898; Fort Crown Point, N. Y., built by the English in 1761; lignum vitae, part of mast of the United States steamer Cumberland, shot away by Merrimac in Hampton Roads; courthouse where John Brown was tried at Harper's Ferry; the tomb of Napoleon, St. Helena; the vessel Wasp, blockade runner in 1812; house in Deerfield, Mass., scene of the Indian massacre in 1704; the tree under which Burgoyne surrendered in 1776; Scoville house, Waterbury, Conn., burned on February 3, 1902; Murray Hill hotel, New York, damaged by explosion on January 27, 1902; telescoped car in tunnel wreck of the New York Central, January 8, 1902; the shed in Putnam in which Gen. Putnam hung the wolf; the ship Columbia, at Gay Head, bought of the Indians; Old Church, built by the Spaniards at St. Augustine, Fla.; Johnstown flood; Williamsburg flood; Nathan Hale house, Coventry, Conn.; old Enfield bridge; redwood tree, California; tree in front of Daniel Webster's house; Irresistible, of Nelson's fleet, abandoned in the harbor of Bermuda in 1820; white house, burned by the English in 1814; Morro Castle, Cuba; carriage in which President Roosevelt was riding at the time of the accident in Pittsfield, Mass.; Benedict Arnold's flagship; Gov. Trumbull's chair, 1798; the ship Constitution; the Paterson (N. J.) fire; Faneuil hall, Boston; the ship Kearsarge, Fort Ticonderoga; Libby prison; old house, Nantucket, Mass.

ROTARY DIRECTORY.

A Useful and Unique Piece of Furniture for the Office of the Busy Business Man.

The needs of the hustling business man are always in the ascendancy in the mind of the inventor and a contrivance lately completed, and patented has as its purpose the helping of the hurried man in his hurry hours.

The affair is described by the Detroit Free press as a rotary telephone directory, a cylinder attached to the telephone arm bearing on its periphery the names and telephone numbers of the principal concerns with which business is done. A thumbscrew at the side enables the telephone user to rapidly turn the cylinder and find the concern he is desirous of talking to. As the names are, of course, arranged alhpabetically, the ease with which the desired information is obtainable through this method is apparent.

Natural Gas in England.

According to recent investigations of the geological survey of Great Britain, there are prospects that considerable stores of natural gas may yet be found in southern England. It is known that pockets of gas occur in the Wealden and Purbeck beds of Sussex, and they have yielded in times past limited quantities of gas. Below these beds there are considerable thicknesses of sands and sandstones, belonging to the Portland series, which form natural reservoirs and are worthy of investigation.

Nitrate Mining in Chili.

The nitrate mines of Chili, which furnished the world's supply of that fertilizer, yielded one and a quarter million tons last year, which furnished work for 23,000 men.

CONCRETE FENCE POSTS.

They Ought to Become as Hard as Granite, Without Any Reinforcement with Metal.

Dealers in Portland cement are apparently unfamiliar with the idea of making fence posts out of concrete, and cannot give precise figures indicating how much stronger those would be than wood. Of course, a good deal depends on the kind of wood employed. However, well made concrete ought to be as hard as granite, even without any reinforcement with metal. A correspondent of the New York Tribune Farmer has suggested that a post having a triangular shape, each side tapering from five inches at one end to three inches at the other, and about seven and a half feet long, would prove a good thing. A New York dealer in cement agrees with him, and regards reinforcement with wires unnecessary.

Whatever screw eyes or other supports for horizontal fence wires were desirable ought to be inserted in the mold at the beginning, for they could not be introduced after the cement had hardened. A V-shaped trough of the right length, and with sides corresponding to two sides of the post, would make a good mold. The concrete could be squared off with a trowel even with the upper edges of the trough, so that the material would need to be inclosed only on two sides. As the posts should remain in the molds a day or two before removal, it might be wise to have a rather large number of the latter, to prevent waste of cement and to avoid prolonged delay in the process of manufacture.

If a good grade of Portland cement were used, satisfactory results should be obtained from a mixture composed of one part of cement, three of sharp sand and five of fine broken stone. Only enough water should be used to make a stiff mortar, being mixed first with the cement. The sand and stone should be thoroughly and evenly combined with the other ingredients.

Storing Coal Under Water.

Steam coal stored under water for two or three years is reported, as a result of experiments recently closed by the British government, to have lost only two per cent. of its calorific, or heat producing, value. On the other hand, the surveyor states that some railroads have observed a deterioration of about ten per cent. and the British navy estimated a loss of 50 per cent. by prolonged air storage.

Liquors Artificially Aged.

Liquors may be aged artificially by gradually cooling them, in the case of brandy, down to 200 degrees centrigrade below zero, and the gradual bringing them up again to the normal temperature. The frigoric laboratory in which the new discovery is to be applied, will shortly be established in Paris.

Comfortable Cottage Home to Cost About $2,000

THIS is a pleasant little house, compact and comfortably planned to save money and steps. The exterior is extremely good, and the house has always been admired where built. It can be stained in red, green or brown, or in combinations of these colors, and, in a well-shaded place, would do in white or gray. But it is prettier in the darker colors.

There is a pretty little porch, entering a good hall with neat and well-planned staircase, with which a very good effect can be made. The parlor at one side has a bayed end and a corner mantel; it has a wide arch into the dining-room, where curtains can be hung. The dining-room also has a bay end and a mantel. Also a large china closet.

In the kitchen is a good pantry, and over the sink there is a hanging cupboard or dresser. Range with horizontal boiler. The cellar stairs go down under the main stairs.

On the second floor are three pleasant bedrooms, with good closets and a bathroom. Plain plumbing.

There is space for two rooms in the attic, but they cannot always be included in the cost as estimated, though often they can.

The timber and finishing wood and flooring are to be the usual local woods

Should Women Smoke

By SARAH GRAND,
Author of "The Heavenly Twins," Etc.

Let me give you an ounce from my personal experience of smoking and women smokers. I, personally, entered by accident upon the experiment of smoking. I was lunching with a friend at her father's house. Ourselves, her father, and two other gentlemen composed the party. After luncheon my friend suggested that we should go to the library and have cigarettes with our coffee. In the library she said to me: "Do smoke." "But I don't smoke," I answered. "Well, but just to keep me in countenance!" Of course, I took a cigarette and lighted it. This was between 1893-'94, just after I had published "The Heavenly Twins." Our companions were all three distinguished men; their talk was delightful, and as I listened I smoked without much consciousness of what I was doing. The cigarette had no effect on me whatever at the moment, either pleasurable or the contrary. But a few days later, while I was talking to one of my stepsons—who, by the way, was not smoking at the time—I was seized with an importunate craving for tobacco. "I should like to smoke," I said. "Well, smoke, then," he answered, and handed me his cigarette case. And from that time I have smoked, more or less—generally less—my average being from two to four cigarettes a day.

At first my cigarette was the toy of the dinner table, but soon it began to creep in at other times, and insensibly, as I came more and more under its influence, the old occupations natural to women lost their charm for me, and were set aside. I lost my taste for needlework. I began to shirk that stitch in time which is so all important in a woman's dress, and spent on a cigarette many an unprofitable moment which might have been more satisfactorily devoted to the house linen, the buttons or the socks. I had been accustomed to sit and sew when inspiration ran dry or a difficult point had to be considered; "the sad mechanic exercise" released the tension as a rule and thoughts came crowding. The effect of the cigarette was just the reverse. It was pleasanter—probably because of its association with ease and idleness; but it was no help. On the contrary, it dulled my faculties and left me as it found me, but with the addition of dissatisfaction to my discomfort, the latent consciousness of precious time squandered in trifling, idle, useless self-indulgence.

The result of my observation of women who smoke has been much the same as my own experience of the habit. So long as the cigarette is treated as a plaything, taken up only at odd moments, and not missed when cast aside, it does no harm; but when it becomes a necessity it is dangerous.

I think you will agree with me that a woman should be allowed to do anything honorable that she can do in a womanly way; and no fairminded person can call the act of smoking a cigarette either unwomanly or ungraceful. But the argument is altered when smoking takes the place of all those little womanly accomplishments which distinguish the woman from the man and make for the adornment of life.

The Test of Citizenship

By REV. FRANK BLESSING, of the Providence Apostolate.

EVERY adult bears a twofold relationship to the government—the relationship of citizen and subject. As a citizen, his virtue, his loyalty, and as a subject, his duty, his obedidience. The right of citizenship entails upon him responsibilities because he, in a manner, participates in the administration of the government. No prejudice of race, creed or tradition should sway his judgment, for he, in a measure, is responsible for the man whom he helps to elect.

If corruption enters into public places and abides there, the citizen body is responsible; and corruption in high places argues either indolence, lack of intelligence, or selfishness in the body politic.

Every citizen should be loyal to the principles upon which government is founded. This loyalty is the virtue of the citizen. Loyalty to the institutions of the nation follows loyalty to the principles. Each citizen before the nation is credited with intelligence and judgment, and this intelligence and judgment should manifest itself by openness to conviction of the defects of our institutions and in the true desire to remedy them.

The public and the common good is the purpose of our government, and every citizen should stand manfully against the person or persons who would distort the governmental power into an instrument for the accomplishment of selfish ends. Antagonism to the law, either individual or corporate, is a menace to the welfare of the nation. We respect a law not because of the benefits which it confers upon us personally, because a true citizen as willingly obeys a law against his private interests as for them.

In order that a citizen may have a due appreciation of his responsibilities and duties it is necessary to eradicate selfishness. Public spirit and a sense of justice are the hopes of this nation.

Money Power in Politics

By HON. ELIHU ROOT,
Former Secretary of War.

THE use of money has come to such a pass at the hands of both of the great political parties in this country that we find enormous contributions necessary to maintain party machinery, to conduct party warfare, and the effect is that great moneyed interests, corporate and personal, are exerting yearly more and more undue influence in political affairs.

Great moneyed interests are becoming more and more necessary to the support of political parties, and political parties are every year contracting greater debts to the men who can furnish the money to perform the necessary functions of party warfare. Just so long as you undertake to enumerate your prohibitions on the use of money, just so long evasions of these prohibitions will be possible. But if you enumerate the ways in which money may be used, affirmatively enumerate them, and then confine candidates for office, party committees, party agents, the agents of candidates, confine them to those uses, and as a penalty for any knowing departure from those limitations forfeit the office, you will have a very different state of affairs in respect to what we, I am sure, will all agree has become one of the great and crying evils of our politics—the enormous use of money in all of our elections.

THE OUTCAST BABY.

(A true incident.)

Upon a little pallet in the children's ward she lay,
The doctors watched her tenderly, and the nurses night and day.
Policemen brought her carefully—'twas just two night before,
They found her lying in the snow, outside her father's door.
"And when we picked her up, and saw that wound upon her head,
We thought," said they, "that surely she was dying, or was dead,
Her back is injured, that is sure, and one poor little arm,
And so we brought the infant here, to save from further harm.
Her parents? Yes, they're lodged in jail; they both were drunk, you know,
And so 'tis hard to say who gave the child that dreadful blow.
The neighbors heard a scuffling sound, and then they heard her cry,
And some one opened wide the door, and threw her out to die!
'Twas one or other of the two, but which we cannot tell,
So both are lodged in prison now; sure they deserve it well!
Their only child? Well, yes, she was, but all the neighbors think
That such a deed they'd not have done, unless 'twas through the drink."
She was a tender little babe, of scarcely four years old.
Her wounded head was rippling o'er with curls of finest gold;

"SHE DOES NOT SUFFER ANY PAIN."

But white and pinched the little face, and closed the sunken eye,
And doctors came, and gently said: "The little one must die."
The nurses strove with tender care to rouse the soul within,
For never word or cry was hers since first they brought her in.
At length she moved upon her couch, and heaved a weary sigh,
And then a little sob they hear, and next a baby-cry.
The doctor comes with tender words her trouble to assuage;
He tells a little fairy tale, and shows the pictured page.
"She does not suffer any pain," he says, almost in tears
(He has a little maid at home, of just such tender years;)
And then they gently question her, but far too young is she
To tell the story of her home in all its misery.
She smiles into the doctor's face; she seems to love him well;
But "daddy made me cry," is all the infant lips can tell,
And soon the weary eyelids close; again she is asleep;
But ah! it is a slumber far too heavy and too deep.
They gently chafe her tiny limbs and bathe her fevered brow,
But while they strive to keep her here Heaven's gates are opening now!
And pitying angels spread their wings, and cleave the midnight sky,
And in their arms the outcast babe goes to her home on high!
Thank God for children's hospitals! and for the loving care,
The skillful hands, the tender hearts, that little ones find there.
When laid upon their tiny beds, the kindness that is given
Must be to weary suffering babes a foretaste sweet of Heaven!

DRUG-TAKING AMONG AUTHORS

Evidences of the Demoralizing and Destructive Habit Found in Their Writings.

One is astonished at the frequent and unmistakable signs of spirit and drug addiction of popular authors. Unconsciously these writers describe their own condition in the characters they portray, and the theories and statements which the heroes and heroines are made to express, are the inmost thoughts of the authors.

A recent popular novel makes the hero most brilliant and sagacious after using wine moderately. True to life, the supposed brilliant statements are jumbles of words and rhetoric which the author clearly wrote while under the use of spirits. He also justifies immoralities of conduct by childish excuses, the personality of which reflects his own experience.

In another popular book, the author is clearly a drug-taker. The vague, dreamy, illusionary style and manner of thought and conduct of the character described is clearly that of a morphia or opium-taker. The uncertainties and the alternately confused and dogmatic thoughts are marked characteristics. The writer hoped by investing his subjects in mysticism and leading them through an irregular, unusual line of conduct to produce a book out of the common order. In reality he revealed his secret drug-taking and his own vague, uncertain mentality. Much of this work was written while under the influence of drugs.

Probably the cocaine-taker stamps his habits more vividly in his writings than the alcoholic or other drug-takers. Several very popular books proved the cocainism of the authors. The easy flow of words and ideas, like a quiet stream of water, progresses noiselessly without jar or change. One thought suggests another and one situation is followed by many others equally dramatic, and each is described without purpose or plan. Through it all run snatches of poetry, rhetoric, figures of speech and sonorous adjectives. The characters are moved up and down the stage in a hazy twilight of words without plan or purpose, and disappear to make way for others equally mystical.

Other stories give evidence of having been written in a coffee or tea delirum. The assertiveness of the characters, their brusque entrance and exit, their promise of great things which only fade away into uncertainties, show this condition.

In the drug and spirit-taker the childish efforts of the authors to conceal their personality and habits of life make more prominent their condition. In the tea and coffee drinkers there is state of mind at the time of the writing. It is assumed that the mind is perfect and intact. In some of the books written by these persons, there has been evident a well thought out plan, the execution of which has been sadly marred by the attempt to force the brain by tea or coffee.

No clear, consecutive brainwork can ever be done under the influence of spirits, drugs, tea or coffee. A tired, wornout man or woman attempts to do literary work under the influence of these narcotics and fails. The critical student finds unmistakable evidence of the failure in the abnormal state of the author's mind. The vagaries of literature and the number of strange stories and theories advocated are explained in many instances by the drug psychoses or disordered minds of the authors.

This most interesting study will astonish and surprise the reader as it unveils the personality, habits of life and thoughts of the authors in the papers and books of the day.—T. D. Crothers, M. D., in Union Signal.

THE PULSE OF REFORM.

Bishop Emard, of Valleyfield, Quebec, has issued a strong pastoral letter upon the liquor question, practically condemning the use of liquor in voting contests.

The city authorities of Little Rock, Ark., have under consideration a proposition to increase the annual saloon license in that city from $360 to $1,000, payable in advance. The total license, then, city, county and state, would be $1,821 per annum on each license.

The common council of Grand Rapids, Mich., has taken a firm stand against the refunding of saloon licenses originally in the names of employes, and afterwards, upon the discharge of these employes, taken out in their own names. Incidentally, the aldermen have indorsed the no-transfer principle upon which the committee on license has been acting for some time past.

In California there are only 20 voters to every liquor dealer; in Louisiana the proportion is even greater, there being one liquor dealer to every 15 voters. Illinois has one liquor dealer to every 51 voters. The proportion is smallest in North Carolina, where there are 124 voters to every liquor dealer. In Utah the proportion is one liquor dealer to every 114 voters, which would seem to indicate that the Mormons, whatever else their faults, are not greatly given to drinking liquor.

San Francisco's Saloons.

San Francisco has the terrible fact to face that there are over 3,000 saloons within her city limits—one saloon to every 125 of her populatioin—and, what is the worst feature, many of the saloons have grocery stores in front, and children who go for home supplies are only separated from the evils of the saloon by a swinging door, and learn all manner of wickedness from their earliest youth. Recently the commissioners of the city have decided there shall be no further increase in the saloons, and also that if any saloon goes out of existence no other can resume business on that site. Through these laws San Francisco hopes to have less than 30,000 arrests yearly, over half of which are directly accountable to the liquor traffic.

Saloon Limitation in Germany.

Increase of alcoholism in Germany has led to a movement for the better control of the liquor trade.

It will require saloon keepers:

1. To keep for sale at all times food and non-intoxicating drinks, especially lemonade, milk, coffee and tea.

2. That no liquor may be sold on credit; and that the number of women attendants shall be strictly limited to legitimate service.

Alcoholism in Russia.

The consumption of alcohol is increasing at an enormous rate in the province of Moscow, the revenue having increased nearly 200 per cent. during the year. The province contains a population of 2,500,000, and the consumption of vodka during the year amounted to 9,926,000 gallons.

THINGS FOR THE HOME.

Fern dishes are shown in green glass with tracing of gold.

Bead fringes are on every kind and sort of lamp shade and are very popular.

A hunting dog that carries in its mouth a rather large and unnatural looking leaf in vivid green is intended for an ash receiver.

Flower pots of silver are among the pretty things in the silver departments and are made to fit over the ordinary flower pots of clay.

Most housekeepers will appreciate the Chinese linens, which come in sets and consist of a center piece and perhaps two dozen doilies for plates and tumblers. The linen is almost like silk and the embroidery, which is done by Chinese women, is very fine, indeed.

Russell Sage has finally given up his lifelong habit of visiting his office every day and is now seen there at irregular intervals only. He drops in during the forenoon, looks over his mail and returns home early, seldom attending meetings of directors of the corporations in which he is interested. His office work, making of loans, etc., is being attended to by his cashier and chief clerk.

Matter-o'-Money.

An amusing method of securing the marriage of his five daughters has been adopted by a wealthy tradesman in Berlin. As suitors were not apparently inclined to seek the hands and affections of the daughters, the father advertised that he would pay to the accepted suitor of each daughter a dowry in cash proportionate to the weight of the selected damsel immediately after the wedding ceremony. A young lawyer was the first who submitted himself for the father's approval, and, having produced satisfactory evidence as to his respectability, he was presented to the daughters. He visited them for a week, and then chose the stoutest of the five, to whom he was married. When the ceremony was over the lady was weighed and registered 17 stone, the father immediately paying over to his son-in-law a sum of 13,000 crowns.—Westminster Gazette.

Got the Right Kind.

Gainesville, Texas, Feb. 22nd.—Mrs. L. E. Burton of 507 Glad street, this city, writes the following letter:—

"I have been awfully troubled with my Kidneys. I was in a bad fix and had been doctoring with the Doctors, but was getting no better. I tried a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills and I found they did me lots of good. I had a slight return of my trouble and I went to the Drug Store and called for Dodd's Kidney Pills. They said there was no such pills. I told them there was. They said they had the best pills that were made and persuaded me to try a box of another kind, not Dodd's. As I needed some medicine, I bought a box, but they did me no good, so I went elsewhere and got the real Dodd's Kidney Pills, and very soon was completely cured. I took a box up to the Drug Store and showed them that there was such pills and asked them to order some, but as I haven't needed any more I haven't called to see whether or not they got them."

On Pneumatic Casters.

The rapid multiplication of motor-carriages has created a demand for experienced drivers or chauffeurs, and schools of training have been establish to fit men for receiving the license which the law requires.

An automobile expert in charge of one of these schools says that an applicant recently entered and approached him. "I want to take lessons," he said, "to fit myself to be a chiffonier."

Billion Dollar Grass.

When the John A. Salzer Seed Co., of La Crosse, Wis., introduced this remarkable grass three years ago, little did they dream it would be the most talked of grass in America, the biggest, quick, hay producer on earth, but this has come to pass.

Agr. Editors wrote about it, Agr. College Professors lectured about it, Agr. Institute Orators talked about it, while in the farm home by the quiet fireside, in the corner grocery, in the village post-office, at the creamery, at the depot, in fact wherever farmers gathered, Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass, that wonderful grass, good for 5 to 14 tons per acre and lots of pasture besides, is always a theme worthy of the farmer's voice.

Then comes Bromus Inermis, than which there is no better grass or better permanent hay producer on earth. Grows wherever soil is found. Then the farmer talks about Salzer's Teosinte, which will produce 100 stocks from one kernel of seed, 11 ft. high, in 100 days, rich in nutrition and greedily eaten by cattle, hogs, etc., and is good for 80 tons of green food per acre.

Victoria Rape, which can be grown at 25c a ton, and Speltz at 20c a bu., both great food for cattle, also come in for their share in the discussion. [K. L.]

Vanity makes a cheap chromo feel like an oil painting.—Chicago Daily News.

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Thompson, of Lillydale, N. Y., Grand Worthy Wise Templar, and Member of W. C. T. U., tells how she recovered from a serious illness by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am one of the many of your grateful friends who have been cured through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and who can to-day thank you for the fine health I enjoy. When I was thirty-five years old, I suffered severe backache and frequent bearing-down pains; in fact, I had womb trouble. I was very anxious to get well, and reading of the cures your Compound had made, I decided to try it. I took only six bottles, but it built me up and cured me entirely of all my troubles.

"My family and relatives were naturally as gratified as I was. My niece had heart trouble and nervous prostration, and was considered incurable. She took your Vegetable Compound and it cured her in a short time, and she became well and strong, and her home to her great joy and her husband's delight was blessed with a baby. I know of a number of others who have been cured of different kinds of female trouble, and am satisfied that your Compound is the best medicine for sick women."—MRS. ELIZABETH H. THOMPSON, Box 105, Lillydale, N. Y.

Thousands upon thousands of women throughout this country are not only expressing such sentiments as the above to their friends, but are continually writing letters of gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham, until she has hundreds of thousands of letters from women in all classes of society who have been restored to health by her advice and medicine after all other means had failed.

Here is another letter which proves conclusively that there is no other medicine to equal Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered with poor health for over seven years, not sick enough to stay in bed, and not well enough to enjoy life and attend to my daily duties properly. I was growing thin, my complexion was sallow, and I was easily upset and irritable.

"One of my neighbors advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I procured a bottle. A great change for the better took place within a week, and I decided to keep up the treatment.

"Within two months I was like a changed woman, my health good, my step light, my eyes bright, my complexion vastly improved, and I felt once more like a young girl. I wonder now how I ever endured the misery. I would not spend another year like it for a fortune.

"I appreciate my good health, and give all the praise to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. M. TILLA, 407 Habersteen St., Savannah, Ga.

Jesus Calms the Storm

To dignify that tiny sheet of water in the north of Palestine with the title of sea, and call it Sea of Galilee, seems a misnomer. It is a little pear-shaped pond, six by thirteen miles. If it is a material matter of just so many cubic feet of water, of course, the small lake does not deserve its large name. But when the things that happened there are considered, the title seems not to be out of proportion. It is, in fact, the most important sheet of water on the globe. It is the chief scene of Jesus' ministry. On its shore He preached His sermons and worked His miracles. Out of it His disciples drew great draughts of fishes. He walked its surface as if it had been terra firma.

One day, after hours of tireless industry in teaching and healing, the Master gave his disciples "sailing orders." It would have been a comparatively short tour on foot around the head of the lake; but Jesus needed the rest He could have on shipboard. So, perhaps, in the very boat (Simon Peter's) from which he had been preaching, he set sail. A little fleet accompanied Him. The curious or devoted followed in His wake.

There was nothing preternatural in the storm which broke upon the ship and its convoys. The lake lies six hundred feet below the sea-level. The streams tridutary to it have cut deep gullies, sudden windstorms are caused by the proximity of snow on Lebanon and the arid wastes of the desert. These hurricanes find natural vent through the "gigantic funnels," and instantly convert the placid lake into a boiling caldron.

When the storm broke, Jesus was asleep on a mat, perhaps in a little cabin at the stern. The disciples did not appeal to Him immediately. They first did everything their nautical education had taught them to do. But when the waves kept breaking and filling the boat, they wakened the master. As men in fear are apt to do they forget their manners, and cried, "We perish!" "Carest Thou not?" Jesus observes a Divine order in coming to the rescue. He first quiets the tempest in the heart. With reassuring emphasis and inflection, he said, "Why art thou fearful?" "Then" He arose and rebuked the external storm.

A new meaning for those men must have come into the familiar lines of the Hebrew hymnal—"Thou rulest the raging of the sea," and "The Lord is mightier than the noise of many waters." They saw Him "gather the winds in His fist." Though long acquainted with this little sheet of water, they had never seen such a storm given place to such an instantaneous and complete calm. There is a picturesqueness in the words "the winds ceased." They grew weary and sank to rest. Talmage once said, "Jesus lulled the lake to sleep on the knee of His omnipotence."

Moses parted the Red Sea with his mystic rod. Joshua made a causeway for a nation through the Jordan with the glittering ark. Elisha smote the same river effectually with the sheepskin mantle of Elijah. But it remained for Jesus, without any material instrument, to quiet the sea in a raging storm with only a word from His lips. He spoke, and it was done. He rebuked the waves as if they had been intelligent beings, and the winds as if they had been used to the sound of His voice.

A sudden awe fell upon the disciples and the men in the accompanying boats. No wonder they said to each other admiringly, "What manner of Man is this?" "Even wind and sea obey Him!" "Who then, is this?" It was the recognition of Divinity.

The Teacher's Lantern

Jesus started on no mere pleasure-trip to the further shore, though He enjoyed the view and refreshment en route. In this instance, as in His whole life, He had an errand of mercy.

* * * * *

The humble environment of Jesus' life is here in evidence. He had no pleasure-yacht at His disposal, only a common fisherman's boat.

* * * * *

The genuineness of Jesus' humanity is shown in this only instance, in which He is described as asleep. Heavy draughts had been made that day upon His psychical and physical reserve. He had spent Himself in teaching. Now He was relaxed, and so wrapped in slumber as to be oblivous to the storm.

* * * * *

Jesus sleeps, but never oversleeps.

* * * * *

Those who have no faith for practical and present use in an emergency, have none. Theoretical faith is no faith.

* * * * *

Each of the evangelists reports the disciples as saying something in their fear, which the others omit. Putting them all together, and personifying the exclamations, one might read: Little Faith cries, "Save!" Much Fear, "We perish!" Distrust, "Carest thou not?" More Faith, "Lord!" Faint Hope, "Master!" (thou with authority) Discipleship, "Teachers!"

* * * * *

Like so many vivid incidents in Jesus' life, the whole scene seems an acted parable. The emergencies of individual and organized life (Church and State) are here depicted. The revelatson of personal character in conduct under such emergencies; the supreme authority and power of Jesus.

* * * * *

Jesus sought centers of population. Galilee was such. Josephus may be unsafe when he says that there were 250 cities there of 12,000 each, but recent exploration shows that the territory was so thickly built over as to make it almost a continuous village.

* * * * *

This population was also remote from the ecclesiastical establishments and so more independent and open to His message.

Child-Study and Sunday-School Method

Sympathy with child-life is the touchstone of a noble character. Appreciation of children's ideals, their hopes and griefs, indicates a high spirit. Jean Paul Richter shows it in his pretty fancy: "I would create a world especially for myself, and suspend it under the mildest sun. A little world, where I would have nothing but little lovely children, and these little things I would never suffer to grow up, but only to play eternally. If a seraph were weary of heaven, or his golden pinions dropped, I would send him to dwell a month upon my happy infant world—and no angel, so long as he saw their innocence, could lose his own." Dean Stanley, during the sermon of an eminent divine in Westminister Abbey, noticed a little girl pushed to the chancel-rail by the crowd. Seeing she was weary, he put out his hands and lifted her into the great chair beside him. However great the sermon from the pulpit may have been, the sermon from the chancel-chair was greater. The dean, in that act, reminds one of Him who opened His hands to children and said, "Suffer." Every Wednesday during his residence at Guernsey, Victor Hugo gave a dinner to fifteen boys and girls selected from the poorest families in the island. He waited on them in person. Agassiz, on his way to his laboratory, absorbed in thought, saw a little girl standing at the villa pump, crying over the fragments of a broken pitcher. He took her to the store, bought a new pitcher, went back to the pump and filled it for her. Yet this was the man who was too busy to lecture for money. In a life full of pathetic incidents, none surpassed the scene where Father Mathew, in his last illness, gave a party for his boy attendant and his friends. The addresses which John Ruskin made at his Christmas dinner to the children of Consiton are among the most fascinating of his utterances La Salle devoted his very last days to the instruction of a class of little children. It is worth repeating, the touchstone of a noble character is sympathy with childlife.

MARRIED

LYNE—LEGGE.—On Feb. 27th, 1904, in Washington, D. C., by Rev. Dr. Bristol, pastor of the Metropolitan M. E. church, Mr. John Julian Lyne, of Shenandoah Junction, West Va., and Miss Susie H., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Legge, of Oakland. Immediately after the ceremony the couple took the steamer from Washington to Norfolk where a few days will be spent, after which they will visit Old Point Comfort, Richmond and other points of interest in Virginia. The groom is a grain merchant in his native town and is highly successful as a business man. The bride, with her mother, has been in Washington several weeks visiting relatives and her marriage is quite a surprise to her friends in Oakland, who are numerous. The couple have the best wishes of their acquaintances for a happy and prosperous life.

Dr. D. O. McKinley

Will be at Mrs. Wm. Rodeheaver's, near Thayerville, March 7th; at J. B. Lipscomb's, evening of the 8th to evening of the 9th of March; at Mrs. Ellen Lohr's, near Crellin, March 10th; at P. J. Lohr's, near Beckman, March 12th; at McHenry, March 14th; at Friendsville, March 15th and 16th; at Newton Savage's store, March 17th; Hazelton, W. Va., March 18th; at Markleysburg, Pa., March 21st and 22nd. 51-2t.

THE MARYLAND GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

The General Political Situation Does Not Occupy Much Prominence.

RAYNER'S FRIENDS IN CONFERENCE

Mr. Gorman Has Yet to Congratulate His Senatorial Colleague—Fight to Wrest Control from Senior Senator May be Launched Soon.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS,
March 1st, 1904.

The general political situation for the state, guaged of course to best advantage at this time from Annapolis, has hardly been of sufficient importance, in the light of other events, for general discussion during the past few weeks or a month. Due to the big Baltimore fire crowding fast upon the heels of Mr. Rayner's election to the senate, and the Governor's appointments following fast upon the heels of the fire, and until both of which interruptions were lost sight of, the general situation as before mentioned, has not occupied sufficient prominence to have been yet taken into full consideration. Now however, the distractions have sunk with the rest to the level of the ordinary, and the future once more claims its share of attention.

In Baltimore on Saturday—there may have been more than this one—there was some sort of a conference at the Hotel Belvedere, a gathering of the Rayner claim. John Gill, the Senator-elect's leader in the upper house at Annapolis; "Bobby" Wells, one of the Senator-elects most outspoken adherents in the house throughout his entire fight; Hope Barrel, the Senator-elects leader on the Eastern Shore and how many others your correspondent is unable to state positively, were there avowedly to see the new Senator. And the new Senator was there to see them.

Now what this conference, held in Baltimore, resulted in on Saturday, or whether it resulted in anything or not it is impossible to say, but this much is a fact, and while to these who expect Mr. Rayner to make the nominating speech for Mr. Gorman at the Presidential Convention this year in St. Louis, it may come as a surprise, out of the 3,500 telegrams and letters of congratulation, received by Mr Rayner at the time of his election, not one has he yet found from Senator Arthur Pue Gorman, whose colleague he is soon to be.

He did hear from Mr. McComas. And nearly everyone else in Maryland of any prominence, in person, by wire or by mail, congratulated the Senator-elect, but no such thing did Mr. Gorman do, nor, more than probable, will he. Mr. Gorman never wanted Mr. Rayner, and he has not recovered yet from the resentment which the election aroused in him.

Hence it is plain that amicable relations between these two distinguished sons of Maryland, are certainly not too positive, and hence it is also more than plain that the reverse is more apt to prevail. But on the other hand, and queer as it may seem in view of the above, a fight between them for control is not yet by any means announced. In fact after the election of the delegates to the national convention, peace is more likely to prevail than war.

Most people, and especially those who know anything of Senator Gorman's plans, intentions and hopes—if anyone can be said to know anything of these things assert that Maryland's democratic chief for a quarter of a century will make one more throw for the presidential nomination prize this year, which they say he wants, and failing in that, will serve out his, six-year term in the Senate with comparatively little attention to affairs at home. But, and here is the point, if Mr. Rayner and his friends are dead anxious to lead—if they are overcome with a desire to rule,—why little or no opposition will they have in securing the opportunity. This may not be Senator Gorman's intention at all, it must be understood, for he himself has not subscribed to it positively so far as the writer knows, but the general expression of his wheel horses and the men who have been his organization for from 20 to 30 years, is one of utter weariness with the whole business, supplemented by a desire on the part of the elder ones at least to retire from the turmoil, and leave it entirely to the younger men, most anxious as they have been for some time to carry on the work.

The old crowd with few excepitons have spent a great deal of money on the game, many of them more they have ever made out of it, that the Senator, the man for when they done their all, is tired of it, is losing his interest in the abusive play, and wishes to withdrew entirely from it, as soon as possible but without a resignation, are certainly entertaining an entire willingness to do the same. If Mr. Gorman is tired of it, so are they, and some of them are anyhow and disgusted to boot.

"Let Rayner and his friends," they say "raise the big wads for the campaigns, which we have been doing for years with mighty little help from them. Let them shoulder the responsibility from now on and let them lead. Leading is the small part of it. Let them take the abuse which has been our portion and let some one else manage these hard old compaigns. The most of us are middle-aged or old men, and if these youngsters are ready to catch up the reins and drive, as well as handle all the heavy freight, why well take the back seats and look on." This is the drift of the talk of almost all of the managers of the present state and city machines. They are not purists, and they don't look on politics as a particularly clean business. But they have won. They are all more or less practical politicians, although most of them have legitimase occupations besides. These however are the men who have done the practical campaign work which must be done by someone in the victorious part in Maryland, and they talk of retiring. Of course such talk has been heard before, but it lacked its present genuine ring. It need surprise no one if the indications reported here turn out to be foreruners.

Further than that however, it will show that Mr. Rayner is practical as well as popular and successful. It will take more than his past successes and his popularity to make political bricks and mortar in the future. Experience workers supplie the straw and made and put together the ones on which he stands now. His own and his friends efforts raised him on top of them. The majority which returned him to the senate was not altogether chosen because of him. At least some practical work was done besides.

Delegate Harvey's bill, introduced in the House two weeks ago, to prohibit the carrying of fire arms by persons under sixteen years of age, on Thursday passed the House and on Friday made its appearance for the first time in the Senate.

Two delegations representing Garrett county interests were in Annapolis last week on behalf of and opposed to contemplated local measures.

The first was composed of Dr. C.W. Baldwin of Baltimore, Rev. M. Richards of Germantown, Montgomery county, and Rev. Charles Long, the new superintendent of the Mountain Lake Park Association, was in opposition to any change in the charter of that association; while a second delegation composed of the citizens of Mountain Lake Park—Mr. P. T. Garthright, and Mr. C. S. May of the Republican county committee—was in favor of certain changes in that charter.

By the present charter the committeemen of Mountain Lake Park, corresponding to the councilmen of a political corporation are selected, two by the voters of the community, two by the association, and the fifth by these four. But, and here is the point—if these four fail to elect the fifth committeeman within thirty days, he is chosen by the association.

The delegation favoring changes wants three of the committeemen to be bona fide residents of Mountain Lake Park, and if the four fail to elect the fifth man within thirty days the committee for the year to consist of but these four.

It is said that a threatened epidemic of smallpox at Mountain Lake Park on one occasion found but one committeeman on the grounds. To have gotten together a quorum, one member would have had to be called home from California.

Delegate Howard on last Thursday introduced a bill in the House defining the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace of Garrett county, requiring the plaintiff to bring suit in the defendant's home district.

Senator Godd on Thursday introduced the educational bill in the Senate. This he did as chairman of the Senate Educational Committee, the bill being the work of a legislative committee appointed by the school commissioners' convention. It provides an annual session of nine months and a salary of not less than $300.

This affects Garrett directly since Garrett has sessions as short as one and one-half months and none longer than six months. Salary from $25 to $40 for each month of the teaching session. Hence this bill, if passed, will increase Garrett's school tax enormously, it is estimated from 24 cents on the $100, to 49 or 50 cents, and will raise the total from $18,000 to $37,500. The delegation is strongly of the opinion that something ought to be done about this and is prepared to make a fight if necessary to keep Garrett's tax from taking such an enormous jump. The delegation is also in hopes that the people and the papers will take the matter up.

Senator Lewis' bill to provide for the payment of the publishing of the annual report and official blanks and for an anemometer for the State Mine Inspector, passed the Senate last Friday.

Mr. James W. Thomas, in favor of the legalizing of the Maryland flag and also urging the appropriation for the Western Maryland Hospital of Cumberland; Mr. Samuel J. Edwards, also of Cumberland, are also here in the interest of the Western Maryland Hospital appropriation; Mr. William Somerville, J. J. Robinson, Mr. Adam Lebeck and others here to defeat if possible the Lewis road bill and Mr. Albert A. Doub, as attorney for the county commissioners, in opposition to the repeal of the local law providing that the stock of Allegany corporations shall be taxed at the residence of the corporations instead of the residences of their share holders, were here on last Thursday.

The Garrett delegation in its entirety is exceedingly well thought of here. Senator Palmer and Delegates Howard and Harvey are quite reserved men, seldom taking part in debates but doing what not all the other delegates do: paying close attention to the general run of business instead of paying no attention to it whatever, merely voting aye on every thing that comes up unless some one shows a danger signal. These men are here to represent Garrett and they are doing it well. They are present at all their committee meetings and watch the county's interest with a care that would do credit to one of the Eastern Shore county delegations, which must watch each other for fear of having the common tonging and dredging grounds legislated away from them.

Indeed, one of the other delegates had a good laugh at Delegate Howard's expense, or at least he thought he had, when some one picked up a scrap of paper on Howard's desk the other day, from a neat little pile of duplicates, "And be it further enacted that the provisions of this bill shall not effect Garrett county," the curious delegate read, and showed it to his fellows, while Howard went on with a letter he was writing. The other delegations comprehended the thing and noticed nine like it on Howard's desk, then laughed.

"Not going to let them box Garrett up in any fool bills that our people don,t want," said Howard, when the other fellows began to ask laughing questions about his amendments, which he has ready for instant use on any bill which might come up. Perhaps the delegation will save Garrett from the state school bill by an amendment of this sort. This is entirely valid for all Garrett purposes and exempts the county all right if this step is taken and put through.

PAUL WINCHESTER.

FRIENDSVILLE.

Washington's Birthday was observed here on Monday in honor of that great and noble man, George Washington. A number of the people of this place attended the entertainment at Frazee Ridge. They reported a good time and have many compliments for those who participated in the work. They were especially delighted with the eloquent address delivered by Prof. Freeman Guard, on "The Character and Statemanship of Washington."

We are glad to note that the institute which was held here Saturday, was quite a success and unusually well attended by the people of town and surrounding country. We congratulate the patrons and teachers of this and other districts on the manifest interest which they took in the work. Examiner Browning was present and was heartily received by all.

J. W. McCullough has returned from his tour to Mexico and his pleasant face is again seen on our streets.

W. S. Taylor, president of the Bear Creek Lumber Co., is here in the interest of his business.

Thomas Flannigan, of Confluence, Pa., is in town at this writing.

John H. Cuppett, one of our most enterprising merchants, is on a business trip to Pittsburg.

Prof. M. E. Frazee, of Connellsville, was greeted here by his many friends Saturday last.

Prof. Freeman Guard was a welcom visitor at our institute Saturday.

C. R. Bartlett, cashier of Bruceton Bank, accompanied by Mr. Conner, contractor of Bruceton Mills, spent Sunday in this town.

N. R. Selby formerly principal of the school here was in attendance at the institute Saturday.

Miss Cora Fike, who has been seriously ill, is slowly convalescing. A number of the young people of the town visited her on Friday night.

Rev. T. E. Boord is holding a series of meetings at Rush School house at present.

Hustling Store.

The Hustling Store at Mountain Lake Park wants to close out all clothing, hats, caps, a thousand yards of dark prints, piece goods, etc., at cost and less than cost. There is a large amount of these goods to sell and low prices will be maintained until all are gone. Some extra bargains will be found among these goods. Will offer also at low prices a large and select stock of timothy and clover seed. 52-4t.

Circuit Court.

The March term of the Circuit Court for this county will convene in Oakland on Monday, the 21st inst. instead of Monday, the 15th inst.; as published in these columns last week.

ELIZABETH BRUCE DICKISON.

Interesting Biographical Sketch by Mr. Jacob Brown.

Elizabeth Bruce Dickison died on the 26th of February, 1904, in Pittsburg, Pa., after an illness of about three weeks. She was 83 years old last November; the only daughter and the last living child of the late George Bruce and Rachel Tomlinson Bruce. She was born in Cumberland, but her parents moved to the Little Meadows now in Garrett county, in her childhood, when she grew up to full womanhood. Was married in 1844 to her second cousin, Norman Bruce, then sheriff of Allegany county Her marriage took her to Cumberland, where she lived most of her life. Her husband died in 1854. Some years later she was married to W. T. Dickison, who died in 1886. She never had any children. Something over a year ago she went to Pittsburg to live with her niece, Mrs. Swearingen. No lady in Cumberland was more generally and prominently known than Elizabeth Bruce Dickison. She was intered in Cumberland on Sunday last.

Just here a statement or story can be made that will appear as almost remantic, but not so in reality. The "Trinity Lizzies" will form the subject which came into vogue in this wise.

Lizzie means Elizabeth. There were in generations now past three full cousins: Elizabeth Bruce (just named), Elizabeth Beall, and Elizabeth Sides, all the granddaughters of Elizabeth Tomlinson, wife of Jesse Tomlinson, the "old land baron;" thence came the name Elizabeth, shortened to Lizzie. After they grew to full womanhood, they became very popular. An acquaintance of their's in his educational years gave them the name of "Trinity Lizzies," which was by no means disagreeable, or distasteful. Elizabeth Bruce was the senior of the three and the leader.

The next of the three was Elizabeth Beall, daughter of Isaac Beall, (son of the historic Thomas Beall, of Samuel and Rebecca Tomlinson Beall.) She was born at or near Cumberland, but was taked by her parents to or near the Little Meadows in young girlhood, where she grew to woman's estate, and lived most of her life. She was remarkable for her quiet, amiable and modest ways and disposition, yet she was fond of good society. In time she became the wife of Michael Sherry, a very respectable citizen of Allegany county; elected to the Legislature in 1865. They both closed their respected lives many years ago in Frostburg, Md., left two children, a son and daughter, supposed to be living, but not in this part of our state. Michael Sherry and his "Lizzie," had and deserved the respect of all well thinking people. Only a few living now to make such expressions, but happily none to hold or make ill ones.

The junior of the trio was Elizabeth Sides, the oldest, and third daughter of Jacob and Sarah Tomlinson Sides, was born at the Little Meadows, which received its name from Washington, for whom it was a favorite stopping place. Some of her early years were spent in Ohio, but upon the death of her father she returned to her birth place, and a few years later her most excellent mother died, leaving four children, all of tender years, who were reared in the old Tomlinson and George Bruce families; and Elizabeth was thus kindly and properly raised, educated and trained not only to womanhood, but true ladyship. In her person, and appearance, she was not merely, but beautiful, and attractive. In her ways and manners, modest, amiable, pure and loveable, hence her great popularity wherever she was known. No doubt the delicate affix of trinity sought the trio through her. She had admirers and suiters in plenty. At the proper age at the old Bruce mansion, Wm. F. M. Magraw, of a good old Maryland family, was accepted under the shades of a beautiful tree now gone from age. The two were married in due form and term.

He was of fine appearance, full of cheer, and good fellowship, and quite popular, but not at all in harmony with the charms of his espoused. The wonder was by not a few, how and why the union took place as there was such a contrast of appearances. Only one child came, a daughter, who in time became the wife of Mr. Read, of Kansas City, Mo. The junior Lizzie, died in the city named many years ago. Her frail constitution, inherited from her mother, did not allow her to live many years, and W. F. M. Magraw, so well known almost everywhere, died in 1894. There were many to lament his death, and to feel they had lost a useful friend.

The trinity in its day was the leader in the social circle in that of old Allegany. It drew troops of friends and admirers, as a newspaper writer observed in later years. The circle of which they were the head, was, perhaps, the choicest in the county in their day. It embraced the Tomlinsons, Bruces, Bealls, Sides, the two large Thistle families (Thomas and Archibald), Fairalls, Ridgleys and others that could be mentioned. But strange to say there is now scarcely a remnant with the name of these once prominent families, where they were in times past so prominent and influential; others more numerous have taken their places.

This is the last of the three Lizzies, except in the lingering memories of a very few who yet live. Then and now.

THE MARYLAND GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Bellringers and Grafters Have Made their Appearance and Expect a Rich Harvest.

SENATOR U. G. PALMER'S SPEECH

On the Proposed Constitutional Amendment Limiting the Right of Suffrage—Local Legislation of Interest.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS,
March 9th, 1904.

Senator Lewis' road bill for Allegany county passed the Senate and is now in charge of the Allegany delegation in the House. Its fate will, therefore, be settled before many days. Mr. Robb, of Baltimore city, has introduced a bill in the House, limiting the price of gas in Cumberland to $1.25 per thousand cubic feet.

Business in both houses is becoming livelier as the session draws near to a close. All the old time bellringers and boodle bills are appearing on the files and the lobby is becoming active. Most of lobbyists have passed away. Mr. Rasin is not at the State House and says he has retired from business permanently. The new crowd of lobbyists are comparatively green men. The workers lack the necessary skill to manipulate things with success, but what they lack in skill they make up in zeal and energy and the week of the session promise to equal any former meeting of the General Assembly in rottenness and corruption. Corporations will be plugged and individual interests will be held up and made to pay well for all they get and the indications are that a veritable saturnalia of corruption will take place here, lasting until the closing hours on Monday, April 4.

The "Burnt District" bill for Baltimore city passed the Senate and will be passed by the House without delay. Other bills for the relief of Baltimore will also be disposed of this week, leaving the way clear for action in the measures which promises to fill the treasury of the grandmothers' fund to repletion and enable the statesman, whose inclinations are crooked, to pay off their outstanding notes and mortgages, when they go home next month. Last week there was nothing in sight and the hearts of the boodlers were sad. They feared that they would go home empty-handed. Today they are joyful, for they see a rich and plenteous harvest before them and they are hastening to gather in the sheaves.

In the fight over the passage of the disfranchisement amendment to its third reading in the Senate on last Wednesday, Garrett county played a part.

Senator Palmer did his best for his party by the introduction of an amendment to eliminate the grandfather's clause and also the property qualification. Failing in that he spoke in favor of an amendment by Senator McCullough, intended to counteract the effects of the measure.

Mr. Palmer's speech follows:

MR. PRESIDENT:—I arise for the purpose of putting myself on record as unqualifiedly opposed to this proposed piece of legislation and to all legislation which partakes of the same nature.

We are here today as the representatives of the sovereign people of this great Commonwealth, and I am actuated in my motives by but two thoughts, viz: to carry out the wishes of my constituents, at whose instance I am here, and to lend my voice and vote and influence in defense of and for the furtherance of good government.

I believe that every person in this body is here for the same purpose and actuated by the same two motives. Hence I have implicit faith in the failure ultimately of this class of legislation. It may rise, flourish and be tolerated for a season, but its foundation principles are false and fall it must, sooner or later. Let us hope that this body in this year of grace will not be deluded—even temporarily into giving its support to a doctrine that is false in principle and that can meet but one fate—its final destruction.

The sovereign people, in time, will always be right and they will wipe the laws, the government and the constitution itself out of existence if need be to make the voice of right supreme. And right makes right. The conscience of today is the destiny of tomorrow.

Mr. President, I am no political philosopher, but there are a few foundation principles of all government, concerning which not even any ordinary citizen can be mistaken.

For nearly a century this nation divided on a great constitutional question—one on which the wishes of the people were at first but dimly defined but which came more and more into prominence as the years rolled by. That question was whether the state or the federal government is supreme. It was aided, apparently, in its solution, first on one side and then on the other by acts of legislatures, decisions of courts and statutes of congress, and for three-fourths of a century no student of history nor nation of the earth was able to foretell the result as based upon the trend of events. Servitude was a cardinal doctrine of the commonwealths believing in states' rights—a doctrine acknowledged by all today to be absolutely incompatable with a free democracy.

The fathers and founders of the Republic died in despair of solving the problems. In congress in 1775 John Adams declared, "You have rights antecedent to all earthly governments, rights that cannot be repelled nor restrained by human laws, rights derived from the great lawgiver of the universe." The immortal Jefferson, the great apostle of democracy, in his early years wrote: "We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." But in his old age he cried out in despair: "I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just, that his justice cannot sleep forever." The question was finally and forever solved and every person within this presence recognizes the finality and justice of that decision, but it took the greatest internecine war of all time to seal that decision, and with an expenditure of money and a loss of life appaling to our sister nations. "Retributive justice must fulfill her destiny."

The federal government, with right and justice on its side, ha l behind it the two essentials of the foundations of every stable government—men and money. Might in the final destiny of all things allies itself with right and must prevail. It is thus all-conquering, all powerful. All government in its final, ultimate analysis, must depend for its very existence on its men who are able to bear arms and the money it gets from taxation. He who measures up to either of these and can bear arms or pay taxes, if the government shall be pure and perfect and democratic, must have a voice in making that government.

Let us examine briefly the import of this bill. If my father or grandfather was not a voter on Jan. 1, 1868, I might be an alumnus of the Hopkins University and the Harvard Law School, but if the partizan election official before whom I came to register chose to decide that my interpretation of that clause of the constitution which he used as a test were not satisfactory to him, I am disfranchised, and from his decision there is no earthly appeal. The proper interpretation of the constitution of the United States is a question on which the greatest constitutional lawyers of our land ever since its foundation have been hopelessly divided. But it remains for the Maryland Legislature of 1904 to determine at the suffrage of every one of our citizens save those whose grandfathers were voters Jan. 1, 1868, must be dependent upon the proper interpretation of that great document, on which the wisest fail, and that the court of last resort shall be an election official—in spirit, if not in letter, the partisan creatures of this legislative body.

This is the most despotic proposition which has ever seriously confronted the American people. It makes a tzar out of this partisan election official with more autocratic powers than the ruler of the Russias.

We are led to infer from the trend of events in the far East at this very moment, that all manking, all civilization is swinging toward two poles, viz: Despotism and Democracy. Some students of history go so far as to foretell a war of extermination—a great final war—and make this, the 20th century, the scene of the conflict. Its outcome, it matters not how much it is bedimned by distance or attendant circumstances, is inevitable. No despotism can abide the cannonading of the centuries. Right, combined with might, must and shall prevail. They who by their might or their money uphold the government must make it. These are fundamental, constitutional. All other questions of citizenship are legislative. We all deplore the punishment of a just man. We also say that two criminals might better go free than that one just man be punished. This question of suffrage is a sacred right. It is the highest privilege, the greatest prerogative with which man is endowed in this republic. The denying of the right to any man who possesses a fundamental qualification seems parallel to the case of the execution of a just man. Maryland has been very considerate and has even enlarged her citizenship by removing one of the fundamental qualifications, viz: the payment of taxes—which is commendable—and shall we bedim her glory and pervert the very course of government by restricting and abridging the other fundamental qualification?

While we love to quote Alcæus of old on "what constitutes a state," viz: "men, high-minded men." Why are we training the youth, the very flower of our land, in the highest skill and learning in military and naval affairs in our great national schools and spending in this city at the present time $15,000,000 that we may be second to no other nation in our defense against a foreign foe?

If all the states should enact laws similar to those proposed here we will disfranchise one-fifth of our entire population. There will probably be one-fifth more whose sympathies will be with the disfranchised through relationship, common interest or otherwise. Forty per cent. of our population within our midst alienated from our government yet a part of us! It would take but a small percentage more to rise up in rebellion, demand their fundamental rights and the result would be too appalling for us to contemplate. I am no pessimist. I believe this and every other legislative body of our land "knows what is right, and knowing dare maintain" it and I cannot believe we will ever temporarily compromise our state through the hope of temporary power or preferment, by giving the seal of approval to any act by which we will go down into history as despotic rather than democratic, a condition which cannot abide.

This is a great country and we are a great people holding in our hands absolu[te] ... Does the gre[at] ... parents in this great sisterh[ood] ... commonwealths propose an open violation of the spirit if not the letter of the federal constitution itself, and flaunt our defiance in their very faces?

I represent the largest county in area in the state. In population it is the smallest with four exceptions. The mountains are high and rugged and the valleys numerous and deep. Educational advantages are meager and expensive. The county was organized in 1872. In examining the school records for the past two decades I find that the actual number of months of school per year has varied from one and three-fourth months on one extreme to six months on the other, which was the term for last year for the first. The average has not exceeded four and one-half months. Many families live two and one-half miles and some nearly twice that from school. The dearth of educational facilities is no fault of ours. We have been levying a county tax for school purposes for years varying from 20 to 30 cents on the hundred dollars.

Geographical conditions are such that educational advantages are twice and thrice as expensive as in the flat land country. The percentage of illiteracy is high, reaching 22 per cent. of the electorate in one of the most rugged mountain districts. The population of our county at its formation was estimated at 7,000. The census of 1901 returns it as 17,701. Most of the increase is from immigration, of course. We have many foreign people among us, if not foreign born, of immediate foreign extraction. Many of our best and most substantial citizens are Germans and Welsh and Irish. Many of them are our largest tax payers and are in the fullest sense our most influential citizens, the very bone and sinew of our government. Some of them even shouldered arms in time of war, staking their very lives and fortunes, and went out in defense of their country and its flag. In the adoption of this constitutional amendment they are disfranchised, ground by the wheels of this modern Juggernaut into political serfdom! And look at the injustice of it, too. Here is my neighbor. Born in Germany, perhaps; lived in this state and county for years; paid his taxes; obeyed the laws; exercised the right of franchise; perchance heeded the nation's cry for men, in avenging the Maine's disaster and exposed himself to the danger of Spanish bullets and Cuban fever on foreign battlefields. Disfranchised! Cast out into outer darkness.

Another neighber may be an outcast, a menace to society, an anarchist, perchance, but through some perversion of the machinery of government his grandfather could vote somewhere a half a century ago, hence he is vested with all the sacred rights of citizenship. What an infamous law! I am against it.

If we are sincere in our zeal to put such a high standard on citizenship, why not be consistent and fair and honest and let it be a true test of a man's educational qualifications and not a mere political sham.

I believe in an educated, cultured electorate. It is clearly the duty of the state to educate its children and thus make good citizens out of them. Everett uttered much truth when he said: "Education is a better safeguard of our liberties than a standing army. If we retrench the wages of the school master we raise those of the recruiting sergeant." But it is perfectly clear that it is not the prerogative of the state to do it with a vengeance and alienate its citizenship because they do not measure up to any single educational test whatever. The state has no inherent right to make a constitutional matter out of one that is purely legislative. Let us use every possible means at hand to promote the welfare of our people, from every standpoint, moral, physical and intellectual, but beware of all legislation that usurps a man's right to citizenship, his legal test of manhood and thus weaken the very governmental structure which we are endeervoring to uphold.

I shall now, henceforth and forever oppose any and every act, legislative or otherwise, which deprives a single constituent of mine, whether in county, state or nation, of his citizenship, if he be honest, upright and law-abiding.

Mr. Harvey on last Wednesday introduced a bill in the House to regulate the speed of automobiles in Garrett county.

Mr. Palmer on Wednesday introduced a bill in the Senate to prohibit the granting of licenses for the sale of liquor in districts Six, Ten and Twelve in Garrett county. This passed the Senate on Friday.

Mr. Harvey on Friday introduced a bill in the House for the incorporation of Friendsville. This was favorably reported on Monday night and will doubtless pass on Tuesday, or certainly this week.

Mr. Howard is having engrossed preparatory to introduction three bills. One provides against the bringing into Garrett of any insane person or pauper, liable to become a county charge.

Another will compel the the clerk to the County Commissioners to deliver the commissions to the road supervisors, instead of requiring the sheriff to do this, as is now the case, and who charges a fee for this service. Mr. Howard introduces this at the request of the County Commissioners.

His third bill, also by request, is to submit to the voters of Garrett county a proposition to build a court house and jail in Oakland.

Mr. Harvey is holding in his desk a local bill for Garrett, regulating the speed of automobiles. A general law has been introduced which covers this, accordingly Mr. Harvey is holding his bill which has already been favorably reported, until the fate of general measure is ascertained.

The bill to reimburse Garrett county $2,112 for state taxes overpaid, has been signed by the Governor.

The bill prohibiting the sale of liquor in the Third district, outside of the corporate limits of Grantsville, in Garrett county, has also been signed.

Mr. Howard had in preparation a bill which he intended to introduce but which has been withdrawn owing to the fact that a general bill from which Garrett county will be exempted, has already been introduced and printed. The bill of Mr. Howard's, and which would have provided against railway companies bringing into Garrett county tramps arrested for stealing rides, there to be tried, is as follows:

An Act to repeal section 275 of Article 27 of the Code of Public General Laws, title "Crimes and Punishments," subtitle "Vagrants and Tramps," so far as the same applies to Garrett county.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That Section 275 of Article 27 of the Code of Public General Laws, title "Crimes and Punishments," subtitle "Vagrants and Tramps," be and same is hereby repealed so far as it applies to Garrett county.

Section 2. And be it enacted. That this Act shall take effect from the date of its passage.

ELIZABETH BRUCE DICKISON.

Interesting Biographical Sketch by Mr. Jacob Brown.

Elizabeth Bruce Dickison died on the 26th of February, 1904, in Pittsburg, Pa., after an illness of about three weeks. She was 83 years old last November; the only daughter and the last living child of the late George Bruce and Rachel Tomlinson Bruce. She was born in Cumberland, but her parents moved to the Little Meadows now in Garrett county, in her childhood, when she grew up to full womanhood. Was married in 1844 to her second cousin, Norman Bruce, then sheriff of Allegany county Her marriage took her to Cumberland, where she lived most of her life. Her husband died in 1854. Some years later she was married to W. T. Dickison, who died in 1886. She never had any children. Something over a year ago she went to Pittsburg to live with her niece, Mrs. Swearingen. No lady in Cumberland was more generally and prominently known than Elizabeth Bruce Dickison. She was intered in Cumberland on Sunday last.

Just here a statement or story can be made that will appear as almost romantic, but not so in reality. The "Trinity Lizzies" will form the subject which came into vogue in this wise.

Lizzie means Elizabeth. There were in generations now past three full cousins: Elizabeth Bruce (just named), Elizabeth Beall, and Elizabeth Sides, all the granddaughters of Elizabeth Tomlinson, wife of Jesse Tomlinson, the "old land baron;" thence came the name Elizabeth, shortened to Lizzie. After they grew to full womanhood, they became very popular. An acquaintance of their's in his educational years gave them the name of "Trinity Lizzies," which was by no means disagreeable, or distasteful. Elizabeth Bruce was the senior of the three and the leader.

The next of the three was Elizabeth Beall, daughter of Isaac Beall, (son of the historic Thomas Beall, of Samuel and Rebecca Tomlinson Beall.) She was born at or near Cumberland, but was taked by her parents to or near the Little Meadows in young girlhood, where she grew to woman's estate, and lived most of her life. She was remarkable for her quiet, amiable and modest ways and disposition, yet she was fond of good society. In time she became the wife of Michael Sherry, a very respectable citizen of Allegany county; elected to the Legislature in 1865. They both closed their respected lives many years ago in Frostburg, Md., left two children, a son and daughter, supposed to be living, but not in this part of our state. Michael Sherry and his "Lizzie," had and deserved the respect of all well thinking people. Only a few living now to make such expressions, but happily none to hold or make ill ones.

The junior of the trio was Elizabeth Sides, the oldest, and third daughter of Jacob and Sarah Tomlinson Sides, was born at the Little Meadows, which received its name from Washington, for whom it was a favorite stopping place. Some of her early years were spent in Ohio, but upon the death of her father she returned to her birth place, and a few years later her most excellent mother died, leaving four children, all of tender years, who were reared in the old Tomlinson and George Bruce families; and Elizabeth was thus kindly and properly raised, educated and trained not only to womanhood, but true ladyship. In her person, and appearance, she was not merely, but beautiful, and attractive. In her ways and manners, modest, amiable, pure and loveable, hence her great popularity wherever she was known. No doubt the delicate affix of trinity sought the trio through her. She had admirers and suiters in plenty. At the proper age at the old Bruce mansion, Wm. F. M. Magraw, of a good old Maryland family, was accepted under the shades of a beautiful tree now gone from age. The two were married in due form and term.

He was of fine appearance, full of cheer, and good fellowship, and quite popular, but not at all in harmony with the charms of his espoused. The wonder was by not a few, how and why the union took place as there was such a contrast of appearances. Only one child came, a daughter, who in time became the wife of Mr. Read, of Kansas City, Mo. The junior Lizzie, died in the city named many years ago. Her frail constitution, inherited from her mother, did not allow her to live many years, and W. F. M. Magraw, so well known almost everywhere, died in 1894. There were many to lament his death, and to feel they had lost a useful friend.

The trinity in its day was the leader in the social circle in that of old Allegany. It drew troops of friends and admirers, as a newspaper writer observed in later years. The circle of which they were the head, was, perhaps, the choicest in the county in their day. It embraced the Tomlinsons, Bruces, Bealls, Sides, the two large Thistle families (Thomas and Archibald), Fairalls, Ridgleys and others that could be mentioned. But strange to say there is now scarcely a remnant with the name of these once prominent families, where they were in times past so prominent and influential; others more numerous have taken their places.

This is the last of the three Lizzies, except in the lingering memories of a very few who yet live. Then and now.

THE MARYLAND GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Bellringers and Grafters Have Made their Appearance and Expect a Rich Harvest.

SENATOR U. G. PALMER'S SPEECH

On the Proposed Constitutional Amendment Limiting the Right of Suffrage—Local Legislation of Interest.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS, March 9th, 1904.

Senator Lewis' road bill for Allegany county passed the Senate and is now in charge of the Allegany delegation in the House. Its fate will, therefore, be settled before many days. Mr. Robb, of Baltimore city, has introduced a bill in the House, limiting the price of gas in Cumberland to $1.25 per thousand cubic feet.

Business in both houses is becoming livelier as the session draws near to a close. All the old time bellringers and boodle bills are appearing on the files and the lobby is becoming active. Most of lobbyists have passed away. Mr. Rasin is not at the State House and says he has retired from business permanently. The new crowd of lobbyists are comparatively green men. The workers lack the necessary skill to manipulate things with success, but what they lack in skill they make up in zeal and energy and the week of the session promise to equal any former meeting of the General Assmebly in rottenness and corruption. Corporations will be plugged and individual interests will be held up and made to pay well for all they get and the indications are that a veritable saturnalia of corruption will take place here, lasting until the closing hours on Monday, April 4.

The "Burnt District" bill for Baltimore city passed the Senate and will be passed by the House without delay. Other bills for the relief of Baltimore will also be disposed of this week, leaving the way clear for action in the measures which promises to fill the treasury of the grandmothers' fund to repletion and enable the statesman, whose inclinations are crooked, to pay off their outstanding notes and mortgages, when they go home next month. Last week there was nothing in sight and the hearts of the boodlers were sad. They feared that they would go home empty-handed. Today they are joyful, for they see a rich and plenteous harvest before them and they are hastening to gather in the sheaves.

In the fight over the passage of the disfranchisement amendment to its third reading in the Senate on last Wednesday, Garrett county played a part.

Senator Palmer did his best for his party by the introduction of an amendment to eliminate the grandfather clause and also the property qualification. Failing in that he spoke in favor of an amendment by Senator McCullough, intended to counteract the effects of the measure.

Mr. Palmer's speech follows:

MR. PRESIDENT:—I arise for the purpose of putting myself on record as unqualifiedly opposed to this proposed piece of legislation and to all legislation which partakes of the same nature.

We are here today as the representatives of the sovereign people of this great Commonwealth, and I am actuated in my motives by but two thoughts, viz: to carry out the wishes of my constituents, at whose instance I am here, and to lend my voice and vote and influence in defense of and for the furtherance of good government.

I believe that every person in this body is here for the same purpose and actuated by the same two motives. Hence I have implicit faith in the failure ultimately of this class of legislation. It may rise, flourish and be tolerated for a season, but its foundation principles are false and fall it must, sooner or later. Let us hope that this body in this year of grace will not be deluded—even temporarily into giving its support to a doctrine that is false in principle and that can meet but one fate—its final destruction.

The sovereign people, in time, will always be right and they will wipe the laws, the government and the constitution itself out of existence if need be to make the voice of right supreme. And right makes right. The conscience of today is the destiny of tomorrow.

Mr. President, I am no political philosopher, but there are a few foundation principles of all government, concerning which not even any ordinary citizen can be mistaken.

For nearly a century this nation divided on a great constitutional question—one on which the wishes of the people were at first but dimly defined but which came more and more into prominence as the years rolled by. That question was whether the state or the federal government is supreme. It was aided, apparently, in its solution, first on one side and then on the other by acts of legislatures, decisions of courts and statutes of congress, and for three-fourths of a century no student of history nor nation of the earth was able to foretell the result as based upon the trend of events. Servitude was a cardinal doctrine of the commonwealths believing in states' rights—a doctrine acknowledged by all today to be absolutely incompatable with a free democracy.

The fathers and founders of the Republic died in despair of solving the problems. In congress in 1775 John Adams declared, "You have rights antecedent to all earthly governments, rights that cannot be repelled nor restrained by human laws, rights derived from the great lawgiver of the universe." The immortal Jefferson, the great apostle of democracy, in his early years wrote: "We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." But in his old age he cried out in despair: "I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just, that his justice cannot sleep forever." The question was finally and forever solved and every person within this presence recognizes the finality and justice of that decision, but it took the greatest internecine war of all time to seal that decision, and with an expenditure of money and a loss of life appaling to our sister nations. "Retributive justice must fulfill her destiny."

The federal government, with right and justice on its side, had behind it the two essentials of the foundations of every stable government—men and money. Might in the final destiny of all things allies itself with right and must prevail. It is thus all-conquering, all powerful. All government in its final, ultimate analysis, must depend for its very existence on its men who are able to bear arms and the money it gets from taxation. He who measures up to either of these and can bear arms or pay taxes, if the government shall be pure and perfect and democratic, must have a voice in making that government.

Let us examine briefly the import of this bill. If my father or grandfather was not a voter on Jan. 1, 1868, I might be an alumnus of the Hopkins University and the Harvard Law School, but if the partizan election official before whom I came to register chose to decide that my interpretation of that clause of the constitution which he used as a test were not satisfactory to him, I am disfranchised, and from his decision there is no earthly appeal. The proper interpretation of the constitution of the United States is a question on which the greatest constitutional lawyers of our land ever since its foundation have been hopelessly divided. But it remains for the Maryland Legislature of 1904 to determine that the suffrage of every one of our citizens save those whose grandfathers were voters Jan. 1, 1868, must be dependent upon the proper interpretation of that great document, on which the wisest fail, and that the court of last resort shall be an election official—in spirit, if not in letter, the partisan creatures of this legislative body.

This is the most despotic proposition which has ever seriously confronted the American people. It makes a tzar out of this partisan election official with more autocratic powers than the ruler of the Russias.

We are led to infer from the trend of events in the far East at this very moment, that all manking, all civilization is swinging toward two poles, viz: Despotism and Democracy. Some students of history go so far as to foretell a war of extermination—a great final war—and make this, the 20th century, the scene of the conflict. Its outcome, it matters not how much it is bedimned by distance or attendant circumstances, is inevitable. No despotism can abide the cannonading of the centuries. Right, combined with might, must and shall prevail. They who by their might or their money uphold the government must make it. These are fundamental, constitutional. All other questions of citizenship are legislative. We all deplore the punishment of a just man. We also say that two criminals might better go free than that one just man be punished. This question of suffrage is a sacred right. It is the highest privilege, the greatest prerogative with which man is endowed in this republic. The denying of the right to any man who possesses a fundamental qualification seems parallel to the case of the execution of a just man. Maryland has been very considerate and has even enlarged her citizenship by removing one of the fundamental qualifications, viz: the payment of taxes—which is commendable—and shall we bedim her glory and pervert the very course of government by restricting and abridging the other fundamental qualification?

While we love to quote Alcæus of old on "what constitutes a state," viz: "men, high-minded men." Why are we training the youth, the very flower of our land, in the highest skill and learning in military and naval affairs in our great national schools and spending in this city at the present time $15,000,000 that we may be second to no other nation in our defense against a foreign foe?

If all the states should enact laws similar to those proposed here we will disfranchise one-fifth of our entire population. There will probably be one-fifth more whose sympathies will be with the disfranchised through relationship, common interest or otherwise. Forty per cent. of our population within our midst alienated from our government yet a part of us! It would take but a small percentage more to rise up in rebellion, demand their fundamental rights and the result would be too appalling for us to contemplate. I am no pessimist. I believe this and every other legislative body of our land "knows what is right, and knowing dare maintain" it and I cannot believe we will ever temporarily compromise our state through the hope of temporary power or preferment, by giving the seal of approval to any act by which we will go down into history as despotic rather than democratic, a condition which cannot abide.

This is a great country and we are a great people holding in our hands absolutely our own destiny. Does the great state of Maryland in this great sisterhood of commonwealths propose an open violation of the spirit if not the letter of the federal constitution itself, and flaunt our defiance in their very faces?

I represent the largest county in area in the state. In population it is the smallest with four exceptions. The mountains are high and rugged and the valleys numerous and deep. ALGERNON SMITHERS.

Algie Smithers came a-courting,
Came a-courting Kitty Gray;
Algie Smithers, slow and steady,
a-courting many a day.

y she used to wonder
Algie's last intent,
e of her devices
ne learn what Algie meant, a word of marriage said he,

ever tried to hold her hand;
And when she made her coy advances,
Didn't seem to understand.

Still he kept a-courting Kitty
In his own peculiar style;
Had a fit if Kitty ever
Gave another man a smile.

Once he took her on the river,
And somewhere along its banks
Caught a turtle which he gave her—
She received the same with thanks.

Home she took the turtle with her,
And she named it Algie—Oh,
How her friends all laughed with Kitty,
And at Algie, don't you know.

Algie listened to the laughing
Listened long before he spoke;
Then he asked them, quite indignant:
"Say! I say now, what's the joke?"

PATRICIA'S chief characteristics were her beautiful eyes and her self-reliance.

She was from the city, and she had begun her first term as teacher in the village school, much to the consternation of the inhabitants, who had never known any teacher for their children other than the ancient Mr. James.

I might tell you about the picturesque woods near the school; or, the little brook that ran at the foot of the hill; and the flowery paths where the children walked home in the glow of the evening, swinging their dinner pails or munching their left-over dinner cakes; or, the big swing on the old beechnut tree in the school yard; or, about the little brick schoolhouse itself, only these things would not be true, and besides, they have nothing to do with the story.

The real beginning was when Miss O'Connor (that was Patricia's teacher name) saw Kitty Wright attempt to pass a note across the aisle to Philip Brooks. The note slipped to the floor before Philip could secure it.

"Philip," said Miss O'Connor, sweetly, "please lower the window; the room seems close."

By the time the window was lowered Patricia had secured the note, consigned its remains to the waste basket and called the American history class. Philip gasped. Last year, Mr. James had read their notes publicly.

That night, after the books had been put away, the teacher said: "Philip, I wish you to remain. I have some work I wish you to finish before examination. The rest may pass out."

And the unsuspecting pupils passed out. Kitty paused long enough at Philip's desk to whisper: "I will wait for you at the bend."

When Miss O'Connor went back to Philip's desk he was nervously making x's and y's on his tablet. Nothing that Mr. James had ever done could produce the effect of the brown glances from Patricia's eyes and the even tones of her soft voice.

"Here they are. Ten of them," she said.

Philip took the paper awkwardly.

"Phillip, how old are you?"

The paper fluttered to the floor. It was swept up next morning and tossed into the fire.

"Nineteen last January," he returned, recovering somewhat from his surprise.

"Heavens!" commented Patricia, inwardly. "Older than I am." Aloud, she said: "I have been thinking, Philip, that you will not be benefited by going to school here much longer. You already are ahead of the course. You are almost a man now, and you must be thinking about your future. What do you intend to do with your future?"

Philip was speechless.

"Would you like to be a physician, like your father?"

"No, Miss O'Connor; oh, no."

"What would you like to be! You must be something, you know."

I would repeat all their conversation only I never have been told it all, and I wasn't there. All I learned was that Philip didn't seem to have a very definite notion of any kind of a career, except a few stray dreams of becoming a "newspaper man"—and that Kitty waited in vain at the bend that night.

The next occurrence that has any real bearing on this story was when Philip passed a note to Kitty. Patricia saw it. She had learned to watch for such things.

"Kitty Wright," she said, quietly, "bring that note to me."

"I won't!" Kitty snapped back, clasping the note tighty in her hand.

You know how all the pupils acted then—just as they did when your teacher caught you passing a note to your schoolgirl sweetheart across the aisle; or across two or three aisles; or across the full length of the room for that matter; or at whatever angle she sat from you.

In an instant Patricia was at the girl's side. She repeated her request, to which Kitty gave the same defiant answer, and added some additional paragraphing something on the following order: "You haven't any business with my notes. Why are you always bothering yourself about Philip and me? Mother says that's all you do, anyway. Why don't you teach school? That's what you're here for."

Like a flash Patricia's firm little fingers buried themselves in the back of Kitty's hand and the note changed possession.

"Kitty, you may go home now and return when you are ready to apologize."

Here was the place for the customary "subdued hush" that is supposed to accompany all such occasions, but if I remember rightly there was some noise and a giggle or two as Kitty left the room.

The next day Kitty returned to the school with her mother. There was some loud talking on the part of Mrs. Wright, and some insolence from Kitty, but Patricia came out victorious.

One noonday recreation not long after that Miss O'Connor found Philip at his desk, reading a book she had placed there for that express purpose.

"Do you still want to be a 'newspaper man?'" she asked, as she paused before him.

And Philip said he did.

"There's a newspaper man coming to our house this evening, and if you will come over you can see what one is like," she said.

Philip went and saw. And he immediately became possessed of a desire to become a man like Walter Ellis, the newspaper man.

"Philip is one of my oldest pupils," said Patricia, by way of explanation.

"And the best?" asked Mr. Ellis.

"I'm afraid not," answered Philip, flushing, and looking down upon Patricia, for she was dainty and small beside him.

"The best except for one fault," said Patricia, "and that is he is in love with a very pretty and very bad mannered little lady, who never knows her history lesson."

"Not know her history lesson and you her teacher?"

"Oh, Philip makes up for that by whispering the answers to her," and Patricia gave Philip a sweet little smile to take the sting away from her words.

Mr. Ellis stayed a long time. Philip listened in wonder to these two talking familiarly. It was a new world to him—as Patricia had intended it should be.

The next day Mrs. Wright cut Patricia dead on the street, but Patricia only smiled.

That same evening she called at the home of the Brooks and had a long talk with Philip's parents about their only son. Patricia never wanted anything that she did not get it. This time what she wanted was that Philip might go away to school. She got it.

She stayed so long that evening that Philip had to walk home with her. When she gave him her hand to say good-night he lifted his hat and said: "Miss O'Connor, I know now that I have needed just you to make me know what the best of life is. I have been only an awkward, useless boy, but if you will teach me I shall be what you want me to be."

"I will help you, Philip," was all she said.

That winter Patricia taught the village school again; and the next also, but neither of these two winters have anything much to do with this story. Kitty Wright had gone to her aunt's, in the city, where, according to her mother, she could "learn something." Philip was studying hard in the university. A weekly letter told Patricia of his work, and a weekly answer gave him encouragement amid his struggles.

The following winter a new teacher came to take charge of the village school, and Patricia went back to her old home in the metropolis.

Mr. Ellis met her at the train with a "I congratulate you. You have been successful."

But Patricia's mind was on other things, and she only smiled and answered, rather vaguely: "Yes."

"Not very enthusiastic for a young and successful writer," he said. "But how you ever could stay in that dead little village three years is beyond me. Here's the carriage. Ella expects you to come to supper. No amount of possible rural books could have tempted me, but you always were queer."

"Thank you," assented Patricia, laughing. "I don't look ancient or anything like that, do I?"

"Oh, no; on the contrary, you look unusually beautiful. What became of that young fellow I met there several times? One of your awkward, overgrown youngsters. I thought then that he was to be a character in your book, but I was mistaken. Ella said you probably had some philanthropic notion in your head. Women are unaccountable."

Patricia opened her eyes. "I didn't think him awkward, and I didn't intend to put him in a story. He was just going to marry an objectionable girl—some time—that's all, and settle down into a village nonentity and thus spoil a career, for he has a career before him. Ah, there's Ella waiting. How good it seems to be back once more."

"I never have known the reason why you wanted to take me away from Kitty Wright," Philip said to Patricia one evening, as she sat writing. It was six years later.

"I told you I didn't want your career spoiled," she answered, marking out some paragraphs. "There, that's finished. Do you think 'Ellis & Brooks' will accept it?"

"Brooks will at any rate. Was there no other reason, Patricia?"

"Yes; one. Oh, do be careful; you'll crumple my story."

"Dear little story. Sweetheart, tell me, was it because you cared a little even then?"

And Patricia said it was.

And I, who write this story, am Patricia's granddaughter, and Philip is my grandfather. It was from him that I heard this story in the long winter evenings, while grandmother listened and smiled, and told me that Philip always was ever so much nicer than grandfather said.

THE GENEROUS LION.

Find Another Man.

A lion, having pulled down a Bullock, stood over it, lashing his sides with his tail. A robber who was passing by stopped, and impudently demanded half shares. "You are always too ready to take what does not belong to you," answered the Lion. "Go your way: I have nothing to say to you." The Thief saw that the Lion was not to be trifled with, and went off. Just then a Traveler came up, and, seeing the Lion, modestly and timorously withdrew. The generous beast, with a courteous, affable air, called him forward, and, dividing the Bullock in halves, told the man to take one, and, in order that he might be under no restraint, carried his own portion away into the forest.

HARVESTING THE WALNUTS.

Public Schools in California Are Closed When the Time for Laying in the Crop Arrives.

The culture of the English walnut has become an important industry in California of late years. The first walnut orchard in the state was planted with seed from the Los Angeles mission gardens, where the padres had started a few trees with nuts brought with them from Spain. The undertaking was a success from the first, states a California exchange, and the acreage of walnuts has steadily increased—slowly at first, but now with rapid strides. The walnut tree's early age of bearing, its long life and the steady demand for its product tend to make the enterprise deservedly popular. Already it is superseding the orange in favor among fruit growers.

The walnut tree begins to bear when six or seven years old, and nothing is known definitely of its age limit of bearing. Fabulous stories are told of trees in Spain one or two centuries old, bearing enormous crops. The oldest trees in California are still bearing, but deductions from the short history already made show that the tree is in its prime from its twenty-fifth to its thirtieth year. Fifteen hundred pounds of nuts to the acre is a good average yield, making 75 pounds the average weight from one tree.

The harvest time begins about the middle of September and lasts nearly six weeks. The nuts begin to fall with the leaves, and the perfect cultivation under the trees leaves no chance for them to lose themselves among clods or weeds. The brown, dead leaves alone hide the nuts. Under normal conditions they drop free from the outer husk or hull, through its irregular bursting, and getting the nuts picked up is a simple matter. Sometimes the trees are well irrigated just before harvest time to insure the clean dropping of the nuts.

Boys and girls, men and women, Japanese and Chinese, are all pressed into service, and on hand and knees the great orchards are gone over, not once, but several times on account of the irregular ripening of the nuts. The trees are occasionally shaken during the season to loosen the nuts, and before the last gleaning they are "poled" to start the very tardy ones. This is done by long, coarse, bamboo poles, whose light weight makes them easily handled.

In certain rural districts the public schools close regularly for a "walnut vacation." The help of the children is needed, and the children are not loath to replenish their diminished purses. Pails, cans and gunnysacks are scattered among the pickers, and when the bags are full they are carried to the drying ground, where they are spread on slat trays to dry.

Insect Disguised as Leaf.

A well-known naturalist tells of an insect in Nicaragua so completely disguised as a leaf that a whole host of the ants who prey upon it actually ran across it without recognizing it as their foot. Mr. Sclater noted in South America another insect—one of the Membracidae—which not only mimicked the leaf-cutting ant for its own protection, but, like its model, carried in its jaws a fragment of leaf about the size of a sixpence.

Behind the Veil.

J. D. Rees, a lecturer on Persia, says that the veils worn by Persian ladies are more of a privilege than a punishment. Screened behind it woman may walk wherever she pleases, and even her own husband dares not question her movements. Doubtless many Persian ladies make the most of their opportunities.

Food for the Hungry.

WITHOUT MUCH CEREMONY.

Burials at Sea Are Not Marked by Any Great Display of Reverence.

I had always conceived a burial at sea to be a very solemn and awe-inspiring event, but I was quickly disillusioned, by this burial at any rate, says a writer in The Sea Wolf. One of the hunters, a little dark-eyed man whom his mates called "Smoke," was telling stories, liberally intersprinkled with oath and obscenities, and every minute or so the group of hunters gave mouth to a laughter that sounded to me like a chorus of wolves. The sailors trooped noisily aft, some of the watch below rubbing the sleep from their eyes, and talked in low tones together. There was an ominous and worried expression on their faces. It was evident that they did not like the outlook of a voyage under such a captain and begun so inauspiciously. From time to time they stole glances at Wolf Larsen, and I could see that they were apprehensive of the man.

He stepped up the hatch cover and all caps came off. I ran my eyes over them—20 men all told, 22 including the man at the wheel and myself. I was pardonably curious in my survey, for it appeared my fate to be pent up with them on this miniature floating world for I knew not how many weeks or months. The sailors in the main were English and Scandinavian and their faces seemed of the heavy, stolid order. The hunters, on the other hand, had stronger and more diversified faces, with hard lines and the marks of the free play of passions. Strange to say, and I noted it at once, Wolf Larsen's features showed no such evil stamp. There seemed nothing vicious in them. True, there were lines, but they were the lines of decision and firmness. It seemed rather a frank and open countenance, which frankness or openness was enhanced by the fact that he was smooth shaven. I could hardly believe, until the next incident occurred, that it was the face of a man who could behave as he had behaved to the cabin boy.

At this moment, as he opened his mouth to speak, puff after puff struck the schooner and pressed her side under. The wind shrieked a wild song through the rigging. Some of the hunters glanced anxiously aloft. The whole lee rail, where the dead man lay, was buried in the sea, and as the schooner lifted and righted the water swept across the deck, wetting us above our shoetops. A shower of rain drove down upon us, each stinging like a hailstone. As it passed Wolf Larsen began to speak, the bareheaded men swaying in unison to the heave and lunge of the deck.

"I only remember one part of the service," he said, "and that is 'and the body shall be cast into the sea.' So cast it in." He ceased speaking. The men holding the hatch cover seemed perplexed, puzzled, no doubt, by the briefness of the ceremony. He burst upon them in a fury.

"Lift up that end there! What the —'s the matter with you?"

They elevated the end of the hatch cover with pitiful haste, and, like a dog flung overside, the dead man slid feet first into the sea. The coal at his feet dragged him down. He was gone.

"Johansen," Wolf Larsen said briskly to the new mate, "keep all hands on deck now they're here. Get in the topsails and outer jibs. We're in for a sou'easter. Reef the jib and the mainsail, too, while you're about it."

First to Organize.

The English tailors have the credit of being the first to offer organized resistence to industrial oppression, and hence were the pioneers of modern trade unionism. As early as 1721, in the days of the handicrafts, there was a union of tailors in London numbering 15,000, and they went on strike for better conditions of employment, notwithstanding the acts of parliament that outlawed such combinations, made strikes a criminal act and limited wages by law.

INVENTION OF BEEFSTEAK.

Roman Prisoner of Rank Discovered That Sacrifice to Jupiter Was Excellent for Mortals.

Beefsteak, like most other good things, was discovered entirely by accident. It appears that Lucius Plaucus, a Roman of rank, was ordered by the Emperor Trajan for some offense to act as one of the menial sacrificers to Jupiter; he resisted, but was at length dragged to the altar. There, says the New York Herald, the fragments of the victim were laid upon the fire and the unfortunate senator was forcibly compelled to turn them. In the process of roasting one of the slices fell off the coals and was caught by Plaucus in its fall. It burned his fingers and he instinctively thrust them into his mouth. In that moment he had made the grand discovery that the taste of a slice, thus carbonadoed, was infinitely beyond all the sodden cookery of Rome. A new expedient to save his dignity was suggested at the same time, and he at once evinced his obedience to the emperor by seeming to go through the sacrifices with due regularity and his scorn of the employment by turning the whole ceremony into a matter of appetite. He swallowed every slice, deluded Trajan, defrauded Jupiter, and invented the beefsteak! A discovery of this magnitude could not long be concealed; the sacrifices began to disappear with a rapidity and satisfaction to the parties too extraordinary to be unnoticed. The priests of Jupiter adopted the practice with delight, and the king of Olympus must have been soon starved if he depended on any share of the good things of Rome.

Sailor's Exploit.

Exploits in navigation by small boat are extending to eastern Europe. Simon Strabrovsky, a hardy Russian fisherman of Odessa, has just accomplished the feat of navigating alone in a small sailing boat from that port across the Black sea to Constantinople and back, putting in at Constanza and Salina on the return voyage. One peculiarity of the adventure is that Strabrovsky navigated without a compass, declaring that the stars were enough. He received a sum of £200 for his exploit.

General Who Never Lost a Gun.

"I asked Wellington," wrote Lord Ellesmere, "whether he had ever made any rough computation of the number of guns he had taken in war." "No," he said, "but I should guess somewhere about 3,000. I took a prodigious quantity at Oporto and the whole French battering train at Ciudad Rodrigo, and at Vittoria and Waterloo I took every gun they had in the field. What, however, is more extraordinary, I never lost one in my life."

THE WEATHER IN JANUARY.

Mean Mid-Winter Temperature in Washington for the Past 33 Years Was 33 Degrees.

The weather bureau has issued a bulletin showing the weather conditions during the month of January for the past 33 years. The mean normal temperature for the month during that period was 33 degrees. The warmest January was in 1890, when the temperature averaged 44 degrees, and the coldest was in 1893, when the temperature averaged 25 degrees. The highest temperature ever recorded in Washington, D. C., during January was 76 degrees, which was reached by the thermometer January 12, 1890. The coldest was January 1, 1881, when the thermometer registered 14 degrees below zero. The average precipitation for the month during the 33 years was 3.50 inches. The greatest monthly precipitation was in 1882, when 7.09 inches of rain were registered, while in 1872, the smallest record was made when but 0.23 inches were registered. The greatest snowfall was on January 25, 1901, when 5 inches fell during the 24 hours. The average number of clear days during the month for the 33 years has been 9; the average partly cloudy days 10, and the average cloudy days 12. The wind has had a general velocity of 6.8 miles an hour during the month for the time recorded and the general direction has been northwest. January 30, 1894, the greatest velocity was obtained —46 miles per hour, in a northwesterly direction.

Egyptian Turquoise Merchants.

Among the most picturesque of tradespeople in the east are the turquois merchants of Egypt. Scores of these quaint old characters are to be found at Cairo. The stock of a single merchant is frequently of great value, yet he is content to display it much the same as an Italian in an Ameircan city displays his fruit. The stones are laid out in little piles and parcels on a little stand, which may be carried from place to place.

Treatment of Consumptives.

Tuberculosis may be fought by wise methods and by foolish ones. To the latter class belongs the plan which the Australian colony of Victoria is said to have adopted. It is proposed to isolate consumptives, whether they like it or not, and send them to a quarantine station. Educating them in regard to the proper precautions of avoiding the spread of infection would be far more sensible.—N. Y. Tribune.

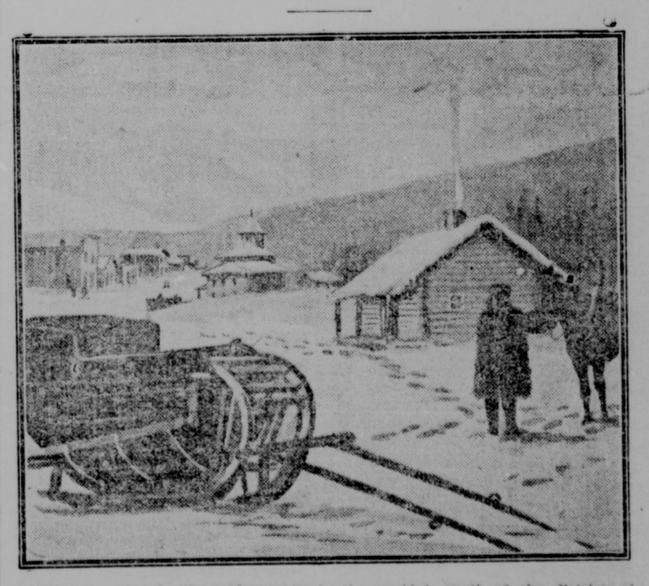
Leads in Barley Crop.

California leads all the states in the production of barley, and supplies one-fourth of all that is grown in the United States.

HON. J. K. VARDAMAN, GOVERNOR OF MISSISSIPPI.

Gen. Vardaman, who was installed governor of Mississippi late in January, caused a profound sensation by stating in his inaugural address that the present system of educating negroes was making criminals of them. He gave statistics to show that where there was the least illiteracy among negroes there was the most crime. To save the race he urged changing the system so as to educate the heart, thereby building a moral foundation on which to construct good citizenship. Since delivering this address the governor has been viciously assailed by leading educators, but he still maintains that his arguments are based on fact.

COLDEST SPOT IN THE INHABITED WORLD.



What is said to be the coldest region in the world is north of the district of Yakutsk, in northeastern Siberia, where the temperature of 88.8 degrees below zero was observed in January, 1886, and since then that very low record has been nearly duplicated. The sleigh shown in the picture is a local form used in traveling along the Lena. In sinking a well in Yakutsk the soil was found to be permanently frozen to a depth of 382 feet. The strata consisted at some depths entirely of ice. At other depths there was sand mingled with ice. The permanence of the cold, however, serves to make life more endurable than would otherwise be the case.

HORSE-SHOEING STAND.

Oregon Inventor's Device for Making the Most Fractious Animal Gentle as a Lamb.

So many sermons have been preached already on the wonderful intelligence and obedience of the horse that there is no need of another one in this column, but we may mention one proof of that obedience in the attitude the animal maintains toward the blacksmith while the later tears off an old shoe, trims the horny hoof, holds a hot iron shoe against the foot to ascertain if its shape is correct, and finally nails the shoe fast to the foot with many blows of the hammer It is surprising to think that so spirited an animal will submit to such treatment without some show of resistance as it is improbable to suppose they understand the benefits of the shoe in preventing rapid wearing away of the hoof. Once in awhile the blacksmith in his labors comes in contact with a horse which refuses to yield to his command, showing a mulish disposition and occasioning no small amount of trouble. Then the shoer uses ingenuity, persuasion and finally strength to accomplish his purpose. It is an animal of this kind which the artist has drawn in the illustration, and the horse seems to be at a slight disadvantage; in fact, to have met his Waterloo—that's where the inventor lives, by the way. Hereafter when a steed shows contrariness the blacksmith will simply put his feet in the stocks. How will he get them there? Well, possibly by the same recipe as the circus man trains his tiger. The first rule runs something like this: "First catch your tiger." So, you first catch a leg, possibly with a rope noose, and, after making it fast, proceed in the same manner with the other leg. Then hoist the tackle until a large portion of the weight is removed from the hind legs and the animal is ready to be shod.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

RECEIVE GOOD PAY.

Cattle Buyers for the Big Packing Houses May Well Be Termed Kings of the Stock Yards.

Some of the cattle buyers of the big slaughter houses receive as salaries from $10,000 to $15,000 per year, and some, it is said, as high as $25,000 per year. The cattle buyer cannot hope to command such a salary at one jump, remarks our sprightly little contemporary, the Arizona Cattleman. He must advance gradually and demonstrate that he is earning his money each day. A daily account and record it kept with him. He buys a bunch of steers, they are slaughtered, and he is furnished each day with a report showing just what they cost his company net. If he pays too much, they are dear, and he must explain the whys and wherefores. Many mistakes and bad judgment are not necessary before he is advised that his services are dispensed with. He must be able to judge the amount on the hoof, know what it will kill out, and that he made the purchase at the lowest price and with a good profit to the company. He cannot equal up, his purchases for a day make a bargain on one bunch and pay too much for the other. The system is complete and exacting; each purchase must speak for itself—each tub must stand on its own bottom.—Midland Farmer.

Good Remedy for Roup.

Roup remedies are of but little avail, as too much work is necessary in handling birds and administering the cures, which are not always efficacious. A remedy often recommended, and which is simple and inexpensive, is to give the bird a pill of assafetida as large as a bean twice a day, and to inject at the same time two drops (using a sewing machine oil can) of the following mixture in each nostril, and four drops down the throat: Camphorated oil, one dram; water, one dram; carbolic acid, ten drops. Keep the bird in a dry, warm place. Roup may be known by foul odor, discharge from the nostrils, hoarse breathing, and sometimes swelled head and closed eyes. —Farm and Fireside.

Weak Point in Wise Counsel.

How to meet the attack of a bull is one of those problems which all anglers would like to have solved. Given a fair start, and a safe retreat within easy reach, the majority of men make a run for it. But there are times when no such retreat is available. One angling author says that you should catch the bull by the tail and belabor him with the handle of your landing net. I should have tried this latter dodge, but none of the bulls came at me tail first.—Sporting and Dramatic News.

POSSIBILITIES IN CORN.

Next to the Selection of Seed Comes the Preparation and Cultivation of the Soil.

We only raise a little more than half a good ear of corn to the hill in the United States, assuming that a good ear should weigh a pound. In some of the best corn sections the crop equals an ear to the hill, but there are many states where it is exceptional to find an ear weighing over half a pound, and it is a good corn field where there are as many stalks bearing ears of half a pound or over as there are of stalks that bear only nubbins or nothing at all. To anyone who has never investigated the matter closely it will be a suprise to count the number of barren stalks in a row. If we select good seed corn from an average field, taking only ears that weigh one pound or over, about 50 per cent. of the kernels planted will produce ears as good as or better than the original. From 15 or 20 per cent. will grow barren stalks, and the balance will produce all sizes from nubbins to fair ears.

It is customary to plant at least three kernels to the hill, and if we could grow three good ears on each hill we would have about 150 bushels to the acre. Here is a problem for the implement manufacturer to consider carefully. Next to the selective breeding of seed, the most important thing in the production of a good corn crop is the work of the implements and machines used in preparing the ground and cultivating the growing crop. There has been a great improvement in the past 20 years in the construction of planters, cultivators and other implements used in the cornfield, and there is room for equally great progress in the coming generation, especially in the direction of thoroughness in cultivation. The corn crop is the most valuable product of the American continent, and it would be almost twice as great if we could only raise the equivalent of one good ear to the hill If we could average two ears to the hill our corn crop would exceed the world's crop of all other cereals.—Implement Age.

GOOD SOIL FOR CORN.

In Certain Conditions It Is Far Better to Prepare Land in Spring Than in Fall.

Good tillable soil has always as much to do in growing a crop of corn as the seed. The ground may be plowed either in the fall or in the spring with success. This, however, must be decided by the farmer himself in planning his work. Fall plowing on the average will produce a somewhat larger yield of both fodder and corn but the ground must be given extra cultivation in the spring to prevent the weeds from starting. If the farmer does not have the time to do the necessary cultivation, it is better for him to plow the ground in the spring. The extra cultivation, however, puts the soil into a more tillable condition and retards the loss of moisture by evaporation more than spring plowing will do. If corn land is to be spring plowed it is a good plan to wait until nearly planting time so as to give the weeds a good start before turning them under. After plowing, pack the ground thoroughly with a harrow or a subsurface packer to get the bottom of the furrow slice compact before the seed is put in it. Plant three to five kernals in a hill so as to allow some plants to be destroyed by harrowing without making the stand too thin. Harrowing can be carried on successfully until the corn has reached a height of four or five inches.—E. G. Schollander, in Farmers' Review.

ICE HANDLED EASILY.

Convenient Derrick Arrangement Whereby One Man Can Manipulate Heavy Cakes.

Farmers will find that one of the best ways to load large cakes of ice conveniently is to make a derrick as shown in the cut, and lift it from the water and swing it onto the sled. The pin that goes into the upright post is made forked, with a bolt runnng through the lever and ends of the fork. The lower part moves in the socket bored in the end of the upright post. A chain is fastened to the end of the lever with a pair of tongs attached, to lift the ice. One man can easily load heavy cakes with this arrangement.—Orange Judd Farmer.

FENCE RAIL PHILOSOPHY.

Opportunities are often hand-made.

The small tree often bears the best fruit.

No job is impossible to a willing worker.

If you want to get at the kernel first crack the shell.

If all work was as easy as lying everybody would be kept busy.

The best time to read a note or a mortgage is before you sign it.

It's a crackin' good hand that sticks to his work like a pig to a rough fence in flea time.

In searching for knowledge a man frequently finds out something he didn't care to know.

It's the findin' out of some things we don't want to know that makes the gettin' of knowledge disagreeable.—Farm Life.

IN PRAIRIE LAND.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

MOOSE JAW, Assiniboia.

Farmers' Review, Chicago, July 22, 1903.

"Most of the prairies in the United States have ceased to exist. Man has broken them up with orchards, forests and farm buildings. But in Western Canada the prairies still stretch grandly from horizon to horizon as yet unmarred by the hand of man, save where the iron road has been laid. To a city man there is something deliciously restful about the vast grassy solitudes.

"Numerous clumps of trees mark the course of the Assiniboine River, which keeps in sight of the railroad for some distance.

"Grass is one of the notable things about all the landscape of Western Canada. It is a remarkable fact that the entire length of the Canadian Pacific railway from its eastern terminus to the Rocky mountains is over plains where grass grows. The sage brush appears at some points, but never to the exclusion of grass. There is thus not a mile of this country that cannot be used for some agricultural purpose —either for tilling or ranching.

"Moose Jaw is a town of over 2,000 inhabitants and one of the most important places in Assiniboia, being the center of a very good farming country and a great grain and stock shipping point.

"Near Moose Jaw agriculture and ranching go hand in hand; for near the town was seen a herd of beef cattle several hundred in number. On another side was seen a good sized herd of dairy cows, the property of the citizens in the town.

"In riding over the prairies we saw many good fields of alfalfa. The great need of the country is timber, which grows readily where planted, as was demonstrated by the shelter belts on some of the farms, and the trees on the residence lots in the town.

"Stories were told the writer of men who last year cleared from their wheat crop more than the land on which it was grown originally cost them. This is easy to believe in view of the large crop and high price for wheat last year.—Henry F. Thurston."

KEEP BIBLE FOR LUCK.

Business Firm of Sycamore, Ill., Locks Book in Safe to Avoid Robbery.

At Sycamore, Ill., a well-known business firm makes it a practice to keep a Bible in the safe. This custom was commenced a long time ago and the big steel box is never locked up unless it contains the book. It is kept in the money drawer of the safe. It is found necessary to remove it occasionally, but it is always carefully replaced.

The men who adopted this queer practice when they commenced business years ago have little to say in explanation. In all their business life their safe or store has never been robbed or entered. They have had a continuous good business, and are among the most successful business houses of the town. All of the members of the firm attend the churches of the town, but all are liberal in their religious views, and the prevailing belief in the town is that holy writ is kept in the safe principally for good luck.

Bayonet a French Invention.

It is not generally known that the British bayonet, feared the world over, is not an English invention, but comes from France. It was one of those numerous instances of necessity being the mother of invention. In one of the French wars the Basque soldiers ran out of amunition. The enemy were at hand, so their officers bade them tie their long knives to their muskets. They did so, and the weapon thus made was successfully used to put to rout a charge of cavalry. The battle thus fought was near Bayonne, and so we have the name bayonet.

Three Doctors' Opinions.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 15.—Physicians have accepted Dodd's Kidney Pills as the standard remedy for diseases of the Kidneys and kindred complaints. R. H. Dunaway, M. D., of Benton, Ill., says:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me of Diabetes after everything else had failed and I was given up to die. I have since prescribed them in my regular practice for every form of Kidney Trouble and have never as yet known them to fail."

Jesse L. Limes, M. D., St. John, Kansas, says:—

"I prescribed Dodd's Kidney Pills for the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McBride of this place who suffered from Epileptic fits following Scarletina; results were miraculous; I have never seen anything like it."

Leland Williamson, M. D., Yorktown, Ark., says:—

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best medicine I know of for all forms of Kidney Disease. I believe in using the remedy that relieves and cures my patients, whether ethical or not, and I always prescribe Dodd's Kidney Pills and can testify that they invariably accomplish a permanent and perfect cure of all Kidney Complaints."

Fixing the Limit.

"No," said the editor, "we can't use your story. There's too much originality about it."

"Too much originality!" echoed the contributor. "Why, I thought you wanted original matter."

"So we do," answered he of the blue pencil, "but we draw the line at spelling." —Cincinnati Enquirer.

FIX COLOR AT BIRTH.

Colored Woman to Be Made Subject of a Hospital Experiment.

Because of an experiment of Dr. J. W. Hill, of South Bend, one of the leading physicians and surgeons of Indiana, who seeks to prevent an infant born of negro parents from reverting back to the old type of the colored race, the attention of the scientific world is expected to be fixed on South Bend during the next few months. All arrangements, it is understood, have been completed for Dr. Hill's solution of the color scheme of the human race, and with the assistance of Dr. George L. Hager, also of that city, Dr. Hill expects to be successful. A colored woman has consented to act as the patient, and she will enter the hospital as soon as the rooms are made ready for the scientific event.

According to Dr. Hill, the negro's skin is more sensitive than that of any other human being, and for that reason more pigment is thrown out to protect him under the climatic conditions in which his forefathers were born, the intense heat of the tropics making this necessary. By preventing pigmentation Dr. Hill believes the child of colored parents, which is generally born white, turning dark under the sun's rays, will become whiter than the Caucasian race.

This is following the idea of Dr. Fenson, the Norwegian scientist, who found by putting a chameleon under violet rays that the pigment or throwing off of color is not of such marked extent as under the ordinary light rays.

For this reason red light as actinic rays will be employed in making the experiment, for the reason that they have a subduing effect and are not rays that irritate and prevent pigmentation. A room in a hospital will be provided which will be completely furnished in red, walls, ceiling, flooring, and furniture. Bed clothing and curtains are to be of that color, and patient, attending physicians, and nurses will wear red gowns, while the only light will come through red globed lamps. Not the faintest particle of any contrasting light will be permitted in the room.

Singular Birthmark of a Family.

Mrs. Belle Harvey, of Bower's Mill, Mo., is one of a family of four living at that place, each of whom has a curious birthmark. The family consists of three sisters and a baby two years old. Each has black hair, with a large lock of pure white hair beginning over the forehead and running backward. The flesh under this hair is also white, and the white mark runs down upon the forehead. The entire mark is said to look like an ostrich plume laid over the head of the bearer. The three sisters are 23, 21 and 19 years old. The mark is said to be hereditary in their family.

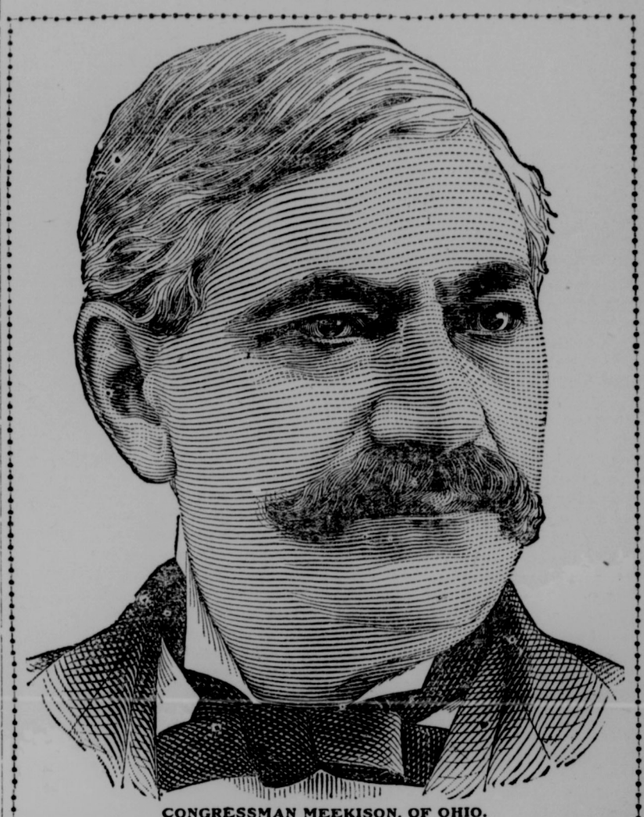
FOR THIRTY YEARS

Congressman Meekison Suffered With Catarrh—Read His Endorsement of Pe-ru-na.



CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON, OF OHIO.

Hon. David Meekison is well known, not only in his own State but throughout America. He began his political career by serving four consecutive terms as Mayor of the town in which he lives, during which time he became widely known as the founder of the Meekison Bank of Napoleon, Ohio. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State.

Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh with its insidious approach and tenacious grasp, was his only unconquered foe. For thirty years he waged unsuccessful warfare against this personal enemy. At last Peruna came to the rescue, and he dictated the following letter to Dr. Hartman as the result:

"I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison, ex-Member of Congress.

THE season of catching cold is upon us. The cough and the sneeze and nasal twang are to be heard on every hand. The origin of chronic catarrh, the most common and dreadful of diseases, is a cold.

This is the way the chronic catarrh generally begins. A person catches cold, which hangs on longer than usual. The cold generally starts in the head and throat. Then follows sensitiveness of the air passages which incline one to catch cold very easily. At last the person has a cold all the while seemingly, more or less discharge from the nose, hawking, spitting, frequent clearing of the throat, nostrils stopped up, full feeling in the head and sore, inflamed throat.

The best time to treat catarrh is at the very beginning. A bottle of Peruna properly used never fails to cure a common cold, thus preventing chronic catarrh.

While many people have been cured of chronic catarrh by a single bottle of Peruna, yet, as a rule, when the catarrh becomes thoroughly fixed, more than one bottle is necessary to complete a cure. Peruna has cured cases innumerable of catarrh of twenty years' standing. It is the best, if not the only internal remedy for chronic catarrh in existence.

But prevention is far better than cure. Every person subject to catching cold should take Peruna at once at the slightest symptom of cold or sore throat at this season of the year and thus prevent what is almost certain to end in chronic catarrh.

Mrs. A. Snedeker, Cartersville, Ga., writes:

"I saw that your catarrh remedy, Peruna, was doing others so much good, that I thought I would try it and see what it would do for me. My case is an old one and I have none of the acute symptoms now, because I have had the disease so long that I had none of the aches and pains, but a general rundown condition of the whole body—sore nose and throat and stomach. I had a good appetite but my food did not nourish my system. I had come down from 140 to about 75 pounds in weight. I now feel that I am well of all my troubles."—Mrs. A. Snedeker.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Ostentations.

An Atchison man tells the Globe about his uncle, an Irishman, who suddenly became rich. The first thing he did was to buy the best pew in the church. When Sunday rolled around the Irishman walked grandly down the aisle, carrying a silk hat and elegant overcoat. He found two strange women occupying his pew. "Come out," he said, imperiously. The women were very much shocked, and walked out, their heads hanging in shame. "Now, then, ladies," the Irishman said, "oblige me by walking back. I just wanted to show you who owned this pew."

OF THE many things which readers of the newspapers have to be thankful for, one is that the chief point of interest in the Russian-Japanese War is Port Arthur, and not Ratzxkofftcsivitchzki.

"CHARACTER has trumphed over coarse caricature," was the compliment apolitical opponent paid to Senator Hanna a few months before his death. It was chiefly as the conspicuous figure in the neswpaper cartoons during the campaign of 1896 that Mr. Hanna first came prominently before the country. That was caricature. The impression inevitably produced has long since given way to a recognition of the solid qualities of the man. This was character.

THE bill for pure vinegar, introduced in Maryland's State Legislature by Delegate McComas, should pass. Adulteration of food-stuffs is a serious menace to the health of the rank and file of our citizenry. When a specific point may thus be made it is well to make it so emphatically that the whole world may know of it. It is a blessed thing to know that if all cannot be sweetness in this life of ours, the sour may be at least unadulterated. Legislative action is required frequently to keep the common articles of food and drink from straying so far away from their original ingredients, in time be forgotten what the articles were originally composed of. Pass every purefood bill that has the slightest show of enforcement, ever if the crusade work out to the disdvantage of the everyday brand of boardinghouse hash.

Mr. Hugh McMillan, Sr.

The Lonaconing correspondence of the Cumberland Evening Times of last Monday contained the following, which will be read with interest by many of Mr. McMillan's friends throughout this county:

Mr. Hugh McMillan, Sr., who came from Garrett county, to attend the funeral of his son-in-law, Hon. Daniel Young, president of District No. 16, U. M. W., on Wednesday was the guest of his son, Mr. John McMillan, proprietor of the Maryland Hotel, Saturday.

Mr. McMillan is a venerable and aged man and has lived in this county 59 years, having came to Cumberland in 1845, from Pennsylvania, after which he moved to Lonaconing, where he taught school in Jackson during the outbreak of the civil war in 1861. He is a brilliant conversationalist and well versed in the history of this county. In talk with him by a correspondent of the Times, he related many reminiscences of his old comrades who have passed away and recalled many interesting incidents connected with the civil war.

About four months ago his wife died after being united in marriage for 64 years. He is in his 85th year and is hale and hearty.

During his stay here he has visited all his sons and daughters besides his other relatives and has been accorded a fatherly reception by all. All wish him many more years of longevity and happiness. He has been a member of the Odd Fellows lodge since 1844, having joined the order in Pennsylvania.

FAIRBANKS AS RUNNING MATE.

There are at the present time many indications that Charles Warren Fairbanks, Republican senator from Indiana, will be nominated for vice president of the United States by the national convention which will meet in Chicago next June. Though no formal statement has come from him, and though he has, more than once, expressed his preference for his present position, yet a number of Republican party leaders searching for a good man for second place on the ticket have selected Mr. Fairbanks, and he will doubtless consent to the use of his name if he is convinced that the nomination will come to him without labored effort on his part.

No better man could be chosen. From the standpoint of practical politics, the choice of a candidate from one of the greatest states of the Middle West would balance the ticket in a way that all know is wise and that would unquestionably add to its strength. Though the Middle West is strong for Roosevelt, and though he would probably carry all the commonwealths in that group, no matter whom his running mate might be, yet with Fairbanks by his side there would never be a doubt not only about the size of Republican majorities, but also about the party enthusiasm which would mark the campaign from start to finish.

Senator Fairbanks has proved himself an American statesman of ability, whose views upon all great public questions are sound and true. He has commanded and retained the confidence and respect not only of his colleagues in the Senate, but of all the leaders of his party and of the whole country. Roosevelt and Fairbanks would make as good a ticket as the Chicago convention could nominate. It would win in a walk.

The prospects for incorporating our town never seemed bright and more favorable than it did last week. The property holders and tax payers who inaugurated the movement were congratulating themselves on the interes manifested by our citizens, and were certain that the movement would take definite shape. A meeting of the council was called and a bill drafted for the action of the legislature. A change has come over the spirit of our dreamer and now you would almost have to pay a man to say incorporate. We are sure there was no boodle used, but some fellow said corporation tax and that settled it externally, internally and eternally.

Mr. John Ward, of Davis, who spent many of his boyhood days in this town and vicinity, is here this week with relatives and friends.

MATTERS OF POLITICAL IMPORT

Treated by a Correspondent who Deals With a Variety of Subjects.

With the death of Senator Hanna, the Warwick of the republican party, passes the last vestige of opposition to the nomination of President Roosevelt. With a united party his election is assured.

The world is beginning to realize the strength and worth of his character. His courage and candor, firmness and fearlessness, integrity and intelligence have won the heart of the American people.

The legislation suggested by the President as to the publicity of railroad rates, and the suits brought against the Northern Securities Company by the Attorney General has angered the trusts and gladdened the hearts of the honest people. They can neither fool, force or frighten the President. The trusts have learned at last that he cannot be frightened or bullied into a betrayal of his "great trust" in defence of the people and their constitutional rights and the enforcement of the laws.

The passage of the Panama treaty by so large a majority assures the construction of the greatest engineering project that brain of man has yet conceived. When completed it will revolutionize the commerce of the world. This great work would have been delayed a quarter of a century had the President listened to the timid, sordid counsels and criticisms of those who were working in the interest of trans-continental railroads.

The trial and punishment of the postoffice "grafters" ruins the hopes of thousands who dispaired of seeing that great department cleansed. The masses of the people are directly interested in this department and rejoice to see that even great names and powerful influences cannot shield or protect the scoundrels who have robred the people.

The settlement of the late anthracite coal strike convinces labor that the President is not only friendly but firm and fearless, when their rights or interests are threatened or invaded, and assures them of his wise counsel and powerful protection. Although he may not be able "to hush forever the threnody of toil," his hand and heart are always open and ready to aid and advise the weak, the unfortunate and the oppressed.

His foreign policy is wise, safe and conservative. Under the lamented McKinley we became a world power, and today wherever the American flag floats our persons, property and interests are protected.

His rugged morality and strenuous support of the domestic virtues, by precept and example, has endeared him to millions of the masses, who recognize that the life of the republic depends upon the sacredness of family purity and discipline. Finally, we love him for the enemies he has made.

The certainty of the presidential nomination leaves the vice-presidential nomination open. Of candidates suggested Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, of Iowa, Secretary of the Treasury, has many strong supporters. He is unquestionably one of the ablest and most resourceful financiers of this country. His management of his department has been marvelously successful and popular. He is one of the most eloquent, instructive and interesting public speakers in the republican party. When Governor of Iowa he met and vanquished the mighty Bryan.

The day of the political boss is past or passing. The election of United States Senators by the people direct would relegate this political fungus to obscurity. The decline of honor, the decay of morals, the debauchery of the public service and the prostitution of power can be traced directly to the barons and bosses.

Maryland is a republican state with our party united. What our people demand is leadership. Through the petty jealousies of small men we lost the state. We can redeem it by placing our strong, clean, true and tried men in command. The rank and file of the party impatiently await orders.

Our delegation to the national convention is being discussed. Ex-Gov. Lowndes appears to be the favorite for member of the national committee. The Big Four most popular apparently are: Senator McComas, Hon. W. H. Jackson, Hon. S. A. Williams and Congressman Wachter. Col. Pearre and Hon. S. E. Mudd can go if they so desire.

Garrett county claims the distinction of having never lost a republican county ticket, for this reason, she demands and expects recognition. The stalwart chairman of the county committee, Austin Brown, Esq., should be sent to Chicago as a representative of the young and aggressive element of the party in Western Maryland.

We congratulate THE REPUBLICAN in securing the services of Paul Winchester as your Annapolis correspondent. His long experience and wide acquaintance with public men and affairs, his thorough knowledge of legislation makes him a safe guide and wise counselor. No man knows the devious ways of the lobby, or can see or skin a snake quicker. We are pleased to learn through his letters that our delegation ranks high in character, ability and vigilance.

For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a disconsolate place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.

close enough to turn little chickens. It is not a netting, understand, but a good, substantial fence, and made of galvanized steel wire the smallest of which are heavier than the wire used by most fence builders for a regular fence. It is made after the style of our electrically welded field fencing, put up in 10 rod rolls, 3, 4 and 5 feet high, and can be sold at a small advance over the ordinary poultry netting.

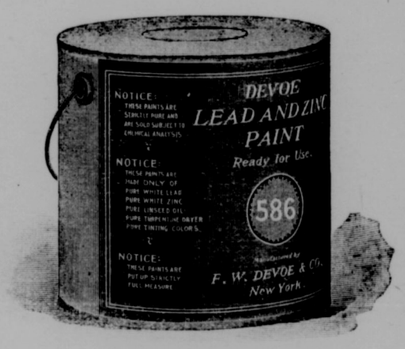
DEVOE'S
Lead & Zinc Paints

These Paints are the Purest.



These Paints are Full Measure

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
OAKLAND, MD., March 8th, 1904.

MESSRS. J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Oakland, Md.

Gentlemen:—When I built my house, I had it painted with F. W. Devoe & Co.'s paint, and I am very well satisfied with the results. While the paint is a little higher in price, it takes fewer gallons and is cheaper in the end.

I do not hesitate to recommend it to any one.

Very truly yours,
R. E. SLIGER, Cashier.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS, Oakland, Md.

Gentlemen:—After a year's wear, the Devoe & Co.'s paint bought of you for the purpose of painting my house, has proven perfectly satisfactory. It was also used by us in painting the The First National Bank building, and gave good satisfaction.

FRED. A. THAYER,
Pres't First National Bank.

OAKLAND, MD., March 8th, 1904.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS, Oakland, Md.

Gentlemen:—The Devoe Lead and Zinc Paint purchased from you which was used on my house has given entire satisfaction. I have reason to believe it all the company claim. As a former paint dealer I feel confident that pure lead, oil and zinc ground together cannot help proving to be a positive, permanent and satisfactory paint in every particular.

JOSEPH E. HARNED,
Proprietor Oakland Pharmacy.

OAKLAND, MD., March 8th, 1904.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS, Oakland, Md.

Gentlemen:—The Devoe Lead and Zinc paint bought of you and used on my house last year is entirely satisfactory. I had my house painted twice before with lead and oil. By comparison I find that Devoe's Lead and Zinc Paint covers better, takes fewer gallons and in every way is as represented, and I do not hesitate to recommend it to parties who contemplate painting.

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby—Personal Mention, Etc.

Mrs. Jerry O. Browning arrived here from Washington Monday night.

Mr. John W. McCullough, of Friendsville, is in Oakland today on business.

Mr. D. E. Offutt, Jr., went to Baltimore last Friday night on business, returning to Oakland Tuesday morning.

Mrs. George W Fleming and little daughter went over to Kingwood this morning to remain a week as the guests of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Jamesson, of Piedmont, spent Sunday and Monday in Oakland as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. King Delawder.

Strayed from home, a white setter dog with black ears. Will pay a liberal reward if returned to H. C. Sincell & Co.'s store, Oakland.

Mrs. Fred. A. Thayer and little son Frederick left last Thursday morning for Montgomery county where they will visit relatives a week or two.

Mr. M. S. Wolf, of Sunnyside, accompanied by his son Cyrus, who has for several weeks been at Union Bridge, this State, were in Oakland yesterday.

Mr. Daniel L. Conneway, of Fairmont, came to Oakland Monday afternoon and will remain in this section a week or two visiting relatives and friends.

Miss Mollie R. Peddicord, who has been for several months visiting friends and relatives in Montgomery county, Mayrland, and also in Washington, D. C., returned to Oakland Tuesday evening.

LOST—On the road between New Germany and Jennings, Md., book off deposit No. 1869 on the Lonaconing Savings Bank. Finder will please return to the bank or to W. E. Swauger, Jennings, Md 3t

Attorney J. W. S. Cochrane, of Cumberland, as trustee, advertises in this paper today the sale of a large body of land situated near Swanton. The sale is to take place in front of the court house in Oakland on Saturday, April 2nd, at eleven o'clock a. m.

Mr. A. F. George is home on a leave of absence granted by the Post office Department. He visited Oakland Thursday on business.

One of the eccentric bars on the locomotive drawing train No. 46 Monday afternoon broke and delayed the train at the station here more than an hour. The train was taken on east by a helping engine sent from Deer Park.

John O. Michael on last Saturday sold his stock of goods in the Mitchell building on Second street to Mr. Wm. R. Mattox, of Frostburg, the purchaser taking possession Tuesday morning. Mr. Mattox will move his family to Oakland within a few weeks and become a permanent resident of the town, to whom a cordial welcome is extended. Mr. Michaels will remain here indefinitely, but may go to Florida early in the fall to reside.

Fate occasionally illustrates the eternal fitness of things by coupling a man's name close up to his business calling. For instance, there is O. G. Augir, the well-known Grafton contractor and builder; then there is Mr. Cowherd, the popular dairyman; while J. W. Leathers, of Oakland, is engaged in the harness business and Truman Miller in the milling business; B. F. Bone is a physician and surgeon at Tunnelton. Many others might be mentioned, some of which no doubt have come under your observation.

Mr. Jerry O. Browning, son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Browning, of Oakland, is ill here at his home as a result of the treatment he received some weeks ago while attempting to arrest some Italians over near Pittsburg, who were suspected of stealing coal from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad cars in the yards of that city, Mr. Browning being at the time of making the arrest a private detective in the employ of the company. While escorting his prisoners to the station house he was jumped upon by a number of their countrymen who kicked, bit and otherwise injured the officer.

Estray Notice.

There came to my place near Barnum, W. Va., recently a ewe sheep and a lamb, which are marked. The owner will pleas come farward, pay all costs and damages and take the same away.

THE WEBERS WIN PRIZES

At the Meeting of the American Carnation Society held in Detroit, Mich.

At the meeting of the American Carnation Society, held last week at Detroit, Mich., the well known firm of H. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, met with their usual success in carrying off all prizes in sight for their excellent greenhouse products.

Class B—First prize for Genevieve Lord; 2nd prize for Harlowarden; 2nd prize for Adonis.

The prizes won by this firm for carnations are as follows:

Class C—First prize for Estelle; 1st prize for Norway.

Class J—First prize for fifty best Harlowarden.

Class H—Second prize for collection of seedlings.

Class M—Lawson Silver Medal for 100 best carnations, any variety.

The prize was won on the merits of the Gov. Lowndes, which was originated by the Messrs. Weber.

The firm also received honorable mention for their new variety, the "New Daybreak," which they are disseminating this year. Besides the last mentioned three other of the above yerieties were raised by the Messrs. Weber, namely: Gov Lowndes, Norway and Genevieve Lord.

In class B, calling for fifty blooms, the Gov. Lowndes, grown by John Bryetmeyer & Sons, of Dotroit, was awarded the sweepstakes prize over all other varieties.

HICKS FOR MARCH

Weather Sharp Proposes to Raise a Rumpus This Month.

"We predict that the last half of March will will be more stormy and disagreeable than the first," says the Rev. Hicks.

"The first storm period of the month will be central on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd and is likely to be marked by violent storms. Heavy rain and snow storms are also quite possible to be followed by a sharp cold wave.

"The next storm will express itself about the 5th, 6th and 7th. The weather will be bleak but will gradually become warmer and rain and possibly snow will follow.

"On the 11th, 12th and 13th marked electrical and magnetic disturbances are to be expeteed. About the 13th wide areas of snow and rain with high winds and colder weather following until the 16th. Then violent storms of rain, wind and thunder may be looked for, and before the close of this period which extends to the 21st, the storms will take on the aspect of blizzards.

"The next storm period of the month will be central on the 23rd and 24th and decided disturbances may be looked for about the 24th.

"The last period of the month will be central on the 29th, extending from the 27th to well into April. About the 27th a general change to warmer will begin to move out."

Letter to E. H. Sincell.

Dear Sir: As your business is to get people into and out of trouble, suppose you consider their paint; it makes 'em almost as much trouble as money, except of course matrimony.

They buy poor paint a good deal; they don't mean to; they dont know any better; they buy without thinking. Bad paint isnt good. It looks good enough for a year; then begins to get rusty; but changes so slowly, one don't notice it.

Looking isn't it all. The business of paint is to keep a house dry inside, the wood and iron of it; keep it from rotting and rusting. Takes good paint to do it.

Good and bad paint are sold at one price or about that. One can't go by the price at all; as with lawyers, the price has nothing to do with goodness or badness; and costs are worse yet; the painter and sheriff come in for their share.

But the probability is that a man, who paints Devoe will come out on top.

Yours truly
F. W. Devoe & Co

Smashup on 17 Mile Grade.

There was another wreck on the 17-mile grade west of Piedmont Friday afternoon. A freight train speeding down the mountain and when rounding a curve snapped off a flange on the wheel of a car near the engine. The car with the broken wheel left the track and five cars with their freight were tumbled down the embankment, where so much of the railroad company's property has recently fallen. The engine and tender remained upon the track and all of the men upon the train escaped harm.

Several railroaders in discussing this matter stated that if many more wrecks occured on the 17-mile grade there would be no more room for the derbis of broken engines and cars.

Hustling Store.

The Hustling Store at Mountain Lake Park wants to close out all clothing, hats, caps, a thousand yards of dark prints, piece goods, etc., at cost and less than cost. There is a large amount of these goods to sell and low prices will be maintained until all are gone. Some extra bargains will be found among these goods. Will offer also at low prices a large and select stock of timothy and clover seed. 52-4t.

REPUBLICAN MUNICIPAL TICKET

Placed in the Field at a Meeting Held Tuesday Evening.

A fairly well attended meeting of the Republican voters of Oakland was held in the Council Chamber on Tuesday night when a municipal ticket to be voted for on Monday next was placed in nomination, as follows:

For Mayor, Dr. Henry W. McComas.

For Councilmen, Samul Lawton, Joseph E. Harned and Edward Helbig.

The Democrats have advertised a meeting to be held tonight when they will place a ticket in the field in opposition to the one above named.

The citizens' movement to place a ticket in nomination, which was called for Monday evening last, failed to materialize, but two or three persons being at the place designated where the meeting was to have been held.

The Republican ticket is an exceptionally good one and should win.

TO TEST FOR OIL NEAR FINZEL.

Machinery Taken to the Field and Boring Soon to Commence.

The Piney Run Oil Company, recently organized in Washington, D. C., composed of Maryland, Pennsylvania and District of Columbia capitalists, will commence to bore for oil at once, near the celebrated oil spring at Finzel, garret county. The machinery and other paraphernalia were taken to that point Tuesday. The oil spring is located about ten miles from Frostburg. The spring has always been a marvel, for years the people in the locality having noticed oil bubbling on its surface. The odor of oil is very apparent. Mr. P. E. Finzel was the first man to bring the matter to the attention of capitalists. Congressman William H. Jackson, of Maryland is the president of the company.

DIED.

MARTIN—At his home on Alder street in Oakland on Monday evening after a brief illness, Joseph Martin, Jr., aged nearly thirty—seven years. The funeral was conducted yesterday afternoon from the home of his father by Rev. S. M. Miller, pastor of the Presbyterian church.

MCLAUGHLIN—At the jail yesterday afternoon as a result ot exposure, John McLaughlin, aged 76 years. The deceased was a highly educated man and came to this section many years ago where he worked as a laborer for his living. Funeral will occur this afternoon.

Bevansville.

Farmer are all making ready for the maple sugar harvest. Sleighing which we have enjoyed the past three or four months, has all disappeared.

Messrs. Noah Bittinger and sons have purchased a dehorning device which they will use in this community during the coming spring.

A. J. Bevans is building a new store at Jennings.

George Bevans has purchased a power stump puller with which he expects to do a "pulling" business in this section.

LIKE A MAN

By
S. D. GARDNER

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

SHE was watching the incomers. The train was becoming crowded. She had stopped off from a long journey to visit a friend, and was compelled to take the day coach for a few hours. Suddenly a voice at her side said:

"Lady, may I occupy this seat?"

Willing to be obliging she answered, "Yes, sir."

Arranging her belongings more compactly she turned to the window.

The train was speeding along again when she began to feel that strange psychic sense as of something out of the ordinary occurring. Looking around she met the eyes of the man beside her, and instantly recognized him. He was gazing as if fascinated.

"Is it possible—this is?" he hesitated.

"Lennard is my name," she said, with face aflame.

"Yes, excuse me. I was sure it was you; yet what a strange chance this drifting together, even for a brief moment. Is your—is Mr. Lennard with you?"

"He is not," she replied, in low tones, and then gazed straight ahead, as she remembered her parting with this man ten years before.

She felt angry with herself that time had not conquered the old love which was making her heartbeats quicken after so many years, and how cruel had been his treatment at that time. His voice aroused her.

"Sara, may I ask if life has been good to you?"

"My husband and I have been contented, and I hold different views of happiness from what I once did. But why should this interest you?"

"Forgive me. I thought you did me the justice to believe that the sacrifice was something terrible on my part, and I have always been anxious to know if you—"

"GOOD-BY—I—CALL AT MOTHER'S IF YOU ARE IN NEW YORK THIS SUMMER."

"There, I cannot hear such talk from you. It is unjust to your wife," she interrupted.

He did not notice that she failed to include her husband, but looked at her wonderingly as he said:

"My wife! Then you do not know that Eva died two years ago in April?"

What! Your wife—no, I am just back from California—I knew you were living abroad—that was the last I heard, then came my marriage."

"Yes, and my doom. I—Sara, I wish we had not met. I find you fairer than ever, while I am miserable—forgive me and good-by. I have business at this station."

He arose, extending his hand. Confusedly, she gave him hers as she said:

"Good-by—I—call at mother's, if you are in New York this summer. I shall be there."

"Thanks, I will remember."

As Ashley stepped from the train his mind was in a tumult. What did the woman mean by asking him to call upon her; then, he thought of her beauty, the golden glimmer that lingered in her hair; this had seemed intensified by her dark dress; yes, he believed she wore black. He was an idiot about dress, but had always associated her with blue—filmy blue and white things—such as she had worn in the happy days long before.

Ashley had been engaged to his cousin, Eva Wood, when quite young. The girl was devoted to him, but time brought to the knowledge of the young man that he did not love her as he should the woman he would call wife. Her health began to fail and the doctors said to cross her would bring serious results; so, when all at home were humoring her every whim Ashley had not the heart to break the engagement as he had intended doing.

At this time he went to New York on business. While there he met Sara Lester. With them it was the rare happening of love at first sight. He prolonged his stay, thus dallying with temptation. She knowing naught of his engagement was not on her guard and a slight incident happened that suddenly brought words tripping through his lips that for days he had endeavored to suppress.

He held her in his arms, the one woman in the world he could love, and she with trust gave him the grand passion of her life.

Bidding her adieu until he should again come to her, and going home intent upon revealing the truth to Eva he was met by the news that she must go abroad and as his wife.

"I know you have been engaged a long time, Walter, so I take the liberty of telling you the truth. You may save her life by going with her at once," said the family physician.

Was man ever placed so before, Walter wondered; then seeing the hope in Eva's eyes he sat down and wrote the circumstances to the woman he loved, pleading with her to forgive him for the pain he felt he was giving her. She did not reply, and Ashley soon after went abroad with his wife, to whom he was invariably kind. He felt glad that she was spared the knowledge of that other love, yet he often doubted the wisdom which had sacrificed the love of two lives for one.

Much to the surprise of her friends Miss Lester suddenly married Mr. Lennard, a Californian, whom she had met while on an outing the year previous.

The meeting on the train had brought to the surface all Ashley's doubts and into active existence the love which dominated his life. There was something about their meeting and the invitation she had given him to call upon her that puzzled him. Why should she tempt him to her presence when she knew he loved her? Was she seeking a sort of revenge for her past suffering, or was she unhappy herself, and like some other women had become reckless and thus would lure him on to—God! no! he dared not think of that; he did not wish to think of it and yet. Well, he would see her at all events.

A few weeks later found Ashley in New York, awaiting the ladies at Mrs. Lester's home. Mrs. Lennard entered alone.

"Glad to see you. Mother is not well and sends regrets," she remarked, as she extended her hand in greeting.

"I am delighted to see you again, Sara, I have thought so much of our chance meeting. Fearing you are not happy—you—" moving nearer and taking her hand. As she did not resist he raised it to his lips, and then continued:

"Do you remember that night we—"

"Oh, Walter, hush! I have not told you," she interrupted.

"No, you have not, but I know—was he cruel to you, Sara? I could not bear to know you had suffered. Your kindness in asking me here made me think you would—confide in me, dear," pleadingly.

"Then if you know of Mr. Lennard's death, which occurred a year ago, I want you to know also that he was kindness itself to me," she said with emotion in her voice.

At once the man pulled himself together. Running his eyes over her he noted the unrelieved black. He wondered how he had been so stupid, and was thankful he would never know his mistake. Hurriedly he said:

"You did not enlighten me that day and it was not until later that I knew of your husband's death, but I have loved you always, my darling, I cannot wait longer to tell you—I—"

Again she was in his arms as on that day so long before. Trust and love surged from heart to heart with the old enchantment which is ever new.

LARGEST SCREWDRIVER.

Powerful Machine Used in the Construction of a Railway Bridge Near New York.

Undoubtedly the most powerful as well as the largest screwdrivers in the world have recently been delivered in the vicinity of New York. The Pennsylvania railroad in planning for its double tube under the North river has decided that it needed them and the engineering department, working with the construction department, has provided them.

The carpenter in using the ordinary screwdrivers exerts a power of about 30 pounds. The new screwdriver will have a power of 200,000 pounds, equal to that exerted by 6,666 carpenters. They will drive the great piles which must be sunk under the tunnel—they will, in fact, be the piles themselves. Inasmuch as about 1,000,000,000 pounds of metal will be used in the tubes, a faint idea of what the piles will have over them can be formed.

The screwdriver piles are cylinders two and one-quarter feet in diameter, made of cast iron one and one-quarter inches thick. They will be located every 15 feet centrally, so that both tubes will be reenforced. They will be made in length short enough to be handled in the tunnel, the successive lengths being belted on as the pile sinks. The screwdriver, or screw point so-called, is at the end of the pile and is so constructed that it will have one turn to 21 inches and a diameter of four and three-fourths feet.

SYMPATHY.

I chanced to see the other day
A rosy little chap,
A boy from school, released to play.
He wore a nice warm cap,
An overcoat, new rubber shoes—
A better garb no man might choose.

I also saw—and he saw, too—
A fine deep, muddy pool,
The sight attracted others who
Were newly come from school.
A puddle is a thing of joy
To any well-constructed boy.

The lad I marked did straightway dash,
All with a joyous whoop,
Into that pool; he went ker-splash,
Ker-chug, ker-slop, ker-scloop
He paddled in that lovely slime;
You bet he had a royal time.

And soon his nice, warm overcoat
Was soaked with muddy slop,
His cap did on the water float
Where it had chanced to drop,
His hose were drenched, his knickers wet,
And muddy as they well could get.

I watched that youngster with a smile
Of kindly sympathy,
And as I watched I thought the while,
"I would that boy were I."
But had he been my boy, I tell
You, I'd have caught and spanked him well.

SCOTLAND'S INDUSTRIES.

Progressive Ideas Are Moving the Masters to Adopt the Most Modern Methods.

Tendencies now plainly observable indicate that manufacturers are awaking to the new state of things in the industrial and commercial world. For instance, not a few of them are enlisted in the movement for improving and broadening the scope of technical education in Scotland as a necessary step toward bringing the youth of today up to a higher standard of skilled workmanship than that attained by the present foremen and operatives. This shows that the masters are finally recognizing one of the serious deficiencies of the day, at least in some branches of production. It is also to be noticed that the "one-break" system has been gradually extending, doing away with the nine o'clock breakfast and the attendant stoppage of machinery and loss of time. The bonus system also gains favor more and more, giving a fair reward to workmen for zeal and cleverness. The improvement of mechanical facilities goes on steadily, but so quietly that it attracts little attention.

There are in this part of Scotland constructional engineering firms and other iron and steel concerns whose plants have undergone radical changes in equipment and organization, and one or two such plants are probably not excelled anywhere for economical efficiency. Ropery and sailcloth companies on the east and west coasts have been adding to the number of their fiber machines of improved American pattern. To increase the output of blast furnaces new appliances are being introduced, dispensing with "pig-bed work" or casting in the sand; also new facilities for the filling of ore and coke from the bunkers to the barrows. Managers of iron foundries are adopting the hammer core machine and better equipment of tackle and portable jib cranes to facilitate operations. In some foundries there is also a further specialization, which makes for economy and finer work. Firms in the engineering trades are using a greater number of automatic machines—easily managed—one man taking charge of several machines. Boiler makers and structural iron works are beginning to recognize the advantages of standardization.

Scotch shipbuilders have little to learn from other countries; but, not to be behind in any respect, they are making a wider use of pneumatic machinery in some departments. American machines are entering more largely into the boot and shoe industry. Paper makers are taking up new devices for regulating the speed of machines and for other purposes. In woolen mills old-style machinery has been for a year or two giving place to improved, faster looms, requiring fewer weavers to manage them, thus reducing the labor cost of production. In locomotive works, I am informed, special appliances have been adopted for work heretofore done by hand, and machines have been adopted for cutting iron, brass, etc., quickly into all sizes and shapes.

RUFUS FLEMING.

FROM PARIS TO PEKING.

An International Meeting to Arrange for Direct Train Service Between the Cities.

According to the Boersen Courier, a meeting was recently held in Vienna to arrange for direct service between western Europe and Peking, China. The meeting was attended by representatives of Russia, English, French, Bulgarian, Dutch and German railroads. It was decided to run a train de luxe from London and Paris via Berlin and Warsaw to the Chinese capital, beginning May, 1904. The Russian government will arrange to simplify passport and customs regulations for through passengers to minimize delays and formalities. It is the purpose of those participating in this movement to make it possible for passengers to book in London or Paris to China without change. Another interesting item connected with the arrangements is the issuing of a round-trip ticket, first class, for $204 which permits the traveler to make the trip both ways by rail or one way by rail and the other by water. The trip by rail is to be made in 17 days. The tickets are to be good on the ships of all companies voyaging around Asia, and permission is to be granted to stop off at any port at which the ship calls, with the privilege of taking another ship.

Austrian Skins for United States.

Trieste exports a considerable quantity of sheep and goat skins to the United States. These skins, a large portion of which is bought in the Balkan states, have to be specially assorted for the American market, as our tanners will not accept inferior goods. Attempts made by a number of irresponsible dealers to underbid old and reliable firms in the American market and then recoup themselves by sending indifferently assorted goods have been the cause of considerable friction between sellers and buyers. Unusually favorable offers in this line of business should always be viewed with suspicion by American tanners.

A Professional Nurse tells her experience with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Montague, Mass.

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

Gentlemen,—I heartily wish those who are suffering from backache and disturbed action of the kidneys would try Doan's Kidney Pills. As was the case with me, they will be more than surprised with the results. I have been troubled for years with my spine. I could not lie on either side. Spinal cramps would follow, and words could not explain the agony which I would endure. While in these cramps I could not speak or move, but by making a great effort after the cramp had left me I could begin to speak and move a little, but my whole back was so sore and lame that I could not even have my back bathed for some time. My nerves were in a terrible state. I would rather sit up at night than go to bed, dreading the cramps and the terrible backaches. I consulted physicians, but got only a little relief for the time being. Seeing your advertisement, my mother urged me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. After using one box I was better, and have ever since been on the gain. I have no backache and no cramps now, and I feel like a new person. My nerves are better and I know my blood is purer. Words cannot express my thanks to you for what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. In my work as professional nurse I have a chance to recommend them; and they did me so much good that I will do so on every possible occasion.

Christianity in the Schools

By BISHOP S. M. MERRILL, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

WE WANT no closer union of church and state in this land than we now have. The founders of this republic hit upon the ideal relation and imbedded it in the constitution, not to be disturbed by accidental majorities, nor to be subject to the animosities of partisan strife. Each is independent in its sphere. The church has all the liberty it needs and all the protection it requires. The state has never yet encroached upon the rights of the church, and will not so long as the people are intelligent and vigilant. The trend of the times is to keep the distinction clear, and to hold each to its proper duties. But while the separation is complete there is no antagonism between the two. They are helpers of each other in all legitimate works and ways. The public schools, ordained and controlled by the state, are for the good of the whole people, and, therefore, for the good of the church—for the good of all the churches, of all nationalities, and all religions. There is nothing in the land more truly catholic than our public schools.

We would not have them less catholic and, therefore, they must not be sectarian or denominational. We believe, however, that they could be more religious than they are without detriment to their efficiency, or any sectarian tendency. They could teach the foundation principles of religion with regard to which all agree, whether Jews or Gentiles, Protestants or Romanists, and certainly they could inculcate the morality of Christianity, with its universal standards, without injury to the rights of infidel or pagan.

This nation is not infidel nor pagan, Romanist nor Protestant, but it is Christian in its constitution, profession, institutions, and laws. In numerous ways it recognizes Christianity as the religion of the people, and interweaves the sentiments of the Gospel into the fabric of its legislation and its judicial processes. While it does not and cannot inculcate Christianity in the public schools, in its positive form as a positive institution, it can and should recognize it as the dominant faith of the people and of the nation, with proper respect for whatever is sacred to parents and to the public at large; for if it be not the duty of the state to educate the children into Christianity, much less is it the right or duty of the state, through her schools, to educate them out of Christianity or into infidelity. When once that is attempted their doom is sealed, as the American people will have no infidel or "godless" institutions on the list of their public beneficences.

Life's Investment

By REV. JENKIN LLOYD JONES,
Pastor of All Souls' Church, Chicago.

Business, capital, investments. Those are the three commanding words of our day and place. If they are not written in letters of gold in every man's counting-room they are stamped in letters of iron in every man's and every woman's workshop. They are words that cannot be dismissed or ignored. So to-day let us accept them and interpret them, if possible, in terms not only of the life that now is, but of the life eternal.

The world is a great market place into which every one of us is carried by the chariot of birth, with more or less capital to invest. This investment is subjected to the same irrevocable laws of exchange as govern all other investments, among which we find as fundamental these four:

1. There is no credit at this market. The universe does a cash business with all her patrons.

2. The universe deals honestly with her patrons. Here we get just what we bargain for—nothing more, nothing less.

3. Here as elsewhere capital well invested grows.

4. Uninvested capital depreciates and sooner or later slips through the fingers of the holder.

Upon adequate appreciation and obedience to these four laws depend our moral and religious prosperity, just as much as does our industrial or commercial prosperity.

The fourth law is an alarming one: "Uninvested capital depreciates and sooner or later slips through the fingers." Oh, my friends, this would be awful were it not so sumblime! It is sad to see a limb paralyzed by disuse or misuse. Alas, could we see the shriveled sinews of the brain, the atrophied organs of the heart, the withered faculties of the soul! Could we know the lives once sensitive to generous things that have become ossified for want of exercise, the minds that are now capped in dark casements that once occupied apartments full of windows opening to the sky, we would stand appalled at the awful evidences that this righteous law of God is being unflinchingly executed all around us. He will not allow his subjects to retain unused talents.

The Preacher and Politics

By RT. REV. FREDERICK BURGESS, D. D.,
Bishop of Long Island.

THERE is a tendency to keep the preacher within certain limits. You stay in the drawing-room along with the ladies, men seem to say. We will go into the world and attend to business and politics. Nevertheless the topics of the pulpit must be taken from the things which are near the people's hearts. I would not for a moment encourage sensationalism or political electioneering in the pulpit, but I would rather have an occasional lapse into bad taste or injudiciousness than to have the preacher fail to touch the lives of men.

In the problems of socialism, of capital and labor, of statecraft in every form, there is beneath all the externals a deep principle of truth; and it is for the preacher to dive down beneath the surging and perhaps turgid waters and bring up the pearl of great price. Remember that there are certain things which the Christian preacher will not do. He will never preach war. His voice will be always for peace, and when the passions of anger and greed pass over a nation the true pulpit will belong to the Prince of Peace. War may have to come, and as a citizen he may approve, but as a preacher of Jesus Christ he must proclaim only the Christmas tidings. Nor will he enter into the arena of party politics. It is not his business to decide whether Tammany or fusion, whether democrat of republican, conquer in a given election. No; his campaign lasts all the year, and he must struggle to bring out those principles of honesty and charity, of purity and family integrity and of political courage which make the good citizen, whether he be democrat or republican. The life and strength of a nation consist not in its politics, but in those eternal truths which lie beneath politics.

HER GIFT.

The Story of the Little Handkerchief Which Rested on the Coffin of John B. Gough.

When the death of John B. Gough was announced wagon loads of flowers were turned back from the door of his home with the orders that these flowers be distributed among the poor. When the vast congregation of people came to the funeral there was not a flower upon the casket, the only decoration was a little, faded, tear-stained handkerchief, and the story of that handkerchief was this:

Many years before that a young lady had married a young man and they had gone to the city of New York to live.

After they had finally settled there the wife found that he was a drunkard and gambler, and soon he began to leave her alone at night. Two little children came into their home, but he cared not for them, seemingly, for he would be out all night. Then he began to beat his family, curse them, and then began pawning the furniture. One by one the pieces of furniture that she had brought from old Kentucky were sent down to the pawnshop. After awhile this poor woman had to go out and wash for a living, that her children might have bread to eat. She had one treasure left, that was the piano that her mother had given her on her wedding day. She would take her little tots and play on the piano and sing to them, then they would say their little prayers and go to bed.

"I HAVE BROUGHT MY HANDKERCHIEF."

She came home one night and her piano was gone. She knew what it meant. The last thing she had to tell of her old home had been pawned by her husband for drink. Her heart was breaking, but the babies came and asked her to sing. She put her arms around them and tried to sing the best she could without her piano. Somehow, the whisky had not tasted as good that night as usual. (Sometimes when mixed with a woman's tears it gets a little bitter.) Her husband came home not so drunk as usual. As he came around the house he looked in at the window and he saw the children in their little nighties and his wife was singing a lullaby song, then they prayed, kneeling down beside her. Each one asked God to bless them, to bless mamma, then to bless papa and help him to be good and to bring him home sober. He slipped softly in and kneeled down by his wife's side and said: "Wife, if you'll forgive me, I will never do it again." She said: "Tom, will you sign the pledge tonight?" He said: "I will." They went down together to a hall where John B. Gough, the great temperance lecturer, was giving a lecture. Tom went up and put his name down.

One day, at the time of Mr. Gough's illness, there came to his home a woman and she told her story to Mrs. Gough. She said: "I hoped I might give some presents to Mr. Gough, but I cannot do it. I have brought my handkerchief. I have not shed a tear since the night Tom signed the pledge. I brought this and thought I would give it to Mr. Gough." When Mr. Gough heard this he told his wife to send all flowers that were sent him at his funeral to the poor and put nothing but that little handkerchief on his casket, and tell the people that there was one soul on earth that he knew he had helped make better. When the people saw that little handkerchief on the casket of John B. Gough it taught them a lesson all the flowers in the world couldn't.—Ram's Horn.

Poverty Caused by Drink.

Upon the connection of poverty with drink the statements are uncompromising. "A Wesleyan minister says that in nearly every application to their relief fund, the necessity was ultimately traced to drink on the part of man or wife, or both." "A Congregationalist says that it is at the root of all the poverty and distress with which they come into contact; drink has been the cause of leakage. A Church of England vicar speaks of it as 'the great trouble; the main cause of all poverty. In almost every application for relief there is a history of drink.'"—Temperance.

The Spider and His Web.

In proof of the allegation that drink deceives, Dr. Louis Albert Banks says: "The saloon is the spider and his web is the American life, and the overwhelming majority of the flies caught in his web are workingmen. The Christian church would kill the spider and destroy the web; it seeks to save a hundred thousand young men every year caught and engulfed in the loathsome net."

FRYING-PAN DRUNKARDS.

Utensil Cooks Food Poorly and Causes the Eaters to Seek Relief in Liquor

The distinction of drawing public attention to the fact that inefficient cooking is one of the principal incentives to drinking rests with Sir William Anson, parliamentary secretary to the board of education, of London.

Sir William informed the students of the Harris institute at Preston that indigestion was produced by bad cooking and continued indigestion led to drink.

The relation of bad cooking to the drink habit has, however, been long known to medical men, as well as to conductors of cookery classes. The latter are doing admirable work on behalf of temperance reform, and inquiries elicited the welcome assurance that there is not a culinary student in London who has not the physiological and moral effects of bad cooking impressed upon her.

The officials of the national society's Training School of Cookery in Blackfriars road have expressed their conviction that unskilled cooking is responsible for a vast amount of intemperance in the poorer and middle classes.

"A steady, hard-working man," said one of the principals, "returns home after a trying day, feeling very hungry, to a meal that is terribly indigestible. But the half-famished man must eat it or go hungry. Afterward he naturally suffers, and, as countless instances prove, repairs to the nearest public house for spirits to assuage his pain. By repetition of the process he acquires chronic indigestion, always repeatedly flying to the only remedy he knows."

The use, or rather the abuse, of the frying pan is, according to another authority, the origin of much alcoholic indulgence by workingmen. The frying pan, it appears, is the most popular culinary utensil with their wives, and most things prepared in a frying pan are indigestible.

A STORY ON CARNEGIE.

Total Abstainer Says Employes on Scotland Estate Who Abstain from Liquor Get More Pay.

Joshua L. Bailey, a well-known Philadelphia merchant, spoke at Ardmore, Pa., the other night on total abstinence and told a story about Andrew Carnegie.

"While in Washington about a week ago," said Mr. Bailey, "I met Mr. Carnegie, who, upon hearing that I was connected with the National Temperance society, said to me: 'That's a splendid movement. I am not a total abstainer myself, but on my estate in Scotland at the end of every year I call all my men up and everyone who can swear that he has not taken a drink of liquor during the year gets ten per cent. added to his wages. I find that five-sixths of the men get the additional money.'"

Mr. Bailey suggested that perhaps if Mr. Carnegie set the example by abstaining himself, the other one-sixth might abstain.

PROGRESS OF REFORM.

Oscar II,. king of Sweden and Norway, has acceded to a petition of his temperance subjects to discontinue the christening of battleships with wine.

The "blind pigs" in La Grange, Ill., must go, say the citizens of the suburb. They have asked the village board to devise means of ridding the town of them.

The city marshal of Hoopeston, Ill., has been removed from office because of insufficient activity shown in the prosecutions for violations of liquor ordinances.

The clergy of the state church of Sweden, assembled in national convention, unanimously petitioned the government to stop the sale of beer at all military establishments and camps.

God never compromises with any wicked thing. His laws against evil are all prohibitory. Satan is the author of compromise; and when men permit evil for a consideration it is not difficult to tell whose side they are on, or in whose interests they are working.—National Advocate.

In our southland 11 states are strengthening their laws. Look at Texas. In 1901, 53 counties had prohibition; in 1902, 104; June 15, 1903, 128 prohibition counties in the state. Some have been added since. The San Antonio Liquor Dealer declares that prohibitionists will carry the entire state in two years.

The fifty-sixth annual report of the Pennsylvania commissioners on lunacy shows that the increase of insanity from intemperance is from 20.6 per cent. in 1900 to 21.1 per cent. in 1902. The ratio of intemperance to any other cause of insanity is given as five to one. Isn't drink the great befuddler?

Illinois Garden Spot.

Edward county, in Illinois, is a veritable garden spot. There is not a single prisoner confined in the county jail, nor has there been for several years. The jail is used exclusively as a shelter for tramps during the winter season. The county almshouse is without a single inmate. The circuit court in that model county seldom lasts over two days, owing to the remarkable absence of litigation. In the past two years there has not been a single criminal case tried there, and but one jury trial in all that time, and that was brought by a man who sued his mother-in-law for alienating his wife's affections. The county has not sent a prisoner to the penitentiary for 30 years, a record perhaps unequaled. Reason why: In 30 years there has been but one saloon in the county, and that was operated but a single year.—National Advocate.

AND HE GOT IT.

But It Proved to Be Something He Did'nt Care to Hold Very Long.

An indulgent mother of the Tuxedo colony was traveling on a local train one day in company with her three-year-old son, his nursemaid, and a copy of a society magazine which absorbed her attention, relates the New York Times. The son was occupying the seat behind her with his attendant, who attempted every once in awhile to curb his restless and rebellious spirit by a gentle denial of his latest whim, but each time the mother, noticing only that some argument was in progress, and without looking up from her book, would remark: "Let him have it."

The nursemaid thereupon would yield to this double demand.

Finally a strong and rather venomous looking wasp flew against the window pane, and the youthful hunter reached out to grasp it, and wailed dejectedly when he was once more restrained by the watchful caretaker. Again the fond mother, without raising her eyes, exclaimed:

"Oh, do let him have it!"

And the howl which followed the nurse's compliance caused an amused smile to pass around the car.

The U. S. Dept. of Agriculture

gives to Salzer's Oats its heartiest endorsement. Salzer's New National Oats yielded in 1903 from 150 to 300 bu. per acre in 30 different States, and you, Mr. Farmer, can beat this in 1904, if you will. Salzer's seeds are pedigree seeds, bred up through careful selection to big yields.

	Per Acre.
Salzer's Beardless Barley yielded	121 bu.
Salzer's Home Builder Corn...	300 bu.
Speltz and Macaroni Wheat....	80 bu.
Salzer's Victoria Rape.....	60,000 lbs.
Salzer's Teosinte, the fodder wonder	160,000 lbs.
Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass...	50,000 lbs.
Salzer's Pedigree Potatoes.....	1,000 bu.

Now such yields pay and you can have them, Mr. Farmer, in 1904.

A Remarkable Discovery.

A German chemist has discovered a healing agent in coal oil which has created quite a sensation amongst sufferers wherever it has been tested, on account of the wonderful cures accomplished by its use. A few applications are sufficient to cure muscular Rheumatism, Neuralgia, headache, tooth, ear or backache, lameness, sprains, chilblains, in fact every severe pain. It is sold in drug stores as Dr. Bayer's Penetrating Oil in 25c. and 50c. bottles and warranted to cure or money refunded.

Failure is a spur while success may be a snare.—Chicago Tribune.

Miss Nellie Holmes, treasurer of the Young Woman's Temperance Association of Buffalo, N.Y., strongly advises all suffering women to rely, as she did, upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:— Your medicine is indeed an ideal woman's medicine, and by far the best I know to restore lost health and strength. I suffered misery for several years, being troubled with menorrhagia. My back ached, I had bearing-down pains and frequent headaches. I would often wake from restful sleep, and in such pain that I suffered for hours before I could go to sleep again. I dreaded the long nights as much as the weary days. I consulted two different physicians, hoping to get relief but finding that their medicine did not seem to cure me. I tried your Vegetable Compound on the recommendation of a friend from the East who was visiting me.

"I am glad that I followed her advice, for every ache and pain is gone, and not only this, but my general health is much improved. I have a fine appetite and have gained in flesh. My earnest advice to suffering women is to put aside all other medicines and to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS NELLIE HOLMES, 540 No. Division St., Buffalo, N.Y.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Death of John the Baptist

Extremes met in the fortress palace of Herod Antipas on the occasion of his birthday banquet. Nazaritish abstemiousness kept vigil in the dungeon. Herodian wantonness blazed and reeled in the banquet-chamber. Self-oblivious devotion below is matched by an overweening ambition above. The forgiving spirit, ready to pray for despiteful users, is offset by a vindictive thirst for the blood of one whose very life was a rebuke to sinners. On the inky agate of the Herodian court the character of John Baptist stood out in high relief, a clear-cut cameo of snowy luster.

If any Herod ever needed a post-graduate course in the art of luxury, this one had it. He received his finishing touches during his visit to Rome. At that capital of debauchery he contracnted the incestuous connection which called forth the Baptist's stern and constant "It is not lawful!"

This banquet seems to have been, in part at least, a military affair. Antipas was toasting and feasting his officers. He was putting them in heart for the war into which his unnatural crime had plunged him. Their ivory couches rested upon tessellated floor of banquet-hall in the marble palace, within the impregnable fortress of Macherus. The tatrarch's couriers had brought in haste from every quarter the dantiest viands of fish, flesh, and fowl, while wine filled golden goblets to their brim, and the air was scented with jet and spray of perfume.

Herodias was in her boudoir. Ambition was her ruling vice. She had discarded her rightful husband, father of her beautiful daughter, because, he had no title. She married one who already sustained the relation of uncle and brother-in-law to her, and in doing so displaced a loyal wife from her husband's side.

At length Herodias had a title and numerous palaces and fawning courtiers; but she had also a Nemesis, whose imperiots "It is not lawful," either threat nor cajolery nor bible could silence. Her strait was desperate. The uncompromising preacher of righteousness was making progress with her paramour. If he converted him, she would be discarded, and all lost. She had secured the Baptist's imprisonment. But locks and bars seemed no restraint to his subtle influence, while his dungeon-walls seemed to echo his "It is not lawful!" with ever louder detonations.

The desperate and wicked woman baited her hook with her daughter's modesty, and went angling in the pool of drunken revelry. When Antipas found himself caught, he lacked moral courage to snap the hook. He feared to vex Herodias, and had superstitious scruples about breaking his oath. He doubted the effect of his vacillation upon the courtiers and chiliarchs whom he was seeking by this very banquet to attach more closely to himself. On the one hand, he was apprehensive of the effect on the murder of one who stood so high in their regard. Wretched man! This was the turning-point in his career. With the infamous choice of this hour he began the descent which terminated in disgrace, exile, death.

A moment later, Salome, a paragon of voluptuous beauty, flushed with her lascivious dance, carries, with an inhumanly steady hand a golden platter from the banquet-table, on which rests the head of the martyr. A choice dish that for Herodias! It was her share in the banquet.

The Teacher's Lantern

A character in which there is no balance-wheel of principle is despicable. When such a one reaches a position of power it is public calamity. "As a roaring lion and a raging bear, so is a wicked ruler over the poor people." Some who would be lavish in their upbraiding of a social outcast are singularly mute before sin while it is shrined in wealth, luxury, and power. John Baptist was not of that order. No station in life is to loftly to lift its occupant above the reach of the pains and penalties of sin. They can pass even palace-door is a fearful thing to deliberately cherish hatred and revenge in the heart. It is sure to bear its crimson fruit. For his oath's sake. A poor women of my city said to me last winter that there come a day when they had not a scrap to put on the table. She put her shawl on, and went down to the corner saloon, stated the fact to the saloon keeper, reminding him, in addition, that her husband had spent a good deal of money at his bar. He professd to be sorry for her, but said he had prmised not to aid anybody, and there fore could not help her. Surprising how tenacious some men are of there oaths and promises when it suits theirconvenicene! That proved has no weight with them, "A bad promise is better broken than kept." This was that Herod who, in mockery, clothed Jesus in robes and sent Him back to Pilate. Out of the corrupt court of Herod Antipas, Manahem, his foster brother, and Chusa, his major-dromo, rose to discipleship with Jesus. Nothing prevented Herod himself from rising but his love of self and sin. Whom I beheaded: No need of the Baptist now! Conscience performed the office of ten thousand accusers. That the way of the transgressor is hard never had more apt illustration then in the case of Herod and Herodias. The inordinately ambitious woman induced her husband to go to Rome and enter his claim to the title king. But he lost even what he had, and both perished miserably in exile.

Child-Study and Sunday-School Method

Benjamin Kidd affirms the sense of reverence to be a preponderating element in the type of character which the civilization of the future demands. It will be observed that we have ready at hand an efficient agency for the cultivation of reverence. It is the Sunday-school, in America alone ten million scholars are enrolled. In spite, however, of great number and thorough organization, it is an open question whether the end desired is always conserved. It has taken the Sunday-school a hundred years to outgrow the semi-secular tinge Robert Raikes gave it, a secularity for which he is not altogether responsible—which, under the circumstances, he could hardly avoid—but for which there is not the slightest excuse at the present day. The idea that the Sunday-school is an annex or addendum to the Church should not be tolerated. In the true ideal, it is the Church. The Church resolves itself that specific form for the time being for the specific purpuse of stimulating reverence and imparting religious knowledge. If this be true, the spirit which pervadees the public service should characterize the Sunday-school. The worshipful and reverential spirit need not be lugubrioug or severe. In fact, the real article is never that. The smart, patronizing, affectedly-stirring conduct of a school is palpably out of harmony with the high ideal of reverence. The unecclesiastical furniture, cast-off, second-hand, marble-top tables and wornout divans, are at war with the reverential spirit. The appointments of the Sunday-school should be ecclesiastical. The symbols of faith should be displayed. There should be a lecturn. As an object lesson, the superintendent ought to read from a large Bible, in sight of the children. The singing, too must be worshipful. The business incidental to a Sunday-school should come before the opening—the books returned and taken out, and the library closed and the librarian in a class. The secretary takes the census, and the treasurer the offering, before the school is called to order. By this rule certain very desirable ends will be conserved. Interruption of class work will be avoided and a contingent added to the corps of teachers or scholars. The following order of service is suggested: 1. Silence. 2. Invocation. 3. "Gloria Patri." 4. Lesson study (when the scholars are freshest; short; not too many things; one thing thoroughly). 5. Supplemental ethical lesson. 6. Review from the desk, if desirable, and if there is some one present who is competent to conduct it. 7. Or an ethical address. 8. Silence 9. Passage read from the great Bible at the lecturn. 10. Hymn. 11. Prayer. 12. Benediction. 13. Silence. 14. Separation.

Mr. J. C. Turner, of Cumberland, Md., has billed his moving picture show for this place next Saturday evening, March 12th.

The band mill started full blast on Monday morning, 7th inst., after an idleness of three months.

J. H. Cuppet returned home last Friday from Pittsburg, Pa., where he was purchasing his spring goods.

A series of meetings was held last week in the Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church by Rev. Stroup, pastor, with good success by adding seventeen new members to his flock.

DEER PARK.

March with its changeable weather, one hour rain, then snow, and then, to surprise us the sun peeps forth for a moment or so. Still time marches on, and we soon hope for "April showers that will bring forth May flowers;" and then we will forget that Mr. Groundhog has had his sleep and came forth victorious.

The many friends of Albert J. King and Daisy Warnick King, his wife, were shocked to hear that this young husband was suddenly killed in Ohio on the B. & O. railroad, Pennsylvania system, at bridge 55, over Yellow Creek, on Saturday, the 5th inst. His remains were brought here on Monday morning and buried in the cemetery the same evening, after appropriate services in the Lutheran church conducted by Rev. E. Manges.

Rev. Mr. Clary, of Keyser, W. Va., spent a few days at his home, recently purchased from Mr. F. L. Warnick, and after the Keyser real estate boom is over, will locate here permanently. We welcome this Christian gentleman back to his home of years gone by, and fully realize that he will be an acquisition to our town.

Mr. Joseph Lashorn, an old resident of our town, is dangerously ill at his home on church street. Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh, of Oakland, is attending him, but gives but little hope of his recovery. Our sympathy goes out to his devoted wife and only son, a good boy just merging into manhood.

Miss Nellye Hoye, of Oakland, has been visiting relatives of this place for the past ten days, and many social gatherings have been given in her honor by friends of her girlhood days.

Miss Ada Thrasher, daughter of B. T. Thrasher, of near this place, spent some days at Fairmont, W. Va., visiting her sick brother, William R. Thrasher, who has been living at that place for the past vear or more. We presume he is convalescing as his sister has returned to her home.

The many friends of the late Wm. A. Baker, of Baltimore, for so many years State Supt. of the Maryland Sunday School Union, were pained to hear of his death some weeks since, just previous to Baltimore's great fire; and now again comes the news from our old friend Rev. George H. Nock, sucessor of Mr. Baker, that his much loved president of that institution, the venerable G. S. Griffith, has been called to his heavenly home. From our own personal acquaintance with this grand old man, we feel assured that if there is a reward for the rich in the better land this aged and loved man (although a man of considerable wealth) is enjoying a "mansion not made with hands."

We are glad to see our friend J. L. Wheeler, of the "F. R. D. mail service on route 2 of this place, is out again, after a sickness of some weeks. His assistant in the person of his son Gay performed the duties to the entire satisfaction of the patrons. Gay is a model young man and one that we all love and respect for his faithful devotion to his parents.

Hon. A. F. Geoige was in town today visiting his aged father, Rev. W. E. George, who has been quite ill for some time, but we hope he may be spared to us for many years; but in the course of nature it can't be long, as he has out-lived the allotted time. Mr. George is in his 84th year.

Mr. George Marley is improving his lot situated at the head of Main street and will build a business stand with a hall above. Lumber and material is on the ground for work as soon as the weather will permit.

Mr. Walter Engle, of Minnesota, will be here some time in April or the first of May and will erect a cottage on his lot on Oak street, which he purchased a year ago from E. F. Droege, and expects to locate permanently in this place. His many friends in Garrett county, the home of his youth, will welcome him back to his native heath.

Dr. J. W. Laughlin, of Mountain Lake Park, was in town last week looking after his property interests here. He contemplates some repairs and improvements.

We are glad the smallpox scare in our county is over. People attending the March term of court need have no fear.

We wish you and your paper all prosperity.

BLOOMING ROSE.

Not often do we see any thing from this community in THE REPUBLICAN, the peoples paper, so we concluded to try for once to see if we can't report the happenings in and around the neighborhood.

The happiest events of the winter were two revival meetings both near us, one at Sandspring and the other at Keeler Glades. They were nothing short of an old time meeting. Some 120 souls were made happy beyond doubt and it is impossible for us to express in words the effect of such meetings. Both sinner and saint gave praise for the wonderful outporing of the spirit. Many years has passed since there was such a revival as I have mentioned. These meetings were held under the name of "Christ Church" by Rev Jessie Hoffman a mere youth of 22 years. No one doubts his special gift as an ordained represenative of what he preaches. We are informed that he is to commence a series of meetings at Krug, or now Kendall, in the near future. All expect a good and grand time for the Master. We say "amen" to such work.

This is an enterprising community. All are busy trying to improve the opportunity afforded them. Lumbering has been the one important business during the winter.

This community has been undergoing one of the most severe rounds of measles. All who have not had them heretofore has had them or has them at this writing.

The family of Mr. C. W. Friend, Milton Friend, Isac J. Meyers, William Fearer, Leroy Chisholm, Samuel S Bowling, all have had a siege of them.

This has been a long and cold winter yet a splendid one for hauling purposes.

Thomas Bros. have commenced to operate their saw mill between Mr. Kelley's and Mr. C. W. Friend's, cutting lumber and shingles for those gentleman.

There has been no meetings at Blooming Rose for some time. We have been informed that we are to have preaching in the near future.

Mrs. J. S. Meyers has about recovered from a severe attack of the measles, and is able to be around again to the delight of all.

Mrs. C. B. Friend has recovered from a severe spell of sickness.

Mrs. E. B. Hook has been confined to her bed for some days, has recovered sufficiently to be around again.

There is no section in Garrett county that has the telephone service as this has. We believe almost every one has a 'phone and to do without the service now would be almost unbearable. Every body talks at once. One cannot wait on another, so anxious are they to know how every thing goes.

Mr. George Frazee has moved from Kendall to the farm of his father where he will permanently reside.

Our neighbor, Mr. D. H. Friend, is looking around for a house keeper and from reports he is to succeed.

Mr. C. W. Friend has the distinguished honor of being called "grandpap." He is proud of the title thus honorably conferred.

Circuit Court.

The March term of the Circuit Court for this county will convene in Oakland on Monday, the 21st inst. instead of Monday, the 15th inst.; as published in these columns last week.

TRUSTEE'S SALE
OF VALUABLE
REAL ESTATE
SITUATE NEAR SWANTON, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND.

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett county passed in a cause wherein Albert Lewis Miller et al. are complainants and George W. Miller et al. are defendants, the same being No. 1254 on the Equity docket of said Court, the undersigned trustee will, on SATURDAY,

the 2nd Day of April, A D. 1904,
AT 11 O'CLOCK A. M.

in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer for sale at public auction

All those tracts or parcels of Land called "Much To Do About Nothing" and "Elk Lick," containing in the aggregate 822 Acres, more or less, and being the same property which was conveyed unto Margaret Miller, late of Allegany county, deceased, in a deed from J. W. S. Cochrane and David W. Sloan, trustees, bearing date the 22nd day of October, 1895, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 28, folios 410, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county.

The property is situated about two miles East of Swanton in Garrett county. The quality of the soil is good and there is much valuable timber on the property. There are also two large glades on the property, making it one of the finest grazing farms in the country.

TERMS OF SALE—As prescribed by the decree, viz.: One-third of the purchase money cash; one-third in six months, and one-third in twelve months, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. Deferred payments to be secured by the bonds of the purchaser with surety to the satisfaction of the trustee, and to bear interest.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

Calvert Coal and Iron Company, et. al.,
vs.
Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines, et. al.
No. 1252 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree annulling, cancelling and setting aside a pretended deed from the Calvert Coal and Iron Company to one Charles O. Beaumont, Trustee, dated 10th day of May, 1902, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 507, one of the Land records of Garrett county, Maryland.

The bill states that a certain Robert A. Parrish, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was, in his lifetime, the owner of 2975 shares of the capital stock of the plaintiff Calvert Coal and Iron Company, which whole capital stock contisted of 3000 shares and that Calvert Coal and Iron Company is the owner in fee of a tract of land in Garrett county, Maryland, known as Lot No. 3 of the sub-division of "Beatty's Plains," containing 900 acres, more or less, and is in possession thereof and has been in exclusive and continuous possession of the same for a long term of years under a deed from Joseph T. Thornton, trustee, duly recorded in Liber W. H. T. No. 11, folio 51, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, a copy of said deed being filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit A;" that on the 22nd of February, 1901, the said Robert A. Parish, being owner of the aforesaid shares of stock made and executed his last will and testament; on or about the 30th day of March, 1901, died without having revoked the same and said will was duly admitted to probate by the Register of Wills of the City and County of Philadelphia, Penn., and is now of record of record in the office of said Register of Wills in Will Book No. 224, page 581, and that Letters Testamentary were granted thereon unto the plaintiff, Marie Gaul, the executrix therein named, and duly certified copies of said will and a certificate of the grant of said letters are filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibits B and C," respectively. The bill further charges that the said defendants, Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines, Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, and the other defendents whose names to the complainants are unknown have conspired together with the intent and purpose to fraudulently, illegally and unlawfully deprive the complainants of their right and title to the aforesaid tract of land and charge that the said defendants above named and the other defendants whose names to the plaintiffs are unknown have assumed to act as the officers, stockholders, directors and agents of the plaintiff Calvert Coal and Iron Company and have attempted to exercise the rights conferred by law upon said plaintiff and have assumed to exercise the franchises thereof, all of which acts on the part of the said defendants above named are illegal and void, they the said defendants having no interest whatever in said property, stock, franchises and rights of Calvert Coal and Iron Company, and that the deed to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, dated the 10th day of May, 1902, purporting to have been executed by Winslow Mason fraudulently representing himself to be the President and Charles F. Haines, fraudulently representing himself and pretending to be the duly constituted attorney and agent of Calvert Coal and Iron Company, whereby they undertook to convey the aforesaid tract of land to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, and which deed is recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 40, folio 507, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, and a copy of which is filed with the bill marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit D," is a fraud and constitutes a cloud upon the title of Calvert Coal and Iron Company to said land, the stock of which corporation with the exception of twenty-five shares belongs to and is the sole property of the said plaintiff Marie Gaul, executrix and sole devisee under the will of said Robert A. Parrish, deceased, and that the said pretended deed, unless set aside and canceled by the Court of Equity, will deprive the complainants of all their rights and interests of every kind to which they are entitled in said property and will strip the complainants of all said property and will bestow the same upon the said defendants above named and their co-conspirators, whose names are to the complainants unknown and who have assumed the power and undertaken to exercise the franchises of Calvert Coal and Iron Company and who have no right and title to the same.

That the pretended deed to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, is wholly without legal consideration, is fraudulent and void and should be set aside, cancelled and annulled by this Court.

The bill then prays that the said pretended deed purporting to have been made and executed on the 10th day of May, 1902, by said Calvert Coal and Iron Company, through its pretended president, Winslow Mason, and Charles F. Haines, its pretended attorney in fact and agent, to the said Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, may be annulled, cancelled and set aside by the decree of this Court, for general relief and for an order of publication against the said Winslow Mason, Charles F. Haines and Charles O. Beaumont, trustee, who are non-residents of this State, and also an order of publication according to law, requiring the unknown persons and parties who have assumed to act in connection with the above named defendants as officers, stockholders, directors and agents of said Calvert Coal and Iron Company, of the object and substance of this bill and warning them to be and appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor on or before a certain day to be named therein to show cause, if any, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

It is thereupon, this 11th day of February, 1904, ordered, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity that the plaintiffs by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 12th day of March, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 29th day of March next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Examiners' Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned Examiners, appointed and commissioned by the Mayor and Common Council of Deer Park, Maryland, to take into consideration the proposal to close and discontinue a part of Davis Avenue and Garden Street and also a part of Tillson Street in the town of Deer Park, and lay out and open certain new Streets therein, the first to begin at a point on Davis Avenue and running thence in a northwest course to Hotel Street, and the second to begin on Hotel Street and run in a northwest course to Spiker Street, through the lands of John T. McGraw, will meet for the said purpose on the premises on the 15th day of March, 1904, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., and if in our opinion the public welfare and convenience requires the discontinuance and closing of said Avenue and Street and the opening of said proposed Streets, we will then and there proceed to locate and lay out same.

ELECTION RESULTS IN REPUBLICAN VICTORY.

The Entire Ticket Elected by Substantial Majorities.

DR. H. W. M'COMAS CHOSEN MAYOR

Messrs. Lawton, Harned and Helbig the New Councilmen-elect—With the Hold-over Members of Council That Body Will Be Solidly Republican.

Last Monday the annual election for three members of the Town Council and the bi-annual election of a Mayor took place in Oakland, resulting in the election of the entire Republican ticket over the candidates named on Thursday night of last week by the Democratic voters of the town. The successful candidates were—Mayor, Dr. Henry W. McComas. Councilmen, Messrs. Samual Lawton, Joseph E. Harned and Edward W. Helbig.

Their opponents were for Mayor, Mr. D. M. Mason; Councilmen, Messes. J. M. Stanton, A. T. Matthews and Luther J. Brown.

There were no issues involved in the contest except those injected into it by some of the voters who are at odds with certain of the appointees of the Governor and of necessity must become the Judicial officers of the corporation.

Aside from this the fight was made along party lines and the victory of the Republicans was made possible only by the heroic work done in getting the full party vote out.

The total number of ballots cast was 224.

The vote follows:

For Mayor, McComas, 130; Mason, 114.

Councilmen, Lawton, 141; Harned, 146; Helbig, 135; Stanton, 95; Matthews, 105; Brown, 103.

A Card of Thanks.

DEER PARK, MD., March 15, 1904.

Ed. Republican:—I desire through the columns of your paper to extend my thanks to all the kind neighbors in the vicinity of my home who so nobly ministered to my wife during her illness, and to especially thank the kind friends from Deer Park who did so much at the time of her death and burial. With a heart too sad to say more, I am thankfully your bereaved friend.

EDWARD G. MILLER.

HAUSER.

Our farmers are getting ready for breaking up the ground for their spring crops.

Our people are now engaged in sugar making, and hope for a good season.

Mr. Henry Bittner, our accommodating mail carrier, has become quite a horse trader. It is doubtful whether he or "the other feliow" has been the gainer in his "swaps."

Miss Nell Fowler, who is teaching the Red Oak school, visited her parents over Sunday.

The Crellin Lumber Company has reduced their working force in the woods as nearly all their logs are in the river awaiting the spring floods, when they will be floated to their mill at Crellin.

A number of our people attended the funeral of Mrs. Winters, of Eglon, which was conducted at Cross-Roads last Thursday.

Flocks of wild geese have been passing over—a sure forerunner of spring.

Mr. Henry Roth made a business trip to Eglon one day last week.

Our roads were never in a worse condition than at present.

Our school will close Friday, March 25th.

Guy Paugh was calling on Frank Chase Saturday and Sunday.

Some of our farmers have purchased horses this spring and find the price high—the result of Republican rule.

Mrs. Laurie Gauer paid Mrs. Roth a very pleasant as well as an interesting visit last week.

Mr. Hamstead, of this place, took a four-horse load of potatoes to Oakland where he received a good price for them.

Mrs. D. O. Roth and little daughter Marguerite, were calling on Mrs. Bachtel last week.

Mrs. F. W. Chase returned from Johnstown, Pa., where she was visiting her son.

Several of our people went to the Red House Sunday to church, but there being no preacher present the meeting ended in a game of ball.

Miss Amy Rumer was visiting her sister, Mrs. F. R. Austen, Saturday and Sunday last.

Frank Chase was calling at Amelius Fike's last Sunday.

Accept our thanks for the excellent reading matter furnished by your paper.

THE MARYLAND GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Sessions of the Legislature are Exceedingly Dull and Uninteresting.

JIM CROW BILLS MAY BE VETOED.

As a Result Whereof Democrats Are Angry—The Oyster Law and the "Sun"—Burned District Bill and the Commission Created Thereunder—Local Legislation.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS, March 16th, 1904.

The sessions of this week here at the State House have been exceedingly dull and monotonous, nothing like the interest being attached to those of the house and nothing like the speed in those of the senate which have characterized both during the past few weeks. In the house on Tuesday a heated debate, it is true, did occur over the Vagrancy bill, the parties going all to pieces over the measure, and no sort of organization being discernible in either. The Allegany delegation having secured the exemption of Garrett and Allegany, through the courtesy of the committee before the bill was reported, properly voted in favor of the bill as it stood and voted down amendments to knock it out. But the turbulence and unruly spirit of a mob exhibited by both parties has probably had very few paralells here in twenty years.

On Monday night nothing of importance was done, while in Baltimore the legislative committee was notifying Senator-elect Isidor Ravner of his election as a senator of the United States, which it seems, he had not known before.

Cardinal Gibbons, the eminent prelate, has come out in opposition to the "Jim Crow" bills and disfranchising amenmdment, dealing both, by reason of his position and great influence, the hardest blow they have had yet. The Governor has not yet, it is said positively decided to veto these measures, but it said that he is strongly considering it, with the chances all in favor of his eventually taking such a step.

It is stated in the senate that if Mr. Warfield does this, not only will the measures be passed over his veto, that is if the Governor has the power to veto it—a mooted question—but that certain democratic senators will take the floor to denounce him, for violation of his pledges, and other matters where the senators disagree with him.

The oyster, always a worrying question and one on which there is as wide divergence of opinion as on any other considered down here, is once more on the tapis. The Sun is attempting its senatorial campaign tactics and is doing its best to force this measure through, and while, after the exhibition which it gave in January of its power, it is decidedly unsafe to say that there is anything that the Sun can not whip Maryland men into doing, still it does seem extremely improbable that it can force Mr. B. Howard Haman's pet bill.

The Sun day after day has harped on "the people,"—its old song.—about the people demanding the Haman bill, and yet, day after day for five or six weeks, hardly a day failing to produce its crop, lengthy petitions against the Haman bill, and never a one calling for its enactment into law have come down here.

Even the oyster men themselves realize that something must be done, but they realize, what the Sun and its lesser paterners, do not realize, that the Haman bill is not the way to do it.

The oyster men want to know why Mr. Haman is so much interested in in this bill, why he has for ten years been interested in this bill, and why he does not modify its worst features from the point of view of the oyster men, if there is nothing in it hurtful to their interests? There are a number of other questions that will have to be very much more satisfactorily answered than they have ever yet been, before they will permit their represenatives to stop fighting the measure. It is something of this sort that makes them laugh when the Sun predicts a dark political death in all earnestness for Senator William F. Applegarth, for opposing the measure; for these men know that the more the Sun attacks him for his position, the more of a martyr does he become, until instead of having the ordinary number of enemies at home, he will have none in the future with the power to do him any harm. After this affair, Applegarth can come pretty near to getting anything he wants—from the Eastern Shore—a political death indeed!

The burned district bills have been rushed through and from the attitude of the Herald in Baltimore at least, it would seem that the commission bill was indeed too broad. It gave a great deal of power, and it was feared before its passage and when the city delegation was holding it in some doubt, that it would be abused. Upon the bill's passage however, the Mayor appointed a commission headed, at the commission's choice, by Colonel Sherlock Swan, an excellent man and generally considered an admirable man for the place.

Mr. Howard will probably change his mind and introduce the bill mentioned last week as in preparation, to prevent the railroads from bringing their tramps, caught stealing rides, into Garrett for trial. Mr. Howard says that he expects Mr. Collins' bill, on account of which he withheld his own, will have difficulty in the Senate and very wisely decides to wait no longer before getting his local bill through the House.

The bill to incorporate Friendsville on Wednesday passed the House.

On Thursday Mr. Howard introduced the bill outlined in the last letter for a referendum upon the proposed issue of bonds to erect a court house and jail at Oakland.

The bill prohibiting the sale of liquors in district No. 6, Garrett county, has passed both houses and on Thursday went to the Governor for his signature.

On last Wednesday the Governor signed the bill, it already having passed both houses, requiring mining companies in Garrett to pay semimonthly. This measure was introduced by Mr. Howard.

The bill to amend the charter of Mountain Lake Park will not be introduced. The Association has gotten very busy and postal cards like the following have poured in on the delegates in such a deluge, protesting against the bill that the men from Garrett have positively given up all idea of introducing it. The cards are worded as follows:

I am a legal voter of the Community of Mountain Lake Park and a taxpayer of Garrett county, Md. I urge you neither to propose nor allow to be passed the amendment to the charter of Mountain Lake Park petitioned for by some residents of the Park.

When Senator Moor's mortgage tax repeal bill, which repeals the state tax on mortgages for the whole state, leaving the county tax only on mortgages in such counties as are not exempted from the bill's provisions, came up as the order of the day on Tuesday, Mr. Palmer, of Garrett, stated that when the original mortgage tax repeal was passed in the Senate, he had voted against the measure. He had discovered, he said, that there was a demand for the tax's repeal, hence he amended the bill so as to except Garrett along with other counties that did not want the tax.

Chairman Goslin, of the House ways and means committee, who is an opponent of the proposition to repeal the tax on mortgages, has gone to some trouble to ascertain the status of mortgages as a subject of taxation in other states.

He finds that in Arkansas, Arizona, California, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, and Georgia mortgages are taxed as personal property; that in Connecticut, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oregon and Wisconsin they are specifically taxed; that in Pennsylvania they are taxed for state purposes only; that in Dakota they are taxed whether interest bearing or not, and that Alabama, Illinois, indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, South Carolina and Tennessee impose taxes on this species of property, while only in Massachusetts and Idaho are mortgages exempted from taxation.

It Was Beautiful!

The Spring Opening and Fashion Exhibit at Stewart's was the talk of the town. Everyone was enthused by the beauty of the gowns, the originality of the hats, the richness of the dress goods, and the new showings of laces, of gloves, of neckwear, and kindred lines. When you go to Baltimore this week, be sure to see the many, many beautiful things at BALTIMORE'S LEADING STORE.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. Jonas Bittiner on last Sunday morning about 11.30 o'clock, when Mr. Bruce Durst, of New Germany, and Miss Maggie Brenneman, of Manadiers Ridge, were united in the holy bonds of marimony, by Rev. G. W. Stroup. Many friends extend hearty congrathlations to the young people.

Mr. G. W. Engle, of Baltimore, was with his family over Sunday.

Messrs. P. G. Engle and P. G. Stark, with their respective wives, were entertained at the home of Mr. G. Will Engle on last Sabbath afternoon.

The sugar season in this section is not yet fairly opened, although two slight runs have already been gathered.

Mr. E. S. Brenneman was on a buisness trip to Grantsville last Saturday.

Mrs. Catherine Bittinger has recently placed a loom in her residence and will be prepared to make carpet for the public, and will appreciate patronage that may be extended her.

Ex-deputy Sheriff Silas O. Wiley is hustling sugar water in his father's camp this spring and he does it with as much grace as he formerly hustled criminals about the county.

KENDALL.

The town of Kendall, which until November of last was Krug, is located on the Youghiogheny River, about half way between Oakland and Confluence, Pennsylvania. It is the Southern terminus of the Confluence and Oakland Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Years ago A. Knabb & Bro. erected at this place a stave and barrel factory and a large saw mill. The former they still own and operate; the latter they sold to the Youth Manor Lumber Company of Pittsburg, Pa., two years ago. The Yough Manor Lumber Company is owned by the Kendall Brothers, in whose honor the town was named.

Harry, the eldest son of Charles Whitmore, General Manager of the mill and lumber yard here, has returned from Illinois and is conductor on the Manor Land & Oakland Railroad. He is an experienced railroad man and, like his illustrious sire, is a hale fellow.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Shultz spent several days of last week with their parents and relatives at Pocahontas, Pa.

J. L. Kendall, vice president of the Yough Manor Lumber Co., came here from his Pittsburg home Wednesday to look after some urgent business matters. He returned to Pittsburg Thursday.

The school at this place will close in two weeks. The term has been successful and Mr. Fike, the teacher, is to be congratulated.

Henry Krug, the principal owner of the barrel factory, makes frequent trips to Pittsburg. Mr. Krug owns a great deal of land in Garrett county.

Dr. A. J. Mason, of Friendsville, was on our streets every day last week. He is very popular with the citizens here where he enjoys a large practice. Dr. Mason is the B. & O. surgeon for the Confluence & Oakland branch of the road.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Reed were Casselman, Pa., visitors last week. Mr. Reed is supervisor of tracks on the Manor Land & Oakland R. R

ARMY CAMP ALMOST ASSURED FOR OAKLAND

Proposed Site Visited Last Friday by Assistant Quartermaster-General Heistand.

OFFICER FAVORABLY IMPRESSED.

Accompanied by Mr. Hege, of the B. & O., and a Committee of Oakland Business and Professional Men—Proposition to Rent Land Submitten at Meeting Yesterday.

Last Friday Oakland was visited by Col. Heistand, Assistant Quartermaster-General of the United States Army, and Mr. Hege, representing the real estate department of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, where they were met by a delegation of Oakland's professional and business men.

The purpose of the visit of these gentlemen to Oakland was to inspect the proposed army camp site offered the Government by the citizens of the town and those residing in the community west and north of Oakland who will become directly effected should the matter reach a climax. The plan has been placed before the readers of this paper a number of times, and therefore it only remains to state that the Government desires to establish somewhere in the east an army camp embracing from 25,000 to 30,000 acres, for which two sites are being considered, the one near Oakland and the other in Pennsylvania. The claims of Oakland were fully and ably set forth in a speech delivered in Congress a week or two ago by Col. Pearre, and as a result of his efforts Col. Heistand was detailed to come here and make an inspection.

The party accompanying Col. Heistand drove from here to an elevated point across the river where a good view of almost the jentire tract was obtained and which Col. Heistand stated met every requirement for the purposes for which the land is wanted.

Col. Heistand also stated to the local committee that it is not the intention of the Government to make a purchase of the land this year, as the appropriation has not yet been made for that purpose, but to lease or rent the tract for the month of September if possible to do so, paying the owners from five to fifteen cents per acre rental for the month it is occupied, when 30,000 troops will be assembled for the purpose of maneuvering. If such an arrangement could be entered into, he said, the probabilities are that next year the purchase would be made and the permanent camp established. He suggested that a meeting of those interested and owning land proposed to be utilized be held in Oakland, which was done yesterday afternoon when nearly all the land owners were present. The proposition above outlined was submitted and an agreement in accordance therewith was signed by them, thus securing to the Government the land for use when it is wanted.

While the coming of the troops is by no means definitely settled, Oakland stands a good chance of securing the camp in which event thousands of men will be brought here and as a result farmers will find a ready market for all they can produce. Aside from this the officers will bring their families to Oakland and remain during the entire month which will tax the hotels and boarding houses to their full capacity.

TWO TREES.

Through lonely years an algaroba stood,
  Her only company the wand'ring wind;
And oft she tossed her green boughs toward the wood
  And dreamed that Heaven was fellowship of kind.
One happy day the solitary one
  Awoke to find a little palm tree near,
Whose waving leaves were shining in the sun,
  Whose stately grace that moment made it dear.

Through months and years the twain grew, unafraid,
  And for the palm tree's need the other gave
The shelter of her boughs, their filmy shade.
  The storms they faced as comrades true and brave,
Together drank the sunlight and the dew,
  And ever when the twilight winds did blow
They whispered each to other all they knew
  Of life and love, and waxed in beauty so.

The gardener came; their mingled leaves he saw—
  Too well-beloved the young tree! and straight,
Lest all unmindful of its inner law
  The palm be dwarfed, he moved it from its mate.
Again the algaroba is alone.
  The pangs of parting still are unforgot,
But love sings song of joy in place of moan—
  For she can see, though far, his glorious lot!

O lonely one, dost sorely miss thy friend?
Royal his state—shalt see when life doth end.
Too close thy love did cling about him, so
God took him, for his soul had need to grow.

HOW THE SERGEANT FELL IN LOVE

By F. H. MELOON

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

POLICE SERGEANT JAMES BRYAN, with the humorous twinkle of the ancient O'Briens in his eye, sat facing me in a restaurant stall.

"I was younger once than I am now," remarked the sergeant, suddenly.

This was a truth I could not deny, though anyone who saw the sergeant at 65 would have placed his age a score of years behind what it really was. With a half laugh the sergeant, who never hesitated at telling a story on himself, proceeded.

"The days when I first got accustomed to life on the force were full of fun and frolic. Some hardship, of course, but for the most part I was about as light-hearted a chap as could be picked out in any county in New Hampshire. I was the same sort of fool that many a young man had been before me and has been since, and when I looked up to the second story window of a house on Essex street and saw Blanche Stirling smiling down at me my heart went faster than ever and I walked giddily for a quarter of a mile thereafter. I should have stopped stock still right on the spot, but as soon as I caught a glimpse of her black-brown hair combed up in a great wave over her forehead and saw her pretty lips part in one of the most taking smiles of pearl I've ever seen the vision vanished behind a curtain and I saw it no more for three or four days.

In the meantime I wore my back collar stud in front, mixed up my cuff buttons, went without my suppers and all that sort of thing trying to get off to catch another glimpse of Blanche. I had learned her name within an hour of the time I first saw her looking down at me and learned, too, that she lived alone with her mother in the upper part of the tenement. As pretty as a picture didn't express anything in speaking of her unless you added that it was a picture by one of the old masters, sir."

"But, sir, if you could see her to-day as she was then, you would understand. As it is I can hardly tell you any more of how she looked to me, and not to me alone, sir, but to others as well, who gazed upon her in the old days.

"In the next week I passed her on the street two or three times and she did not so much as deign to glance at me. I began to think I must have been mistaken in believing I was the object of her smile the week before. But one night as she was walking home unescorted, Blanche Stirling was accosted by a half-drunken fellow. In an instant, as it were, I had him by the collar and he was thrown into the street with no gentle hand. I can be tolerable rough at times, sir." And Sergeant Bryan smiled as he bent his right arm in the manner peculiar to youngsters who show off their "muscle."

"Then came another of those entrancing smiles, and I tell you, sir, I actually felt faint all over. Just the way Elijah must have felt when they lifted him up to heaven in a golden chariot. Blanche thanked me very prettily and invited me to call at the house the following day, if I were off duty, in order to allow her mother the opportunity of thanking me more fully. You may believe that I accepted the invitation with an eagerness that she saw was too real to be assumed.

The man who wouldn't have yielded to that invitation under the same circumstances would have had to have a harder heart than the folks in Seabury, of whom 'tis current rumor that they stone the funerals that pass their doors so that in that place no undertaker can be hired to use an ordinary sort of hearse, sir.

"The next day the Widow Stirling received me pleasantly and I might say almost overwhelmed me with her effusive thanks for what I had done for her daughter, which was a mere nothing, sir, and all in the way of my duty as an officer, not to add as a man, sir.

The days passed on and I met Blanche frequently going with her to theaters and dances and such like and all the while getting deeper and deeper in love—calf love, mind you, for I'd never loved before—and I felt just like a rat in a feather mattress that can't tell where he's at till he's come out of it, sir.

"One night when I passed the house and saw Ned Remich in the sitting room beside Blanche I grew nearly frantic with jealousy. I had not counted on a rival and the appearance of Ned on the street after that always acted on me like a red rag on a goose, sir. Don't look as if I'd made a slip; I use the word advisedly, sir.

"Ned, I can say now, was a good looking fellow with black curly hair cut so that it seemed as if he had a cap on when his hat was off, if you came up behind him. The next time you're back of an orchestra see if you can't pick out some fellow that looks like that, sir. At that time I would have told you Ned Remich looked like a peach orchard out of cultivation, but naturally I see things clearer now. Ned was really a good looking fellow and a good hearted one, too, as I've found out many times since then.

"Between Ned and me the rivalry for Branche Stirling's heart waged fast and furious. We hardly spoke to each other although we had been passing acquaintances before. Blanche never invited us both to the house the same evening and so a direct clash was avoided.

"Every time I called the Widow Stirling sat there as calm and collected as you please with a pleasant nod for me always and an occasional word or two in the conversation. She never left us alone in the room and gave me no chance to speak to Blanche on the subject of which my head and heart were full. I paid both the ladies all sorts of pretty compliments I could think of, but that was about the limit. Several times when Blanche and I were out together at social affairs without the chaperonage of her mother I had started to ask her for her hand, but she had always stopped me one way or another before I could make a direct avowal of my love. Usually she pretended petulancy and, if that appeared about to fail, tears. Against the latter I was powerless. She explained the tears by nervousness and hysteria to which she was liable.

"Ned Remich and I used to glare at each other as you've seen bulldogs do across the street when some one's holding them from each other. It was Blanche Stirling that held us back while at the same time she unknowingly incited us to commit a serious breach of the peach.

"When my passion had about reached its height I found another chance to distinguish myself in the eyes of the Stirling household. Passing the house late at night, I was astounded to see a man trying to fit a key at the front door. I hadn't heard from Blanche for two days, but I knew she was at home. The man acted as bold as might be and I whispered to myself: 'There's a pretty case of sneak thieving that don't go on my beat!'

"With that I up and grabbed him. He started to yell, but I put my hand over his mouth. I wasn't going to let him arouse the Stirlings at that hour of the night. The man fought and struggled, but when he tried to enter into explanations I was feeling that savage I hit him with my club until at least he had to come along quietly. At the station I booked him as drunk and what with the clubbing I'd given him he acted it, too.

"I didn't want to be hard on the poor devil after the way I'd beaten him and I judged that he'd think himself lucky to be let off with a charge of drunkeness after what he'd been attempting to do.

"The next morning when I went down to the station there was a good sized drama waiting for me. The central figures were the Widow Stirling and her pretty daughter Blanche. As I entered their backs were toward me and my prisoner was just being led out of the cell.

Blanche's arms were around his neck in an instant and she was saying something I didn't understand. I was thunderstruck. At last they broke away and she, looking toward me, gave a sudden start.

"Your father, Miss?" I asked.

"No, my husband!" was the reply.

"You could have knocked me down with a chunk of fog I was that weak. The floor seemed to open under me and I rubbed my eyes to see if I couldn't wake up. It was no go. I coughed violently and went into a side room to get a drink of water to clear my throat.

"When I came back the Stirlings were gone and I was called on for explanations, which I gave. The captain of the night watch laughed heartily and long until tears came to his eyes. I looked on but saw nothing to laugh about.

"How I got out of it I don't know, but I was the recipient of many a rude jest for a week or so until I threatened to kill on sight anyone that said Blanche Stirling in my presence.

It seems that her husband had arrived the day before and was coming in late that night when I mistook him for a burglar. Ned Remich was almost as bad off as I was, but the matter soon grew quieter as the Stirlings left town before many days on account of the notoriety they'd gained and were not heard of again by me at least."

Pulling out his watch, the sergeant exclaimed that we had but five minutes in which to reach the theater and we rose hastily, paid our bills and went to watch Rosalind in her Dr. Mary Walker suit work out the tangle of a clever skein.

Risked Life to Save Dog.

A story comes from the Wichita mountains, in which it is stated that John Jackson, a homesteader, leaped into a den of panthers where one of his faithful dogs was being torn to pieces, to save his pet dog from death. The dog was killed, though Jackson, badly wounded, succeeded in stabbing to the heart two of the old panthers and then made his escape from the den.

Germans in Brazil.

About 5,000 of the 240,000 inhabitants of Sao Paulo, Brazil, are Germans. Unlike the Italians, who go back to their native country after earning a competence, the Germans make Brazil their permanent home and help to pay the taxes.

GEN. ESTEBAN HUERTAS.

Gen. Huertas, commander in chief of the military forces of the new republic of Panama, is a gallant little fighter who entered the service as a bugle boy when he was nine years of age. He bugled so well that he attracted the attention of his superiors and was rapidly promoted. For some years the little general has paid considerable attention to politics, and when the late "bloodless revolution" was planned he was on the inside of affairs and became the generalissimo of the baby republic's military establishment. Gen. Huertas has but one hand, having lost the other in battle. He is hardly five feet tall and weighs 107 pounds.

THE WONDERS OF THERMIT.

Melts Both Iron and Steel in Short Order---Burns at Temperature of 5,400 Degrees.

Humanity, which swelters in a heat of 90 degrees, and withers and dies if the mercury runs up 10 or 15 degrees higher, finds it hard to realize a heat of 5,400 degrees. Yet, says the Brooklyn Eagle, that is the heat developed in the combustion of thermit, a heat which welds together pieces of the most ponderous machinery, which makes it possible to mend iron castings weighing tons, which heretofore had to be replaced at great expense of labor and time; which can unite iron rails so perfectly that the jolting can scarcely be seen or felt, and a rail can be made miles long, instead of 50 or a hundred feet at the outside.

This thermit is a compound discovered by Dr. Hans Goldschmidt, of Essen, Germany, who has been lecturing in this country before chemical and engineering associations on this chemical discovery of his that is so full of engineering possibilities; a discovery that, unlike so many scientific discoveries, is not merely interesting to the scientist, but commercially valuable in the industrial world. The thermit is a mixture of finely granulated or powdered aluminum with some metallic oxide, most frequently oxide of iron. This mixture looks not unlike gunpowder, or to a housewife would suggest mixed tea, the light granules being aluminum and the dark ones oxide of iron. In burning this mixture creates a temperature, as Dr. Goldschmidt expressed it in a paper read at the annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, "about equal to that of the electric arc light."

FRANKLY OWNED HIS FAULT.

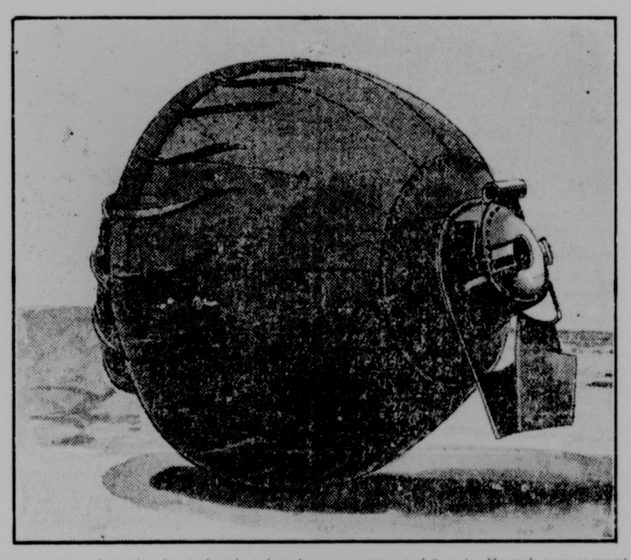
Incident of Recent Occurrence Illustrating French Army Discipline —A Grenadier's Offense.

Although there has been complaint of late about a growing lack of discipline in the ranks of the French army, the demoralization has not, it is believed, progressed seriously, as the following incidents, coming from a French naval port, will illustrate:

A general holding a high command made his appearance a few days ago at the barracks of an infantry regiment, which, in obedience to his orders, was promptly drawn up in the yard. Then he explained the reason in a brief address. He said that as he was walking in the town attired in mufti on the previous day a man belonging to the corps, who was the worse for liquor, accosted him rudely and asked him to stand him a drink. "Let him step out of the ranks," he concluded.

Immediately a bugler emerged, and, saluting, said: "It is I, mon general." The incident is characteristic and apropos of it one is reminded of such an adventure which befell a certain French marshal. A grenadier, who was exasperated at some injustice that had been done him, pointed his pistol at him and pulled the trigger, but it did not go off. Without moving a muscle, the veteran cried: "Four days in the cells for keeping your arms in a bad state." The bugler's honesty can scarcely have failed to be an extenuation of his offense in the eyes of the general.

REMARKABLE NEW SUBMARINE BOAT.



A new submarine boat that has just been constructed for the French government is a decided novelty in marine engineering. The craft is globular in shape and consists of two concentric spheres, one inside the other. The outside sphere acts as a propeller, and is encircled by a keel that not only increases stability but assists in steering. The motor, which is 24 horse-power, is located in the inner sphere. The engine has four speeds and reversing gear, and rotates the outer sphere. The illustration shows the boat on shore all ready for launching it upon its submarine career. Naval officers think highly of the invention.

Falconry in Turkestan.

In a remote part of Turkestan Dr. Sven Hedin, the explorer, a few years ago discovered the ancient art of falconry in full flower. "Among the horsemen were eight falconers," he writes, "two of whom carried eagles, the others falcons, all duly hooded. In this part of the world falconers form an indispensable adjunct in any formal parade or procession. Later in the day they gave us an exhibition of their birds' powers by letting them kill four hares and a deer, all of which were presented to me."

NEW HYDRAULIC PRESS.

Unique Apparatus Used in England for Removing Screws from Steamship Shafts.

In English machine shops a greater variety of hydraulic presses is used than in America. In this country, perhaps the most notable service performed by such apparatus is the forming of armor plates for battleships. A mass of soft steel is forged thereby with almost the facility displayed by a cook in kneading dough for pie crust. One of the kinds of work done abroad by hydraulic power is setting wheels on axles and removing them. A duty which is somewhat akin to this is loosening a screw propeller from the shaft of a steamship, if repairs of either shaft or screw become desirable.

When a propeller is originally put on a shaft it is fastened with pins running inward radially, or with keys wedged in between the shaft and the hub of the screw. Additional security is obtained sometimes by shrinking the hub on. The diameter of the hole through this latter is made a hairbreadth less than that of the shaft, but is temporarily enlarged by heating. When the hub cools it shrinks, and thus takes a firm hold. The need of fastening a screw well is apparent when one remembers that it is expected to rotate with the shaft; and that this latter is often made to turn by an engine of 10,000 or 15,000-horse power.

In taking a screw off from the shaft, then, the first step would be to put the vessel to which it belonged in a dry-dock and drain off the water so as to expose the hull completely. The next would be to pull out the pins or to drive out the keys from their seats. For this purpose mallets would probably suffice. Finally, it would be necessary to detach the hub of the screw from the shaft by exerting pressure in such a way as to make it slip along the latter. If this shaft had only a slight taper, of course only a little movement in the right direction would serve the purpose, but the force requisite to start the hub would be great.

A passing allusion to the hydraulic apparatus for performing this service is made in Cassier's Magazine, which also supplies the illustration here reproduced. Though no explanation is supplied, one can readily conjecture how the device is used. The bolts which connect the four segments of a circle should be relaxed and one of the joints opened sufficiently to allow the machine to be slipped past the screw, so as to embrace the shaft at a point just back of the propeller. By a chain and suitable tackle the whole mechanism would be temporarily suspended at the stern of the ship from the deck while these operations are going on. The press once being loosely in position right behind the hub of the screw, it should be tightened about the shaft by a proper adjustment of the bolts at the four joints. The thing will not work unless a perfect grip has been obtained.

To understand the final procedure one should take it for granted that the four segments are hollow. Water, having been forced into one of them, quickly distributes itself by the coiled pipes that connect it with the other three. Thus the pressure is equal in all. The two light colored, bean-shaped areas on each segment represent plates which can be made to move away from the surface of the segment by pressure within. These eight plates would bear against the hub of the screw with equal strength and slowly push the latter from its original position.

Two Hundred Miles an Hour.

Some interesting experiments have been carried out with a new monorail system devised by a French engineer, M. Devic. The inventor has built a model upon the scale of one-tenth of what the actual train is to be, and with this train he has attained a speed of 13 miles an hour. The train is to be propelled by electric power and in order that high speed may be attained the inventor relies upon two factors—diminution of weight and a more effective gripping of the drive wheels upon the single track of the railroad. He claims to have designed a rail which will afford the wheels sufficient grip, irrespective of the weight which they are carrying. Further experiments are to be carried out with a much larger model at Nemours to prove the utility and advantage of the system. M. Devic is sanguine of attaining a speed of 200 miles an hour.

BULLET-PROOF CLOTH.

Wonderful Things Related of an Italian Invention Which May Revolutionize Warfare.

The world is at present intensely interested in a new Italian bulletproof cloth, and since the Italian government is negotiating for its use it is of importance that we see just what the results are, although it is necessary to state that the invention remains a secret, and this notwithstanding attempts to discover its details. Thus we shall have to deal with a general description and with the results of experiments.

The armor is a sort of felt, the stuff being capable of adaptation to any form whatever; for example, a breast plate with a collar or a sort of coat which completely envelops the wearer and absolutely guarantees him from gunshot wounds. The thickness of the protector varies from one-sixteenth to seven-sixteenths of an inch, according to the arm the effects of which it is designed to destroy. Against the armor of seven-sixteenths of an inch the regular ordnance revolver with steel covered ball is powerless, and also the gun of the 1891 model charged with smokeless powder. In the numerous experiments which have been made—in firing at a distance of several yards—the ball, whether it be of lead or steel, when it strikes the protector is arrested and deformed, in some cases rebounding and in others being almost reduced to a pulp. Thus there is not only an arrest of the ball, but deformation as well, and in this deformation the force of the ball is converted. While there should be a high degree of temperature at the point touched by the ball, it seems that the ball alone feels the effects, for the protector does not seem to be burnt in the slightest.

These results are not limited to ballistic effects, for in the recent experiments it was sought to pierce the armor with a dagger driven with all possible force. The point of the arm, however, could not penetrate the felt and was bent into a shapeless mass.

It is natural to suppose that the force of the ball would be communicated to the armor and that this would be driven violently backward, resulting in a disagreeable shock and one which at times would be dangerous to the wearer. To demonstrate the incorrectness of this view Signor Benedetti attached his protector to a horse and fired upon the animal only six feet away with an ordnance revolver, the ball falling at the feet of the horse while, he, freed from his halter, walked away as if nothing had happened. It is to be noted that with the same revolver a piece of steel had been previously pierced. The same experiment was made with a chicken covered with a breast piece of the felt, the cock, after being rid of his new shell, quietly pursuing the even tenor of his way.—Philadelphia Record.

NEW DAREDEVIL FEAT.

Variation of Loop-the-Loop, Invented by Charles R. Culver, a New England Athlete.

If a man really has the desire to make money in a hurry, let him devise some new sensation and spring it on the people, the more dangerous and blood-curdling the better, from the monetary point of view, as hundreds of people will always flock to see some new scheme which seems to give promise of an accident sooner or later. Of course, the majority of these devices are not really as dangerous as they look to be to the outside public, as the performer has the opportunity to practice in secret, with safety appliances which will prevent serious injury until he reaches the point where he can go through his act without feeling the need of taking precautionary measures. Looping the loop on a bicycle is probably one of the most dangerous feats ever performed, owing to the difficulty of keeping the center of the track while in such swift motion, and to the necessity of stopping the wheel quickly after completing the loop. In the apparatus here illustrated the trouble in stopping the wheels seems to have been eliminated, though possibly not to the complete satisfaction of the rider, who has to dive head foremost into a bag suspended just at the end of the short journey. But that is not the worst of it. He is compelled to enter the bag with his head down and feet in the air and his wheel bottom side up above him, the latter portion of the trip being taken in that position. As soon as the performer enters the bag it is released from the hangings and swings outward on the suspending rope, the counterbalancing weight on the opposite end of the rope aiding in overcoming the momentum with which the man shoots from the track into the bag.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Powerful Force of Beans.

Anatomists, to separate the bones of a skull, frequently fill it with small beans and place the whole in a basin of water. The beans swell and slowly split the skull. The force which the beans are capable of exerting under these conditions is equal to the average pressure in the boiler of a steam engine.

A HEMP BEE BRUSH.

Discovered in California by an Eastern Man and Considered the Acme of Perfection.

While spending the past season in California with several large and experienced bee-keepers I was taught several valuable lessons. One was the making of a bee-brush that is, in my opinion, the acme of perfection. Take 20 inches of one-inch hemp rope; double together, and bind with stray threads of hemp or foundation-wire to the length of four inches, for a hnadle; then fray out the ends of your rope and soak it half an hour in water, and you have a brush that will neither disable a bee nor mar in the least the cappings. When dirty, or daubed with honey, you can wash and wring dry, like any cloth. I have used both whisk and hemp brushes in the management of 500 colonies of bees, and I would not use any other but the home-made article. By the pressure of your thumb you can regulate the width of your brush so as to cover a Langstroth frame at one stroke. You can credit Mr. C. I. Graham, of California, with the above method, for he is the gentleman who taught me.—George Herrick, in Bee Gleanings.

AN IDEAL BEE BRUSH.

PRODUCTION OF EGGS.

Interesting Experiment to Compare the Value of Different Grains for the Purpose Named.

Some interesting results have been obtained by the technical instruction committee of the Cornwall common council, of England, in an experiment to compare the value of different grains for egg production. Thirty pullets were selected and divided into six pens of five birds each. The nature of the food given to each pen of five pullets and the number of eggs laid is shown in the statement below:

Food.	No. eggs laid in 12 months.
Half maize and half oats	732
Wheat	723
Maize	648
Two-thirds oats and one-third maize	633
Oats	546
Barley	447

The inferiority of oats as a whole ration or even when constituting the major part of it is very marked in these result. Wheat gave much the best results of any single food, while, with the chicken as with all other stock, a mixture of grains gives larger yields than any one single grain. We think very likely the failure to make a better showing on oats alone was due to the fact that the hull makes this such a bulky feed that the hens could not secure sufficient nutriment to make a large egg yield possible.

WITH THE BEEKEEPERS.

Strong colonies protect themselves against robbers and bee-moths.

In rendering beeswax, use a tin, brass or copper vessel. An iron one will darken it.

In making candy to feed bees be careful not to burn it. Burnt candy will kill them.

In France, according to government figures, for the ten years ending with 1901, the average number of colonies was 1,608,412; honey per colony 10 pounds, 11 ounces; wax per colony three pounds.

Rainwater is the right thing to use in melting wax. Well water, especially that where yellow clay or red sand abounds in the soil, contains iron, and this browns the wax, no matter how carefully the melting be done.

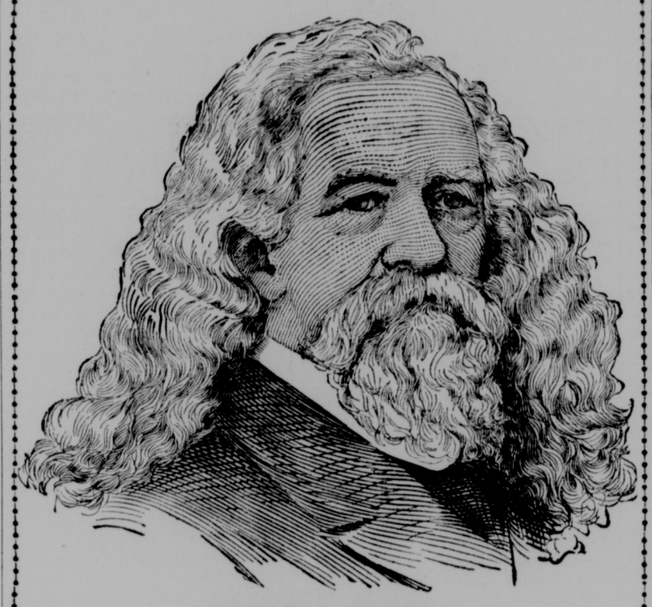
Dr. C. C. Miller says in Gleanings that heretofore the largest yield he ever got from one colony was 192 sections, but last year he got 300 sections from one colony, with a number of other colonies yielding nearly as well. He credits these large yields to the selection of the best stores to breed from, and to the phenomenal flow of white clover, which the bees stored until nearly mid-October.

Feed and Color of Meat.

The appearance of the feed on the color and appearance of poultry meat is of sufficient importance to require careful attention. If the market demands a noticeably white meat and skin in its dressed poultry, the cheapest and surest way to attain this is to use much skim-milk in the diet. The grain ration should be mixed with it, and the drinking vessels constantly provided with a fresh supply. It will require extra good care to keep the fowls healthy on this diet, however. If a yellowish tinge is desired, it may be obtained by feeding a grain ration to which ten per cent. of animal meat has been added, and the whole mixed with water. A grain mixture wet with whey will also give good results.—Prairie Farmer.

A COMRADE OF GENERAL GRANT

Says: "I Do Not Believe Pe-ru-na Has a Superior for Catarrh."



BENJAMIN F. HAWKES.

Benjamin F. Hawkes, of Washington, D. C., Is One of the Three Living Comrades of General Grant in His Cadet Days at West Point.

In a recent letter from 611 G street, S. W., Washington, D. C., this venerable gentleman says of Peruna:

"I have tried Peruna after having tried in vain other remedies for catarrh, and I can say without reservation that I never felt a symptom of relief until I had given Peruna the simple trial that its advocates advise. I do not believe it has a superior, either as a remedy for catarrh or as a tonic for the depressed and exhausted condition which is one of the effects of the disease."
—Benjamin F. Hawkes.

ISAAC BROCK, a citizen of McLennan county, Texas, has lived for 114 years. In speaking of his good health and extreme old age, Mr. Brock says:

"Peruna exactly meets all my requirements. It protects me from the evil effects of sudden changes; it keeps me in good appetite; it gives me strength; it keeps my blood in good circulation. I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine.

"When epidemics of la grippe first began to make their appearance in this country I was a sufferer from this disease.

"I had several long sieges with the grip. At first I did not know that Peruna was a remedy for this disease. When I heard that la grippe was epidemic catarrh, I tried Peruna for la grippe, and found it to be just the thing."—Isaac Brock.

Pe-ru-na Used in the Family for Years.

Mrs. E. West, 137 Main street, Menasha, Wis., writes: "We have used Peruna in our family for a number of years and when I say that it is a fine medicine for catarrh and colds, I know what I am talking about. I have taken it every spring and fall for four years and I find that it keeps me robust, strong, with splendid appetite, and free from any illness. A few years ago it cured me of catarrh of the stomach, which the doctors had pronounced incurable. I am very much pleased with Peruna. I am 87 years old."—Mrs. E. West.

Pe-ru-na is a Catarrhal Tonic Especially Adapted to the Declining Powers of Old Age.

In old age the mucous membranes become thickened and partly lose their function.

This leads to partial loss of hearing, smell and taste, as well as digestive disturbances.

Peruna corrects all this by its specific operation on all the mucous membranes of the body.

One bottle will convince anyone. Once used and Peruna becomes a life-long stand-by with old and young.

Mrs. F. E. Little, Tolona, Ill., writes: "I can recommend Peruna as a good medicine for chronic catarrh of the stomach and bowels. I have been troubled severely with it for over a year, and also a cough. Now my cough is all gone, and all the distressing symptoms of catarrh of the stomach and bowels have disappeared. I will recommend it to all as a rare remedy. I am so well I am contemplating a trip to Yellow Stone Park this coming season. How is that for one 71 years old?"

A TRAVELER AT SEVENTY-ONE YEARS OF AGE.

In a later letter she says: "I am only too thankful to you for your kind advice and for the good health that I am enjoying wholly from the use of your Peruna. Have been out to the Yellow Stone National Park and many other places of the west, and shall always thank you for your generosity."—Mrs. F. E. Little.

Strong and Vigorous at the Age of Eighty-eight.

Rev. J. N. Parker, Utica, N. Y., writes: "In June, 1901, I lost my sense of hearing entirely. My hearing had been somewhat impaired for several years, but not so much affected but that I could hold converse with my friends; but in June, 1901, my sense of hearing left me so that I could hear no sound whatever. I was also troubled with severe rheumatic pains in my limbs. I commenced taking Peruna and now my hearing is restored as good as it was prior to June, 1901. My rheumatic pains are all gone. I cannot speak too highly of Peruna, and now when eighty-eight years old can say it has invigorated my whole system."—Rev. J. N. Parker.

Mr. W. B. Schnader, of Terre Hill, Pa., writes:

"I got sick every winter, and had a spell of cold in February, 1899. I could not do anything for almost two months. In December, 1899, I saw one of your books about your remedies. Then I wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice, and he wrote that I should commence the use of Peruna, and how to take care of myself.

"I did not lose one day last winter that I could not tend to my stock. I am sixty-three years old, and I cannot thank you too much for what you have done for me."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

ALABASTINE
the Durable Wall Coating, Won't Rub Off;
WHY?

Because it cements to, and is not stuck on the wall with decaying, animal glue, as are the various so-called "wall finishes," which are kalsomines sold under fanciful names.

You can apply Alabastine.

ALABASTINE

The Only Sanitary and Permanent Wall Coating

ALABASTINE is not a disease-breeding, hot water glue wall finish, furnishing a lodgment and harbor-ground for disease germs; it is a natural, rock-base composition, in white and many exquisitely beautiful tints; in powder form, ready for use by simply mixing with cold water. Anyone can brush it on.

ALABASTINE cements to walls, distroys disease germs and vermin, and never rubs off or scales. Other wall coatings, under fanciful names, and usually mixed with hot water, are unhealthful kalsomines, stuck on the wall with glue, which soon rots, nourishes germs of deadly disease, rubs and scales, spoiling walls, clothing and furniture. When it is necessary to refinish, the old coats must be washed off—an expensive, nasty, disagreeable job, making the rooms damp and unfit to live in.

When walls are once coated with Alabastine, succeeding coats may be applied, year after year, without washing the walls, thus saving great expense and annoyance.

Hot and Cold Water Kalsomines Have No Merit

Some dealers try to sell them, buying them cheap, and trying to sell on Alabastine's demand until such time as their customers learn of the imposition.

THEY ARE WORTHLESS PREPARATIONS

If you cannot buy Alabastine of your hardware, paint or drug dealer, refuse all imitations, and write us. We will tell you where you can get Alabastine without delay, or sell it to you direct. $500.00 GIVEN AWAY. Write for particulars.

WHO WILL VOTE?

In a political procession on the streets of Elkton, in 1888, a Fourth District banner bore the inscription—"No Free Wool." It was learned later that the banner bearer owned four sheep which the dogs had spared him.

A Democratic stump orator of Cecil, asked with much unction—"Who would do the voting, their owner or the four sheep?"

The question was possibly politically pertinent, and carried its own answer.

A case parallel to this, would arise under the proposed grandfather's clause of the new Democratic suffrage plan. John Doe's grandfather may have been in his grave for a generation, and may have been a reputable citizen. The grand son may be the veriest scalawag, with no electoral qualification save that of residence. And yet he will vote.

Who would vote, the worthy grandsire, or the graceless grandson—or as in the other case—the man or the sheep?—Cecil Whig.

THE CARDINAL VS. CHEAP POLITICIANS

In a letter to a negro minister of Baltimore, Cardinal Gibbons has again shown himself a wise and farseeing prelate. Writing of the "Jim-Crow" bills now before the Maryland Legislature, the Cardinal expressed his strong opposition to them and to the spirit actuating them, rightly pointing out that peace and harmony are impossible where such unjust discrimination prevails. To make a whole race suffer for the delinquencies of a few individuals he considers preposterous; and he adds that it is the duty of every member of a community to avoid any action calculated to create bad feeling and to embitter the lot of the less fortunate race. But this danger of racial hatreds, far deepen and more serious than any hitherto existing, is precisely what a cheap politician of the Vardaman, Tillman and Gorman type does not think about. He is concerned only with his own personal advantage. What the future has in store he recks not.

A MOMENTOUS DECISION.

The decision on the Northern Securities case, handed down by the Supreme court Monday, is a matter of momentous interest to the people of the United States. Seldom in the past has a question of such importance to the domestic history of the county been referred to the highest American legal tribunal for decision. The business interests of the country are particularly concerned in the decision; the great mass of the people, however, also have a very considerable interest in it. No American, proud of the republic and zealous of the preservation of its traditions, could look upon such a gigantic scheme of railroad consolidation as Justice Harlan showed would be made possible and feasible by a decision against the Government in Northern Securities case, with indifference.

The decision, as finally rendered, will quite probably have a restraining influence upon the consolidating zeal of certain large financiers who have showed great enthusiasm for the pleasant task of making money out of "merger" promotions in the recent past. As vindicating the ability of the Federal Government under existing laws to handle the "trust question" efficiently and for the best interests of the country, however, the decision can scarcely be regarded in any other light than one favorable to the cause of real conservatism in this country. In the light of Monday's Supreme court decision the alleged inability for the administration to handle the trust question energetically and honestly must seem essentially ridiculous.

It may be that there will prove to be possibilities of temporary disturbance to the business interests of the country in the decision of the Supreme court on the Northrn Securitier case. In the first place, it may frankly be acknowledged that the decision limits the right of a certain class of corporations to do with their property as the holders of a majority of their stock see fit. The rights of property are not to be lightly tampered with by any country which has an eye to the continuance of its people in conditions of prosperity and happiness. There is a point, however, at which a government, for the protection of its own interests and those of its people, is justified in limiting the freedom of action of semi-public corporations of the common carrier type. It was for the protection of its own interests and those of its people, by preventing undue restraint of trade, that the National Government took legal action against the famous Hill-Morgan railway merger in the Northwest.

If pressed to its utmost limits by a thoughtless and radical government the principle which was affirmed by the Supreme court in Monday's decision would probably result in serious disturbance to the business interests of the country. Fortunately, at the present time there is in the White House a man who, although he has been called an "unsafe" President by men who were shouting for Bryan, free silver and anarchy in 1896 and 1900, is in reality, as Elihu Root has well said, the greatest agent for the conservative preservation of the republic's interests in the country today. This is no time for talking of promiscuous measures of repression against all combinations—good and bad—in the thought that the principle applied to the Northern Securities company by the Supreme court might also be applied to them. The present is a time for conservatism, rather than thoughtless radicalism. Nobody, it is safe to say, realizes this fact better than Theodore Roosevelt himself. In bringing suit against the Northwestern merger, the present national administration showed that the old Democratic plea that the party in power was unable or afraid to handle the trust question frankly and fearlessly, was mere self-seeking falsehood. The administration can now well afford to use care in the way in which the argument which killed the Northern Securities company be further directed, in order that the legitimate business interests of the country be saved from any possibility of that chaos and disaster which might follow a too radical pressing of this argument in many directions to the fullest possible limits.

HIGH POLITICS AT ANNAPOLIS.

Good old-time Democratic peanut politics is on top at Annapolis. It is a fine thing to have a three-fourths majority, or thereabout, in each branch of the Legislature. Under these circumstances, what the caucus says "goes," and the caucus says anything that happens to please its fancy. "Any old thing" in the way of political legislation is good enough, provided it looks sufficient reactionary to remind people of the good old days before the flood. Disfranchise the niggers — never mind how. Use the most extreme expedients that any Southern State has resorted to, under pressure of conditions which have never existed in Marylad, and are in no danger of existing here. Give the registrars arbituary power to decide who shall have a vote and who shall not. "Get the window," and don't be at all particular about appearances. What's the use of "catering to the moral sentiment of the community" when we have got everything our own way?

That is the spirit of those who are steering the big Democratic majority in the Legislature during the present session. Whether the people of Maryland will accept the fruits with the same gaiety of spirit with which its its authors are engaged in turning out the crop is a question that still remains to be answered. As a matter of fact, the people have shown, thus far, no overwhelming desire to take a back seat in American political life, and, in spite of the machinery of the extrssession law, did not elect Govenor Warfield by such a majority as to show that they will tamely accept anything the victorious party may choose to pass off upon them. Our Annapolis correspondence today calls attention to the legislation which it is now proposed to enact as a natural corollary to the Poe Constitutional amendment. As that amendent is, of course, expressly intended for the purpose of enabling the Democratic officers of registration to disfranchise Republican voters—white or black, as they please—it won't do to have the registration boards evenly divided between the parties, since the Republican registrars might retaliate. The whole scheme now on the carpet is, therefore, as follows:

Should the Poe amendment be ratified by the voters at the polls, therefore, and the proposed new election law be passed, it will follow that the registration officials, dominated in every precinct in the State by the political party in power, will have the discretionary power to register or decline to register any would-be voter not protected by the grandfather clause; that is, any man who was not a voter in 1869 or who is not the lineal descendant of such a voter.

But as the Poe amendment cannot be adopted until the general election to be held in the fall of 1905, the Democratic managers feel that some provision should be made to cover the Presidential election of next fall and also the occasion when the amendment itself is to be voted upon. To this end, it is understood the present provisions for the make-up of the official ballot would be changed in most important particulars, the principal feature being the ommission of the party designation.

Maryland is to be congratulated on the high political status that is promised for our State through the glorious victory of the grand old Democratic party last fall, the lofty morality which is henceforward to prevail in our elections, and the noble position of influence and importance which this great Commonwealth is hereafter to occupy in the politics of the nation.

DIED.

BISHOP—At his home in Oakland, yesterday morning, after an illness extending over several weeks, James R. Bishop, aged nearly 86 years. Mr. Bishop was a resident of Oakland for nearly half a century, coming here from Kingwood, where he was born and reared and in which latter town he was united in marriage with Miss Adaline Hall. To this union two children were born, a son and daughter. The former was killed by a horse when he was of tender years; the latter is the wife of Mr. Gilmor S. Hamill, of Oakland. In his early days Mr. Bishop followed the trade of saddling and harness making, but later gave this up and entered the entered the mercantile field, in which he was successful and amassed a small fortune. He was a member of the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Bishop survives him. The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon.

SCHULTZ—At his home in Blaine on last Thursday after an illness of several months, Paul Schultz, aged about 32 years. The deceased was born in Germany and was a carpenter by occupation. Several years ago he married the daughter of Mr. William Browning, of near Oakland. He is survived by his wife and one child. The funeral took place Sunday, the services being conducted by the Knights of Pythias of which the deceased was a member.

NETHKEN—At Bethany, Missouri, on Saturday last, after a brief illness of pneumonia, Frances R. Nethken, aged 61 years. The deceased left here about two weeks ago with his family for the purpose of establishing himself on a farm near Bethany which he recently purchased but was taken ill and died as above stated. He leaves a widow and a number of children. The deceased was an ex-Union soldier and a member of Crook Post, No. 35, G. A. R.

Letter To A. Shartzer

Dear Sir: When you can buy paint for less than Devoe; don't; save your money.

Mr. Aaron Higgins, Plainfield, N J, always used 15 gallons of paint for his house; Devoe took 11.

Mr. Ezra Rathmell, Williamsport, Pa, always used 11; Devoe took 6.

Mr. Burt Young, Girard, Pa, always used a gallon for certain rooms; took half as much Devoe.

Mr. Nathaniel Barber, Canton, N Y, bought 12 Devoe; used less than 6.

You can always buy paint for less than Devoe; don't; save your money.

The wearing counts the same way and doubles the difference.

The cost of painting is by the gallon. Weak paint costs most; most gallons.

Yours truly

SUNNYSIDE.

We are anxious for the return of spring, for it is then that our Union Sunday school will reopen. This school has been very interesting and for many years productive of much good on account of the wise management.

The latest development in bug circles in this community is a kissing bug. The bug is not at all young, and it has been suspicioned by some that it belonged to the kissing variety. It was not until recently however, that it gave unmistaken evidence of its kissing qualities by it kissing passionately and promiscuously. It is of the male sex and at times timid while at other times it is fearless and bold beyond the limits of discretion.

Various classes of people come among us some of which attract our attention to some degree while others pass by scarcely noticed but the most attractive perhaps of all is the "heart troubler."

Our friend George Shartzer, Jr., was a pleasant caller at this place on last Sunday. George used to live among us and while here his conduct was such as to make warm and lasting personal friends. George reports that he is going west right on the lick" but says he cant go so far West as to forget the attraction of the East.

Obituary.

Died, at her home near Deer Park, on Saturday, March 12th, inst., after an illness of a few weeks, from a complication of diseases, Mrs. Rebecca Miller, (nee Green), wife of Mr. E. G. Miller, one of our most respected and substantial farmers, living about one mile from Altamont. Mrs. Miller was in her 58th year and leaves surviving her, beside her husband, two sons, one of whom is our fellow townsman, Mr. William B. Miller, and Edward, his brother, who resides near Pittsburg, Pa. Mrs. Miller was a devout member of the U. B. Church for over twenty-five years and her funeral was preached by Rev. Mr. Clary, of Keyser, W. Va., on Monday, 14th inst., in the Lutheran church of this place, where a large congregation had assembled to pay the last sad tribute of respect to this devoted wife, mother and friend. A large number of relatives from Barton and the George's Creek valley attended the funeral. Her remains were interred in the Deer Park cemeterry, beside her mother, who had preceded her to the tomb a few years ago. With our earnest sympathy to the heart-broken husband and motherless sons, we close by saying, peace to her ashes.

E. Z. TOWER.

FOR SALE

At Deer Park, Maryland, Main Line B. & O. R R., 2500 Feet Above Tidewater, a Country Place of about 185 Acres.

Thoroughly equipped as a farm and bounded by three county roads, insuring convenience and privacy. It is well adapted to public use such as a sanatorium or to private residences, five sites with beautiful views and appurtenant acres, being reached by its three miles of private pleasure drives through the woods.

The dwelling house was built from plans by Hewitt Bros., of Philadelphia. The plumbing is by Ogelsby, of the same city. It has recently been put in complete order and repainted, and is replete with the modern appliances of a gentleman's residence. It is within ten minutes' walk of postoffice and railroad station and within one mile of the Deer Park Hotel. Its general plan is as follows:

Wide porches surround three faces, terminated, on a level, with billiard room.

I. FIRST FLOOR. Parlor, hall with main stair case, library, dining room and lavatory.

II. BACK BUILDING. Stair case to cellar, in which are furnace, gas machine (supplied by outside gasometer), wine closet, pantry (hot and cold water), back stairs to second story back building. Laundry—3 stationary tubs, hot and cold water in each; ironing stove, fire hose on reel and special boiler. Kitchen, with range, sink and all applicances. Back porch, ten feet from which is ice house practically inexhaustible in summer; servants' bath room, etc.

I. SECOND FLOOR. Two communicating chambers, with bath room; one chamber communicating with its bath room; one chamber communicating with its bath room; total, four chambers with three bath rooms.

II. BACK BUILDING, 2nd FLOOR. Four chambers, two closets, bath room with W. C. adjoining.

THIRD FLOOR. Two chambers, two large lofts.

Every room has gas fixture and eight rooms have open fire-places in addition to furnace registers.

The water supply is unexceptionable, its every source being from springs rising within the confines of the place and all having passed analytical examination. Two tanks (each in contact with outside air) having a combined capacity of 14,500 gallons, a wind mill a horse power and an overshot wheel supplying the motor. Three dams (likewise spring water) contribute the ice supply and two of them are stocked with fish. The out buildings are a barn with stalls for six horses and eight carriages, with ample storage for hay, straw and oats and having a coachman's room, a tenant's house of five rooms, a large cow and sheep stable and numerous sheds, etc.

This property is without incumberance and possession can be given in June, 1904.

PERFECT
Poultry and Garden Fence.

For some time we have been arranging with the factory to manufacture a SPECIAL POULTRY FENCE, one that could be used for fencing gardens, and strong enough, if necessary, to keep out horses, cattle and hogs.

After a careful study as to the requirements, they have designed and built close enough to turn little chickens. It is not a netting, understand, but a good, substantial fence, and made of galvanized steel wire the smallest of which are heavier than the wire used by most fence builders for a regular fence. It is made after the style of our electrically welded field fencing, put up in 10 rod rolls, 3, 4 and 5 feet high, and can be sold at a small advance over the ordinary poultry netting.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
OAKLAND, MD., March 8th, 1904.

MESSRS. J. M. DAVIS & SONS,
Oakland, Md.

Gentlemen:—When I built my house, I had it painted with F. W. Devoe & Co.'s paint, and I am very well satisfied with the results. While the paint is a little higher in price, it takes fewer gallons and is cheaper in the end.

I do not hesitate to recommend it to any one.

Very truly yours,
R. E. SLIGER, Cashier.

J. M. DAVIS & SONS, Oakland, Md.

Gentlemen:—After a year's wear, the Devoe & Co.'s paint bought of you for the purpose of painting my house, has proven perfectly satisfactory. It was also used by us in painting the The First National Bank building, and gave good satisfaction.

THREE CHILDSEN POISONED.

Candy, Highly Colored, Which They Ate, Supposed to be Cause.

Three of the children of Mr. and Mrs. William Thrasher, of Deer Park, aged respectively eight, six and one and one-half years, experienced a narrow escape from death by poison on last Saturday, and it was only by the heroic efforts made by the physician, Dr. McComas, that their lives were saved.

It is thought the children became inoculated with the poison by eating a quantity of candy which was highly colored, in the composition of which arsenic was largely used.

The children were all made extremely sick but they are now out of danger and will recover.

Senator Palmer came up to Oakland from Annapolis last Friday night and spent the intervening time between that and Monday evening visiting his family and interviewing those interested in proposed legislation at the State Capital.

Farmers have accomplished but little so far in outdoor work. The ground has been in no condition to plow even on steep hillsides and therefore farming operations are slow. Many of our agricultural friends have their plans well matured and will push things with all possible despatch when spring does arrive.

There are plenty of fresh vegetables in the market but the prices asked stagger the average housekeeper. Green peas and beans are forty cents half-peck; tomatoes, five cents each; cabbage five cents per pound, and other things in proportion. Strawberries have not yet appeared though they are selling in Baltimore and Washington markets at 25 to 30 cents per box.

Cashier Scott T. Jones and his family vacated the upper floor of the Garrett National Bank building on Second street this week, by moving all their houshold effects to the Commercial Hotel property on the same street, which was purchased by Mr. Jones some months ago and upon which extensive improvements have been made.

Messrs. J. M. Davis & Sons, the Oakland hardware and paint merchants, are doing some very effective advertising in these columns and also by well prepared circulars setting forth the merits of different lines they carry in stock. Read the advertisements they are running in these columns at present and patronize them if you want any of their goods.

Here is something worth knowing: When a splinter has been driven deeply into the hand it can be extracted with out pain by steam. Nearly fill a widemouth bottle with hot water; place the injured part over the mouth and press tightly. The suction will draw the flesh down and in a minute or two the steam will extract the splinter and the inflammation together.

A letter received Tuesday morning from Congressman Pearre states that he has sent an order to the Agricultural Department for a consignment of garden seeds to be delivered to this office for distribution among the subscribers and friends of this paper. Our out-of-town patrons should notify us at once of their wants in this particular so that they can receive a supply which will be sent without expense.

Mr. Wallace W. Mitchell, of Waterville, Washington, brother of Messrs. John T. and Edwin L. Mitchell, of Oakland, was here last week for a few days visiting his relatives, going to Listonburg, Pa., Monday where he will make a visit to his mother for a week or two before returning to his Western home. Mr. Mitchell served in the Philippines three years and returning to his native country went to Alaska where he remained two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Creutzberg who resided here three or four years, left Oakland yesterday morning for Cleveland O., from which point they will depart shortly for the West. Their future location has not yet been determined by them. Mr. Creutzberg may go to Honolulu or to Alaska this summer, he is undecided yet which. Wherever they may go the good wishes of their many friends in Oakland will follow them.

VIA THE USUAL ROUTE

Three Prisoners Escaped from the Jail Here Friday Morning.

Jail deliveries in Oakland are getting to be somewhat of an ordinary occurrence and latterly create but little or no comment, owing to their frequency. The jail officials, however, are not held responsible for these happenings as the prison is in such a deplorable state that it is not a question of how long those confined will be kept therein but how soon after they are imprisoned will they make their escape.

The three men who took French leave Friday morning between five and six o'clock were tramps arrested a few days previous for trespassing upon the property of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, the arrests being made at the pumping station here. The cells being filled by other prisoners the Sheriff was compelled to arrange cots outside the cages for the accommodation of these men. Sometime during the night they succeeded in digging or kicking a hole through the rear wall of the jail building and crawled through, thus making good their escape.

Had the rest of the prisoners been outside the cages the probabilities are that the jail would have been emptied. There yet remain ten prisoners awaiting trial at the March term which convenes on Monday.

In Memoriam.

Death is sad at any time, even when it comes and takes away the old who have lived their "three score years and ten," but when it comes and takes the strong, young man, just starting out in life with a young wife of only a few years of married life, it is doubly sad. Yet such was fully realized when train No. 8 on Monday morning brought home the mangled remains of Albert J. King, son of Emanuel D. King, of near Deer Park. Deceased came to his untimely end on March 5th, at Yellow Creek Bridge No. 55 on the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad in Ohio, by the bridge giving way and deceased and five others were instantly hurled into Eternity. Funeral services were held in the Lutheran church on Monday at 3 p. m., by the pastor, Rev. E. Manges, from the appropriate text—"Truly as the Lord liveth and as thy Soul liveth there is a step between Me and death." This Godly man gave a touching and pathetic account of the friendship of David and Jonathan that called forth the memorable words of the text, and he applied it with such force on this sad occasion that tears came from eyes unused to weep in the large audience present, who had come out on this inclement day to pay the last tribute of respect to a young man they had known from infancy. Deceased leaves a young wife and son about one year old. The widow is a daughter of Mr. Warnick, one of our respected citizens. Words seem to fail us when we most need them to express our sympathy to the bereaved wife and orphaned and fatherless child, but knowing well, from an earthly standpoint, that she has a kind father, mother and two brothers who will ever shelter her from a selfish world but to that one "who sticketh closer than a brother" we would commend her in this the saddest hour of her young life.

And to the father, mother, brothers and sisters of this eldest son, cut down in the strength of his young manhood, words fail us in expressing our heartfelt sympathy; but we hope your loss will be his Eternal gain, and if so, you may all meet in a home beyond the stars.

Albert J. King was born Sept. 28, 1879, and died March 5, 1904, aged 24 years, 6 months and 7 days, and was tenderly laid to rest in the Deer Park cemetery under the management of George J. Walter. The following gentlemen, all close friends of deceased, acted, as pall-peareress: James W. Walter, William Jankey, Joseph H. McRobie, Phillip Hess, Wilfred Chadderton and C. R. Savedge.

The church altar was tastefully decorated with potted flowers, by the young ladies who had been schoolmates of Mrs. King, and the music so appropriate to the occasion was rendered by Mrs. E. F. Droege, assisted by the young ladies' choir of this church.

MRS. CHARLES PAUL.

Frances Friend, daughter of R. E. and Sarah A. Friend, was born near Friendsville Garrett County, Md., on August 30, 1880. She was converted when a little girl and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which she remained a consistent member until called from earth. She was married to Charles Paul on Jan. 26, 1902, and died at their home near Hileman Ridge church, of typhoid fever, March 5, 1904. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, and her remains were buried in the family graveyard near Addison Pa., to await the Archangel's call in the resurrection morn.

She leaves a husband, an infant daughter, and a large circle of other near friends to mourn her loss.

"We loved her on earth, we'll meet her in heaven."

THE CONVERSION OF BIG SIX

By S. B. HACKLEY

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

THE "big meeting" at the schoolhouse "up the creek" was getting in full swing—the preacher, or preachers, for there were volunteer Gospel expounders in plenty, every night exhorted loud and long—the wildest and most reckless among the young negroes wept and trembled in their seats, excitement ran high, and the conversions were many and real.

Jordon Dangerfield, the ring leader of the reckless, was a conspicuous example of the unconverted among the men. No word of argument, no appeal of song, had yet brought him to the "mourner's bench." "Big Six," whose real name was Rachel Curd, was the one woman against whom stones of persuasion and pleading were thrown in vain.

Rachel weighed 300 pounds, and as she boasted she could do the work of a half dozen women, she was more often called by the appellation of "Big Six" than by her rightful name. Jordon was the beau of the county; he was not only the most fascinating among the negro youth, but his ability to make money was greatest. In the hemp-breaking season his nightly bale outweighed any other hand's—in corn cutting time he could cut more corn by day and dance longer by night than any other.

Many a wistful eye was turned toward Jordon, but his heart inclined toward Judy Gates—good little Judy, whose eyes spoke perpetual worship and appeal. She did not care for Jordon's money-making ability—it was Jordon himself, big, black and strapping, that Judy loved as a creature Heaven-sent.

Latterly, however, Rachel Curd had concluded that a combination of Jordon's financial ability and her own would be a fine thing, and she proceeded to "cut out" poor Judy.

She joined herself to the crowd of young people who nightly passed by Judy's humble home on their way to the "meetin'," and she contrived to get Jordon's arm within her own before they reached the cabin, and to rush him along so rapidly, and so flatter his mind with her wily compliments that he forgot even to glance toward the window where Judy was waiting, and there was nothing for poor Judy to do but to creep humbly to "meetin'" in the wake of the gay crowd, with no other escort than "pap" or "mammy."

The meeting went on—while Judy wept and prayed for the salvation of her recreant lover, Rachel further installed herself in Jordon's favor by agreeing with him in his rejection of the Good Tidings. If he mocked the converted, she mocked harder; if he laughed at their entreaties, she laughed louder. Gentle, shrinking Judy, soft-voiced and patient, was no match for Rachel's bluster, and Jordon seemingly entirely won away, was no longer to be sought by Six. He did the seeking now, and accompanied her to the meeting every evening.

The Dotys, Judy's "white folks," had company at the "house." Thus it happened that one Saturday morning when the meeting was well on toward its twentieth night, a big "wash" was set down at Judy's mother's door. When Jordon Dangerfield, en route to the Doty hay fields, passed the cabin, a sound of mighty rubbing fell on his ears. Some memory of the happy times he had passed under the little "leanto," before Rachel Curd had lured him away, came to him, and he paused to look through the hollyhocks at the small woman bent over the tubs.

As he surreptitiously watched the tears that now and then fell on the Doty baby's lace-trimmed white dress, and noted how thin poor Judy's small face had become since the meeting had begun, his heart burned with shame, and presently he was standing by the wash bench with the words: "Judy, kin I hab de honuh o' 'scortin' you tuh de meetin' to-night?" on his lips.

Judy looked up with a start.

"Why—why—Jordon," she stammered, "I—I— Does you rale'y want me go wid you?"

The chains with which Rachel Curd had bound Jordon fell away under the power of Judy's look of reproachful love, and when he found himself treading the dusty road again, his thoughts were as far from Rachel as they were from the hay fork on his shoulder.

A suppressed titter went round that evening, as, accompanied by a female friend only, Big Six, in second-hand finery of wine-colored silk and white-plumed leghorn, came in the schoolhouse and took a seat just behind Jordon and Judy. Judy, in her best dress, a hard-earned and many times washed white swiss, was serenely happy, and all unconscious of the glance that boded no good that fell on her from the weighty Rachel.

"Look at Big Six!" whispered one young wench to another. "Lawd, I wouldn' let losin' uh beau put me in de sulks!"

"I 'clah, she look lak' she mournin'—mebbe she gwine come th'oo to-night!" said the other, derisively.

It proved to be an unusually tumultuous meeting. The "mourner's bench," recently lengthened by the addition of three new benches, filled up. The air became fervid. High above the songs of the younger ones could be heard the happy shouts of the elders; the invitation hymn was sung again and again, and while it rolled upward in melody—unctious, strong—a long-drawn murmur of surprise checked the voices. Big Six had risen and was making her way to the mourner's bench!

A greater wave of excitement swept over the throng; a keen-voiced negress changed the song,

"Ol' Satan thought he had me fas',
But I has broke his chains—I'm free at las'!"

As the congregation took up the refrain the saints all over the house shouted anew in their joy. Some reeled in their excitement and fell over the benches—not a few rolled on the floor in joyful frenzy, and near the door four men were compelled to hold a slim matron to prevent her from overturning the fireless stove and injuring herself in her excitement.

Suddenly Rachel flung up her hands, and her call could be heard above the loudest shouts of the multitude.

"Glory! Glory! Gimme de glory! I'se convince' o' my ongodly deeds. Gimme de glory now!"

"Come on, friends an' gib de hand to de penitent ones!" cried the preacher, and the crowd surged toward the mourner's bench. Rachel stood quiet, her eyes glazed and rolling, evidently unconscious of those who clasped her hands, but when Judy stood in front of her, she was apparently seized with another paroxism of joy.

"COME ON, FRIENDS, AN' GIB DE HAND TO DE PENITENT ONES!"

"Glory!" she shouted, plunging forward, "I got de glory now!" With one hand she struck off Judy's cherished straw sailor and trampled it under her feet. With the other, she gave one mighty jerk, and the white swiss waist was hanging from Judy's trembling shoulders.

"Glory! Glory! I'se boun' fuh Glory now!" she ejaculated, and with lightning rapidity her fat hand dealt a blinding blow in the face of her unfortunate rival. Then lowering her head, like a charging bull, Six literally butted screaming Judy out of the open side door and stamped her disheveled body before the confused negroes realized what she was doing.

Jordon leaped to the rescue, and while willing hands pulled off Six, he lifted the limp and helpless Judy, whose torn dress was dyed with the crimson tide that crept from her maltreated nose. The meeting broke up in confusion. Those who rejoiced most over the apparent conversion of Big Six were loudest in condemnation of her method of announcing it.

"Don' b'lieve dat nig ubbah thought o' bein' converted—she jes' hypocrited to git chanst to hurt Judy!"

This was the universal verdict loudly proclaimed.

Next day Jordon sat by Judy's bedside, his face a map of contrition and anxiety.

"Ef you'll jes' say you kin fuhgive me fuh cotein' dat wicked creetuh, Judy," he whispered, "I'll nubbah ask nothin' else o' you whilst I live!"

Judy looked at him with a little gasp of apprehension.

"I sho' thought you'd ask me marry you now, Jordon!" she said, with a sob in her voice.

"Oh, Judy, darlin', I nubbuh thought I'd dast!" cried Jordon, bending over her with a face full of surprise and delight.

"Kin you mek up yoah mine to marry me ahftuh all whut's happent?"

And Judy answered, happily: "I sho kin!"

A MOTHER'S ROUND.

'Tis a busy round, ah me!
From the dusky of early light,
When the "fairy prince" bids slumber flee,
To the welcome, bounteous night;
For the "fairy prince" and all the rest
Must be warmed and fed, and taught and dressed,
And the house kept fair for my lord to see:
'Tis a busy round, ah me!

'Tis a weary round, ah me!
The pitiless plow of care
Is cleaving furrows sad to see
In a face that once was fair;
And often, alas! there comes a frown,
When the baby pulls the dishes down
And the "fairy prince" goes mad with glee;
'Tis a weary round, ah me!

'Tis a blessed round, ah me!
For the bloom of youth and health
Is on each sweet mouth that kisses me,
And their love is a mine of wealth;
And the "fairy prince" and all the rest
Are safe within home's sheltered nest,
And sorrow moans not through the old roof-tree:
'Tis a blessed round, ah me!

—C. E. Medbery, in Farm Journal.

Difference in Methods.

There is in London only one professorship of Sanskrit, and it is unendowed, says the Church Quarterly Review, while in Germany there are 20 endowed Sanskrit chairs, and yet it is England, not Germany, which is responsible for the welfare of the people of India.

The Eye.

The globe of the eye is moved by six muscles. The wrist contains eight bones, the palm five, the fingers 14. The roots of the hair penetrate the skin about one-twelfth of an inch. Hair is very strong. A single hair will bear a weight of about 1,150 grains.

ADOPT AMERICAN METHODS.

Manufacturers, Farmers and the German People in General Are Taking to Our Ideas

A query frequently raised by the German press is how American manufacturers paying wages at least twice as high as are paid in Germany, are able, in many cases, to produce their wares cheaper than they can be produced here.

The solution of this question is certainly before the German manufacturer as never before. He sees that the cheaper raw material and boundless natural resources of the United States furnish only a partial answer, and that the real solution is to be found in a manufacturing system that rejects traditional methods—a system the keynote of which is to lessen the cost of production; that consigns a machine to the scrap pile as soon as a better one is to be had, and in turn consigns that one to the scrap pile when occasion demands—a system that offers a constant incentive to each man connected with the manufacturing plant to bring out the best that is in him.

The advantages of such a system have been again and again referred to by the German press during the past year. It will undoubtedly be the standard toward which, in the future, the German manufacturer in all lines will strive. He has already accomplished much in this direction. How rapidly and to what extent he may further advance remains to be seen. He will have the advantages of a widely diffused technical training among the German people, the product of a flexible school system which readily adapts itself to the needs of manufacturing and commerce; workmen who specialize easily and who are patient in the mastery of details. In some cases he will perhaps be hampered by the tendency of an academically trained class in a shop to discourage the advancement of those not so trained.

Whatever change of scope or method may occur in the future of German manufacturing, without question the United States will be the model whose methods will be chiefly studied and whose machinery will continue most in demand. Our manufacturers should be able to show that their machinery offered for sale here embodies the latest improvements. If the fact can be demonstrated by actual experience that certain classes of machinery cheapen the cost of production 15, 25 or 50 per cent. over other machinery now in use, that fact will more than ever before commend such machinery in this market. The exact conditions as to skill of workmen, hours of labor, etc., under which such reductions of cost are made should be clearly stated, but not overstated.

No intelligent observer in this part of Germany can fail to have noticed the recent changes in methods and appliances that have been going on in every department of business as well as in other fields.

Farm machinery is rapidly taking the place of hand implements. In a small area of southwestern Germany the number of American farm implements sold each year runs well up into the thousands, showing how the scythe and the sickle are giving way to the mower and the harvester. Modern creamery appliances have gone into every cattle-raising locality. Wood-working and iron-working machinery are forcing hand work to the rear. Hotel elevators—scarcely to be found at all a few years ago—are now used in all the better German hotels. It is but a few years since large apartment houses, with handsome stone fronts, had neither steam heat nor modern sanitary plumbing. Now all such houses are supplied with both. The German porcelain heating stove bids fair to disappear before the heater and the base-burner.

The suburban dwelling house, standing apart with large yard and garden, is a modern innovation in many parts of Germany. A half dozen years ago Mannheim had scarcely a single one. To-day it has dozens of them, costing from $10,000 to $25,000 each.

In footwear, in American fashion plates in tailor shops and American patterns in dry goods stores, in the use of oatmeal and other breakfast foods, in the popularity of grill rooms and grill-room cooking, in the use of rocking-chairs (now offered for sale in every first-class furniture store), in an entire revolution of dentistry and dental appliances, in the increasing popularity of life insurance among well-to-do business men, and in countless other things are to be seen the changes that are taking place.

H. W. HARRIS.

Our Sulphate of Copper in Austria.

The demand for sulphate of copper is decreasing, and the receipts fell from about 36 metric tons in 1901 to 22.4 tons in 1902. The imports from the United States constitute about 70 per cent. of the whole, viz. 15.4 tons. American packing of sulphate of copper has improved, but is still far from being as satisfactory as the British. I believe it would pay our exporters to adopt for foreign shipments the hard-wood barrel. Such barrels would not only be much less likely to burst open during the voyage, but would sell in Austria, when emptied, for more than their cost, while soft-wood barrels can be used only for kindling. It might, at the same time, be advisable to reduce the size of the barrel. For shipments to the interior Trieste importers are compelled to repack the American article, using for this purpose a barrel containing only 550 pounds, on account of the greater convenience in loading and unloading.

Pearls and Owner Buried.

Two superb pearls of world-wide fame have disappeared from circulation. They belonged to the late Princess Mathilde Bonaparte, were worn by her as earrings and at her express request were buried with her. Some day they may be recovered from her triple coffins, but then they, too, will be dead, for pearls also die just as if endowed with life.

A BICYCLE PROPOSAL

BY JOHN WICKLIFFE GRAY.

Until that summer I had never believed that I was a timid man. But the happenings of a few weeks led me to the conclusion that I had my share and more.

A girl with blue eyes did it. As in most cases where a man has found himself face to face with himself, it was a woman who held the mirror.

It was the old story of scouting at love until I met the one girl, and then I wanted to propose. But what with the doubts that assailed me as to the probable reception of a proposal, and my new-born timidity, I could never gather together sufficient courage at the proper time to give expression to the thoughts that kept me awake at night. I carefully formulated plan after plan to rid my mind of its burden, but one after another they came to naught through my disgusting shyness—cowardice, if you will. I am half inclined to believe that Beatrice knew my condition all the time. But she had a keen sense of humor, and I dreaded that silvery laughter more than a whole regiment of regulars. She could grow serious in a moment, and it was this mood I liked best. But, until that sunny day, when my bicycle helped me through, I had always missed the point. It lacked but four days of my departure from the springs, and I knew to delay might mean to fail altogether.

Delay and defeat were the words that hummed through my brain like a sprocket wheel as we spun down the lane that morning. We were out after an early breakfast, and on that short journey a-wheel I had determined to throw all my chances in the balance and find their intrinsic worth. Just how I was going to begin I had not determined, and I thought that for once I would leave the matter open for the seizure of the first opportunity.

The morning air was crisp and cool. The roadside flowers seemed nodding us a cheery good morning in the light breeze. Now and then from the trees came the call of a bird, and, making a shiny black streak in the air, a crow would bend his flight to a lonely tree in the fields, calling to his mate. Once a rabbit watched us from down the lane with what I imagined was a quizzical expression, and when we had come quite close, sped through the underbrush with the rattle of a dry twig.

Bee and I had said little until we reached the broad pike.

"Want to race?" she called back to me from her point of vantage a few lengths ahead. Now I knew what that meant. Bee was the better rider, for instead of taking a course of indoor physical culture she had adopted golf, tennis and a bicycle as the most enjoyable method of obtaining exercise and health.

"Trying to tease," I said. "But go ahead. I'll do my best. Want to bet anything?"

"No, not when I am certain of the result," she laughed.

I grinned appreciation and asked: "How far?"

"The two mile post," she cried, and we were off.

Bee sprinted, and so did I. But the distance between us remained about the same, and precluded conversation, even had not the pace attained the same end.

Soon the sprockets were singing a steady song to pebbles that spun backward from the rubber tires. We were running at 20 miles an hour down the best piece of road in the section.

I settled to a steady speed, not quite my best, and Bee did the same, saving strength for the last half mile. The wind whistled a merry tune to the time we kept with our pedals. A covey of partridges fled with sharp chirps at our whirlwind advance. I felt and noticed little else beside the trim figure, with flying wisps of brown hair, just ahead of me.

Of a sudden Bee began to draw ahead of me.

"Put your heart into the game," she called back to me, with her head half turned as she spoke. She was laughing out of pure enjoyment of the exercise, and perhaps my probable discomfiture. My pride was nettled, and it must have increased my strength to a considerable degree. Soon I was close behind her, and with the wheels buzzing like mad things, I was even. One more spurt, and by a tremendous effort I was ahead!

"Get your hand in the game," I called back, paraphrasing her own slang. "My heart and your hand," I added by the force of an inspiration, "a match race!"

The second mile post was not more than a hundred yards ahead, and I was beginning to believe I should win. I had no time to look back, fearing a loss of my little gain.

But neither was to have the victory. Bee's front wheel advanced slowly, but surely, until it was even with my handle-bars, and as we arrived opposite the post, we were side by side.

It was a tie!

"You got your hand in," I laughed later under the trees where we were seated.

"Yes," she agreed.

"And my whole heart was in it," I added, cautiously.

The blue eyes looked into mine and seemed to read what was there. And then in the fear that my shyness would return, I said quickly, incoherently:

"Your hand, my heart, a match, the tie—Bee—" and—

Well, our bicycle will accompany us on the honeymoon, even though it be as excess baggage.

A Horrible Probability.

The American novelists at the front in Asia are not being heard from with any regularity, and there is a horrible suspicion on the part of the newspapers which are paying their expenses that they may be writing historical romances instead of forwarding the news.

Practicing Physicians recognize the unfailing reliability of Doan's Kidney Pills by Prescribing them for Backache, Kidney, Bladder and Urinary Disorders—a tribute won by no other Proprietary Medicine. Four cases cited from "Notes of His Practice," by Dr. Leland Williamson, of Yorktown, Ark.

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., Buffalo, N. Y. YORKTOWN, ARK., Mar. 1, 1904.

Gentlemen:—I have been engaged in the practice of medicine in this section for ten years. This is a very sickly climate, on the Bayou Bartholomew, near the Arkansas River. It is particularly malarious and miasmatic; we meet with many and various abnormal conditions of the human family, prominent among the cases in which I have been called upon to prescribe is kidney disease. Many of these disorders manifest themselves by pains in the back, often extending to other parts of the body; sometimes headache is present, caused by uræmic or chronic uric acid poisoning, soreness in region of kidneys, cloudy, thickened and foul-smelling urine, discharges of pus or corruption; inflammation of the kidneys, extending to the bladder, is caused by excess of uric acid and decomposition of urine. Hemorrhage is sometimes met with, caused by high state of inflammation or congestion.

There is no class of diseases a doctor is called oftener to treat than the variety of kidney diseases, in many of which the patient will have chills or rigors, followed by fever, a result of the kidneys failing to eliminate the uric acid poison from the system. Such cases require the kidneys restored to their natural functions, then the poison and foreign substances are removed—shock to the nervous system averted, and natural health restored.

I have, for some time, been using Doan's Kidney Pills in these many manifestations and with uniform success, curing most cases. I can further say that even in hopeless cases where they have waited too long, Doan's Kidney Pills afford much relief and prolong life. I can recommend the pills in conditions of excessive or deficient secretion of urine, as also in convalescence from swamp-fever and malarial attacks, as verified by the following cases in my practice.

CASE 1.

THOS. ORELL, Bear, Ark., age 60. Pain in back for several weeks, then chills, irregular sometimes, severe rigors, followed by fever. Gave good purgative of calomel and padoph, and Doan's Kidney Pills. After taking four boxes of the pills, patient up and enjoying good health for one of his age.

CASE 2.

MRS. SMITH, Tarry, Ark., age 29, mother of four children. Had female complaint and kidney trouble, manifest by pain in back and urine irregular; sometimes very clear, changing to cloudy, and with much sediment on standing in chamber. Gave local treatment for female complaint and prescribed Doan's Pills; after using six boxes she regards herself as cured.

CASE 3.

BROWN EAKS, Wynne, Ark., age 21, had severe case of malarial hœmataria, or swamp fever. Gave necessary liver medicine, calomel and padoph, and morph.-sulph., to relieve pain, and ordered Doan's Pills for the high state of congestion and inflammation of the kidneys. Recovery resulted in two weeks. Prescribed Doan's Kidney Pills, to be continued until the kidneys were thoroughly strengthened and all pain in back subsided.

CASE 4.

ELIJAH ELLIOTT, Tarry, Ark., age 34. Pain in back and legs and headache. Uric-acid poisoning. Prescribed Doan's Kidney Pills. After taking several boxes pain subsided—urine became normal, or natural, and patient able to resume his work.

These are a few of the typical cases in which I have used Doan's Kidney Pills. In a great many instances I use them alone with curative results, while with some others indicated remedies are associated.

I believe that by the judicious use of Doan's Pills many serious complications are arrested and many hopeless and incurable cases of Bright's disease prevented.

I have often found that one box of the pills is all that is required to effect a cure, but in some cases I continue their use until all symptoms are entirely absent and the cure effectual and permanent. Yours truly,

Dr. Leland Williamson.

HOW HE WAS SAVED.

Influence Exerted by the Plain Talk of a Young Woman on a Railroad Train.

While traveling over one of our western roads in company with a man whom in former years I knew to be given to drink, but was now an active temperance worker, I asked him how he was led to give up the drink. In reply he said:

"Four years ago I got on to a train on this very road, and, to say the least, I was beastly drunk. I really don't know how I got into a seat, but I did. I had been drinking pretty heartily with the boys, and having what we termed a glorious time. At the very next station a young lady came into the car, and for some reason or other selected the seat with me.

"'May I sit here?' she asked.

"'Certainly,' I replied; then turned my face toward the window, hoping by so doing to hide the fact that I had been drinking.

"The train had scarcely got into motion when the young lady fairly took my breath away by asking: 'Do you ever go to church?'

"'Not very often,' I replied.

"'Why don't you?' she said.

"I didn't answer her; I couldn't. And she continued:

"'Are your people living, and have you any sisters?'

"'Yes,' I said.

"'Do they belong to the church?'

"'My mother and sister do,' I replied.

"'And don't they ever ask you to go with them?'

"'Yes, many times.'

"'And why don't you go?' she asked. 'Don't you ever think of the future and of the home God has for us who are faithful? Do you ever think of the dear ones at home who night after night, loving you as their own, away into the silent hour of midnight, weep with bitter tears as they ask God in prayer to help them save you from the dark pathway down which you are going? Think of the future,' she said. 'Think of the awful meaning of a drunkard's grave, and think of a home eternal with God and his loved ones.

"She was only a little slip of a girl, but she sat there and pictured my future as it would be if I kept on. And then, in the prettiest words I had ever heard, she told me of the future I could make if I would.

"They say God has sent angels on earth to live. And I believe it, and that girl was one.

"As we drew near the station where I was to get off, she took my hand and said:

"'I want you to promise me that you will quit drinking.'

"And, drunkard as I was, I gave her that promise. And for a long time after that, whenever I thought of drinking anything, there would come up before me the face of the young lady who had spoken to me so kindly, and I remembered my promise.

"Well," he said, "I have never drunk any liquor since. I have since married, have joined the church and I am living happily.

"Now," he continued, "the strangest part of this story is the fact that I never knew this young lady. I never saw her before this occurrence, and I have not met her since. I do not even know where she lives. But whoever she is, may God bless her—the woman that saved me."—National Advocate.

Coffee Clubs of California.

The coffee clubs in San Jose, Petaluma, Santa Clara and San Diego, Cal., the aim of which is to furnish places of entertainment for young men and boys to keep them from visiting saloons, is soon to be incorporated into a state association. Ernest Fox, who himself was instrumental in establishing these clubs in California and elsewhere, contemplates establishing roadside coffee clubs also. Attractive places with gardens will be fitted up near the ordinary roadhouses and saloons. Light meals and all temperance drinks will be served. He believes that people will patronize the coffee clubs instead of saloons, and that in time the roadside saloon will disappear. The experiment of establishing coffee clubs along the road will be tried first in Santa Clara county.

Learning to Drink.

A zealous Sunday school-teacher, who had gathered up a class of boys hitherto neglected, was one morning talking to them about the great evils of intemperance.

"Boys, I wonder how people learn to drink?"

A bright little fellow said: "I know; by tasting."

PREVENTION OF INEBRIETY.

Efforts Which Are Being Put Forth to Destroy the Awful Work of Intemperance.

The most advanced work in scientific medicine is the discovery of the causes of the disease, and by their removal absolute prevention is obtained. The disappearance of yellow fever in Havana, following the discovery of the germ and its transmission by the mosquito, is a striking illustration. Can inebriety be prevented, from the discovery and removal of the causes, is a question for which an answer has been sought from the earliest times. The widely varying efforts to stop the sale of spirits and punish the person who drank is an attempt to answer this question. The possibility of determining many of the causes, and their removal, and thus preventing the disease, is established beyond question. The tremendous efforts to bring about prohibition by banishing the saloons and stopping the sale of spirits as beverages is an effort to remove causes which are supposed to be active in the formation of inebriety. The legal efforts to suppress drunkenness by fine and imprisonment is based on the theory that the causes are the willfulness of the victim and his reckless disregard of the interests of others as well as himself. Moral suasion by the pledge, prayer, and solicitation, assumes that the victim is a sinner in the need of conversion and change of heart, and when this is accomplished the causes of disease are removed. Another most remarkable effort to prevent inebriety is the legal enactments requiring physiology and hygiene to be taught in the public schools, and the dangers from the use of alcohol made a prominent part of the study. The causes here are assumed to be ignorance and the prevalence of false theories in regard to the nature of alcohol. By teaching exact facts concerning the danger from alcohol this ignorance will be removed and prevention will follow. Another effort in the line of prevention is the medical study of inebriety as a disease, and its treatment in asylums. This is based on the theory that the desire for alcohol comes from a diseased nervous system, and exhausted brain; also that these causes are both active and predisposing to various forms of insanity ending in death. It is claimed that the study of the causes and conditions which develop into inebriety, by the medical profession, is the most effective means to secure prevention. Thus both the medical profession and the public through societies and reform movements, religious efforts, legal and otherwise, recognize the theory that inebriety is preventable and can be stopped and finally broken up the same as other diseases. The causes are undoubtedly far more complex than any one of these efforts at prevention would indicate. Studies along the scientific lines by physicians have already pointed out some of these complex causes. Thus in certain persons there is inherited highly unstable nervous organizations with certain tendencies, which develop into inebriety both with and without temptation.

There are other persons in whom digestive troubles and various toxaemic states merge into inebriety, and also persons who live in centers of excitement in which the brain and nervous system is under constant strain. Here spirits, narcotics and drugs cover up the exhaustion and disease and bring grateful relief. In most cases where spirits are used, there are two conditions present: one of favorable soils, such as heredity and exhaustive brain, and lowered vitality, and the other the toxaemias which are introduced with alcohol, and grow with its use. The prevention depends on a knowledge of these causes and their removal.

The prevention of insanity is already a recognized possibility. Legal and moral measures are being urged to prevent marriage with epileptics, idiots and insane, and thus stop the growth of defectives from which insanity commonly springs. Breaking up the centers of pauperism, bad mental and physical surroundings, actually removes the soil for the cultivation and growth of insanity. These same conditions and causes are prominent in producing inebriety. Thus hysteric states, paranoic mental conditions, are all forerunners and early signal flags of inebriety and insanity. This is the direction towards the discovery of vast regions of causes, the removal of which will be followed by the prevention of inebriety.—Journal of Inebriety.

TEMPERANCE FACTS.

The annual liquor bill of Great Britain is $21.94 per capita.

There are nearly 2,000 women saloon keepers in the United States. New York leads with 348, Ohio has 337, Illinois has 196 and Pennsylvania 183.

The claim that prohibition hurts business is discredited by the figures of assessed valuation in Kansas. In 1891 the total assessed valuation of the state was $161,000,000. In 1892, under prohibition, it had increased to $356,000,000, an increase of 121 per cent.

If a man buys $100 worth of boots and shoes he pays $20.71 of that amount for labor; if he buys $100 worth of furniture he pays $23.77 for labor; if he buys $100 worth of woolen goods he pays $12.86 for labor; if he buys $100 worth of liquors he pays only $1.23 for labor. Therefore, concludes the Year Book, liquor is labor's worst enemy.

The people of the United States spend annually for literature, including newspapers, periodicals and books, a total of $174,965,625. The same people spend annually for malt and alcoholic liquors the enormous sum of $1,074,225,928. Whisky and beer cost annually five times as much as books, newspapers and magazines. And yet we are an intelligent people!

HID GOLD IN A WELL.

Placed There During the Civil War to Save It from the Bushwhackers.

Edwin Curd, of Fulton, Mo., tells an interesting story of the way in which the proprietors of the old Western bank, the first bank in Callaway county, took care that bushwhackers should not get away with their gold deposits in the civil war, says the Kansas City Journal. In an old tobacco warehouse in Fulton stands a big iron safe. It was bought by the bank and shipped by water from St. Louis in 1856. It weighs three tons and a half and cost $1,300. It played a leading part in Callaway county financial matters during the civil war and at one time, in 1862, contained $50,000 in gold. Conditions were very unsettled and bands of predatory soldiers and bushwhackers were prowling over the country in every direction committing many outrages, as well as fighting with one another. The officials of the bank, of which Mr. Curd was president, got nervous for fear one of these bands should make a raid on the town, crack the safe and take all their gold. The directors held several consultations and it was at last agreed that Mr. Curd, Col. W. T. Snell and Ed Parker should make a secret disposition of the treasure. One man suggested that it be buried in a haystack, but this scheme was rejected.

WRAPPED IN A SACK AND TIED SECURELY AND PUT INTO THE WELL.

"I ventured the idea," says Mr. Curd, "that we drop it to the bottom of a well back of John Bartley's store—it stood where the Adams block is now and the well was on the west end of the lot—and my suggestion was adopted. I wanted to throw the gold into the well loose, but the other two thought it best to put it in sacks for fear it would get so scattered that we would not find it all.

"I told them that I had separated the gold in its raw state from the dirt in California and felt sure that I could find $20 gold pieces in what came out of a well here at home. But they had their way, and the $50,000 was divided into several parts and each part wrapped in a sack and tied securely and put into the well. There it stayed for about two years and when the terror of the war had about subsided and it was thought safe to raise the treasure we tried to bring it up by attaching hooks to the sacks and hoisting it to the surface. But that would not work for the sacks had rotted and the weight of the coin caused them to break and, after all, the water had to be taken out and loose coins gathered together again. The secret regarding where the money was hidden was not known to anyone but the three who placed it in the well—not even by the other directors of the bank. When the well scheme was first broached it was said that the bushwhackers might in some way hear of its being there and would dip the water out and secure the booty, but I told them that while a gang was dipping all the water we could surely get posse enough together to make matters uncomfortable for them."

Bundy's "Whisky Shot."

Lieut. Bundy had a taste for good toddy, and one morning at Kenesaw mountain he had sampled, with other officers, some Diamond B commissary. When he reached his battery he was in excellent spirits. Soon Gen. Geary rode that way and observing the lieutenant's condition, gruffly addressed him: "Lieut. Bundy, you are drunk." Quick as a flash Bundy answered: "Gen. Geary, you're a —— liar!" Said Geary: "You are so drunk you don't know that gun from a hollow log." "I don't eh? Well, I'll show you whether I do or not." Pointing to a group of confederate officers on an eminence a half mile distant, Bundy said: "Do you see that bunch of rebels over there? Now just watch me scatter them." Seizing the trail of a gun, he jerked it around, got the range, adjusted everything to his liking and gave the order to fire. The shell exploded in the midst of the group, who then hastily retired to cover, carrying their wounded with them. Gen. Geary withdrew his offensive remarks, complimented Bundy on his skill and rode away. The writer has heard federals who ought to know say that Bundy fired the shot that killed Gen. Polk.—Kenesaw Gazette.

Sandow, the Strong Man.

An amusing story is told of Eugene Sandow, the man of lion strength. One spring, when he was visiting the south of France, he was robbed of a trunk containing valuables. Hearing who the thieves were and meeting them in the street, he promptly seized them and carried them, without any signs of exhaustion, to the police station.

COOLNESS AND DARING.

Fine Exhibition of Courage When Lightning Got in Amongst Sherman's Ammunition.

"All soldiers," said the captain, in the Chicago Inter Ocean, "talk a good deal about their experience at bloody angles in storming forts, charging breastworks, and in breaking through abatis and other obstructions in front of an enemy. This is natural and creditable, because, as a rule, the great things of war were done in the heat of such conflicts. But the finest exhibition of courage and daring and cool headedness that came under my notice during the war was not in a fight at a bloody angle, nor in the turmoil and excitement of a charge.

"In May, 1864, our brigade was at Resaca and had just changed camp from the north side of the river to the south side when a furious storm broke upon us. Our regiment was not far from the railroad sheds in which were stored the ammunition for Sherman's Atlanta campaign. Boxes of cartridges and shells of all sizes and kinds, kegs of powder were piled high in the large shed, and were closely guarded. We knew that the safety of that ammunition meant the success of Sherman's campaign, and fell in with all the strict regulations looking to its safety.

"On this day as I was busy securing my tent, which had just been pitched, there was a blinding flash of lightning and an appalling crash of thunder. As I looked out from my tent I saw hundreds of men moving off in a crouching position, with faces dazed and eyes turned backward toward what all seemed to regard as a point of common danger. I stepped out and saw that the great pile of ammunition had been struck by lightning, that the boxes on top had been thrown helter-skelter, and that the tow in some of those torn open was burning.

"I knew then why the soldiers of our fighting brigade were running away, and, stunned by the thought of what might happen, I awaited stolidly the explosions that were to destroy Sherman's chances for success in a great campaign, and possibly the lives of myself and all about me. But there was no explosion. I saw a single man scale the pile of ammunition, and another come to his assistance. I saw one of the men snatch the smoldering tow from the box of shells and wave it as a signal to the flying men that the danger was over.

"To my mind the man who climbed up that pile of explosives and put out the fire that endangered Sherman's ammunition supply did as notable an act as any who fought under Hancock at the bloody angle at Spottsylvania or charged with McCook at Kenesaw. And yet no mention of the act is made in any report. Sherman does not refer to it in his memoirs, and, so far as I know, only one army correspondent made any reference to the incident in his letters, and he did not give the name of the hero of the occasion. Who was he? The world ought to know. I saw the affair at long range. There must be some one living who saw it at close range."

I SAW A SINGLE MAN.

DISOBEYED THE ORDER.

Union Prisoners Were Not Robbed, But They "Traded" Off Their Belongings.

Gen. Longstreet used to tell a good many stories to show that the men of his command always treated captured union soldiers with as much consideration and kindness as was possible under the circumstances. He said that his orders on this point were very strict, and he never knew any of his men to disobey. As he went on to explain how proud he was of the record of his men on this point, a listener employed in one of the departments at Washington interrupted him.

"Undoubtedly your orders were strict, general," he said, "but I happen to know that they were evaded. For example, in East Tennessee you ordered your men to respect the belongings of the prisoners, and this is the way some of them did it. I wore a good pair of army shoes, nearly new. One day a good-natured fellow in gray with no shoes to speak of walked along our line looking intently at the shoes of the captured unionists. He put his foot by the side of mine, and, remarking that I was just his size, added, 'Old Pete (Longstreet) says he will have every man shot who steals anything from a prisoner. To save my life, won't you trade shoes with me? for I must have them shoes.' Of course, I traded, as did other prisoners."

At this Longstreet smiled, but insisted that the story didn't prove anything.

She Thought of Him.

She—Oh, Mr. Borem, how do you do? I was talking to Mrs. Nexdor just now, and I couldn't help thinking of you.

He—And was she discussing me?

"Not exactly. She was commenting on the weather, and just asked me if I could imagine anything more tiresome and disagreeable."—Philadelphia Press.

WESTERN CANADA'S RESOURCES.

Farming Very Successful.

By Western or Northwest Canada is usually meant the great agricultural country west of Ontario, and north of Minnesota, North Dakota, and Montana. Part of it is agricultural prairie, treeless in places, park like in others, part is genuine plains, well adapted to cattle ranches; part requires irrigation for successful tillage, most of it does not. The political divisions of this region are the Province of Manitoba and the territorial district of Assiniboia, Saskatchewan, Alberta and Athabask. At present, however, the latter is too remote for immediate practical purposes.

The general character of the soil of Western Canada is a rich, black, clay loam with a clay subsoil. Such a soil is particularly rich in food for the wheat plant. The subsoil is a clay, which retains the winter frost until it is thawed out by the warm rays of the sun and drawn upward to stimulate the growth of the young wheat, so that even in dry seasons wheat is a good crop. The clay soil also retains the heat of the sun later in the summer, and assists in the early ripening of the grain. It is claimed that cultivation has the effect of increasing the temperature of the soil several degrees, as well as the air above it.

Western Canada climate is good—cold in winter; hot in summer, but with cool nights. Violent storms of any kind are rare. The rainfall is not heavy. It varies with places, but averages about 17 inches. It fails usually at the time the growing crops need it.

The department of the interior, Ottawa, Canada, has agents established at different points throughout the United States who will be pleased to forward an Atlas of Western Canada, and give such other information as to railway rate, etc., as may be required.

That agriculture in Western Canada pays is shown by the number of testimonials given by farmers. The following is an extract made from a letter from a farmer near Moose Jaw:

"At the present time I own sixteen hundred acres of land, fifty horses, and a large pasture fenced containing a thousand acres. These horses run out all winter and come in in the spring quite fat. A man with money judiciously expended will make a competence very shortly. I consider in the last six years the increase in the value of my land has netted me forty thousand dollars."

New Fad in French Society.

The latest thing in "lettres de faire part" in France is nothing less than a divorce notification. A friend of mine received a neatly engraved card recently, writes a correspondent: "Monsieur Paul D. has the honor to inform you that his divorce was pronounced in his favor December 12, 1903, against Mme. Louis R. J." Sincere felicitations were sent immediately.

The Most Common Disease.

Yorktown, Ark., Feb. 29th.—Leland Williamson, M. D., a successful and clever local physician, says:

"There is scarcely another form of disease a physician is called upon so often to treat as Kidney Disease. I invariably prescribe Dodd's Kidney Pills and am not disappointed in their effect for they are always reliable. I could mention many cases in which I have used this medicine with splendid success, for example, I might refer to the case of Mr. A. H. Cole.

"Age 31, greatly emaciated, some fever, great pain and pressure over region of Kidneys, urine filled with pus or corruption and very foul smelling and passed some blood. Directed to drink a great deal of water, gave brisk purgative and Dodd's Kidney Pills. The pills were continued regularly for three weeks and then a few doses every week, especially if patient felt any pain in region of Kidneys. Cured completely and patient performed his duties as farm laborer in four weeks."

Dr. Williamson has been a regular practitioner for over twenty years, and his unqualified endorsement of Dodd's Kidney Pills is certainly a wonderful tribute to this remedy.

Nothing Serious.

"Is it true," asked the Ludlow youth, "that a woman insists on having her own way in everything?"

"I don't know," replied the Cumminsville sage, "but even if it is she changes her mind so often that it breaks the monotony."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Salzer's Home Builder Corn.

So named because 50 acres produced so heavily, that its proceeds built a lovely home. See Salzer's catalog. Yielded in 1903 in Ind. 157 bu., Ohio 160 bu., Tenn. 98 bu., and in Mich. 220 bu. per acre. You can beat this record in 1904.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THESE YIELDS PER ACRE?

120 bu. Beardless Barley per acre.
310 bu. Salzer's New National Oats per A.
80 bu. Salzer Speltz and Macaroni Wheat.
1,000 bu. Pedigree Potatoes per acre.
14 tons of rich Billion Dollar Grass Hay.
60,000 lbs. Victoria Rape for sheep—per A.
160,000 lbs. Teosinte, the fodder wonder.
54,000 lbs. Salzer's Superior Fodder Corn—rich, juicy fodder, per A.

Now such yields you can have, Mr. Farmer, in 1904, if you will plant Salzer's seeds.

TORTURING, DISFIGURING

Humors, Eczemas, Itchings, Inflammations, Burnings, Scalings and Chafings Cured by Cuticura.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurements, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt by the testimony of the civilized world.
